303209820R

LINACRE COLLEGE WITHDRAWN

HISTORY

OF

FRIEDRICH II. OF PRUSSIA.

THE HALF-CROWN EDITION OF

THOMAS CARLYLE'S WORKS

SARTOR RESARTUS, AND LATTER-DAY PAMPHLETS. With Portrait of Thomas Carlyle. 1 Vol.

PAST AND PRESENT, AND ON HEROES AND HERO WORSHIP, AND THE HEROIC IN HISTORY. 1 Vol.

LIFE OF JOHN STERLING, AND THE LIFE OF SCHILLER, AND EXAMINATION OF HIS WORKS. With Portraits. 1 Vol.

CRITICAL AND MISCELLANEOUS ESSAYS, THE EARLY KINGS OF NORWAY, and Essay on the Portraits of Knox. 4 Vols.

FRENCH REVOLUTION. A History. 2 Vols.

OLIVER CROMWELL'S LETTERS AND SPEECHES. With Portrait of Oliver Cromwell. 3 Vols.

HISTORY OF FREDERICK THE GREAT. 5 Vols.

WILHELM MEISTER. 2 Vols.

TRANSLATIONS FROM MUSÆUS, TIECK, AND RICHTER 1 Vol.

HISTORY

OF

FRIEDRICH II. OF PRUSSIA,

CALLED

FREDERICK THE GREAT.

BY

THOMAS CARLYLE.

COPYRIGHT EDITION.

TEN VOLUMES IN FIVE.

VOL. II.

LONDON: CHAPMAN & HALL, LD.

1894.

Richard Clay & Sons, Limited,
London & Bungay.

CONTENTS OF VOLUME III.

BOOK VIII.

CROWN-PRINCE RETRIEVED: LIFE AT CUSTRIN.

NOVEMBER 1730—FEBRUARY 1732.

CHAP.		PAGE
I.	CHAPLAIN MULLER WAITS ON THE CROWN-PRINCE	1
II.	CROWN-PRINCE TO REPENT AND NOT PERISH .	4
	Crown-Prince begins a new course, p. 7.
III.	WILHELMINA IS TO WED THE PRINCE OF BAIREUTH	10
IV.	CRIMINAL JUSTICE IN PREUSSEN AND ELSEWHERE	16
	Case of Schlubhut, p. 17.
	Case of the Criminal-Collegium itself, 20.
	Skipper Jenkins in the Gulf of Florida, 22.
	Baby Carlos gets his Apanage, 24.
V.	INTERVIEW OF MAJESTY AND CROWN-PRINCE AT CUSTRIN	26
	Schulenburg's Three Letters to Grumkow, on Visits to the Crown-Prince, during the Cüstrin time, p. 35.
	His Majesty's Building Operations, 47.
VI.	WILHELMINA'S WEDDING	50

BOOK IX.

LAST STAGE OF FRIEDRICH'S APPRENTICESHIP: LIFE IN RUPPIN.

1732-1736.

I.	PRINCESS ELIZABETH CHRISTINA OF BRUNSWICK-BEVERN	58
	Who his Majesty's Choice is; and what the Crown-Prince thinks of it p. 66.
	Duke of Lorraine arrives in Potsdam and in Berlin, 75.
	Betrothal of the Crown-Prince to the Brunswick Charmer, Niece of Imperial Majesty, Monday evening, 10th March 1732, 77.

CHAP. PAGE

II. SMALL INCIDENTS AT RUPPIN 79

III. THE SALZBURGERS 86

IV. PRUSSIAN MAJESTY VISITS THE KAISER . . 100

V. GHOST OF THE DOUBLE-MARRIAGE RISES; TO NO PURPOSE 117
Session of Tobacco-Parliament, 6th December 1732, p. 120.

VI. KING AUGUST MEDITATING GREAT THINGS FOR POLAND 123

VII. CROWN-PRINCE'S MARRIAGE 127

VIII. KING AUGUST DIES; AND POLAND TAKES FIRE . 134
Poland has to find a new King, p. 136.
Of the Candidates; of the Conditions. How the Election went, 138.
Poland on Fire; Dantzig stands Siege, 142.

IX. KAISER'S SHADOW-HUNT HAS CAUGHT FIRE . 143
Subsequent course of the War, in the Italian part of it, p. 146.
Course of the War, in the German part of it, 148.

X. CROWN-PRINCE GOES TO THE RHINE CAMPAIGN . 149
Glimpse of Lieutenant Chasot, and of other Acquisitions, p. 174.
Crown-Prince's Visit to Baireuth on the way home, 176.

XI. IN PAPA'S SICK-ROOM; PRUSSIAN INSPECTIONS: END OF WAR 180

BOOK X.

AT REINSBERG. 1736-1740.

I. MANSION OF REINSBERG 196
Of Monsieur Jordan and the Literary Set, p. 205.

II. OF VOLTAIRE AND THE LITERARY CORRESPONDENCES 210

III. CROWN-PRINCE MAKES A MORNING CALL . . 235

IV. NEWS OF THE DAY 242
Of Berg and Jülich again; and of Luiscius with the one Razor, p. 247.

V. VISIT AT LOO 251
Crown-Prince becomes a Freemason; and is harangued by Monsieur de Bielfeld, p. 254.
Seckendorf gets lodged in Grätz, 260.
The Ear of Jenkins reëmerges, 262.

CHAP. PAGE

VI. LAST YEAR OF REINSBERG; JOURNEY TO PREUSSEN 264
Pine's Horace; and the Anti-Macchiavel, p. 266.
Friedrich in Preussen again; at the Stud of Trakehnen. A tragically great Event coming on, 270.

VII. LAST YEAR OF REINSBERG: TRANSIT OF BALTIMORE AND OTHER PERSONS AND THINGS. 275
Bielfeld, what he saw at Reinsberg and around, p. 279.
Turk War ends; Spanish War begins. A Wedding in Petersburg, 282.

VIII. DEATH OF FRIEDRICH WILHELM . . . 285

MAPS.

CUSTRIN 43
PHILIPSBURG 170
KINGDOM OF PRUSSIA . . . . to face p. 298

HISTORY

OF

FRIEDRICH II. OF PRUSSIA,

CALLED

FREDERICK THE GREAT.

BY

THOMAS CARLYLE.

COPYRIGHT EDITION.

TEN VOLUMES IN FIVE.

VOL. II.

LONDON: CHAPMAN & HALL, LD.

1894.

hear of tragic vestiges still traceable of Friedrich, belonging to this time: texts of Scripture quoted by him, pencil-sketches of his drawing; expressive of a mind dwelling in Golgothas, and pathetically, not defiantly, contemplating the very worst.

Chaplain Müller of the Gens-d'Armes, being found a pious and intelligent man, has his orders not to return at once from Cüstrin; but to stay there, and deal with the Prince, on that horrible Predestination topic and his other unexampled backslidings which have ended so. Müller staid accordingly, for a couple of weeks, intensely busy on the Predestination topic, and generally in assuaging, and mutually mollifying, paternal Majesty and afflicted Son. In all which he had good success; and especially on the Predestination point was triumphantly successful. Müller left a little Book in record of his procedures there; which, had it not been bound over to the official tone, might have told us something. His Correspondence with the King, during those two weeks, has likewise been mostly printed;[1] and is of course still more official,—teaching us next to nothing, except poor Friedrich Wilhelm's profoundly devotional mood, anxieties about 'the claws of Satan' and the like, which we were glad to hear of above. In Müller otherwise is small help for us.

But, fifty years afterwards, there was alive a Son of this Müller's; an innocent Country Parson, not wanting in sense, and with much simplicity and veracity; who was fished-out by Nicolai, and set to recalling what his Father used to say of this adventure, much the grandest of his life. In Müller Junior's Letter of Reminiscences to Nicolai we find some details, got from his Father, which are worth gleaning:

'When my Father first attempted, by royal order, to bring the 'Crown-Prince to acknowledgment and repentance of the fault com-'mitted, Crown-Prince gave this excuse or explanation: "As his 'Father could not endure the sight of him, he had meant to get out of 'the way of his displeasure, and go to a Court with which his Father 'was in friendship and relationship,"'—clearly indicating England, think the Müllers Junior and Senior.

'For proof that the intention was towards England this other 'circumstance serves, that the one confidant—Herr von Keith, if I 'mistake not' (no, you don't mistake), 'had already bespoken a ship 'for passage out.'—Here is something still more unexpected:

[1] Förster, i. 376-379.

'My Father used to say, he found an excellent knowledge and conviction of the truths of religion in the Crown-Prince. By the Prince's arrangement, my Father, who at first lodged with the Commandant, had to take up his quarters in the room right above the Prince; who daily, often as early as six in the morning, rapped on the ceiling for him to come down; and then they would dispute and discuss, sometimes half-days long, about the different tenets of the Christian Sects; —and my Father said, the Prince was perfectly at home in the Polemic Doctrines of the Reformed (Calvinistic) Church, even to the minutest points. As my Father brought him proofs from Scripture, the Prince asked him one time, How he could keep chapter and verse so exactly in his memory? Father drew from his pocket a little Hand-Concordance, and showed it him as one help. This he had to leave with the Prince for some days. On getting it back, he found inside on the fly-leaf, sketched in pencil,'—what is rather notable to History,—'the figure of a man on his knees, with two swords hanging crosswise over his head; and at the bottom these words of Psalm Seventy-third (verses 25, 26), Whom have I in Heaven but thee? And there is none upon earth that I desire besides thee. My flesh and my heart fainteth and faileth; but God is the strength of my heart, and my portion forever.'—Poor Friedrich, this is a very unexpected pencil-sketch on his part; but an undeniable one; betokening abstruse night-thoughts and forebodings in the present juncture!—

'Whoever considers this fine knowledge of religion, and reflects on the peculiar character and genius of the young Herr, which was ever struggling towards light and clearness (for at that time he had not become indifferent to religion, he often prayed with my Father on his knees),—will find that it was morally impossible this young Prince could have thought' (as some foolish persons have asserted) 'of throwing himself into the arms of Papal Superstition,' (seeking help at Vienna, marrying an Austrian Archduchess, and I know not what,) 'or allow the intrigues of Catholic Priests to'—Oh no, Herr Müller, nobody but very foolish persons could imagine such a thing of this young Herr.

'When my Father, Herr von Katte's execution being ended, hastened to the Crown-Prince; he finds him miserably ill (sehr alterirt); advises him to take a cooling-powder in water, both which materials were ready on the table. This he presses on him: but the Prince always shakes his head.' Suspects poison, you think? 'Hereupon my Father takes from his pocket a paper, in which he carried cooling-powder for his own use; shakes-out a portion of it into his hand, and so into his mouth; and now the Crown-Prince grips at my Father's powder, and takes that.' Privately to be made away with; death resolved upon in some way! thinks the desperate young man?[2]

That scene of Katte's execution, and of the Prince's and other people's position in regard to it, has never yet been humanly set forth, otherwise the response had been different. Not humanly set forth,—and so was only barked at, as by the infinitude of little dogs, in all countries; and could never yet be responded to in austere vox humana, deep as a De Profundis, terrible as a Chorus of Æschylus,—for in effect that is rather the character of it, had the barking once pleased to cease.

[2] Nicolai, Anekdoten, vi. 183-189.

'King of Prussia cannot sleep,' writes Dickens: 'the officers 'sit up with him every night, and in his slumbers he raves and 'talks of spirits and apparitions.'[3] We saw him, ghost-like, in the night-time, gliding about, seeking shelter with Feekin against ghosts; Ginkel by daylight saw him, now clad in thunderous tornado, and anon in sorrowful fog. Here, farther on, is a new item,—and joined to it and the others, a remarkable old one:

'In regard to Wilhelmina's marriage, and whether a Father 'cannot give his daughter in wedlock to whom he pleases, 'there have been eight Divines consulted, four Lutheran, four 'Reformed (Calvinist); who, all but one' (he of the Garrison Church, a rhadamanthine fellow in serge), have answered, "No, your Majesty!" 'It is remarkable that his Majesty has not 'gone to bed sober for this month past.'[4]

What Seckendorf and Grumkow thought of all these phenomena? They have done their job too well. They are all for mercy; lean with their whole weight that way, — in black qualms, one of them withal, thinking tremulously to himself, "What if his now Majesty were to die upon us, in the interim!"

CHAPTER II.

CROWN-PRINCE TO REPENT AND NOT PERISH.

In regard to Friedrich, the Court-Martial needs no amendment from the King; the sentence on Friedrich, a Lieutenant-Colonel guilty of desertion, is, from President and all members except two, Death as by law. The two who dissented, invoking royal clemency and pardon, were Major-Generals by rank,—Schwerin, as some write, one of them, or if not Schwerin, then Linger; and for certain, Dönhof,—two worthy gentlemen not known to any of my readers, nor to me, except as names. The rest are all coldly of opinion that the military code says Death. Other codes and considerations may say this and that, which it is not in their province to touch upon; this is what the military code says: and they leave it there.

[3] Despatch, 3d October 1730. [4] Dickens, 9th and 19th December 1730.

The Junius Brutus of a Royal Majesty had answered in his own heart grimly, Well then! But his Councillors, Old Dessauer, Grumkow, Seckendorf, one and all interpose vehemently. "Prince of the Empire, your Majesty, not a Lieutenant-Colonel only! Must not, cannot;"—nay good old Buddenbrock, in the fire of still unsuccessful pleading, tore open his waistcoat: "If your Majesty requires blood, take mine; that other you shall never get, so long as I can speak!" Foreign Courts interpose; Sweden, the Dutch; the English in a circuitous way, round by Vienna to wit; finally the Kaiser himself sends an Autograph;[1] for poor Queen Sophie has applied even to Seckendorf, will be friends with Grumkow himself, and in her despair is knocking at every door. Junius Brutus is said to have had paternal affections withal. Friedrich Wilhelm, alone against the whispers of his own heart and the voices of all men, yields at last in this cause. To Seckendorf, who has chalked-out a milder didactic plan of treatment, still rigorous enough,[2] he at last admits that such plan is perhaps good; that the Kaiser's Letter has turned the scale with him; and the didactic method, not the beheading one, shall be tried. That Dönhof and Schwerin, with their talk of mercy, with "their eyes upon the Rising Sun," as is evident, have done themselves no good, and shall perhaps find it so one day. But that, at any rate, Friedrich's life is spared; Katte's execution shall suffice in that kind. Repentance, prostrate submission and amendment,—these may do yet more for the prodigal, if he will in heart return. These points, sometime before the 8th of November, we find to be as good as settled.

The unhappy prodigal is in no condition to resist farther. Chaplain Müller had introduced himself with Katte's dying admonition to the Crown-Prince to repent and submit. Chaplain Müller, with his wholesome cooling-powders, with his ghostly counsels, and considerations of temporal and eternal nature,—we saw how he prospered almost beyond hope. Even on Predestination, and the real nature of Election by Free Grace, all is coming right, or come, reports Müller. The Chaplain's Reports, Friedrich Wilhelm's grimly mollified Responses on the same: they are written, and in confused form have been printed; but shall be spared the English reader.

[1] Date, 11th October 1730 (Förster, i. 380).
[2] His Letter to the King, 1st November 1730 (in Förster, i. 375, 376).

And Grumkow has been out at Cüstrin, preaching to the same purport from other texts: Grumkow, with the thought ever present to him, "What if Friedrich Wilhelm should die?" is naturally an eloquent preacher. Enough, it has been settled (perhaps before the day of Katte's death, or at the latest three days after it, as we can see), That if the Prince will, and can with free conscience, take an Oath ("no mental reservation," mark you!) of contrite repentance, of perfect prostrate submission, and purpose of future entire obedience and conformity to the paternal mind in all things, "Gnadenwahl" included,—the paternal mind may possibly relax his durance a little, and put him gradually on proof again.[3]

Towards which issue, as Chaplain Müller reports, the Crown-Prince is visibly gravitating, with all his weight and will. The very Gnadenwahl is settled; the young soul (truly a lover of Truth, your Majesty) taps on his ceiling, my floor being overhead, before the winter sun rises, as a signal that I must come down to him;—so eager to have error and darkness purged away. Believes himself, as I believe him, ready to undertake that Oath; desires, however, to see it first, that he may maturely study every clause of it.—Say you verily so? answers Majesty. And may my ursine heart flow out again, and blubber gratefully over a sinner saved, a poor Son plucked as brand from the burning? 'God, the Most High, give His 'blessing on it, then!' concludes the paternal Majesty: 'And 'as He often, by wondrous guidances, strange paths and thorny 'steps, will bring men into the Kingdom of Christ, so may our 'Divine Redeemer help that this prodigal son be brought into 'His communion. That his godless heart be beaten till it is 'softened and changed; and so he be snatched from the claws 'of Satan. This grant us the Almighty God and Father, for 'our Lord Jesus Christ and His passion and death's sake!

[3] King's Letter to Müller, 8th November (Förster, i. 379).

19th Nov. 1730.

'Amen!—I am, for the rest, your well-affectioned King, FRIED-'RICH WILHELM (Wusterhausen, 8th November 1730).'[4]

Crown-Prince begins a new Course.

It was Monday 6th November, when poor Katte died. Within a fortnight, on the second Sunday after, there has a Select Commission, Grumkow, Borck, Buddenbrock, with three other Soldiers, and the Privy Councillor Thulmeyer, come out to Cüstrin: there and then, Sunday November 19th,[5] these Seven, with due solemnity, administer the Oath (terms of Oath conceivable by readers); Friedrich being found ready. He signs the Oath, as well as audibly swears it: whereupon his sword is restored to him, and his prison-door opened. He steps forth to the Town Church with his Commissioners; takes the sacrament; listens, with all Cüstrin, to an allusive Sermon on the subject; 'text happily chosen, preacher handling it well.' Text was Psalm Seventy-seventh, verse eleventh (tenth of our English version), And I said, This is my infirmity; but I will remember the years of the right hand of the Most High; or, as Luther's version more intelligibly gives it, This I have to suffer; the right hand of the Most High can change all. Preacher (not Müller but another) rose gradually into didactic pathos; Prince, and all Cüstrin, were weeping, or near weeping, at the close of the business.[6]

Straight from Church the Prince is conducted, not to the Fortress, but to a certain Town Mansion, which he is to call his own henceforth, under conditions: an erring Prince half-liberated, and mercifully put on proof again. His first act here is to write, of his own composition, or helped by some official hand, this Letter to his All-serenest Papa; which must be introduced, though, except to readers of German who know the 'Dero' (Theiro), 'Allerdurchlauchtigster,' and strange pipe-clay solemnity of the Court-style, it is like to be in great part lost in any translation:

'Cüstrin, 19th November 1730.

'All-serenest and All-graciousest Father,—To your Royal Majesty, 'my All-graciousest Father, have,'—i.e. 'I have,' if one durst write the [4] Förster, i. 379.

[5] Nicolai, exactest of men, only that Documents were occasionally less accessible in his time, gives (Anekdoten, vi. 187), 'Saturday November 25th,' as the day of the Oath; but, no doubt, the later inquirers, Preuss (i. 56) and others, have found him wrong in this small instance.

[6] Preuss, i. 56

'I,'—'by my disobedience as Theiro' (Youro) 'subject and soldier, 'not less than by my undutifulness as Theiro Son, given occasion to 'a just wrath and aversion against me. With the All-obedientest re- 'spect I submit myself wholly to the grace of my most All-gracious 'Father; and beg him, Most All-graciously to pardon me; as it is not 'so much the withdrawal of my liberty in a sad arrest (malheureusen 'Arrest), as my own thoughts of the fault I have committed, that have 'brought me to reason: Who, with all-obedientest respect and sub- 'mission, continue till my end,

'My All-graciousest King's and Father's faithfully obedientest
'Servant and Son,
'FRIEDRICH."[7]

This new House of Friedrich's in the little Town of Cüstrin, he finds arranged for him on rigorously thrifty principles, yet as a real Household of his own; and even in the form of a Court, with Hofmarschall, Kammerjunkers, and the other adjuncts;—Court reduced to its simplest expression, as the French say, and probably the cheapest that was ever set up. Hofmarschall (Court-Marshal) is one Wolden, a civilian Official here. The Kammerjunkers are Rohwedel and Natzmer; Natzmer Junior, son of a distinguished Feldmarschall: 'a good-hearted but foolish forward young fellow,' says Wilhelmina; 'the failure of a coxcomb (petit-maître manqué).' For example, once, strolling about in a solemn Kaiser's Soiree in Vienna, he found in some quiet corner the young Duke of Lorraine, Franz, who it is thought will be the divine Maria Theresa's husband, and Kaiser himself one day. Foolish Natzmer found this noble young gentleman in a remote corner of the Soiree; went up, nothing loath, to speak graciosities and insipidities to him: the noble young gentleman yawned, as was too natural, a wide long yawn; and in an insipid familiar manner, foolish Natzmer (Wilhelmina and the Berlin circles know it) put his finger into the noble young gentleman's mouth, and insipidly wagged it there. "Sir, you seem to forget where you are!" said the noble young gentleman; and closing his mouth with emphasis, turned away; but happily took no farther notice.[8] This is all we yet know of the history of Natzmer, whose heedless ways and slapdash speculations, tinted with natural ingenuity and goodhumour, are not unattractive to the Prince.

[7] Preuss, i. 56, 57; and Anonymous, Friedrichs des Grossen Briefe an seinen Vater (Berlin, Posen und Bromberg, 1838), p. 3.
[8] Wilhelmina, i. 310.

19th Nov. 1730.

Hofmarschall and these two Kammerjunkers are of the lawyer species; men intended for Official business, in which the Prince himself is now to be occupied. The Prince has four lackeys, two pages, one valet. He 'wears his sword, but has no sword-tash (porte-épée),' much less an officer's uniform: a mere Prince put upon his good behaviour again; not yet a soldier of the Prussian Army, only hoping to become so again. He wears a light-gray dress, 'hechtgrauer (pike-gray) frock with narrow silver cordings;' and must recover his uniform, by proving himself gradually a new man.

For there is, along with the new household, a new employment laid out for him in Cüstrin; and it shall be seen what figure he makes in that, first of all. He is to sit in the Domänen-Kammer or Government Board here, as youngest Rath; no other career permitted. Let him learn Economics and the way of managing Domain Lands (a very principal item of the royal revenues in this Country): humble work, but useful; which he had better see well how he will do. Two elder Raths are appointed to instruct him in the Economic Sciences and Practices, if he show faculty and diligence;—which in fact he turns out to do, in a superior degree, having every motive to try.

This kind of life lasted with him for the next fifteen months, all through the year 1731 and farther; and must have been a very singular, and was probably a highly instructive year to him, not in the Domain Sciences alone. He is left wholly to himself. All his fellow-creatures, as it were, are watching him. Hundred-eyed Argus, or the Ear of Dionysius, that is to say, Tobacco-Parliament with its spies and reporters,—no stirring of his finger can escape it here. He has much suspicion to encounter: Papa looking always sadly askance, sadly incredulous, upon him. He is in correspondence with Grumkow; takes much advice from Grumkow (our prompter-general, president in the Dionysius'-Ear, and not an ill-wisher farther); professes much thankfulness to Grumkow, now and henceforth. Thank you for flinging me out of the six-story window, and catching me by the coatskirts!—Left altogether to himself, as we said; has in the whole Universe nothing that will save him but his own good sense, his own power of discovering what is what, and of doing what will be behoveful therein.

He is to quit his French literatures and pernicious practices, one and all. His very flute, most innocent "Princess," as he used to call his flute in old days, is denied him ever since he came to Cüstrin;—but by degrees he privately gets her back, and consorts much with her; wails forth, in beautiful adagios, emotions for which there is no other utterance at present. He has liberty of Cüstrin and the neighbourhood; out of Cüstrin he is not to lodge, any night, without leave had of the Commandant. Let him walk warily; and in good earnest study to become a new creature, useful for something in the Domain Sciences and otherwise.

CHAPTER III.

WILHELMINA IS TO WED THE PRINCE OF BAIREUTH.

Crown-Prince Friedrich being settled so far, his Majesty takes up the case of Wilhelmina, the other ravelled skein lying on hand. Wilhelmina has been prisoner in her Apartment at Berlin all this while: it is proper Wilhelmina be disposed of; either in wedlock, filially obedient to the royal mind; or in some much sterner way, 'within four walls,' it is whispered, if disobedient.

Poor Wilhelmina never thought of disobeying her parents: only, which of them to obey? King looks towards the Prince of Baireuth again, agreed on before those hurly-burlies now past; Queen looks far otherwards. Queen Sophie still desperately believes in the English match for Wilhelmina; and has subterranean correspondences with that Court; refusing to see that the negotiation is extinct there. Grumkow himself, so over-victorious in his late task, is now heeling towards England; 'sincere in his wish to be well with us,' thinks Dickens: Grumkow solaces her Majesty with delusive hopes in the English quarter. "Be firm, child; trust in my management; "only swear to me, on your eternal salvation, that never, on "any compulsion, will you marry another than the Prince of "Wales;—give me that oath!"[1] Such was Queen Sophie's last proposal to Wilhelmina,—night of the 27th of January 1731, as is computable,—her Majesty to leave for Potsdam on the morrow. They wept much together that night, but

[1] Wilhelmina, i. 314.

Feb. 1731.

Wilhelmina dextrously evaded the oath, on a religious ground. Prince of Baireuth, whom Papa may like or may not like, has never yet personally made appearance: who or what will make appearance, or how things can or will turn, except a bad road, is terribly a mystery to Wilhelmina.

What with chagrin and confinement, what with bad diet (for the very diet is bad, quality and quantity alike unspeakable), Wilhelmina sees herself 'reduced to a skeleton;' no company but her faithful Sonsfeld, no employment but her Books and Music;—struggles, however, still to keep heart. One day, it is in February 1731, as I compute, they are sitting, her Sonsfeld and she, at their sad mess of so-called dinner, in their remote upper story of the Berlin Schloss, tramp of sentries the one thing audible; and were 'looking mournfully at one 'another, with nothing to eat but a soup of salt and water, and 'a ragout of old bones full of hairs and slopperies,'—nothing else; that was its real quality, whatever fine name they might give it, says the vehement Princess,—'we heard a sharp tap-'ping at the window; and started up in surprise, to see what 'it could be. It was a raven, carrying in its beak a bit of 'bread, which it left on the window-sill, and flew away.'[2]

'Tears came into our eyes at this adventure.' Are we become as Hebrew Elijahs, then; so that the wild ravens have to bring us food? Truth is, there was nothing miraculous, as Wilhelmina found by and by. It was a tame raven,—not the soul of old George I., which lives at Isleworth on good pensions; but the pet raven of a certain Margravine, which lost its way among the intricate roofs here. But the incident was touching. "Well," exclaimed Wilhelmina, "in the Roman Histories I am "now reading, it is often said those creatures betoken good "luck." All Berlin, such the appetite for gossip, and such the famine of it in Berlin at present, talked of this minute event: and the French Colony,—old Protestant Colony, practical considerate people,—were so struck by it, they brought baskets of comfortable things to us, and left them daily, as if by accident, on some neutral ground, where the maid could pick them up, sentries refusing to see unless compelled. Which fine procedure has attached Wilhelmina to the French nation ever since, as a dextrous useful people, and has given her a disposition to help them where she could.

[2] Wilhelmina, i. 316.

The omen of the raven did not at once bring good luck: however, it did chance to be the turning-point, solstice of this long Greenland winter; after which, amid storms and alarms, daylight came steadily nearer. Storms and alarms: for there came rumours of quarrels out at Potsdam, quarrels on the old score between the Royal Spouses there; and frightful messages, through one Eversmann, an insolent royal lackey, about wedding Weissenfels, about imprisonment for life and other hard things; through all which Wilhelmina studied to keep her poor head steady, and answer with dignity yet discreetly. On the other hand, her Sisters are permitted to visit her, and perceptible assuagements come. At length, on the 11th of May, there came solemn Deputation, Borck, Grumkow, Thulmeyer in it, old real friends and pretended new; which set poor Wilhelmina wringing her hands (having had a Letter from Mamma overnight); but did bring about a solution. It was Friday 11th of May; a day of crisis in Wilhelmina's history; Queen commanding one thing, King another, and the hour of decision come.

Entering, announcing themselves, with dreadful solemnity, these gentlemen, Grumkow the spokesman, in soft phrase, but with strict clearness, made it apparent to her, That marry she must,—the Hereditary Prince of Baireuth,—and without the consent of both her parents, which was unattainable at present, but peremptorily under the command of one of them, whose vote was the supreme. Do this (or even say that you will do it, whisper some of the well-affected), his Majesty's paternal favour will return upon you like pent waters;—and the Queen will surely reconcile herself (or perhaps turn it all her own way yet! whisper the well-affected). Refuse to do it, her Majesty, your Royal Brother, you yourself Royal Highness, God only knows what the unheard-of issue will be for you all! Do it, let us advise you: you must, you must!—Wilhelmina wrung her hands; ran distractedly to and fro; the well-affected whispering to her, the others 'conversing at a window.' At length she did it. Will marry whom her all-gracious Papa appoints; never wished or meant the least disobedience; hopes, beyond all things, his paternal love will now return, and make everybody blessed;—and O, reconcile Mamma to me, ye well-affected! adds she.—Bravissimo! answer they: her Majesty, for certain, will reconcile herself; Crown-Prince get back from Cüstrin, and all will be well.[3]

[3] Wilhelmina, i. 327-333.

11th May 1731.

Friedrich Wilhelm was overjoyed; Queen Sophie Dorothee was in despair. With his Majesty, who 'wept' like a paternal bear, on reëmbracing Wilhelmina the obedient some days hence, it became a settled point, and was indicated to Wilhelmina as such, That the Crown-Prince would, on her actual wedding, probably get back from Cüstrin. But her Majesty's reconcilement,—this was very slow to follow. Her Majesty was still in flames of ire at their next interview; and poor Wilhelmina fainted, on approaching to kiss her hand. "Disgraced, vanquished, and my enemies triumphing!" said her Majesty; and vented her wrath on Wilhelmina; and fell ill (so soon as there was leisure), ill, like to die, and said, "Why pretend to weep, when it is you that have killed me!"—and indeed was altogether hard, bitter, upon the poor Princess; a chief sorrow to her in these trying months. Can there be such wrath in celestial minds, venting itself so unreasonably?—

At present there is no leisure for illness; grand visitors in quantity have come and are coming; and the Court is brilliant exceedingly;—his Majesty blazing out into the due magnificence, which was very great on this occasion, domestic matters looking up with him again. The Serenities of Brunswick are here, young and old; much liked by Friedrich Wilhelm; and almost reckoned family people,—ever since their Eldest Son was affianced to the Princess Charlotte here, last visit they made. To Princess Charlotte, Wilhelmina's second junior,—mischievous, coquettish creature she, though very pretty and insinuating, who seems to think her Intended rather a phlegmatic young gentleman, as Wilhelmina gradually discovers. Then there is old Duke Eberhard Ludwig, of Würtemberg, whom we saw at Ludwigsburg last year, in an intricate condition with his female world and otherwise, he too announces himself,—according to promise then given. Old Duke Eberhard Ludwig comes, stays three weeks in great splendour of welcome;—poor old gentleman, his one son is now dead; and things are getting earnest with him. On his return home, this time, he finds, according to order, the foul witch Grävenitz duly cleared away; reinstates his injured Duchess, with the due feelings, better late than never; and dies in a year or two, still childless.—

These are among the high guests at Berlin; and there are plenty of others whom we do not name. Magnificent dining; with 'six-and-twenty blackamoors,' high-coloured creatures, marching up the grand staircase, round the table, round it, and then down again, melodious, doing 'janizary music,' if you happen to prefer that kind;—trained creatures these blackamoors, all got when boys, and set to cymballing and fifing betimes, adds my authority.[4] Dining, boar-hunting (if the boar be huntable), especially reviewing, fail not in those fine summer days.

One evening, it is Sunday 27th of May, latish, while the high guests, with Queen and Wilhelmina, are just passing in to supper (King's Majesty having 'gone to bed at seven,' to be well astir for the review tomorrow), a sound of wheels is heard in the court. Modest travelling-equipage rolls up into the inner court; to the foot of the grand staircase there, whither only Princes come:—who can it be? The Queen sends to inquire. Heavens, it is the Hereditary Prince of Baireuth! 'Medusa's Head never produced such effect as did this bit of 'news: Queen sat petrified; and I,' by reflex, was petrified too! Wilhelmina passed the miserablest night, no wink of sleep; and felt quite ill in the morning;—in dread, too, of Papa's rough jests,—and wretched enough. She had begged much, last night, to be excused from the review. But that could not be: "I must go," said the Queen after reflection, "and you with me." Which they did;—and diversified the pomp and circumstance of mock-war by a small unexpected scene.

Queen, Princess and the proper Dames had, by his Majesty's order, to pass before the line: Princess in much trouble, 'with three caps huddled on me, to conceal myself,' poor soul. Margraf of Schwedt, at the head of his regiment, 'looked swollen with rage,' high hopes gone in this manner;—and saluted us with eyes turned away. As for his Mother, the Dessau Margravine in high colours, she was 'blue in the face' all day. Lines passed, and salutations done, her Majesty and Dames withdrew to the safe distance, to look on:—Such a show, for pomp and circumstance, Wilhelmina owns, as could not be equalled in the world. Such wheeling, rhythmic coalescing and unfolding; accurate as clockwork, far and wide; swift big column here, hitting swift big column there, at the appointed place and moment; with their volleyings and trumpetings, bright uniforms and streamers and field-music,—in equipment and manœuvre perfect all, to the meanest drummer or black kettledrummer :—supreme drill-sergeant playing on the thing, as on his huge piano, several square miles in area ! Comes of the Old Dessauer, all this ; of the "equal step;" of the abstruse meditations upon tactics, in that rough head of his. Very pretty indeed.—But in the mean while an Official steps up ; cap in hand, approaches the Queen's carriage ; says, He is ordered to introduce his Highness the Prince of Baireuth. Prince comes up accordingly ; a personable young fellow ; intelligent-looking, self-possessed ; makes obeisance to her Majesty, who answers in frosty politeness ; and—and Wilhelmina, faint, fasting, sleepless all night, fairly falls aswoon. Could not be helped : and the whole world saw it ; and Guy Dickens and the Diplomatists wrote home about it, and there rose rumour and gossip enough ![5] But that was the naked truth of it : hot weather, agitation, want of sleep, want of food ; not aversion to the Hereditary Prince, nothing of that.

[4] Fassmann, p. 726, &c.

28th May 1731.

Rather the contrary, indeed ; and, on better acquaintance, much the contrary. For he proved a very rational, honourable and eligible young Prince : modest, honest, with abundance of sense and spirit ; kind too and good, hot temper well kept, temper hot not harsh ; quietly holds his own in all circles ; good discourse in him, too, and sharp repartee if requisite,—though he stammered somewhat in speaking. Submissive Wilhelmina feels that one might easily have had a worse husband. What glories for you in England ! the Queen used to say to her in old times : "He is a Prince, that Frederick, who has a "good heart, and whose genius is very small. Rather ugly "than handsome ; slightly out of shape even (un peu contre-fait). But provided you have the complaisance to suffer his "debaucheries, you will quite govern him ; and you will be "more King than he, when once his Father is dead. Only "see what a part you will play ! It will be you that decide "on the weal or woe of Europe, and give law to the Nation,"[6] —in a manner ! Which Wilhelmina did not think a celestial prospect even then. Who knows but, of all the offers she had, 'four' or three 'crowned heads' among them, this final modest honest one may be intrinsically the best ? Take your portion, if inevitable, and be thankful !—

[5] Dickens, of 2d June 1731 (in pathetic terms); Wilhelmina, i. 341 (without pathos).

[6] Wilhelmina, i. 143.

The Betrothal follows in about a week: Sunday 3d June 1731; with great magnificence, in presence of the high guests and all the world: and Wilhelmina is the affianced Bride of Friedrich of Baireuth:—and that enormous Double-Marriage Tragicomedy, of Much Ado about Nothing, is at last ended. Courage, friends; all things do end!—

The high guests hereupon go their ways again; and the Court of Berlin, one cannot but suppose, collapses, as after a great effort finished. Do not Friedrich Wilhelm and innumerable persons,—the readers and the writer of this History included,—feel a stone rolled off their hearts?—It is now, and not till now, that Queen Sophie falls sick, and like to die; and reproaches Wilhelmina with killing her. Friedrich Wilhelm hopes confidently, not; waits out at Potsdam, for a few days, till this killing danger pass; then departs, with double impetuosity, for Preussen, and dispatch of Public Business; such a mountain of Domestic Business being victoriously got under.

Poor King, his life, this long while, has been a series of earthquakes and titanic convulsions. Narrow miss he has had, of pulling down his house about his ears, and burying self, son, wife, family and fortunes, under the ruin-heap,—a monument to remote posterity. Never was such an enchanted dance, of well-intentioned Royal Bear with poetic temperament, piped to by two black-artists, for the Kaiser's and Pragmatic Sanction's sake! Let Tobacco-Parliament also rejoice; for truly the play was growing dangerous, of late. King and Parliament, we may suppose, return to Public Business with double vigour.

CHAPTER IV.

CRIMINAL JUSTICE IN PREUSSEN AND ELSEWHERE.

NOT that his Majesty, while at the deepest in domestic intricacies, ever neglects Public Business. This very summer he is raising Hussar Squadrons; bent to introduce the Hussar kind of soldiery into his Army;—a good deal of horsebreaking and new sabre-exercise needed for that object.[1] The affairs of the Reich have at no moment been out of his eye; glad to see the Kaiser edging round to the Sea-Powers again, and things coming into their old posture, in spite of that sad Treaty of Seville.

[1] Fassmann, pp. 417, 418.

June 1731.

Nay, for the last two years, while the domestic volcanos were at their worst, his Majesty has been extensively dealing with a new question which has risen, that of the Salzburg Protestants; concerning which we shall hear more anon. Far and wide, in the Diets and elsewhere, he has been diligently, piously and with solid judgment, handling this question of the poor Salzburgers; and has even stored up moneys in intended solace of them (for he foresees what the end will be);—moneys which, it appears about this time, a certain Official over in Preussen has been peculating! In the end of June, his Majesty sets off to Preussen on the usual Inspection Tour; which we should not mention, were it not in regard to that same Official, and to something very rhadamanthine and particular which befell him; significant of what his Majesty can do in the way of prompt justice.

Case of Schlubhut.

The Königsberg Domain-Board (Kriegs- und Domänen-Kammer) had fallen awry, in various points, of late; several things known to be out-at-elbows in that Country; the Kammer Raths evidently lax at their post; for which reason they have been sharply questioned, and shaken by the collar, so to speak. Nay there is one Rath, a so-called Nobleman of those parts, by name Schlubhut, who has been found actually defaulting; peculating from that pious hoard intended for the Salzburgers: he is proved, and confesses, to have put into his own scandalous purse no less than 11,000 thalers, some say 30,000 (almost 5,000*l.*), which belonged to the Public Treasury and the Salzburg Protestants! These things, especially this latter unheard-of Schlubhut thing, the Supreme Court at Berlin (Criminal-Collegium) have been sitting on, for some time; and, in regard to Schlubhut, they have brought out a result, which Friedrich Wilhelm not a little admires at. Schlubhut clearly guilty of the defalcation, say they; but he has moneys, landed properties: let him refund, principal and interest; and have, say, three or four years' imprisonment, by way of memento. "Years' imprisonment? Refund? Is theft in the highest quarters a thing to be let-off for refunding?"

growls his Majesty; and will not confirm this sentence of his Criminal-Collegium; but leaves it till he get to the spot, and see with his own eyes. Schlubhut, in arrest or mild confinement all this while, ought to be bethinking himself more than he is!

Once on the spot, judge if the Königsberg Domain-Kammer had not a stiff muster to pass; especially if Schlubhut's drill-exercise was gentle! Schlubhut, summoned to private interview with his Majesty, carries his head higher than could be looked for: Is very sorry; knows not how it happened; meant always to refund; will refund, to the last penny, and make all good.—"Refund? Does He (Er) know what stealing means, then? How the commonest convicted private thief finds the gallows his portion; much more a public magistrate convicted of theft? Is He aware that He, in a very especial manner, deserves hanging, then?"—Schlubhut looks offended dignity; conscious of rank, if also of quasi-theft: "Es ist nicht Manier (it is not the polite thing) to hang a Prussian Nobleman on those light terms!" answers Schlubhut, high-mannered at the wrong time: "I can and will pay the money back!"—Noble-man? Money back? "I will none of His scoundrelly money." To strait Prison with this Schurke!—And thither he goes accordingly: unhappiest of mortals; to be conscious of rank, not at the right place, when about to steal the money, but at the wrong, when answering to Rhadamanthus on it!

And there, sure enough, Schlubhut lies, in his prison on the Schlossplatz, or Castle Square, of Königsberg, all night; and hears, close by the Domänen-Kammer, which is in the same Square, Domänen-Kammer where his Office used to be, a terrible sound of carpentering go on;—unhappiest of Prussian Noblemen. And in the morning, see, a high gallows built; close in upon the Domain-Kammer, looking into the very windows of it;—and there, sure enough, the unfortunate Schlubhut dies the thief's death, few hours hence, speaking or thinking what, no man reports to me. Death was certain for him; inevitable as fate. And so he vibrates there, admonitory to the other Raths for days,—some say for weeks,—till by humble petition they got the gallows removed. The stumps of it, sawed close by the stones, were long after visible in that Schlossplatz of Königsberg. Here is prompt justice with a witness! Did readers ever hear of such a thing? There is no doubt about the fact,[2] though in all Prussian Books it is loosely smeared over, without the least precision of detail; and it was not till after long searching that I could so much as get it dated: July 1731, while Friedrich Crown-Prince is still in eclipse at Cüstrin, and some six weeks after Wilhelmina's betrothal. And here furthermore, direct from the then Schlubhut precincts, is a stray Note, meteorological chiefly; but worth picking up, since it is authentic. 'Wehlau,' we observe, is on the road homewards again,—on our return from uttermost Memel,—a day's journey hitherwards of that place, half a day's thitherwards of Königsberg:

July 1731.

'Tuesday 10*th July* 1731. King dining with General Dockum at 'Wehlau,'—where he had been again reviewing, for about forty hours, all manner of regiments brought to rendezvous there for the purpose, poor 'General Katte with his regiment' among them;—King at dinner with General Dockum after all that, 'took the resolution to be off to 'Königsberg; and arrived here at the stroke of midnight, in a deluge 'of rain.' This brings us within a day, or two days, of Schlubhut's death. Terrible 'combat of Bisons (Uri, or Auerochsen, with such 'manes, such heads), of two wild Bisons against six wild Bears,' then ensued; and the Schlubhut human tragedy; I know not in what sequence,—rather conjecture the Schlubhut had gone first. Pillau, road to Dantzig, on the narrow strip between the Frische Haf and Baltic, is the next stage homewards; at Pillau, General Finkenstein (excellent old Tutor of the Crown-Prince) is Commandant, and expects his rapid Majesty, day and hour given, to me not known. Majesty goes in three carriages; Old Dessauer, Grumkow, Seckendorf, Ginkel are among his suite; weather still very electric:

'At Fischhausen, half way to Pillau, Majesty had a bout of elk-'hunting; killed sixty elks' (Melton-Mowbray may consider it),—'creatures of the deer sort, nimble as roes, but strong as bulls, and 'four palms higher than the biggest horse,—to the astonishment of 'Seckendorf, Ginkel and the strangers there. Half-an-hour short of 'Pillau, furious electricity again; thunderbolt shivered an oak-tree 'fifteen yards from Majesty's carriage. And at Pillau itself, the Bat-'talion in Garrison there, drawn-out in arms, by Count Finkenstein, to 'receive his Majesty' (rain over by this time, we can hope), 'had sud-'denly to rush forward and take new ground; Frische Haf, on some 'pressure from the elements, having suddenly gushed out, two hundred 'paces beyond its old watermark in that place.'[3]

[2] Benekendorf (Anonymous), Karakterzüge aus dem Leben König Friedrich Wilhelm I. (Berlin, 1788), vii. 15-20; Förster (ii. 268), &c. &c.

[3] See Mauvillon, ii. 293-297;—correcting by Fassmann, p. 422.

Pillau, Fischhausen,—this is where the excellent old Adalbert stamped the earth with his life 'in the shape of a crucifix' eight hundred years ago: and these are the new phenomena there!—The General Dockum, Colonel of Dragoons, whom his Majesty dined with at Wehlau, got his death not many months after. One of Dockum's Dragoon Lieutenants felt insulted at something, and demanded his discharge: discharge given, he challenged Dockum, duel of pistols, and shot him dead.[4] Nothing more to be said of Dockum, nor of that Lieutenant, in military annals.

Case of the Criminal-Collegium itself.

And thus was the error of the Criminal-Collegium rectified in re Schlubhut. For it is not in name only, but in fact, that this Sovereign is Supreme Judge, and bears the sword in God's stead,—interfering now and then, when need is, in this terrible manner. In the same dim authentic Benekendorf (himself a member of the Criminal-Collegium in later times), and from him in all the Books, is recorded another interference somewhat in the comic vein; which also we may give. Undisputed fact, again totally without precision or details; not even dateable, except that, on study, we perceive it may have been before this Schlubhut's execution, and after the Criminal-Collegium had committed their error about him,—must have been while this of Schlubhut was still vividly in mind. Here is the unprecise but indubitable fact, as the Prussian Dryasdust has left us his smear of it:

'One morning early' (might be before Schlubhut was hanged, and while only sentence of imprisonment and restitution lay on him), General Graf von Dönhof, Colonel of a Musketeer regiment, favourite old soldier,—who did vote on the mild side in that Court-Martial on the Crown-Prince lately; but I hope has been forgiven by his Majesty, being much esteemed by him these long years past;—this Dönhof, early one morning, calls upon the King, with a grimly lamenting air. "What is wrong, Herr General?"—"Your Majesty, my best musketeer, an excellent soldier, and of good inches, fell into a mistake lately,—bad company getting round the poor fellow; they, he among them, slipt into a house and stole something; trifle and without violence: pay is but three half-pence, your Majesty, and the Devil tempts men! Well, the Criminal-Collegium have condemned him to be hanged; an excellent soldier and of good inches, for that one fault. Nobleman Schlubhut was 'to make restitution,' they decreed: that was their decree on Schlubhut, one of their own set; and this poor soldier, six feet three, your Majesty, is to dance on the top of nothing for a three-halfpenny matter!"—So would Dönhof represent the thing,—'fact being,' says my Dryasdust, 'it was 'a case of housebreaking with theft to the value of 6,000 tha-'lers, and this musketeer the ringleader!'—Well; but was Schlubhut sentenced to hanging? Do you keep two weights and two measures, in that Criminal-Collegium of yours, then?

[4] 7th April 1732 (Militair-Lexikon, i. 365).

Friedrich Wilhelm feels this sad contrast very much; the more, as the soldier is his own chattel withal, and of superlative inches: Friedrich Wilhelm flames-up into wrath; sends off swift messengers to bring these Judges, one and all, instantly into his presence. The Judges are still in their dressing-gowns, shaving, breakfasting; they make what haste they can. So soon as the first three or four are reported to be in the ante-room, Friedrich Wilhelm, in extreme impatience, has them called in; starts discoursing with them upon the two weights and two measures. Apologies, subterfuges do but provoke him farther; it is not long till he starts up, growling terribly: "Ihr Schurken (Ye Scoundrels), how could you?" and smites down upon the crowns of them with the Royal Cudgel itself. Fancy the hurry-scurry, the unforensic attitudes and pleadings! Royal Cudgel rains blows, right and left: blood is drawn, crowns cracked, crowns nearly broken; and 'several Judges lost a few teeth, and had their noses battered,' before they could get out. The second relay meeting them in this dilapidated state, on the staircases, dashed home again without the honour of a Royal interview.[5] Let them learn to keep one balance, and one set of weights, in their Law-Court henceforth.—This is an actual scene, of date Berlin 1731 or thereby; unusual in the annals of Themis. Of which no constitutional country can hope to see the fellow, were the need never so pressing.—I wish his Majesty had been a thought more equal, when he was so rhadamanthine! Schlubhut he hanged, Schlubhut being only Schlubhut's chattel; this musketeer, his Majesty's own chattel, he did not hang, but set him shouldering arms again, after some preliminary dusting !—

[5] Benekendorf, vii. 33; Förster, ii. 270.

His Majesty was always excessively severe on defalcations ; any Chancellor with his Exchequer-bills gone wrong, would have fared ill in that country. One Treasury dignitary, named Wilke (who had 'dealt in tall recruits,' as a kind of bye-trade, and played foul in some slight measure), the King was clear for hanging ; his poor Wife galloped to Potsdam, shrieking mercy ; upon which Friedrich Wilhelm had him whipt by the hangman, and stuck for life into Spandau. Still more tragical was poor Hesse's case. Hesse, some domain Rath out at Königsberg, concerned with moneys, was found with account-books in a state of confusion, and several thousands short, when the outcome was cleared up. What has become of these thousands, Sir ? Poor old Hesse could not tell : "God is my witness, no penny of them ever stuck to me," asseverated poor old Hesse ; "but where they are— ? My account-books are in such a state ;—alas, and my poor old memory is not what it was !" They brought him to Berlin ; in the end they actually hanged the poor old soul ;—and then afterwards in his dusty lumber-rooms, hidden in pots, stuffed into this nook and that, most or all of the money was found ![6] Date and document exist for all these cases, though my Dryasdust gives none ; and the cases are indubitable ; very rhadamanthine indeed. The soft quality of mercy,—ah, yes, it is beautiful and blessed, when permissible (though thrice-accursed, when not) : but it is on the hard quality of justice, first of all, that Empires are built up, and beneficent and lasting things become achievable to mankind, in this world !—

Skipper Jenkins in the Gulf of Florida.

A couple of weeks before Schlubhut's death, the English Newspapers are somewhat astir, — in the way of narrative merely, as yet. Ship Rebecca, Captain Robert Jenkins Master, has arrived in the Port of London, with a strange story in her logbook. Of which, after due sifting, this is accurately the substance :

'London, 23d-27th June 1731. Captain Jenkins left this Port with 'the Rebecca, several months ago ; sailed to Jamaica, for a cargo of [6] Förster (ii. 269). &c. &c.

1731.

'sugar. He took in his cargo at Jamaica; put to sea again, 5th April '1731, and proceeded on the voyage homewards; with indifferent 'winds for the first fortnight. April 20th, with no wind or none that 'would suit, he was hanging about in the entrance of the Gulf of 'Florida, not far from the Havana,'—almost too near it, I should think; but these baffling winds!—'not far from the Havana, when a 'Spanish Guarda-Costa hove in sight; came down on Jenkins, and 'furiously boarded him: "Scoundrel, what do you want; contraband-'ing in these seas? Jamaica, say you? Sugar? Likely! Let us see 'your logwood, hides, Spanish pieces-of-eight!" And broke in upon 'Jenkins, ship and person, in a most extraordinary manner. Tore-up 'his hatches; plunged down, seeking logwood, hides, pieces-of-eight; 'found none,—not the least trace of contraband on board of Jenkins. 'They brought up his quadrants, sextants, however; likewise his stock 'of tallow-candles: they shook and rummaged him, and all things, for 'pieces-of-eight; furiously advised him, cutlass in hand, to confess 'guilt. They slashed the head of Jenkins, his left ear almost off. Order 'had been given, "Scalp him!"—but as he had no hair, they omitted 'that; merely brought away the wig, and slashed:—still no confession, 'nor any pieces-of-eight. They hung him up to the yardarm,—actual 'neck-halter, but it seems to have been tarry, and did not run:—still 'no confession. They hoisted him higher, tied his cabin-boy to his 'feet; neck-halter then became awfully stringent upon Jenkins; had 'not the cabin-boy (without head to speak of) slipt through, noose be-'ing tarry; which was a sensible relief to Jenkins. Before very death, 'they lowered Jenkins, "Confess, scoundrel, then!" Scoundrel could 'not confess; spoke of "British Majesty's flag, peaceable English sub-'ject on the high seas."—"British Majesty; high seas!" answered they, 'and again hoisted. Thrice over they tried Jenkins in this manner at 'the yardarm, once with cabin-boy at his feet: never had man such a 'day, outrageous whiskerando cutthroats tossing him about, his poor 'Rebecca and him, at such rate! Sun getting low, and not the least 'trace of contraband found, they made a last assault on Jenkins; 'clutched the bloody slit ear of him; tore it mercilessly off; flung it 'in his face, "Carry that to your King, and tell him of it!" Then went 'their way; taking Jenkins's tallow-candles, and the best of his sextants 'with them; so that he could hardly work his passage home again, for 'want of latitudes;—and has lost in goods 11*l.*, not to speak of his 'ear. Strictly true all this; ship's company, if required, will testify on 'their oath."[7]

These surely are singular facts; calculated to awaken a maritime public careful of its honour. Which they did,—after about eight years, as the reader will see! For the present, there are growlings in the coffeehouses; and, 'Thursday 28th

[7] Daily Journal (and the other London Newspapers), 12th-17th June (o.s.) 1731. Coxe's Walpole, i. 579, 560 (indistinct, and needing correction).

'June,' say the Newspapers, 'This day Captain Jenkins with 'his Owners,' ear in his pocket, I hope, 'went out to Hamp-'ton Court to lay the matter before his Grace of Newcastle :' "Please your Grace, it is hardly three months since the illustrious Treaty of Vienna was signed ; Dutch and we leading-in the Termagant of Spain, and nothing but halcyon weather to be looked for on that side !" Grace of Newcastle, anxious to avoid trouble with Spain, answers I can only fancy what ; and nothing was done upon Jenkins and his ear ;[8]—may 'keep it in cotton,' if he like ; shall have 'a better ship' for some solacement. This is the first emergence of Jenkins and his ear upon negligent mankind. He and it will marvellously reëmerge, one day !—

Baby Carlos gets his Apanage.

But in regard to that Treaty of Vienna, seventh and last of the travail-throes for Baby Carlos's Apanage, let the too oblivious reader accept the following Extract, to keep him on a level with Public 'Events,' as they are pleased to denominate themselves :

'By that dreadful Treaty of Seville, Cardinal Fleury and the Spaniards 'should have joined with England, and coerced the Kaiser vi et armis 'to admit Spanish Garrisons' (instead of neutral) 'into Parma and Pia-'cenza, and so secure Baby Carlos his heritage there, which all Nature 'was in travail till he got. "War in Italy to a certainty !" said all the 'Newspapers, after Seville : and Crown-Prince Friedrich, we saw, was 'running off to have a stroke in said War ;—inevitable, as the Kaiser 'still obstinately refused. And the English, and great George their 'King, were ready. Nevertheless, no War came. Old Fleury, not 'wanting war, wanting only to fish-out something useful for himself,— 'Lorraine how welcome, and indeed the smallest contributions are wel-'come !—Old Fleury manœuvered, hung back ; till the Spaniards and 'Termagant Elizabeth lost all patience, and the very English were weary, 'and getting suspicious. Whereupon the Kaiser edged round to the 'Sea-Powers again, or they to him ; and comfortable As-you-were was 'got accomplished : much to the joy of Friedrich Wilhelm and others. 'Here are some of the dates to these sublime phenomena :

'March 16th, 1731, Treaty of Vienna, England and the Kaiser 'coalescing again into comfortable As-you-were. Treaty done by Ro-'binson' (Sir Thomas, ultimately Earl of Grantham, whom we shall

[8] 'The Spaniards own they did a witty thing,
Who cropt our ears, and sent them to the King.'
POPE (date not given me).

1731.

often hear of in time coming); 'was confirmed and enlarged by a kind of 'second edition, 22d July 1731; Dutch joining, Spain itself acceding, 'and all being now right. Which could hardly have been expected.

'For before the first edition of that Treaty, and while Robinson at 'Vienna was still labouring like Hercules in it,—the poor Duke of 'Parma died. Died; and no vestige of a "Spanish Garrison" yet 'there, to induct Baby Carlos according to old bargain. On the con- 'trary, the Kaiser himself took possession,—"till once the Duke's 'Widow, who declares herself in the family-way, be brought to bed! 'If of a Son, of course he must have the Duchies; if of a Daughter 'only, then Carlos shall get them, let not Robinson fear." The due 'months ran, but neither son nor daughter came; and the Treaty of 'Vienna, first edition and also second, was signed; and,

'October 20*th*, 1731, Spanish Garrisons, no longer an hypothesis, 'but a bodily fact, 6,000 strong, "convoyed by the British Fleet," 'came into Leghorn, and proceeded to lodge themselves in the long- 'litigated Parma and Piacenza;—and, in fine, the day after Christmas, 'blessed be Heaven,

'December 26*th*, Baby Carlos in highest person came in: Baby 'Carlos (more power to him!) got the Duchies, and we hope there 'was an end. No young gentleman ever had such a pother to make 'among his fellow-creatures about a little heritable property. If Baby 'Carlos's performance in it be anything in proportion, he will be a 'supereminent sovereign!

'There is still some haggle about Tuscany, the Duke of which is 'old and heirless; Last of the Medici, as he proved. Baby Carlos 'would much like to have Tuscany too; but that is a Fief of the Empire, 'and might easily be better disposed of, thinks the Kaiser. A more or 'less uncertain point, that of Tuscany; as many points are! Last of 'the Medici complained, in a polite manner, that they were parting his 'clothes before he had put them off: however, having no strength, he 'did not attempt resistance, but politely composed himself, "Well, 'then!"[9] Do readers need to be informed that this same Baby Carlos 'came to be King of Naples, and even ultimately to be Carlos III. of 'Spain, leaving a younger Son to be King of Naples, ancestor of the 'now Majesty there?'

And thus, after such Diplomatic earthquakes and travail of Nature, there is at last birth; the Seventh Travail-throe has been successful, in some measure successful. Here actually is Baby Carlos's Apanage; there probably, by favour of Heaven and of the Sea-Powers, will the Kaiser's Pragmatic Sanction be, one day. Treaty of Seville, most imminent of all those dreadful Imminences of War, has passed off as they all did; peaceably adjusts itself into Treaty of Vienna: A Termagant, as it were, sated; a Kaiser hopeful to be so, Pragmatic Sanction and all: for the Sea-Powers and everybody mere halcyon weather henceforth,—not extending to the Gulf of Florida and Captain Jenkins, as would seem! Robinson, who did the thing, —an expert man, bred to business as old Horace Walpole's Secretary, at Soissons and elsewhere, and now come to act on his own score,—regards this Treaty of Vienna (which indeed had its multiform difficulties) as a thing to immortalise a man.

[9] Schöll, ii. 219-221; Coxe's Walpole, i. 346; Coxe's House of Austria (London, 1854), iii. 151.

Crown-Prince has, long since, by Papa's order, written to the Kaiser, to thank Imperial Majesty for that beneficent intercession, which has proved the saving of his life, as Papa inculcates. We must now see a little how the saved Crown-Prince is getting on, in his eclipsed state, among the Domain Sciences at Cüstrin.

CHAPTER V.

INTERVIEW OF MAJESTY AND CROWN-PRINCE AT CUSTRIN.

EVER since the end of November last year, Crown-Prince Friedrich, in the eclipsed state, at Cüstrin, has been prosecuting his probationary course, in the Domain Sciences and otherwise, with all the patience, diligence and dexterity he could. It is false, what one reads in some foolish Books, that Friedrich neglected the functions assigned him as assessor in the Kriegs- und Domänen-Kammer. That would not have been the safe course for him! The truth still evident is, he set himself with diligence to learn the Friedrich-Wilhelm methods of administering Domains, and the art of Finance in general, especially of Prussian Finance, the best extant then or since;—Finance, Police, Administrative Business;—and profited well by the Raths appointed as tutors to him, in the respective branches. One Hille was his Finance-tutor; whose 'Kompendium,' drawn up and made use of on this occasion, has been printed in our time; and is said to be, in brief compass, a highly instructive Piece; throwing clear light on the exemplary Friedrich-Wilhelm methods.[1] These the Prince did actually learn; and also practise, all his life,—'essentially following his Father's methods,' say the Authorities,—with great advantage to himself, when the time came.

[1] Preuss, i. 59 n.

1731.

Solid Nicolai hunted diligently after traces of him in the Assessor business here; and found some:—Order from Papa, to 'make Report upon the Glassworks of the Neumark:' Autograph signatures to common Reports, one or two; and some traditions of his having had a hand in planning certain Farm-Buildings still standing in those parts:—but as the Kammer Records of Cüstrin, and Cüstrin itself, were utterly burnt by the Russians in 1758, such traces had mostly vanished thirty years before Nicolai's time.[2] Enough have turned up since, in the form of Correspondence with the King and otherwise: and it is certain the Crown-Prince did plan Farm-Buildings;—'both Carzig and Himmelstädt (Carzig now called Friedrichs-'felde in consequence),'* dim mossy Steadings, which pious Antiquarianism can pilgrim to if it likes, were built or rebuilt by him:—and it is remarkable withal how thoroughly instructed Friedrich Wilhelm shows himself in such matters; and how paternally delighted to receive such proposals of improvement introducible at the said Carzig and Himmelstädt, and to find young Graceless so diligent, and his ideas even good.[3] Perhaps a momentary glance into those affairs may be permitted farther on.

The Prince's life, in this his eclipsed state, is one of constraint, anxiety, continual liability; but after the first months are well over, it begins to be more supportable than we should think. He is fixed to the little Town; cannot be absent any night, without leave from the Commandant; which, however, and the various similar restrictions, are more formal than real. An amiable Crown-Prince, no soul in Cüstrin but would run by night or by day to serve him. He drives and rides about, in that green peaty country, on Domain business, on visits, on permissible amusement, pretty much at his own modest discretion. A green flat region, made of peat and sand; human industry needing to be always busy on it: raised causeways with incessant bridges, black sedgy ditch on this hand and that; many meres, muddy pools, stagnant or flowing waters everywhere; big muddy Oder, of yellowish-drab colour, coming from the south, big black Warta (Warthe) from the Polish fens in the east, the black and yellow refusing to mingle for some miles. Nothing of the picturesque in this country; but a good deal of the useful, of the improvable by economic science; and more of fine productions in it, too, of the floral, and still more interesting sorts, than you would suspect at first sight. Friedrich's worst pinch was his dreadful straitness of income; checking one's noble tendencies on every hand: but the gentry of the district privately subscribed gifts for him (se cotisirent, says Wilhelmina); and one way and other he contrived to make ends meet. Münchow, his President in the Kammer, next to whom sits Friedrich, 'King's place standing always ready but empty there,' is heartily his friend; the Münchows are diligent in getting up balls, rural gaieties, for him; so the Hilles,—nay Hille, severe Finance Tutor, has a Mamsell Hille whom it is pleasant to dance with;[4] nor indeed is she the only fascinating specimen, or flower of loveliness, in those peaty regions, as we shall see. On the whole, his Royal Highness, after the first paroxysms of Royal suspicion are over, and forgiveness beginning to seem possible to the Royal mind, has a supportable time of it; and possesses his soul in patience, in activity and hope.

[2] Nicolai, Anekdoten, vi. 193.
[3] Förster, ii. 390, 387, 391.

* See Map at p. 43.

Unpermitted things, once for all, he must avoid to do: perhaps he will gradually discover that many of them were foolish things better not done. He walks warily; to this all things continually admonish. We trace in him some real desire to be wise, to do and learn what is useful if he can here. But the grand problem, which is reality itself to him, is always, To regain favour with Papa. And this, Papa being what he is, gives a twist to all other problems the young man may have, for they must all shape themselves by this; and introduces something of artificial,—not properly of hypocritical, for that too is fatal if found out,—but of calculated, reticent, of half-sincere, on the Son's part: an inevitable feature, plentifully visible in their Correspondence now and henceforth. Corresponding with Papa and his Grumkow, and watched, at every step, by such an Argus as the Tobacco-Parliament, real frankness of speech is not quite the recommendable thing; apparent frankness may be the safer! Besides mastery in the Domain Sciences, I perceive the Crown-Prince had to study here another art, useful to him in after life: the art of wearing among his fellow-creatures a polite cloak-of-darkness. Gradually he becomes master of it as few are: a man politely impregnable to the intrusion of human curiosity; able to look cheerily into the very eyes of men, and talk in a social way face to face, and yet continue intrinsically invisible to them. An art no less essential to Royalty than that of the Domain Sciences itself; and,—if at all consummately done, and with a scorn of mendacity for help, as in this case,—a difficult art. It is the chief feature in the Two or Three Thousand Letters we yet have of Friedrich's to all manner of correspondents: Letters written with the gracefulest flowing rapidity; polite, affable,—refusing to give you the least glimpse into his real inner man, or tell you any particular you might impertinently wish to know.

[4] Preuss, i. 59.

As the History of Friedrich, in this Cüstrin epoch, and indeed in all epochs and parts, is still little other than a whirlpool of simmering confusions, dust mainly, and sibylline paper-shreds, in the pages of poor Dryasdust, perhaps we cannot do better than snatch a shred or two (of the partly legible kind, or capable of being made legible) out of that hideous cauldron; pin them down at their proper dates; and try if the reader can, by such means, catch a glimpse of the thing with his own eyes. Here is shred first; a Piece in Grumkow's hand.

This treats of a very grand incident; which forms an era or turning-point in the Cüstrin life. Majesty has actually, after hopes long held out of such a thing, looked in upon the Prodigal at Cüstrin, in testimony of possible pardon in the distance;—sees him again, for the first time since that scene at Wesel with the drawn sword, after year and day. Grumkow, for behoof of Seckendorf and the Vienna people, has drawn a rough 'Protocol' of it; and here it is, snatched from the Dust-whirlwinds, and faithfully presented to the English reader. His Majesty is travelling towards Sonnenburg, on some grand Knight-of-Malta Ceremony there; and halts at Cüstrin for a couple of hours as he passes:

Grumkow's 'Protokoll' of the 15th August 1731; or Summary of what took place at Cüstrin that day.

'His Majesty arrived at Cüstrin yesterday' (gestern, Monday 15th,—hour not mentioned), 'and proceeded at once to the Government 'House, with an attendance of several hundred persons. Major-General 'Lepel,' Commandant of Cüstrin, 'Colonel Derschau and myself are 'immediately sent for to his Majesty's apartment there. Privy-Coun- 'cillor Wolden,' Prince's Hofmarschall, a solid legal man, 'is ordered 'by his Majesty to bring the Crown-Prince over from his house; who 'accordingly in few minutes, attended by Rohwedel and Natzmer,' the two Kammerjunkers, 'entered the room where his Majesty and we were.

'So soon as his Majesty, turning round, had sight of him, the 'Crown-Prince fell at his feet. Having bidden him rise, his Majesty 'said with a severe mien:

'"You will now bethink yourself what passed year and day ago; "and how scandalously you saw fit to behave yourself, and what a "godless enterprise you took in hand. As I have had you about me "from the beginning, and must know you well, I did all in the world "that was in my power, by kindness and by harshness, to make an "honourable man of you. As I rather suspected your evil purpose, I "treated you in the harshest and sharpest way in the Saxon Camp," at Radewitz, in those gala days, "in hopes you would consider your- "self, and take another line of conduct; would confess your faults to "me, and beg forgiveness. But all in vain; you grew ever more stiff- "necked. When a young man gets into follies with women, one may "try to overlook it as the fault of his age: but to do with forethought "basenesses (lâchetéen) and ugly actions; that is unpardonable. You "thought to carry it through with your headstrong humour: but hark "ye, my lad (höre, mein Kerl), if thou wert sixty or seventy instead "of eighteen, thou couldst not cross my resolutions." It would take a bigger man to do that, my lad! "And as, up to this date (bis dato) "I have managed to sustain myself against any comer, there will be "methods found of bringing thee to reason too!—

'"How have not I, on all occasions, meant honourably by you! "Last time I got wind of your debts, how did I, as a Father, admon- "ish you to tell me all; I would pay all, you were only to tell me the "truth. Whereupon you said, There were still Two-thousand Thalers "beyond the sum named. I paid these also at once; and fancied I had "made peace with you. And then it was found, by and by, you owed "many thousands more; and as you now knew you could not pay, it "was as good as if the money had been stolen;—not to reckon how "the French vermin, Montholieu and partner, cheated you with their "new loans." Pfui!——"Nothing touched me so much" (continues his Majesty, verging towards the pathetic), "as that you had not any "trust in me. All this that I was doing for aggrandisement of the "House, the Army and Finances, could only be for you, if you made "yourself worthy of it! I here declare I have done all things to gain "your friendship;—and all has been in vain!" At which words the 'Crown-Prince, with a very sorrowful gesture, threw himself at his 'Majesty's feet,'—tears (presumably) in both their eyes by this time.

15th Aug. 1731.

'"Was it not your intention to go to England?" asked his Majesty 'farther on. The Prince answered "Ja!"—"Then hear what the "consequences would have been. Your Mother would have got into "the greatest misery; I could not but have suspected she was the "author of the business. Your Sister I would have cast, for life, into "a place where she never would have seen sun and moon again. Then "on with my Army into Hanover, and burn and ravage; yes, if it had "cost me life, land and people. Your thoughtless and godless conduct, "see what it was leading to. I intended to employ you in all manner "of business, civil, military; but how, after such an action, could I "show the face of you to my Officers (soldiers) and other servants?— "The one way of repairing all this is, That you seek, regardless of your "very life in comparison, to make the fault good again!" At which 'words the Crown-Prince mournfully threw himself at his Royal Ma- 'jesty's feet; begging to be put upon the hardest proofs: He would 'endure all things, so as to recover his Majesty's grace and esteem.

'Whereupon the King asked him: "Was it thou that temptedst 'Katte; or did Katte tempt thee?" The Crown-Prince without hesit- 'ation answered, "I tempted him."—"I am glad to hear the truth 'from you, at any rate."'

The Dialogue now branches out, into complex general form; out of which, intent upon abridging, we gather the following points. King loquitur:

"How do you like your Cüstrin life? Still as much aversion to "Wusterhausen, and to wearing your shroud" (Sterbekittel, name for the tight uniform you would now be so glad of, and think quite other than a shroud!) "as you called it?" Prince's answer wanting.—"Likely "enough my company does not suit you: I have no French manners, "and cannot bring out bon-mots in the petit-maître way; and truly re- "gard all that as a thing to be flung to the dogs. I am a German "Prince; and mean to live and die in that character. But you can now "say what you have got by your caprices and obstinate heart; hating "everything that I liked; and if I distinguished any one, despising "him! If an Officer was put in arrest, you took to lamenting about "him. Your real friends, who intended your good, you hated and "calumniated; those that flattered you, and encouraged your bad "purpose, you caressed. You see what that has come to. In Berlin, "in all Prussia for some time back, nobody asks after you, Whether "you are in the world or not; and were it not one or the other coming "from Cüstrin who reports you as playing tennis and wearing French "hairbags, nobody would know whether you were alive or dead."

Hard sayings; to which the Prince's answers (if there were any beyond mournful gestures) are not given. We come now upon Predestination, or the Gnadenwahl; and learn (with real interest, not of the laughing sort alone) how his 'Majesty, in the most conclusive way, set 'forth the horrible results of that Absolute-Decree notion; which makes 'out God to be the Author of Sin, and that Jesus Christ died only for 'some! Upon which the Crown-Prince vowed and declared (hoch und theuer), he was now wholly of his Majesty's orthodox opinion.'

The King, now thoroughly moved, expresses satisfaction at the orthodoxy; and adds with enthusiasm, "When godless fellows about "you speak against your duties to God, the King and your Country, "fall instantly on your knees, and pray with your whole soul to Jesus "Christ to deliver you from such wickedness, and lead you on better "ways. And if it come in earnest from your heart, Jesus, who would "have all men saved, will not leave you unheard." No! And so may God in his mercy aid you, poor son Fritz. And as for me, in hopes the time coming will show fruits, I forgive you what is past.—To which the Crown-Prince answered with monosyllables, with many tears; 'kissing his Majesty's feet;'—and as the King's eyes were not dry, he withdrew into another room; revolving many things in his altered soul.

'It being his Majesty's birthday' (4th August by old style, 15th by new, forty-third birthday), 'the Prince, all bewept and in emotion, 'followed his Father; and, again falling prostrate, testified such heart-'felt joy, gratitude and affection over this blessed anniversary, as quite 'touched the heart of Papa; who at last clasped him in his arms' (poor soul, after all!), 'and hurried out to avoid blubbering quite aloud. He 'stept into his carriage,' intending for Sonnenburg (chiefly by water) this evening, where a Serene Cousin, one of the Schwedt Margraves, Head Knight of Malta, has his establishment.

'The Crown-Prince followed his Majesty out; and, in the presence 'of many hundred people, kissed his Majesty's feet' again (linen gaiters, not Day-and-Martin shoes); 'and was again embraced by his Majesty, 'who said, "Behave well, as I see you mean, and I will take care of 'you," which threw the Crown-Prince into such an ecstasy of joy as 'no pen can express:' and so the carriages rolled away,—towards the Knights-of-Malta business and Palace of the Head Knight of Malta, in the first place.[5]

These are the main points, says Grumkow, reporting next day; and the reader must interpret them as he can. A Crown-Prince with excellent histrionic talents, thinks the reader. Well; a certain exaggeration, immensity of wish becoming itself enthusiasm; somewhat of that: but that is by no means the whole or even the main part of the phenomenon, O reader. This Crown-Prince has a real affection to his Father, as we shall in time convince ourselves. Say, at lowest, a Crown-Prince loyal to fact; able to recognise overwhelming fact, and aware that he must surrender thereto. Surrender once made, the element much clears itself; Papa's side of the question getting fairly stated for the first time. Sure enough, Papa is

[5] Förster, iii. 50-54.

God's Vicegerent in several undeniable respects, most important some of them: better try if we can obey Papa.

Dim old Fassmann yields a spark or two,—as to his Majesty's errand at Sonnenburg. Majesty is going to preside tomorrow 'at the Installation of young Margraf Karl, new Herrmeister (Grand-Master) of the Knights of St. John' there; 'the Office having suddenly fallen vacant lately.' Office which is is an heirloom;—usually held by one of the Margraves, half-uncles of the King,—some junior of them, not provided for at Schwedt or otherwise. Margraf Albert, the last occupant, an old gentleman of sixty, died lately, 'by stroke of apoplexy while at dinner;'[6]—and his eldest Son, Margraf Karl, with whom his Majesty lodges tonight, is now Herrmeister. 'Majesty came at six P.M. to Sonnenburg' (must have left Cüstrin about five); 'forty-two Ritters made at Sonnenburg next day,'—a certain Colonel or Lieutenant-General von Wreech, whom we shall soon see again, is one of them; Seckendorf another. 'Fresh Ritter-Schlag' ('Knightstroke,' Batch of Knights dubbed) 'at Sonnenburg, 29th September next,' which shall not the least concern us. Note Margraf Karl, however, the new Herrmeister; for he proves a soldier of some mark, and will turn-up again in the Silesian Wars;—as will a poor Brother of his still more impressively, 'shot dead beside the King,' on one occasion there.

We add this of Dickens, for all the Diplomatists, and a discerning public generally, are much struck with the Event at Cüstrin; and take to writing of it as news;—and 'Mr. Ginkel,' Dutch Ambassador here, an ingenious, honest and observant man, well enough known to us, has been out to sup with the Prince, next day; and thus reports of him to Dickens; 'Mr. Ginkel, who supped with the Prince on Thursday last,' day after the Interview, 'tells me that his Royal Highness is 'extremely improved since he had seen him; being grown 'much taller; and that his conversation is surprising for his 'age, abounding in good sense and the prettiest turns of ex-'pression.'[7]

Here are other shreds, snatched from the Witch-Cauldron, and pinned down, each at its place; which give us one or two subsequent glimpses:

[6] 21st June 1731: Fassmann, p. 423; Pöllnitz, ii. 390.
[7] Despatch, 18th August 1731.

Potsdam, 21*st August* 1731 (King to Wolden the Hofmarschall). * * * 'Crown-Prince shall travel over, and personally inspect, the following Domains: Quartschen, Himmelstädt, Carzig, Massin, Lebus, Gollow and Wollup,' dingy moor-farms dear to Antiquarians; 'travel over these and not any other. Permission always to be asked, of his Royal Majesty, in writing, and mention made to which of them the Crown-Prince means to go. Some one to be always in attendance, who can give him fit instruction about the husbandry; and as the Crown-Prince has yet only learned the theory, he must now be diligent to learn the same practically. For which end it must be minutely explained to him, How the husbandry is managed,—how ploughed, manured, sown, in every particular; and what the differences of good and bad husbandry are, so that he may be able of himself to know and judge the same. Of Cattle-husbandry too, and the affairs of Brewing (Viehzucht und Brauwesen), the due understanding to be given him; and in the matter of Brewing, show him how things are handled, mixed, the beer drawn off, barrelled, and all how they do with it (wie überall dabei verfahren); also the malt, how it must be prepared, and what like, when good. Useful discourse to be kept-up with him on these journeys; pointing out how and why this is and that, and whether it could not be better:'—O King of a thousand!—'Has liberty to shoot stags, moorcocks (Hühner) and the like; and a small-hunt' (kleine Jagd, not a Parforce or big one) 'can be got-up for his amusement now and then;' furthermore 'a little duck-shooting from boat,' on the sedgy waters there,—if the poor soul should care about it. Wolden, or one of the Kammerjunkers, to accompany always, and be responsible. 'No Mädchen or Frauensmensch,' no shadow of womankind;—keep an eye on him, 'you three!'

These things are in the Prussian Archives; of date the week after that interview. In two weeks farther, follows the Prince's speculation about Carzig and the Building of a Farmstead there; with Papa's 'real contentment that you come upon 'such proposals, and seek to make improvements. Only'—

Wusterhausen, 11*th September* (King to Crown-Prince). * * 'Only 'you must examine whether there is meadow-ground enough, and how 'many acres can actually be allotted to that Farm.' (Hear his Majesty!) 'Take a Land-surveyor with you; and have all well considered; and 'exactly inform yourself what kind of land it is, whether it can only grow 'rye, or whether some of it is barley-land: you must consider it yourself, and do it all out of your own head, though you may consult with 'others about it. In grazing-ground (Hüthung) I think it will not fail; 'if only the meadow-land'— in fact, it fails in nothing; and is got all done ('wood laid out 'to season straightway,' and 'what digging and stubbing there

4th Oct. 1731.

'is, proceeded with through the winter'): done in a successful and instructive manner, both Carzig and Himmelstädt, though we will say nothing farther of them.[8]

Cüstrin, 22d September (Crown-Prince to Papa). * * 'Have been 'at Lebus; excellent land out there; fine weather for the husbandman.' 'Major Röder,' unknown Major, 'passed this way; and dined with 'me, last Wednesday. He has got a pretty fellow (schönen Kerl) for 'my Most All-Gracious Father's regiment' (the Potsdam Giants, where I used to be); 'whom I could not look upon without bleeding heart. 'I depend on my Most All-Gracious Father's Grace, that he will be 'good to me: I ask for nothing and no happiness in the world but 'what comes from You; and hope You will, some day, remember me 'in grace, and give me the Blue Coat to put on again!'[9]—To which Papa answers nothing, or only "Hm, na, time may come!"

Carzig goes on straightway; Papa charmed to grant the moneys; 'wood laid out to season,' and much 'stubbing and digging' set on foot, before the month ends. Carzig; and directly on the heel of it, on like terms, Himmelstädt,—but of all this we must say no more. It is clear the Prince is learning the Domain Sciences; eager to prove himself a perfect son in the eyes of Papa. Papa, in hopeful moments, asks himself: "To whom shall we marry him, then; how settle him?" But what the Prince, in his own heart, thought of it all; how he looked, talked, lived, in unofficial times? Here has a crabbed dim Document turned up, which, if it were not nearly undecipherable to the reader and me, would throw light on the point:

Schulenburg's Three Letters to Grumkow, on Visits to the Crown-Prince, during the Cüstrin Time.

The reader knows Lieutenant-General Schulenburg; stiff little military gentleman of grave years, nephew of the maypole Emerita who is called Duchess of Kendal in England. 'Had a horse shot under him at Malplaquet;' battlings and experiences enough, before and since. Has real sense, abundant real pedantry; a Prussian soldier every inch. He presided in the Cöpenick Court-martial; he is deeply concerned in these Crown-Prince difficulties. His Majesty even honours him by expecting he should quietly keep a monitorial eye upon the [9] Briefwechsel mit Vater (Œuvres, xxvii. part 3d, p. 27).

[8] Förster, i. 387-392.

Crown-Prince ;—being his neighbour in those parts ; Colonel-Commandant of a regiment of Horse at Landsberg not many miles off. He has just been at Vienna[10] on some 'business' (quasi-diplomatic probably, which can remain unknown to us) ; and has reported upon it, or otherwise finished it off, at Berlin ;—whence rapidly home to Landsberg again. On the way homewards, and after getting home, he writes these three Letters ; offhand and in all privacy, and of course with a business sincerity, to Grumkow ;—little thinking they would one day get printed, and wander into these latitudes to be scanned and scrutinised ! Undoubtedly an intricate crabbed Document to us ; but then an indubitable one. Crown-Prince, Schulenburg himself, and the actual figure of Time and Place, are here mirrored for us, with a business sincerity, in the mind of Schulenburg,—as from an accidental patch of water ; ruffled bogwater, in sad twilight, and with sedges and twigs intervening ; but under these conditions we do look with our own eyes !

Could not one, by any conceivable method, interpret into legibility this abstruse dull Document ; and so pick out here and there a glimpse, actual face-to-face view, of Crown-Prince Friedrich in his light-gray frock with the narrow silver tresses, in his eclipsed condition there in the Cüstrin region ? All is very mysterious about him ; his inward opinion about all manner of matters, from the Guadenwahl to the late Double-Marriage Question. Even his outward manner of life, in its flesh-and-blood physiognomy,—we search in vain through tons of dusty lucubration totally without interest, to catch here and there the corner of a feature of it. Let us try Schulenburg. We shall know at any rate that to Grumkow, in the Autumn 1731, these words were luculent and significant : consciously they tell us something of young Friedrich ; unconsciously a good deal of Lieutenant-General Schulenburg, who with his strict theologies, his military stiffnesses, his reticent, pipeclayed, rigorous and yet human ways, is worth looking at, as an antique species extinct in our time. He is just home from Vienna, getting towards his own domicile from Berlin, from Cüstrin, and has seen the Prince. He writes in a wretched wayside tavern, or post-house, between Cüstrin and Landsberg,—dates his Letter 'Wien (Vienna),' as if he were still in the imperial City, so offhand is he.

[10] September 1731 (Militair-Lexikon, iii. 433).

4th Oct. 1731.

No. 1. To his Excellenz (add a shovelful of other titles) Lieutenant-General Herr Baron von Grumkow, President of the Krieges-und Domänen-Directorium, of the (in fact, Vice-President of the Tobacco-Parliament), in Berlin.

'Wien' (properly Berlin-Landsberg Highway, other side of Cüstrin), '4th October 1731.

'I regret much to have missed the pleasure of seeing your Excellency 'again before I left Berlin. I set off between seven and eight in the 'morning yesterday, and got to Cüstrin' (seventy miles or so) 'before 'seven at night. But the Prince had gone, that day, to the Bailliage 'of Himmelstädt' (up the Warta Country, eastward some five-and-thirty miles, much preparatory digging and stubbing there); and he 'slept at 'Massin' (circuitous road back), 'where he shot a few stags this morn-'ing. As I was told he might probably dine at Kammin' (still nearer Cüstrin, twelve miles from it; half that distance east of Zorndorf,—mark that, O reader*) 'with Madam Colonel Schöning, I drove thither. 'He had arrived there a moment before me.' And who is Madam Schöning, lady of Kammin here?—Patience, reader.

'I found him much grown; an air of health and gaiety about him. 'He caressed me greatly (me gracieusa fort); afterwards questioned me 'about my way of life in Vienna; and asked, if I had diverted myself 'well there? I told him what business had been the occasion of my 'journey, and that this rather than amusements had occupied me; for 'the rest, that there had been great affluence of company, and no lack 'of diversions. He spoke a long time to Madam de Wreech'—

'Wrochem' Schulenburg calls her: young Wife of Lieutenant-General von Wreech, a Marlborough Campaigner, made a Knight of Malta the other day;[11]—his charming young Wife, and Daughter of Madam Colonel Schöning our hostess here; lives at Tamsel, in high style, in these parts: mark the young Lady well,—

'who did not appear indifferent to him.' No!—'and in fact she was 'in all her beauty; a complexion of lily and rose.'

Charming creature; concerning whom there are anecdotes still afloat, and at least verses of this Prince's writing; not too well seen by Wreech, lately made a Knight of Malta, who, though only turning forty, is perhaps twice her age. The beautifulest, cleverest,—fancy it; and whether the peaty Neumark produces nothing in the floral kind!

'We went to dinner; he asked me to sit beside him. The conversa-'tion fell, among other topics, on the Elector Palatine's Mistress,'—crotchety old gentleman, never out of quarrels, with Heidelberg Protestants, heirs of Jülich and Berg, and in general with an unreasonable world, whom we saw at Mannheim last year; has a Mistress,—'Elector 'Palatine's Mistress, called Taxis. Crown-Prince said: "I should like 'to know what that good old gentleman does with a Mistress?" I 'answered, that the fashion had come so much in vogue, Princes did 'not think they were Princes unless they had mistresses; and that I 'was amazed at the facility of women, how they could shut their eyes 'on the sad reverse of fortune nearly inevitable for them;—and instanced 'the example of Madam Grävenitz'—

* Map at p. 43.

[11] Militair-Lexikon, iv. 269.

'Grävenitz;' example lately fallen-out at Würtemberg, as we predicted. Prayers of the Country, "Deliver us from evil," are now answered there: Grävenitz quite over with it! Alas, yes; lately fallen from her high estate in Würtemberg, and become the topic of dinner-tables; seized by soldiers in the night-time; vain her high refusals, assurances of being too unwell to dress, "Shall go in your shift, then,"—is in prison, totally eclipsed.[12] Calming her fury, she will get out; and wearisomely wander about in fashionable capitals, toujours un lavement à ses trousses!—

'There were other subjects touched upon; and I always endeavoured 'to deduce something of moral instruction from them,' being a military gentleman of the old school.

'Among other things, he said, He liked the great world, and was 'charmed to observe the ridiculous weak side of some people. "That 'is excellent," said I, "if one profit by it oneself: but if it is only for 'amusement, such a motive is worth little; we should rather look out 'for our own ridiculous weak side." On rising, Hofmarschall Wolden 'said to me,' without much sincerity, '"You have done well to preach 'a little morality to him." The Prince went to a window, and beckoned 'me thither.

'"You have learned nothing of what is to become of me?" said 'he. I answered: "It is supposed your Royal Highness will return to 'Berlin, when the Marriage" (Wilhelmina's) "takes place; but as to 'what will come next, I have heard nothing. But as your Highness 'has friends, they will not fail to do their endeavour; and M. de Grum-'kow has told me he would try to persuade the King to give you a 'regiment, in order that your Highness might have something to do." 'It seemed as if that would give him pleasure. I then took the liberty 'of saying: "Monseigneur, the most, at present, depends on yourself." '—"How so?" asked he. I answered, "It is only by showing good 'conduct, and proofs of real wisdom and worth, that the King's entire 'favour can be gained. First of all, to fear God"'— — And, in fact, I launched now into a moral preachment, or discursive Dialogue, of great length; much needing to have the skirts of it tucked up, in a way of faithful abridgment, for behoof of poor English readers. As follows:

[12] Michaelis, iii. 440; Pöllnitz, i. 297.

'Schulenburg: If your Highness behave well, the King will accord 'what you want; but it is absolutely necessary to begin by that.—'Prince: I do nothing that can displease the King.—Schulenburg: It 'would be a little soon yet! But I speak of the future. Your High-'ness, the grand thing I recommend is to fear God! Everybody says, 'you have the sentiments of an honest man; excellent, that, for a be-'ginning; but without the fear of God, your Highness, the passions 'stifle the finest sentiments. Must lead a life clear of reproach; and 'more particularly on the chapter of women! Need not imagine you 'can do the least thing without the King's knowing it: if your High-'ness take the bad road, he will wish to correct it; the end will be, 'he will bring you back to live beside him; which will not be very 'agreeable.—Prince: Hmph, No!—Schulenburg: Of the ruin to health 'I do not speak; I—Prince: Pooh, one is young, one is not master 'of that;'—and, in fact, on this delicate chapter, which runs to some length, Prince answers as wildish young fellows will; quizzing my grave self, with glances even at his Majesty, on alleged old peccadilloes of ours. Which allegations or inferences I rebutted with emphasis. 'But, 'I confess, though I employed all my rhetoric, his mind did not seem 'to alter; and it will be a miracle if he change on this head.' Alas, General! Can't be helped, I fear!

'He said he was not afraid of anything so much as of living con-'stantly beside the King.—Schulenburg: Arm yourself with patience, 'Monseigneur, if that happen. God has given you sense enough; 'persevere to use it faithfully on all occasions, you will gain the good 'graces of the King.—Prince: Impossible; beyond my power, indeed, 'said he; and made a thousand objections.—Schulenburg: Your High-'ness is like one that will not learn a trade because you do not already 'know it. Begin; you will certainly never know it otherwise! Before 'rising in the morning, form a plan for your day,'—in fact, be moral, O be moral!

His Highness now got upon the marriages talked-of for him; an important point for the young man. He spoke, hopefully rather, of the marriage with the Princess of Mecklenburg,—Niece of the late Czar Peter the Great; Daughter of that unhappy Duke who is in quarrel with his Ritters, and a trouble to all his neighbours, and to us among the number. Readers recollect that young Lady's Serene Mother, and a meeting she once had with her Uncle Peter,—at Magdeburg, a dozen years ago, in a public drawingroom with alcove near;—anecdote not lightly to be printed in human types, nor repeated where not necessary. The Mother is now dead; Father still up to the eyes in puddle and trouble: but as for the young Lady herself, she is Niece to the now Czarina Anne; by law of primogeniture Heiress of all the Russias: something of a match truly!

'But there will be difficulties; your Highness to change your religion, for one thing?—Prince: Won't, by any means.—Schulenburg: And give-up the succession to Prussia?—Prince: A right fool if I did! —Schulenburg: Then this marriage comes to nothing.—Thereupon next he said, If the Kaiser is so strong for us, let him give me his second Daughter;' lucky Franz of Lorraine is to get the first.—'Schulenburg: Are you serious?—Prince: Why not? with a Duchy or two it would do very well.—Schulenburg: No Duchies possible under the Pragmatic Sanction, your Highness: besides, your change of religion? —Prince: Oh, as to that, never!—Then this marriage also comes to nothing. Of the English, and their Double-Marriage, and their Hotham brabble, he spoke lightly, as of an extinct matter,—in terms your Excellency will like.

'But, said I, since you speak so much of marriages, I suppose you wish to be married?—Prince: No; but if the King absolutely will have it, I will marry to obey him. After that, I will shove my wife into the corner (planterai là ma femme), and live after my own fancy. —Schulenburg: Horrible to think of! For, in the first place, your Highness, is it not written in the Law of God, Adulterers shall not inherit the Kingdom of Heaven?' And in the second place; and in the third and fourth place!—To all which he answered as wild young fellows do, especially if you force marriage on them. 'I can perceive, if he marries, it will only be to have more liberty than now. It is certain, if he had his elbows free, he would strike out (s'en donnerait à gauche). He said to me several times: "I am young; I want to profit by my youth."' A questionable young fellow, Herr General; especially if you force marriage on him.

'This conversation done,' continues the General, 'he set to talking with the Madam Wreech,' and her complexion of lily and rose; 'but he did not stay long; drove off about five' (dinner at the stroke of twelve in those countries), 'inviting me to see him again at Cüstrin, which I promised.'

And so the Prince is off in the Autumn sunset, driving down the peaty hollow of the Warta, through unpicturesque country, which produces Wreechs and incomparable flowers nevertheless. Yes; and if he look a six miles to the right, there is the smoke of the evening kettles from Zorndorf, rising into the sky; and across the River, a twenty miles to the left, is Kunersdorf: poor sleepy sandy hamlets; where nettles of the Devil are to be plucked one day!—

'The beautiful Wreech drove off to Tamsel,' her fine house: I to this wretched tavern; where, a couple of hours after that conversation, I began writing it all down, and have nothing else to do for the night. Your Excellency's most moral, stiffnecked, pipeclayed and extremely obedient, 'VON SCHULENBURG.'[13]

[13] Förster, iii. 65-72.

This young man may be orthodox on Predestination, and outwardly growing all that a Papa could wish; but here are strange heterodoxies, here is plenty of mutinous capricious fire in the interior of him, Herr General! In fact, a young man unfortunately situated; already become solitary in Creation; has not, except himself, a friend in the world available just now. Tempestuous Papa storms one way, tempestuous Mamma Nature another; and between the outside and the inside there are inconsistencies enough.

Concerning the fair Wreech of Tamsel, with her complexion of lily and rose, there ensued by and by much whispering, and rumouring underbreath; which has survived in the apocryphal Anecdote-Books, not in too distinct a form. Here, from first hand, are three words, which we may take to be the essence of the whole. Grumkow reporting, in a sordid, occasionally smutty, spy manner, to his Seckendorf, from Berlin, eight or ten months hence, has this casual expression: 'He' (King Friedrich Wilhelm) 'told me in confidence that Wreech, the 'Colonel's Wife, is —— to P. R. (Prince-Royal); and that 'Wreech vowed he would not own it for his. And his Ma-'jesty in secret is rather pleased,' adds the smutty spy.[14] Elsewhere I have read that the poor object, which actually came as anticipated (male or female, I forget), did not live long;—nor had Friedrich, by any opportunity, another child in this world. Domestic Tamsel had to allay itself as it best could; and the fair Wreech became much a stranger to Friedrich,—surprisingly so to Friedrich the King, as perhaps we may see.——

Predestination, Gnadenwahl, Herr General: what is orthodoxy on Predestination, with these accompaniments![15] We go now to the Second Letter and the Third,—from Landsberg about a fortnight later:

No. 2. To his Excellency (shovelful of titles) von Grumkow, in Berlin.

'Landsberg, 19th October 1731.

'The day before yesterday' (that is, Wednesday 17th October) 'I 'received an Order, To have only fifty Horse at that post, and'—Order [14] Grumkow to Seckendorf, Berlin, 20th August 1732 (Förster, iii. 112).

[15] For Wreech see Benekendorf, v. 94; for Schulenburg, ib. 26;—and Militair-Lexikon, iii. 432, 433, and iv. 268, 269. Vacant on the gossiping points; cautiously official, both these.

which shows us that there has fallen out some recruiting squabble on the Polish Frontier hereabouts; that the Polack gentlemen have seized certain Corporals of ours, but are about restoring them; Order and affair which we shall omit. 'Corporals will be got back: but as these 'Polack gentlemen will see, by the course taken, that we have no great 'stomach for biting, I fancy they will grow more insolent; then, 'ware 'who tries to recruit there for the future!

'On the same day I was apprised, from Cüstrin, That the Prince-'Royal had resolved on an excursion to Carzig, and thence to the Bail-'liage of Himmelstädt' (digging and stubbing now on foot at Himmelstädt too), 'which is but a couple of miles[16] from this; that there 'would be a little hunt between the two Bailliages; and that if I chose 'to come, I might, and the Prince would dine with me.'—Which I did; and so, here again, Thursday 18th October 1731, in those remote Warta-Oder Countries, is a glimpse of his Royal Highness at first hand. Schulenburg continues; not even taking a new paragraph, which indeed he never does:

'They had shut-up a couple of Spiesser (young roes), and some 'stags, in the old wreck of a Saugarten' (Boar-park, between Carzig and Himmelstädt; fast ruinirten Saugarten, he calls it, daintily throwing-in a touch of German here): 'the Prince shot one or two of them, 'and his companions the like; but it does not seem as if this amuse-'ment were much to his taste. He went on to Himmelstädt; and at 'noon he arrived here,' in my poor Domicile at Landsberg.

'At one o'clock we went to table, and sat till four. He spoke only 'of very indifferent things; except saying to me: "Do you know, the 'King has promised 400,000 crowns (60,000*l.*) towards disengaging 'those Bailliages of the Margraf of Baireuth's,"'—old Margraf, Bailliages pawned to raise ready cash; readers remember what interminable Law-pleading there was, till Friedrich Wilhelm put it into a liquid state, "Pay me back the moneys, then!"[17]—'"400,000 thalers to the 'old Margraf, in case his Prince (Wilhelmina's now Bridegroom) have 'a son by my Sister." I answered, I had heard nothing of it.—"But," 'said he, "that is a great deal of money! And some hundred-thou-'sands more have gone the like road, to Anspach, who never will 'be able to repay. For all is much in disorder at Anspach. Give 'the Margraf his Heron-hunt (chasse au héron), he cares for nothing; 'and his people pluck him at no allowance." I said: That if these 'Princes would regulate their expenditure, they might, little by little, 'pay-off their debts; that I had been told at Vienna the Baireuth Bail-'liages were mortgaged on very low terms, those who now held them 'making eight or ten per-cent of their money;'—that the Margraf ought to make an effort; and so on. 'I saw very well that these Loans the 'King makes are not to his mind.

'Directly on rising from table, he went away; excusing himself to 'me, That he could not pass the night here; that the King would not [16] 'Demi-mille' German. [17] Suprà, vol. ii. pp. 228-9.

19th Oct. 1731.

'like his sleeping in the Town; besides that he had still several things 'to complete in a Report he was sending-off to his Majesty. He went to 'Massin, and slept there. For my own share, I did not press him to 'remain; what I did was rather in the way of form. There were with 'him President Münchow,' civil gentleman whom we know, 'an En-'gineer Captain Reger, and the three Gentlemen of his Court,' Wolden, Rohwedel, Natzmer who once twirled his finger in a certain mouth, the insipid fellow.

'He is no great eater; but I observed he likes the small dishes '(petits plats) and the high tastes: he does not care nor fish; though I 'had very fine trouts, he never touched them. He does not take brown 'soup (soup au bouillon). It did not seem to me he cared nor wine:

'he tastes at all the wines; but commonly stands by burgundy with 'water.

'I introduced to him all the Officers of my Regiment who are here; 'he received them in the style of a king' (en roi, plenty of quiet pride in him, Herr General). 'It is certain he feels what he is born to; and 'if ever he get to it, will stand on the top of it. As to me, I mean to 'keep myself retired; and shall see of him as little as I can. I per- 'ceive well he does not like advice,' especially when administered in the way of preachment, by stiff old military gentlemen of the all-wise stamp;—'and does not take pleasure except with people inferior to 'him in mind. His first aim is to find-out the ridiculous side of every 'one, and he loves to banter and quiz. It is a fault in a Prince: he 'ought to know people's faults, and not to make them known to any- 'body whatever,'—which, we perceive, is not quite the method with private gentlemen of the all-wise type!—

'I speak to your Excellency as a friend; and assure you he is a 'Prince who has talent, but who will be the slave of his passions (se 'fera dominer par ses passions,'—not a felicitous prophecy, Herr General); 'and will like nobody but such as encourage him therein. For 'me, I think all Princes are cast in the same mould; there is only a 'more and a less.

'At parting, he embraced me twice; and said, "I am sorry I can- 'not stay longer; but another time I will profit better." Wolden' (one of the Three) 'told me he could not describe how well-intentioned for 'your Excellency the Prince-Royal is' (cunning dog!), 'who says often 'to Wolden' (doubtless guessing it will be re-said), "If I cannot show 'him my gratitude, I will his posterity:" '—profoundly obliged to the Grumkow kindred first and last!—'I remain your Excellency's' most pipeclayed 'VON SCHULENBURG.'[18]

And so, after survey of the spademen at Carzig and Himmelstädt (where Colonel Wreech, by the way, is Amts-Hauptmann, Official Head-man), after shooting a Spiesser or two, and dining and talking in this sort, his Royal Highness goes to sleep at Massin; and ends one day of his then life. We proceed to Letter No. 3.

A day or two after No. 2, it would appear, his Majesty, who is commonly at Wusterhausen hunting in this season, has been rapidly out to Crossen, in these Landsberg regions (to south, within a day's drive of Landsberg), rapidly looking after something; Grumkow and another Official attending him:—other Official, 'Truchsess,' is Truchsess von Waldburg, a worthy soldier and gentleman of those parts, whom we shall again hear of. In No. 3 there is mention likewise of the 'Kurfürst of Köln,'—Elector of Cologne; languid lanky gentleman of Bavarian breed, whom we saw last year at Bonn, richest Pluralist of the Church; whom doubtless our poor readers have forgotten again. Mention of him; and also considerable sulky humour, of the Majesty's-Opposition kind, on Schulenburg's part; for which reason, and generally as a poor direct reflex of time and place,—reflex by ruffled bog-water, through sedges, and in twilight; dim but indubitable,—we give the Letter, though the Prince is little spoken of in it:

[18] Förster, iii. 71-73.

No. 3. To the Excellency Grumkow (as above), in Berlin.

'Landsberg, 22d October (Monday) 1731.

'Monsieur,—I trust your Excellency made your journey to Crossen 'with all the satisfaction imaginable. Had I been warned sooner, I 'would have come; not only to see the King, but for your Excellency's 'sake and Truchsess's: but I received your Excellency's Letter only 'yesterday morning; so I could not have arrived before yesternight, 'and that late; for it is fifty miles off, and one has to send relays before-'hand; there being no posthorses on that road.

'We are,—not to make comparisons,—like Harlequin! No sooner 'out of one scrape, than we get into another; and all for the sake of 'those Big Blockheads (l'amour de ces grands colosses). What the Kur-'fürst of Köln has done, in his character of Bishop of Osnabrück,'—a deed not known to this Editor, but clearly in the way of snubbing our recruiting system,—'is too droll: but if we avenge ourselves, there will 'be high play, and plenty of it, all round our borders! If such things 'would make any impression on the spirit of our Master: but they do 'not; they'—in short, this recruiting system is delirious, thinks the stiff Schulenburg; and scruples not to say so, though not in his place in Parliament, or even Tobacco-Parliament. For there is a Majesty's Opposition in all lands and times. 'We ruin the Country,' says the Honourable Member, 'sending annually millions of money out of it, 'for a set of vagabond fellows (gens à sac et à corde), who will never do 'us the least service. One sees clearly it is the hand of God,' darkening some people's understanding; 'otherwise it might be possible their 'eyes would open, one time or another!'—A stiff pipeclayed gentleman of great wisdom, with plenty of sulphur burning in the heart of him. The rest of his Letter is all in the Opposition strain (almost as if from his place in Parliament, only far briefer than is usual 'within these walls'); and winds-up with a glance at Victor Amadeus's strange feat, or rather at the Son's feat done upon Victor, over in Sardinia; preceded by this interjectionary sentence on a Prince nearer home:

'As to the Prince-Royal, depend on it he will do whatever is re'quired of him' (marry anybody you like &c.), 'if you give him more 'elbow-room, for that is whither he aims.—Not a bad stroke that, of 'the King of Sardinia'—Grand news of the day, at that time; now somewhat forgotten, and requiring a word from us:

Old King Victor Amadeus of Sardinia had solemnly abdicated in favour of his Son; went, for a twelvemonth or more, into private felicity with an elderly Lady-love whom he had long esteemed the first of women;—tired of such felicity, after a twelvemonth; demanded his crown back, and could not get it! Lady-love and he are taken prisoners; lodged in separate castles:[19] and the wrath of the proud old gentleman is Olympian in character,—split an oak table, smiting it while he spoke (say the cicerones);—and his silence, and the fiery daggers he looks, are still more emphatic. But the young fellow holds out; you cannot play handy-dandy with a King's crown, your Majesty! say his new Ministers. Is and will continue King. 'Not a bad stroke of him,' thinks Schulenburg,— —'especially if his Father meant to play him the same trick,' that is, clap him in prison. Not a bad stroke;—which perhaps there is another that could imitate, 'if his Papa gave him the opportunity! But this 'Papa will take good care; and the Queen will not forget the Sardin-'ian business, when he talks again of abdicating,' as he does when in ill-humour.—

'But now had not we better have been friends with England, should 'war rise upon that Sardinian business? General Schulenburg,'—the famed Venetian Fieldmarshal, bruiser of the Turks in Candia,[20] my honoured Uncle, who sometimes used to visit his Sister the Maypole, now Emerita, in London, and sip beer and take tobacco on an evening, with George I. of famous memory,—he also 'writes me this Victor-Amadeus news, from Paris;' so that it is certain; Ex-King locked in Rivoli near a fortnight ago: 'he, General Schulenburg, says farther, 'To judge by the outside, all appears very quiet; but many think, at 'the bottom of the bag it will not be the same.'—

'I am, with respect,' your Excellency's much in buckram,

'LE COMTE DE SCHOULENBOURG.'[21]

So far Lieutenant-General Schulenburg; whom we thank for these contemporary glimpses of a young man that has be-[19] 2d September 1730 abdicated, went to Chambéry; reclaims, is locked in Rivoli, 8th October 1731 (news of it just come to Schulenburg); dies there, 31st October 1732, his 67th year.

[20] Same who was beaten by Charles XII. before; a worthy soldier nevertheless, say the Authorities: Life of him by Varnhagen von Ense (Biographische Denkmale, Berlin, 1845).

[21] Förster, iii. 73-75.

Oct. 1731.

come historical, and of the scene he lived in. And with these three accidental utterances, as if they (which are alone left) had been the sum of all he said in the world, let the Lieutenant-General withdraw now into silence: he will turn up twice again, after half-a-score of years, once in a nobler than talking attitude, the close-harnessed, stalwart, slightly atrabiliar military gentleman of the old Prussian school.

These glimpses of the Crown-Prince, reflected on us in this manner, are not very luculent to the reader,—light being indifferent, and mirror none of the best:—but some features do gleam forth, good and not so good; which, with others coming, may gradually coalesce into something conceivable. A Prince clearly of much spirit, and not without petulance; abundant fire, much of it shining and burning irregularly at present; being sore held-down from without, and anomalously situated. Pride enough, thinks Schulenburg, capricious petulance enough,—likely to go into 'a reign of the passions,' if we live. As will be seen!—

Wilhelmina was betrothed in June last: Wilhelmina, a Bride these six months, continues to be much tormented by Mamma. But the Bridegroom, Prince of Baireuth, is gradually recommending himself to persons of judgment, to Wilhelmina among others. One day he narrowly missed an unheard-of accident: a foolish servant, at some boar-hunt, gave him a loaded piece on the half-cock; half-cock slipped in the handling; bullet grazed his Majesty's very temple, was felt twitching the hair there;—ye Heavens! Whereupon impertinent remarks from some of the Dessau people (allies of Schwedt and the Margravine in high colours); which were well answered by the Prince, and noiselessly but severely checked by a well-bred King.[22] King has given the Prince of Baireuth a regiment; and likes him tolerably, though the young man will not always drink as could be wished. Wedding, in spite of clouds from her Majesty, is coming steadily on.

His Majesty's Building Operations.

'This year,' says Fassmann, 'the building operations both in Berlin and Stettin,'—in Stettin where new fortifications are completed, in Berlin where gradually whole new quarters are getting built,—'were exceedingly pushed forward (äusserst poussirt).' Alas, yes; this too is a questionable memorable feature of his Majesty's reign. Late Majesty, old King Friedrich I., wishful, as others had been, for the growth of Berlin, laid-out a new Quarter, and called it Friedrichs Stadt; scraggy boggy ground, planned-out into streets, Friedrichs Strasse the chief street, with here and there a house standing lonesomely prophetic on it. But it is this present Majesty, Friedrich Wilhelm, that gets the plan executed, and the Friedrichs Strasse actually built, not always in a soft or spontaneous manner. Friedrich Wilhelm was the Ædile of his Country, as well as the Drill-sergeant; Berlin City did not rise of its own accord, or on the principle of leave-alone, any more than the Prussian Army itself. Wreck and rubbish Friedrich Wilhelm will not leave alone, in any kind; but is intent by all chances to sweep them from the face of the Earth, that something useful, seemly to the Royal mind, may stand there instead. Hence these building operations in the Friedrich Street and elsewhere, so 'exceedingly pushed forward.'

[22] Wilhelmina, i. 356.

The number of scraggy waste places he swept clear, first and last, and built tight human dwellings upon, is almost uncountable. A common gift from him (as from his Son after him) to a man in favour, was that of a new good House,—an excellent gift. Or if the man is himself able to build, Majesty will help him, incite him: "Timber enough is in the royal forests; stone, lime are in the royal quarries; scraggy waste is abundant: why should any man, of the least industry or private capital, live in a bad house?" By degrees, the pressure of his Majesty upon private men to build with encouragement became considerable, became excessive, irresistible; and was much complained of, in these years now come. Old Colonel Derschau is the King's Agent, at Berlin, in this matter; a hard stiff man; squeezes men, all manner of men with the least capital, till they build.

Nüssler, for example, whom we once saw at Hanover, managing a certain contested Heritage for Friedrich Wilhelm; adroit Nüssler, though he has yet got no fixed appointment, nor pay except by the job, is urged to build;—second year hence, 1733, occurs the case of Nüssler, and is copiously dwelt upon by Büsching his biographer: "Build yourself a house in the Friedrichs Strasse!" urges Derschau. "But I have no pay, no capital!" pleads Nüssler.—"Tush, your Father-in-law, abstruse Kanzler von Ludwig, in Halle University, monster of law-learning there, is not he a monster of hoarded moneys withal? He will lend you, for his own and his Daughter's sake.[23] Or shall his Majesty compel him?" urges Derschau. And slowly, continually turns the screw upon Nüssler, till he too raises for himself a firm good house in the Friedrichs Stadt,—Friedrichs Strasse, or Street, as they now call it, which the Tourist of these days knows. Substantial clear ashlar Street, miles or half-miles long; straight as a line:—Friedrich Wilhelm found it scrag and quagmire; and left it what the Tourist sees, by these hard methods. Thus Herr Privy-Councillor Klinggräf too, Nüssler's next neighbour: he did not want to build; far from it; but was obliged, on worse terms than Nüssler. You have such work, founding your house;—for the Nüssler-Klinggräf spot was a fish-pool, and 'carps were dug up' in founding;—such piles, bound platform of solid beams; '4,000 thalers gone before the first stone is laid:' and, in fact, the house must be built honestly, or it will be worse for the house and you. "Cost me 12,000 thalers (1,800*l.*) in all, and is worth perhaps 2,000!" sorrowfully ejaculates Nüssler, when the job is over. Still worse with Privy-Councillor Klinggräf: his house, the next to Nüssler's, is worth mere nothing to him when built; a soapboiler offers him 800 thalers (120*l.*) for it; and Nüssler, to avoid suffocation, purchases it himself of Klinggräf for that sum. Derschau, with his slow screw-machinery, is very formidable;—and Büsching knows it for a fact, 'that respectable Berlin persons 'used to run out of the way of Bürgermeister Koch and him, 'when either of them turned up on the streets!'

These things were heavy to bear. Truly, yes; where is the liberty of private capital or liberty of almost any kind, on those terms? Liberty to annihilate rubbish and chaos, under known conditions, you may have; but not the least liberty to keep them about you, though never so fond of doing it! What shall we say? Nüssler and the Soapboiler do both live in houses more human than they once had. Berlin itself, and some other things, did not spring from Free-trade. Berlin City would, to this day, have been a Place of Scrubs ('the Berlin,' a mere appellative noun to that effect), had Free-trade always been the rule there. I am sorry his Majesty transgresses the limits ;—and we, my friends, if we can make our Chaos into Cosmos by firing Parliamentary eloquence into it, and bombarding it with Blue-Books, we will much triumph over his Majesty, one day !—

[23] Büsching, Beyträge, i. 324.

Thus are the building operations exceedingly pushed forward, the Ear of Jenkins torn off, and Victor Amadeus locked in ward, while our Crown-Prince, in the eclipsed state, is inspected by a Sage in pipeclay, and Wilhelmina's wedding is coming on.

CHAPTER VI.

WILHELMINA'S WEDDING.

TUESDAY 20th November 1731, Wilhelmina's wedding-day arrived, after a brideship of eight months ; and that young Lady's troublesome romance, more happily than might have been expected, did at last wind itself up. Mamma's unreasonable humours continued, more or less ; but these also must now end. Old wooers and outlooks, 'the four or three crowned heads,'—they lie far over the horizon ; faded out of one's very thoughts, all these. Charles XII., Peter II. are dead ; Weissenfels is not, but might as well be. Prince Fred, not yet wedded elsewhere, is doing French madrigals in Leicester House ; tending towards the 'West Wickham' set of Politicians, the Pitt-Lyttelton set; stands ill with Father and Mother, and will not come to much. August the Dilapidated-Strong is deep in Polish troubles, in Anti-Kaiser politics, in drinking-bouts ;—his great-toe never mended, never will mend. Gone to the spectral state all these : here, blooming with life in its cheeks, is the one practical Fact, our good Hereditary Prince of Baireuth,—privately our fate all along ;—which we will welcome cheerfully ; and be thankful to Heaven that we have not died in getting it decided for us !—

Wedding was of great magnificence ; Berlin Palace and all things and creatures at their brightest : the Brunswick-Beverns here, and other high Guests ; no end of pompous ceremonials, solemnities and splendours,—the very train of one's gown was 'twelve yards long.' Eschewing all which, the reader shall commodiously conceive it all, by two samples we have picked out for him: one sample of a Person, high Guest present; one of an Apartment where the sublimities went on.

The Duchess Dowager of Sachsen-Meiningen, who has come to honour us on this occasion, a very large Lady, verging towards sixty; she is the person. A living elderly Daughter of the Great Elector himself; half-sister to the late King, half-aunt to Friedrich Wilhelm; widow now of her third husband: a singular phenomenon to look upon, for a moment, through Wilhelmina's satirical spectacles. One of her three husbands, 'Christian Ernst of Baireuth' (Margraf there, while the present Line was but expectant), had been a kind of Welsh-Uncle to the Prince now Bridegroom; so that she has a double right to be here. 'She had found the secret of totally ruining 'Baireuth,' says Wilhelmina; 'Baireuth, and Courland as well, 'where her first wedlock was;'—perhaps Meiningen was done to her hand? Here is the Portrait of 'my Grand-Aunt;' dashed-off in very high colours, not by a flattering pencil:

'It is said she was very fond of pleasing, in her youth; one saw as 'much still by her affected manners. She would have made an excel-'lent actress, to play fantastic parts of that kind. Her flaming red 'countenance, her shape, of such monstrous extent that she could hardly 'walk, gave her the air of a Female Bacchus. She took care to expose 'to view her'—a part of her person, large but no longer beautiful,—'and continually kept patting it with her hands, to attract attention thi-'ther. Though sixty gone,'—fifty-seven in point of fact,—'she was 'tricked-out like a girl; hair done in ribbon-locks (marronnés), all filled 'with gewgaws of rose-pink colour, which was the prevailing tint in her 'complexion, and so loaded with coloured jewels, you would have taken 'her for the rainbow.'[1]

This charming old Lady, daughter of the Grosse Kurfürst, and so very fat and rubicund, had a Son once: he too is mentionable in his way,—as a milestone (parish milestone) in the obscure Chronology of those parts. Her first Husband was the Duke of Courland; to him she brought an heir, who became Duke in his turn,—and was the final Duke, last of the 'Kettler' or native Line of Dukes there. The Kettlers had been Teutsch Ritters, Commandants in Courland; they picked-up that Country, for their own behoof, when the Ritterdom went down; and this was the last of them. He married Anne of

[1] Wilhelmina, i. 375.

Russia with the big cheek (Czar Peter's Niece, who is since become Czarina); and died shortly after, twenty years ago; with tears doubtless from the poor rosepink Mother, far away in Baireuth and childless otherwise; and also in a sense to the sorrow of Courland, which was hereby left vacant, a prey to enterprising neighbours. And on those terms it was that Saxon Moritz (our dissolute friend, who will be Maréchal de Saxe one day) made his clutch at Courland, backed by moneys of the French actress; rumour of which still floats vaguely about. Moritz might have succeeded, could he have done the first part of the feat, fallen in love with swoln-cheeked Anne, Dowager there; but he could not; could only pretend it: Courland therefore (now that the Swoln-cheek is become Czarina) falls to one Bieren, a born Courlander, who could.[2]—We hurry to the 'Grand Apartment' in Berlin Schloss, and glance rapidly, with Wilhelmina (in an abridged form), how magnificent it is:

Royal Apartment, third floor of the Palace at Berlin, one must say, few things equal it in the world. 'From the Outer Saloon or Ante-'chamber, called Salle des Suisses' (where the halberdier and valet people wait) 'you pass through six grand rooms, into a saloon magnificently 'decorated: thence through two rooms more, and so into what they 'call the Picture-Gallery, a room ninety feet long. All this is in a line.' Grand all this; but still only common in comparison. From the Picture-Gallery you turn (to right or left is not said, nor does it matter) into a suite of Fourteen great rooms, each more splendid than the other: lustre from the ceiling of the first room, for example, is of solid silver; weighs, in pounds avoirdupois I know not what, but in silver coin '10,000 crowns:' ceilings painted as by Correggio; 'wall-mirrors be-'tween each pair of windows are twelve feet high, and their piers (tru-'meaux) are of massive silver; in front of each mirror, table can be laid 'for twelve;' twelve Serenities may dine there, flanked by their mirror, enjoying the Correggiosities above, and the practical sublimities all round. 'And this is but the first of the Fourteen;' and you go on increasing in superbness, till, for example, in the last, or superlative Saloon, you find 'a lustre weighing 50,000 crowns; the globe of it big enough 'to hold a child of eight years; and the branches (guéridons) of it,' I forget how many feet or fathoms in extent: silver to the heart. Nay the music-balcony is of silver; wearied fiddler lays his elbow on balustrades of that precious metal. Seldom if ever was seen the like. In this superlative Saloon the Nuptial Benediction was given.[3]

[2] Last Kettler, Anne's Husband, died (leaving only an old Uncle, fallen into Papistry and other futility, who, till his death some twenty years after, had to reside abroad and be nominal merely), 1711; Moritz's attempt with Adrienne Lecouvreur's cash was, 1726; Anne became Sovereign of all the Russias (on her poor Cousin Peter II.'s death), 1730; Bieren (Biron as he tried to write himself, being of poor birth) did not get installed till 1737; and had, he and Courland both, several tumbles after that before getting to stable equilibrium.

Old King Friedrich, the expensive Herr, it was he that did the furnishing and Correggio-painting of these sublime rooms: but this of the masses of wrought silver, this was done by Friedrich Wilhelm,—incited thereto by what he saw at Dresden in August the Strong's Establishment; and reflecting, too, that silver is silver, whether you keep it in barrels in a coined form, or work it into chandeliers, mirror-frames and music-balconies. —These things we should not have mentioned, except to say that the massive silver did prove a hoard available, in after times, against a rainy day. Massive silver (well mixed with copper first) was all melted down, stamped into current coins, native and foreign, and sent wandering over the world, before a certain Prince got through his Seven-Years Wars and other pinches that are ahead!—

In fine, Wilhelmina's Wedding was magnificent; though one had rubs too; and Mamma was rather severe. 'Hair went 'all wrong, by dint of over-dressing; and hung on one's face 'like a boy's. Crown-royal they had put (as indeed was pro-'per) on one's head: hair was in twenty-four locks the size of 'your arm: such was the Queen's order. Gown was of cloth-'of-silver, trimmed with Spanish gold-lace (avec un point d'Es-'pagne d'or); train twelve yards long;—one was like to sink 'to the earth in such equipment.' Courage, my Princess!— In fact, the Wedding went beautifully off; with dances and sublimities, slow solemn Torch-dance to conclude with, in those unparalleled upper rooms; Grand-Aunt Meiningen and many other stars and rainbows witnessing; even the Margravine of Schwedt, in her high colours, was compelled to be there. Such variegated splendour, such a dancing of the Constellations; sublunary Berlin, and all the world, on tiptoe round it! Slow Torch-dance, winding it up, melted into the shades of midnight, for this time; and there was silence in Berlin.

But, on the following nights, there were Balls of a less solemn character; far pleasanter for dancing purposes. It is to these, to one of these, that we direct the attention of all readers. Friday 23d, there was again Ball and Royal Evening Party—'Grand Apartment' so-called. Immense Ball, 'seven hundred couples, all people of condition :' there were ' Four Quadrilles,' or dancing places in the big sea of quality-figures ; each at its due distance in the grand suite of rooms : Wilhelmina presides in Quadrille Number One; place assigned her was in the room called Picture-Gallery; Queen and all the Principalities were with Wilhelmina, she is to lead-off their quadrille, and take charge of it. Which she did, with her accustomed fire and elasticity;—and was circling there, on the light fantastic toe, time six in the evening, when Grumkow, whom she had been dunning for his bargain about Friedrich the day before, came up :

[3] Wilhelmina, i. 381; Nicolai, ii. 881.

' I liked dancing,' says she, 'and was taking advantage of my chances. ' Grumkow came up, and interrupted me in the middle of a minuet: ' "Eh, mon Dieu, Madame!" said Grumkow, "you seem to have got ' bit by the tarantula ! Don't you see those strangers who have just ' come in ?" I stopt short; and looking all round, I noticed at last a ' young man dressed in gray, whom I did not know. "Go, then, em- ' brace the Prince-Royal ; there he is before you !" said Grumkow. All ' the blood in my body went topsy-turvy for joy. "O Heaven, my ' Brother ?" cried I: "But I don't see him ; where is he ? In God's ' name, let me see him !" Grumkow led me to the young man in gray. ' Coming near, I recognised him, though with difficulty: he had grown ' amazingly stouter (prodigieusementengraissé), shortened about the neck; ' his face too had much changed, and was no longer so beautiful as it ' had been. I sprang upon him with open arms (sautai au cou); I was ' in such a state, I could speak nothing but broken exclamations: I ' wept, I laughed, like one gone delirious. In my life I have never felt ' so lively a joy.

' The first sane step was to throw myself at the feet of the King: ' King said, "Are you content with me ? You see I have kept my ' word !" I took my Brother by the hand ; and entreated the King to ' restore him his friendship. This scene was so touching, it drew tears ' from the eyes of everybody. I then approached the Queen. She was ' obliged to embrace me, the King being close opposite ; but I remarked ' that her joy was only affected.'—Why then, O Princess ? Guess, if you can, the female humours of her Majesty!—

' I turned to my Brother again ; I gave him a thousand caresses, ' and said the tenderest things to him: to all which he remained cold ' as ice, and answered only in monosyllables. I presented the Prince ' (my Husband); to whom he did not say one word. I was astonished ' at this fashion of procedure ! But I laid the blame of it on the King, ' who was observing us, and who I judged might be intimidating my ' Brother. But even his countenance surprised me: he wore a proud ' air, and seemed to look down on everybody.'

A much-changed Crown-Prince. What can be the meaning of it ?

24th Nov. 1731.

Neither King nor he appeared at supper: they were supping elsewhere, with a select circle; and the whisper ran among us, His Majesty was treating him with great friendliness. At which the Queen, contrary to hope, could not conceal her secret pique. 'In fact,' says Wilhelmina, again too hard on Mamma, 'she did not love her children except as 'they served her ambitious views.' The fact that it was I, and not she, who had achieved the Prince's deliverance, was painful to her Majesty: alas, yes, in some degree!

'Ball having recommenced, Grumkow whispered to me, "That the 'King was pleased with my frank kind ways to my Brother; and not 'pleased with my Brother's cold way of returning it: Does he simulate, 'and mean still to deceive me? Or is that all the thanks he has for 'Wilhelmina? thinks his Majesty. Go on with your sincerity, Madam; 'and for God's sake admonish the Crown-Prince to avoid finessing!" 'Crown-Prince, when I did, in some interval of the dance, report this 'of Grumkow, and say, Why so changed and cold, then, Brother of my 'heart? answered, That he was still the same; and that he had his 'reasons for what he did.' Wilhelmina continues; and cannot understand her Crown-Prince at all:

'Next morning, by the King's order, he paid me a visit. The 'Prince,' my Husband, 'was polite enough to withdraw, and left me 'and Sonsfeld alone with him. He gave me a recital of his misfor-'tunes; I communicated mine to him,'—and how I had at last bargained to get him free again by my compliance. 'He appeared much 'discountenanced at this last part of my narrative. He returned thanks 'for the obligations I had laid on him,—with some caressings, which 'evidently did not proceed from the heart. To break this conversa-'tion, he started some indifferent topic; and, under pretence of seeing 'my Apartment, moved into the next room, where the Prince my Hus-'band was. Him he ran over with his eyes from head to foot, for some 'time; then, after some constrained civilities to him, went his way.' What to make of all this? 'Madam Sonsfeld shrugged her shoulders;' no end of Madam Sonsfeld's astonishment at such a Crown-Prince.

Alas, yes, poor Wilhelmina; a Crown-Prince got into terrible cognisance of facts since we last met him! Perhaps already sees, not only what a Height of place is cut-out for him in this world, but also in a dim way what a solitude of soul, if he will maintain his height? Top of the frozen Schreckhorn;—have you well considered such a position! And even the way thither is dangerous, is terrible in this case. Be not too hard upon your Crown-Prince. For it is certain he loves you to the last!

Captain Dickens, who alone of all the Excellencies was not at the Wedding,—and never had believed it would be a wedding, but only a rumour to bring England round,—duly chronicles this happy reappearance of the Prince-Royal: 'about 'six, yesterday evening, as the company was dancing,—to 'the great joy and surprise of the whole Court;'—and adds: 'This morning the Prince came to the public Parade; where 'crowds of people of all ranks flocked to see his Royal High-'ness, and gave the most open demonstrations of pleasure.'[4]

Wilhelmina, these noisy tumults, not all of them delightful, once done, gets out of the perplexed hurlyburly, home towards still Baireuth, shortly after Newyear.[5] 'Berlin was be-'come as odious to me as it had once been dear. I flattered 'myself that, renouncing grandeurs, I might lead a soft and 'tranquil life in my new Home, and begin a happier year than 'the one that had just ended.' Mamma was still perverse; but on the edge of departure Wilhelmina contrived to get a word of her Father, and privately open her heart to him. Poor Father, after all that has come and gone:

'My discourse produced its effect; he melted into tears, could not 'answer me for sobs; he explained his thoughts by his embracings of 'me. Making an effort, at length, he said: "I am in despair that I 'did not know thee. They had told me such horrible tales, I hated 'thee as much as I now love thee. If I had addressed myself direct to 'thee, I should have escaped much trouble, and thou too. But they 'hindered me from speaking; said thou wert ill-natured as the Devil, 'and wouldst drive me to extremities I wanted to avoid. Thy Mother, 'by her intriguings, is in part the cause of the misfortunes of the family; 'I have been deceived and duped on every side. But my hands are 'tied; and though my heart is torn in pieces, I must leave these ini-'quities unpunished!"'—The Queen's intentions were always good, urged Wilhelmina. "Let us not enter into that detail," answered he: "what is past is past; I will try to forget it;" and assured Wilhelmina that she was the dearest to him of the family, and that he would do great things for her still,—only part of which came to effect in the sequel. "I am too sad of heart to take leave of you," concluded he: "embrace your Husband on my part; I am so overcome that I must "not see him."[6] And so they rolled away.

Crown-Prince was back to Cüstrin again, many weeks before. Back to Cüstrin; but under totally changed omens: his history, after that first emergence in Wilhelmina's dance, '23d November about six P.M.,' and appearance at Parade on the morrow (Saturday morning), had been as follows. Monday

[4] Despatch, 24th Nov. 1731. [5] 11th Jan. 1732 (Wilhelmina, ii. 2).
[6] Wilhelmina, ii. 4; who dates 11th January 1732.

29th Feb. 1732.

November 26th, there was again grand Ball, and the Prince there, not in gray this time. Next day, the Old Dessauer and all the higher Officers in Berlin petitioned, "Let us have him in the Army again, your Majesty!" Majesty consented: and so, Friday 30th, there was grand dinner at Seckendorf's, Crown-Prince there, in soldier's uniform again; a completely pardoned youth. His uniform is of the Goltz Regiment, Infantry: Goltz Regiment, which lies at Ruppin,—at and about, in that moory Country to the Northeast, some thirty or forty miles from Berlin;—whither his destination now is.

Crown-Prince had to resume his Kammer work at Cüstrin, and see the Buildings at Carzig, for a three months longer, till some arrangements in the Regiment Goltz were perfected, and finishing improvements given to it. But 'on the last day of February' (29th, 1732 being leap-year), his Royal Highness's Commission to be Colonel Commandant of said Regiment is made out; and he proceeds, in discharge of the same, to Ruppin, where his men lie. And so puts-off the pike-gray coat, and puts-on the military blue one,[7]—never to quit it again, as turned out.

Ruppin is a little Town, in that northwest Fehrbellin region: Regiment Goltz had lain in detached quarters hitherto; but is now to lie at Ruppin, the first Battalion of it there, and the rest within reach. Here, in Ruppin itself, or ultimately at Reinsberg in the neighbourhood, was Friedrich's abode, for the next eight years. Habitual residence: with transient excursions, chiefly to Berlin in Carnival time, or on other great occasions, and always strictly on leave; his employment being that of Colonel of Foot, a thing requiring continual vigilance and industry in that Country. Least of all to be neglected, in any point, by one in his circumstances. He did his military duties to a perfection satisfactory even to Papa; and achieved on his own score many other duties and improvements, for which Papa had less value. These eight years, it is always understood, were among the most important of his life to him.

[7] Preuss, i. 69.

BOOK IX.

LAST STAGE OF FRIEDRICH'S APPRENTICESHIP: LIFE IN RUPPIN.

1732–1736.

CHAPTER I.

PRINCESS ELIZABETH CHRISTINA OF BRUNSWICK-BEVERN.

WE described the Crown-Prince as intent to comply, especially in all visible external particulars, with Papa's will and pleasure;—to distinguish himself by real excellence in Commandantship of the Regiment Goltz, first of all. But before ever getting into that, there has another point risen, on which obedience, equally essential, may be still more difficult.

Ever since the grand Catastrophe went off without taking Friedrich's head along with it, and there began to be hopes of a pacific settlement, question has been, Whom shall the Crown-Prince marry? And the debates about it in the Royal breast and in Tobacco-Parliament, and rumours about it in the world at large, have been manifold and continual. In the Schulenburg Letters we saw the Crown-Prince himself much interested, and eagerly inquisitive on that head. As was natural: but it is not in the Crown-Prince's mind, it is in the Tobacco-Parliament, and the Royal breast as influenced there, that the thing must be decided. Who in the world will it be, then?

Crown-Prince himself hears now of this party, now of that. England is quite over, and the Princess Amelia sunk below the horizon. Friedrich himself appears a little piqued that Hotham carried his nose so high; that the English would not, in those life-and-death circumstances, abate the least from their 'Both marriages or none,'—thinks they should have saved Wilhelmina, and taken his word of honour for the rest. England is now out of his head ;—all romance is too sorrowfully swept out : and instead of the 'sacred air-cities of hope' in this high section of his history, the young man is looking into the 'mean clay hamlets of reality,' with an eye well recognising them for real. With an eye and heart already tempered to the due hardness for them. Not a fortunate result, though it was an inevitable one. We saw him flirting with the beautiful wedded Wreech ; talking to Lieutenant-General Schulenburg about marriage, in a way which shook the pipeclay of that virtuous man. He knows he would not get his choice, if he had one ; strives not to care. Nor does he, in fact, much care ; the romance being all out of it. He looks mainly to outward advantages ; to personal appearance, temper, good manners ; to 'religious principle,' sometimes rather in the reverse way (fearing an overplus rather) ;—but always to likelihood of moneys by the match, as a very direct item. Ready command of money, he feels, will be extremely desirable in a Wife ; desirable and almost indispensable, in present straitened circumstances. These are the notions of this ill-situated Cœlebs.

The parties proposed first and last, and rumoured of in Newspapers and the idle brains of men, have been very many, —no limit to their numbers ; it may be anybody : an intending purchaser, though but possessed of sixpence, is in a sense proprietor of the whole Fair ! Through Schulenburg we heard his own account of them, last Autumn ;—but the far noblest of the lot was hardly glanced at, or not at all, on that occasion. The Kaiser's eldest Daughter, sole heiress of Austria and these vast Pragmatic-Sanction operations ; Archduchess Maria Theresa herself,—it is affirmed to have been Prince Eugene's often-expressed wish, That the Crown-Prince of Prussia should wed the future Empress.[1] Which would indeed have saved immense confusions to mankind ! Nay she alone of Princesses, beautiful, magnanimous, brave, was the mate for such a Prince,—had the Good Fairies been consulted, which seldom happens :—and Romance itself might have become Reality in that case : with high results to the very soul of this young Prince ! Wishes are free : and wise Eugene will have been heard, perhaps often, to express this wish ; but that must have been all. Alas, the preliminaries, political, especially religious, are at once indispensable and impossible: we have to dismiss that day-dream. A Papal-Protestant Controversy still exists among mankind; and this is one penalty they pay for not having settled it sooner. The Imperial Court cannot afford its Archduchess on the terms possible in that quarter.

[1] Hormayr, Allgemeine Geschichte der neuesten Zeit (Wien, 1817), i. 13 ; cited in Preuss, i. 71.

What the Imperial Court can do is, to recommend a Niece of theirs, insignificant young Princess, Elizabeth Christina of Brunswick-Bevern, who is Niece to the Empress; and may be made useful in this way, to herself and us, think the Imperial Majesties;—will be a new tie upon the Prussians and the Pragmatic Sanction, and keep the Alliance still surer for our Archduchess in times coming, think their Majesties. She, it is insinuated by Seckendorf in Tobacco-Parliament; ought not she, Daughter of your Majesty's esteemed friend,—modest-minded, innocent young Princess, with a Brother already betrothed in your Majesty's House,—to be the Lady? It is probable she will.

Did we inform the reader once about Kaiser Karl's young marriage adventures; and may we, to remind him, mention them a second time? How Imperial Majesty, some five-and-twenty years ago, then only King of Spain, asked Princess Caroline of Anspach, who was very poor, and an orphan in the world. Who at once refused, declining to think of changing her religion on such a score;—and now governs England, telegraphing with Walpole, as Queen there instead. How Karl, now Imperial Majesty, then King of Spain, next applied to Brunswick-Wolfenbüttel; and met with a much better reception there. Applied to old Anton Ulrich, reigning Duke, who writes big Novels, and does other foolish goodnatured things;—who persuaded his Granddaughter that a change to Catholicism was nothing in such a case, that he himself should not care in the least to change. How the Granddaughter changed accordingly, went to Barcelona, and was wedded;—and had to dun old Grandpapa, "Why don't you change, then?" Who did change thereupon; thinking to himself, "Plague on it, I must, then!" the foolish old Herr. He is dead; and his Novels, in six volumes quarto, are all dead: and the Granddaughter is Kaiserinn, on those terms, a serene monotonous well-ravoured Lady, diligent in her Catholic exercises; of whom I never heard any evil, good rather, in her eminent serene position. Pity perhaps that she had recommended her Niece for this young Prussian gentleman; whom it by no means did 'attach to the Family' so very careful about him at Vienna! But if there lay a sin, and a punishment following on it, here or elsewhere, in her Imperial position, surely it is to be charged on foolish old Anton Ulrich; not on her, poor Lady, who had never coveted such height, nor durst for her soul take the leap thitherward, till the serene old literary gentleman showed her how easy it was.

Well, old Anton Ulrich is long since dead,[2] and his religious accounts are all settled beyond cavil; and only the sad duty devolves on me of explaining a little what and who his rather insipid offspring are, so far as related to readers of this History. Anton Ulrich left two sons; the elder of whom was Duke, and the younger had an Apanage, Blankenburg by name. Only this younger had children,—serene Kaiserinn that now is, one of them. The elder died childless,[3] precisely a few months before the times we are now got to; reigning Duke of Brunswick-Wolfenbüttel,[4] all but certain Apanages, and does not concern us farther. To that supreme dignity the younger has now come, and his Apanage of Blankenburg and children with him;—so that there is now only one outstanding Apanage (Bevern, not known to us yet); which also will perhaps get reunited, if we cared for it. Ludwig Rudolf is the name of this new sovereign Duke of Brunswick-Wolfenbüttel, or Duke in chief; age now sixty; has a shining, bustling, somewhat irregular Duchess, says Wilhelmina; and a nose—or rather almost no nose, for sad reasons![5] Other qualities or accidents I know not of him,—except that he is Father of the Vienna Kaiserinn; Grandfather of the Princess whom Seckendorf suggests for our Friedrich of Prussia.

In Ludwig Rudolf's insipid offspring our readers are unexpectedly somewhat interested; let readers patiently attend, therefore. He had three Daughters, never any son. Two of his Daughters, eldest and youngest, are alive still; the middle

[2] 1714, age 70. Hübner, t. 190.
[3] 1731, Michaelis, i. 132.
[4] 'Welf-booths' (Hutted Camp of the Welfs), according to Etymology. 'Brunswick,' again, is Braun's-Wick; 'Braun' (Brown) being an old militant Welf in those parts, who built some lodge for himself, as a convenience there,—Year 880, say the uncertain old Books. Hübner, t. 149; Michaelis &c.
[5] Wilhelmina, ii. 121.

one had a sad fate long ago. She married, in 1711, Alexius the Czarowitz of Peter the Great: foolish Czarowitz, miserable and making others miserable, broke her heart by ill conduct, ill usage, in four years; so that she died; leaving him only a poor small Peter II., who is now dead too, and that matter ended all but the memory of it. Some accounts bear, that she did not die; that she only pretended it, and ran and left her intolerable Czarowitz. That she wedded, at Paris, in deep obscurity, an Officer just setting-out for Louisiana; lived many years there as a thrifty soldier's wife; returned to Paris with her Officer reduced to half-pay; and told him,—or told some select Official person after him, under sevenfold oath, being then a widow and necessitous,—her sublime secret. Sublime secret, which came thus to be known to a supremely select circle at Paris; and was published in Books, where one still reads it. No vestige of truth in it,—except that perhaps a necessitous soldier's widow at Paris, considering of ways and means, found that she had some trace of likeness to the Pictures of this Princess, and had heard her tragic story.

Ludwig Rudolf's second Daughter is dead long years ago; nor has this fable as yet risen from her dust. Of Ludwig Rudolf's other two Daughters, we have said that one, the eldest, was the Kaiserinn; Empress Elizabeth Christina, age now precisely forty; with two beautiful Daughters, sublime Maria Theresa the elder of them, and no son that would live. Which last little circumstance has caused the Pragmatic Sanction, and tormented universal Nature for so many years back! Ludwig Rudolf has a youngest Daughter, also married, and a Mother in Germany,—to this day conspicuously so;—of whom next, or rather of her Husband and Family-circle, we must say a word.

Her Husband is no other than the esteemed Friend of Friedrich Wilhelm; Duke of Brunswick-Bevern, by title; who, as a junior branch, lives on the Apanage of Bevern, as his Father did; but is sure now to inherit the sovereignty and be Duke of Brunswick-Wolfenbüttel at large, he or his Sons, were the present incumbent, Ludwig Rudolf, once out. Present incumbent, we have just intimated, is his Father-in-law; but it is not on that ground that he looks to inherit. He is Nephew of old Anton Ulrich, Son of a younger Brother (who was also 'Bevern' in Anton's time); and is the evident Heir-male; old

Anton being already fallen into the distaff, with nothing but three Granddaughters. Anton's heir will now be this Nephew: Nephew has wedded one of the Granddaughters, youngest of the Three, youngest Daughter of Ludwig Rudolf, Sovereign Duke that now is; which Lady, by the family she brought him, if no otherwise, is memorable or mentionable here, and may be called a Mother in Germany.[6]

Father Bevern her Husband, Ferdinand Albert the name of him, is now just fifty, only ten years younger than his serene Father-in-law Ludwig Rudolf:—whom, I may as well say here, he does at last succeed, three years hence (1735), and becomes Duke of Brunswick in General, according to hope; but only for a few months, having himself died that same year. Poor Duke; rather a good man, by all the accounts I could hear; though not of qualities that shone. He is at present 'Duke of Brunswick-Bevern,'—such his actual nomenclature in those ever-fluctuating Sibyl's-leaves of German History-Books, Wilhelmina's and the others;—expectant Duke of Brunswick in General; much a friend of Friedrich Wilhelm. A kind of Austrian soldier he was formerly, and will again be

[6] ANTON ULRICH (1633-1714), Duke in Chief; that is, Duke of Brunswick-Wolfenbüttel.

AUGUST WILHELM, elder Son and Heir (1662, 1714, 1731); had no Children.	LUDWIG RUDOLF, the younger Son (1671, 1731, 1735), apanaged in Blankenburg; Duke of Brunswick-Blankenburg; became Wolfenbüttel, 1731; died, 1st March 1735. No Son: so that now the Bevern succeeded. Three Daughters:	FERDINAND ALBERT (1636-1687), his younger Brother apanaged in Bevern; that is, Duke of Brunswick-Bevern.

Elizabeth Christina, the Kaiserinn (1691, 1708, 1750).	Charlotte Christina (1694, 1711, 1715), Alexius of Russia's; had a fabulous end.	Antoinette Amelia (1695, 1712, 1762); Bevern's Wife,—a "Mother in Germany."	FERDINAND ALBERT, eldest Son (an elder had perished, 1704, on the Schellenberg under Marlborough), followed in Bevern (1680, 1687-1704, 1735); Kaiser's soldier, Friedrich Wilhelm's friend; married his Cousin, Antoinette Amelia ("Mother in Germany," as we call her). Duke in Chief, 1st March 1735, on Ludwig Rudolf's decease; died himself, 3d September same year.

Born 1713, Karl the Heir (to marry our Friedrich's Sister).	1714, Anton Ulrich (Russia; tragedy of Czar Iwan).	1715, 8th November, Elizabeth Christina (Crown-Prince's).	1718, Ludwig Ernst (Holland, 1787).	1721, Ferdinand (Chatham's and England's) of the Seven-Years War.	1722, 1724, 1725, 1732, Four others; Boys the youngest Two, who were both killed in Friedrich's Wars.

for brief times; General-Feldmarschall so-styled; but is not notable in War, nor otherwise at all, except for the offspring he had by this serene Spouse of his. Insipid offspring, the impatient reader says; but permits me to enumerate one or two of them:

1°. Karl, eldest Son; who is sure to be Brunswick in General; who is betrothed to Princess Charlotte of Prussia,—'a satirical creature, she, fonder of my Prince than of him,' Wilhelmina thinks. The wedding nevertheless took effect. Brunswick in General duly fell in, first to the Father; then, in a few months more, to Karl with his Charlotte: and from them proceeded, in due time, another Karl, of whom we shall hear in this History;—and of whom all the world heard much in the French Revolution Wars; in 1792, and still more tragically afterwards. Shot, to death or worse, at the Battle of Jena, October 1806; 'battle lost before it was begun,'—such the strategic history they give of it. He peremptorily ordered the French Revolution to suppress itself; and that was the answer the French Revolution made him. From this Karl, what new Queens Caroline of England and portentous Dukes of Brunswick, sent upon their travels through the anarchic world, profitable only to Newspapers, we need not say!—

2°. Anton Ulrich; named after his august Great-Grandfather; does not write novels like him. At present a young gentleman of eighteen; goes into Russia before long, hoping to beget Czars; which issues dreadfully for himself and the potential Czars he begot. The reader has heard of a potential "Czar Iwan," violently done to death in his room, one dim moonlight night of 1764, in the Fortress of Schlüsselburg, middle of Lake Ladoga; misty moon looking down on the stone battlements, on the melancholy waters, and saying nothing.—But let us not anticipate.

3° Elizabeth Christina; to us more important than any of them. Namesake of the Kaiserinn, her august Aunt; age now seventeen; insipid fine-complexioned young lady, who is talked of for the Bride of our Crown-Prince. Of whom the reader will hear more. Crown-Prince fears she is 'too religious,'—and will have 'cagots' about her (solemn persons in black, highly unconscious how little wisdom they have), who may be troublesome.

4°. A merry young Boy, now ten, called Ferdinand; with whom England within the next thirty years will ring, for some time, loud enough: the great "Prince Ferdinand" himself,—under whom the Marquis of Granby and others became great; Chatham superintending it. This really was a respectable gentleman, and did considerable things, —a Trismegistus in comparison with the Duke of Cumberland whom he succeeded. A cheerful, singularly-polite, modest, well-conditioned man withal. To be slightly better known to us, if we live. He at present is a Boy of ten, chasing the thistle's beard.

5°. Three other sons, all soldiers, two of them younger than Ferdinand; whose names were in the gazettes down to a late period;—

Feb. 1732.

whom we shall ignore in this place. The last of them was marched out of Holland, where he had long been Commander-in-chief on rather Tory principles, in the troubles of 1787. Others of them we shall see storming forward on occasion, valiantly meeting death in the field of fight, all conspicuously brave of character; but this shall be enough of them at present.

It is of these that Ludwig Rudolf's youngest daughter, the serene Ferdinand Albert's wife, is Mother in Germany; highly conspicuous in their day. If the question is put, it must be owned they are all rather of the insipid type. Nothing but a kind of albuminous simplicity noticeable in them; no wit, originality, brightness in the way of uttered intellect. If it is asked, How came they to the least distinction in this world?—the answer is not immediately apparent. But indeed they are Welf of the Welfs, in this respect as in others. One asks, with increased wonder, noticing in the Welfs generally nothing but the same albuminous simplicity, and poverty rather than opulence of uttered intellect, or of qualities that shine, How the Welfs came to play such a part, for the last thousand years, and still to be at it, in conspicuous places?

Reader, I have observed that uttered intellect is not what permanently makes way, but *un*uttered. Wit, logical brilliancy, spiritual effulgency, true or false,—how precious to idle mankind, and to the Newspapers and History-Books, even when it is false: while, again, Nature and Practical Fact care next to nothing for it in comparison, even when it is true! Two silent qualities you will notice in these Welfs, modern and ancient; which Nature much values: First, consummate human Courage; a noble, perfect, and as it were unconscious superiority to fear. And then secondly, much weight of mind, a noble not too conscious Sense of what is Right and Not Right, I have found in some of them;—which means mostly weight, or good gravitation, good observance of the perpendicular; and is called justice, veracity, high-honour, and other such names. These are fine qualities indeed, especially with an 'albuminous simplicity' as vehicle to them. If the Welfs had not much articulate intellect, let us guess they made a good use, not a bad or indifferent, as is commoner, of what they had.

Who his Majesty's Choice is; and what the Crown-Prince thinks of it.

Princess Elizabeth Christina, the insipid Brunswick specimen, backed by Seckendorf and Vienna, proves on consideration the desirable to Friedrich Wilhelm in this matter. But his Son's notions, who as yet knows her only by rumour, do not go that way. Insipidity, triviality; the fear of 'cagotage' and frightful fellows in black supremely unconscious what blockheads they are, haunts him a good deal. And as for any money coming,—her sublime Aunt the Kaiserinn never had much ready-money; one's resources on that side are likely to be exiguous. He would prefer the Princess of Mecklenburg, Semi-Russian Catharine or Anna, of whom we have heard; would prefer the Princess of Eisenach (whose name he does not know rightly); thinks there are many Princesses preferable. Most of all he would prefer, what is well known of him in Tobacco-Parliament, but known to be impossible, this long while back, to go upon a round of travel,—as for instance the Prince of Lorraine is now doing,—and look about him a little.

These candid considerations the Crown-Prince earnestly suggests to Grumkow, and the secret committee of Tobacco-Parliament; earnestly again and again, in his Correspondence with that gentleman, which goes on very brisk at present. 'Much of it lost,' we hear;—but enough, and to spare, is saved! Not a beautiful correspondence: the tone of it shallow, hard of heart; tragically flippant, especially on the Crown-Prince's part; now and then even a touch of the hypocritical from him, slight touch and not with will: alas, what can the poor young man do? Grumkow,—whose ground, I think, is never quite so secure since that Nosti business,—professes ardent attachment to the real interests of the Prince; and does solidly advise him of what is feasible, what not, in headquarters: very exemplary 'attachment;' credible to what length, the Prince well enough knows. And so the Correspondence is unbeautiful; not very descriptive even,—for poor Friedrich is considerably under mask, while he writes to that address; and of Grumkow himself we want no more 'description;' and is, in fact, on its own score, an avoidable article rather then otherwise; though perhaps the reader, for a poor involved Crown-Prince's sake, will wish an exact Excerpt or two before we quite dismiss it.

Towards turning-off the Brunswick speculation, or turning-on the Mecklenburg or Eisenach or any other in its stead, the Correspondence naturally avails nothing. Seckendorf has his orders from Vienna: Grumkow has his pension, — his creambowl duly set,—for helping Seckendorf. Though angels pleaded, not in a tone of tragic flippancy, but with the voice of breaking hearts, it would be to no purpose. The Imperial Majesties have ordered, Marry him to Brunswick, 'bind him the better to our House in time coming;' nay the Royal mind at Potsdam gravitates, of itself, that way, after the first hint is given. The Imperial will has become the Paternal one; no answer but obedience. What Grumkow can do will be, if possible, to lead or drive the Crown-Prince into obeying smoothly, or without breaking of harness again. Which, accordingly, is pretty much the sum of his part in this unlovely Correspondence: the geeho-ing of an expert wagoner, who has got a fiery young Arab thoroughly tied into his dastard sandcart, and has to drive him by voice, or at most by slight crack of whip; and does it. Can we hope, a select specimen or two of these Documents, not on Grumkow's part, or for Grumkow's unlovely sake, may now be acceptable to the reader? A Letter or two picked from that large stock, in a legible state, will show us Father and Son, and how that tragic matter went on, better than description could.

Papa's Letters to the Crown-Prince during that final Cüstrin period, when Carzig and Himmelstädt were going on, and there was such progress in Economics, are all of hopeful ruggedly affectionate tenor; and there are a good few of them: style curiously rugged, intricate, headlong; and a strong substance of sense and worth tortuously visible everywhere. Letters so delightful to the poor retrieved Crown-Prince then and there; and which are still almost pleasant reading to third-parties, once you introduce grammar and spelling. This is one exact specimen; most important to the Prince and us. Suddenly, one night, by estafette, his Majesty, meaning nothing but kindness, and grateful to Seckendorf and Tobacco-Parliament for such an idea, proposes,—in these terms (merely reduced to English and the common spelling):

'To the Crown-Prince at Cüstrin (from Papa).

'Potsdam, 4th February 1732.

'My dear Son Fritz,—I am very glad you need no more physic. 'But you must have a care of yourself, some days yet, for the severe 'weather; which gives me and everybody colds; so pray be on your 'guard (nehmet Euch hübsch in Acht).

'You know, my dear Son, that when my children are obedient, I 'love them much: so, when you were at Berlin, I from my heart for- 'gave you everything; and from that Berlin time, since I saw you, have 'thought of nothing but of your well-being and how to establish you, '—not in the Army only, but also with a right Stepdaughter, and so 'see you married in my lifetime. You may be well persuaded I have 'had the Princesses of Germany taken survey of, so far as possible, and 'examined by trusty people, what their conduct is, their education and 'so on: and so a Princess has been found, the Eldest one of Bevern, who 'is well brought-up, modest and retiring, as women ought to be.

'You will without delay (cito) write me your mind on this. I have 'purchased the Von Katsch House; the Feldmarschall,' old Wartens- leben, poor Katte's grandfather, 'as Governor' of Berlin, 'will get that 'to live in: and his Government House[7] I will have made-new for you, 'and furnish it all; and give you enough to keep house yourself there; 'and will command you into the Army, April coming' (which is quite a subordinate story, your Majesty!).

'The Princess is not ugly, nor beautiful. You must mention it to 'no mortal;—write indeed to Mamma (der Mama) that I have written 'to you. And when you shall have a Son, I will let you go on your 'Travels,—wedding, however, cannot be before winter next. Mean- 'while I will try and contrive opportunity that you see one another, a 'few times, in all honour, yet so that you get acquainted with her. She 'is a god-fearing creature (gottesfürchtiges Mensch), which is all in all; 'will suit herself to you' (be comportable to you) 'as she does to the 'Parents-in-law.

'God give his blessing to it; and bless You and your Posterity, and 'keep Thee as a good Christian. And have God always before your 'eyes;—and don't believe that damnable Particular tenet' (Predestina- tion); 'and be obedient and faithful: so shall it, here in Time and 'there in Eternity, go well with thee;—and whoever wishes that from 'the heart, let him say Amen.

'Your true Father to the death,

'FRIEDRICH WILHELM.

[7] Fine enough old House, or Palace, built by the Great Elector; given by him to Graf Feldmarschall von Schomberg, the 'Duke Schomberg' who was killed in the Battle of the Boyne: 'same House, opposite the Arsenal, which belongs now (1855) 'to his Royal Highness Prince Friedrich Wilhelm of Prussia.' (Preuss, i. 73; and Œuvres de Frédéric, xxvi. 12 n.)

11th Feb. 1732.

'When the Duke of Lorraine comes, I will have thee come. I think 'thy Bride will be here then. Adieu; God be with you.'[8]

This important Missive reached Cüstrin, by estafette, that same midnight, 4th-5th February; when Wolden, 'Hofmarschall of the Prince's Court' (titular Goldstick there, but with abundance of real functions laid on him), had the honour to awaken the Crown-Prince into the joy of reading. Crown-Prince instantly dispatched, by another estafette, the requisite responses to Papa and Mamma,—of which Wolden does not know the contents at all, not he, the obsequious Goldstick;—but doubtless they mean "Yes," Crown-Prince appearing so overjoyed at this splendid evidence of Papa's love, as the Goldstick could perceive.[9]

What the Prince's actual amount of joy was, we shall learn better from the following three successive utterances of his, confidentially dispatched to Grumkow in the intermediate days, before Berlin or this 'Duke of Lorraine' (whom our readers and the Crown-Prince are to wait upon), with actual sight of Papa and the Intended, came in course. Grumkow's Letters to the Crown-Prince in this important interval are not extant, nor if they were could we stand them; from the Prince's Answers it will be sufficiently apparent what the tenor of them was. Utterance first is about a week after that of the estafette at midnight:

To General Feldmarschall von Grumkow, at Potsdam (from the Crown-Prince).

'Cüstrin, 11th February 1732.

'My dear General and Friend,—I was charmed to learn by your 'Letter that my affairs are on so good a footing' (Papa so well satisfied with my professions of obedience); 'and you may depend on it I am 'docile to follow your advice. I will lend myself to whatever is pos-'sible for me; and provided I can secure the King's favour by my 'obedience, I will do all that is within my power.

'Nevertheless, in making my bargain with the Duke of Bevern, 'manage that the Corpus delicti' (my Intended) 'be brought up under 'her Grandmother' (Duchess of Brunswick-Wolfenbüttel, Ludwig Rudolf's Spouse, an airy coquettish Lady,—let her be the tutoress and model of my Intended, O General). 'For I should prefer being made 'a'—what shall we say? by a light wife,—'or to serve under the 'haughty fontange[10] of my Spouse' (as Ludwig Rudolf does, by all accounts), 'than to have a blockhead who would drive me mad by her 'ineptitudes, and whom I should be ashamed to produce.

[8] Œuvres de Frédéric, xxvii. part 3d, p. 55.

[9] Wolden's Letter to Friedrich Wilhelm, '5th February 1732:' in Preuss, ii. part 2d (or Urkundenbuch), p. 206. Mamma's answer to the message brought her by this return estafette, a mere formal Very-well, written from the fingers outward, exists (Œuvres, xxvi. 65); the rest have happily vanished.

'I beg you labour at this affair. When one hates romance hero-'ines as heartily as I do, one dreads those "virtues" of the ferocious 'type' (les vertus farouches, so terribly aware that they are virtuous); 'and I had rather marry the greatest'—(unnameable)—'in Berlin, 'than a devotee with half-a-dozen ghastly hypocrites (cagots) at her 'beck. If it were still möglich' (possible, in German) 'to make her 'Calvinist' (Réformée; our Court-Creed, which might have an allaying tendency, and at least would make her go with the stream)? 'But I 'doubt that:—I will insist, however, that her Grandmother have the 'training of her. What you can do to help in this, my dear Friend, 'I am persuaded you will do.

'It afflicted me a little that the King still has doubts of me, while 'I am obeying in such a matter, diametrically opposite to my own 'ideas. In what way shall I offer stronger proofs? I may give my-'self to the Devil, it will be to no purpose; nothing but the old song 'over again, doubt on doubt.—Don't imagine I am going to disoblige 'the Duke, the Duchess or the Daughter, I beseech you! I know too 'well what is due to them, and too much respect their merits, not to 'observe the strictest rules of what is proper,—even if I hated their 'progeny and them like the pestilence.

'I hope to speak to you with open heart at Berlin.'——'You may 'think, too, how I shall be embarrassed, having to do the Amoroso 'perhaps without being it, and to take an appetite for mute ugliness, '—for I don't much trust Count Seckendorf's taste in this article,'—in spite of his testimonies in Tobacco-Parliament and elsewhere. 'Mon-'sieur! Once more, get this Princess to learn by heart the Ecole des 'Maris and the Ecole des Femmes; that will do her much more good 'than True Christianity by the late Mr. Arndt![11] If, besides, she 'would learn steadiness of humour (toujours danser sur un pied), learn 'music; and, nota bene, become rather too free than too virtuous,—ah 'then, my dear General, then I should feel some liking for her, and a 'Colin marrying a Phyllis, the couple would be in accordance: but if 'she is stupid, naturally I renounce the Devil and her.'——'It is said 'she has a Sister, who at least has common sense. Why take the 'eldest, if so? To the King it must be all one. There is also a 'Princess Christina Marie of Eisenach' (real name being Christina Wilhelmina, but no matter), 'who would be quite my fit, and whom I 'should like to try for. In fine, I mean to come soon into your Coun-'tries;[12] and perhaps will say like Cæsar, Veni, vidi, vici.' ✿ ✿

[10] Species of top-knot; so named from Fontange, an unfortunate-female of Louis Fourteenth's, who invented the ornament.

[11] Johann Arndt ('late' this long while back), Vom wahren Christenthum, Magdeburg, 1610.

[12] Did come, 26th February, as we shall see.

11th Feb. 1732.

Paragraph of tragic compliments to Grumkow we omit. Letter ends in this way:

'Your Baireuth News is very interesting; I hope, in September next' (time of a grand problem coming there for Wilhelmina), 'my 'Sister will recover her first health. If I go travelling, I hope to have 'the consolation of seeing her for a fortnight or three weeks; I love 'her more than my life; and for all my obediences to the King, surely 'I shall deserve that recompense. The diversions for the Duke of 'Lorraine are very well schemed; but'—but what mortal can now care about them? Close, and seal.[13]

As to this Duke of Lorraine just coming, he is Franz Stephan, a pleasant young man of twenty-five, son of that excellent Duke Leopold Joseph, whom young Lyttelton of Hagley was so taken with, while touring in those parts in the Congress-of-Soissons time. Excellent Duke Leopold Joseph is since dead; and this Franz has succeeded to him,—what succession there was; for Lorraine as a Dukedom has its neck under the foot of France this great while, and is evidently not long for this world. Old Fleury, men say, has his eye upon it. And in fact it was, as we shall see, eaten-up by Fleury within four-years time; and this Franz proved the last of all the Dukes there. Let readers notice him: a man of high destiny otherwise, of whom we are to hear much. For ten years past he has lived about Vienna, being a born Cousin of that House (Grandmother was Kaiser Leopold's own Sister); and it is understood, nay it is privately settled he is to marry the transcendent Archduchess, peerless Maria Theresa herself; and is to reap, he, the whole harvest of that Pragmatic Sanction sown with such travail of the Universe at large. May be King of the Romans (which means successor to the Kaisership) any day; and actual Kaiser one day.

We may as well say here, he did at length achieve these dignities, though not quite in the time or on the terms proposed. King of the Romans old Kaiser Karl never could quite resolve to make him,—having always hopes of male progeny yet; which never came. For his peerless Bride he waited six years still (owing to accidents), 'attachment mutual all the while;' did then wed, 1738, and was the happiest of men and expectant Kaisers:—but found, at length, the Pragmatic Sanction to have been a strange sowing of dragon'steeth, and the first harvest reapable from it a world of armed men!—For the present he is on a grand Tour, for instruction and other objects; has been in England last; and is now getting homewards again, to Vienna, across Germany; conciliating the Courts as he goes. A pacific friendly eupeptic young man; Crown-Prince Friedrich, they say, took much to him in Berlin; did not quite swear eternal friendship; but kept-up some correspondence for a while, and 'once sends him a present of salmon.'—But to proceed with the utterances to Grumkow.

[13] Förster, iii. 160-162; Œuvres de Frédéric, xvi. 37-39.

Utterance second is probably of prior date; but introducible here, being an accidental Fragment, with the date lost:

To the Feldmarschall von Grumkow (from the Crown-Prince; exact date lost).

'* * As to what you tell me of the Princess of Mecklenburg,' for whom they want a Brandenburg Prince,—'could not I marry her? Let 'her come into this Country, and think no more of Russia: she would 'have a dowry of two or three millions of roubles,—only fancy how I 'could live with that! I think that project might succeed. The Prin-'cess is Lutheran; perhaps she objects to go into the Greek Church? '——I find none of these advantages in this Princess of Bevern; who, 'as many people, even of the Duke's Court, say, is not at all beautiful, 'speaks almost nothing, and is given to pouting (faisant la fâchée). 'The good Kaiserinn has so little herself, that the sums she could 'afford her Niece would be very moderate.'[14]

'Given to pouting,' too! No, certainly; your Insipidity of Brunswick, without prospects of ready-money; dangerous for cagotage; 'not a word to say for herself in company, and given to pouting:' I do not reckon her the eligible article!—

Seckendorf, Schulenburg, Grumkow and all hands are busy in this matter: geeho-ing the Crown-Prince towards the mark set before him. With or without explosion, arrive there he must; other goal for him is none!—In the mean while, it appears, illustrious Franz of Lorraine, coming on, amid the proper demonstrations, through Magdeburg and the Prussian Towns, has caught some slight illness and been obliged to pause; so that Berlin cannot have the happiness of seeing him quite so soon as it expected. The high guests invited to meet Duke

[14] Fragment given in Seckendorfs Leben, iii. 249 n.

19th Feb. 1732.

Franz, especially the high Brunswicks, are already there. High Brunswicks, Bevern with Duchess, and still more important, with Son and with Daughter :—insipid Corpus delicti herself has appeared on the scene ; and Grumkow, we find, has been writing some description of her to the Crown-Prince. Description of an unfavourable nature ; below the truth, not above it, to avert disappointment, nay to create some gleam of inverse joy, when the actual meeting occurs. That is his art in driving the fiery little Arab ignominiously yoked to him ; and it is clear he has overdone it, for once. This is Friedrich's third utterance to him ; much the most emphatic there is :

To the General Feldmarschall von Grumkow.

'Cüstrin, 19th Feb. 1732.

'Judge, my dear General, if I can have been much charmed with 'the description you give of the abominable object of my desires! For 'the love of God, disabuse the King in regard to her' (show him that she is a fool, then); 'and let him remember well that fools commonly 'are the most obstinate of creatures.

'Some months ago he wrote a Letter to Wolden,' the obsequious Goldstick, 'of his giving me the choice of several Princesses: I hope 'he will not give himself the lie in that. I refer you entirely to the 'Letter, which Schulenburg will have delivered,'—little Schulenburg called here, in passing your way; all hands busy. 'For there is no hope 'of wealth, no reasoning, nor chance of fortune that could change my 'sentiment as expressed there' (namely, that I will not have her, whatever become of me); 'and miserable for miserable, it is all one! Let 'the King but think that it is not for himself that he is marrying me, 'but for *my*self; nay he too will have a thousand chagrins, to see two 'persons hating one another, and the miserablest marriage in the world; '—to hear their mutual complaints, which will be to him so many re-'proaches for having fashioned the instrument of our yoke. As a good 'Christian, let him consider, If it is well done to wish to force people; 'to cause divorces, and to be the occasion of all the sins that an ill-'assorted marriage leads us to commit! I am determined to front every-'thing in the world sooner: and since things are so, you may in some 'good way apprise the Duke' of Bevern 'that, happen what may, I 'never will have her.

'I have been unfortunate (malheureux) all my life; and I think it 'is my destiny to continue so. One must be patient, and take the time 'as it comes. Perhaps a sudden tract of good fortune, on the back of 'all the chagrins I have made profession of ever since I entered this 'world, would have made me too proud. In a word, happen what will, 'I have nothing to reproach myself with. I have suffered sufficiently 'for an exaggerated crime' (that of "attempting to desert;"—Heavens!) —'and I will not engage myself to extend my miseries (chagrins) into 'future times. I have still resources:—a pistol-shot can deliver me 'from my sorrows and my life: and I think a merciful God would not 'damn me for that; but, taking pity on me, would, in exchange for a 'life of wretchedness, grant me salvation. This is whitherward despair 'can lead a young person, whose blood is not so quiescent as if he were 'seventy. I have a feeling of myself, Monsieur; and perceive that, when 'one hates the methods of force as much as I, our boiling blood will 'carry us always towards extremities.

* * 'If there are honest people in the world, they must think 'how to save me from one of the most perilous passages I have ever 'been in. I waste myself in gloomy ideas; I fear I shall not be able 'to hide my grief, on coming to Berlin. This is the sad state I am 'in;—but it will never make me change from being,'—surely to an excessive degree, the illustrious Grumkow's most &c. &c.

'FRIDERIC.'

'I have received a Letter from the King; all agog (bien coiffé) about 'the Princess. I think I may still finish the week here.[15] When his 'first fire of approbation is spent, you might, praising her all the while, 'lead him to notice her faults. Mon Dieu, has he not already seen 'what an ill-assorted marriage comes to,—my Sister of Anspach and 'her Husband, who hate one another like the fire! He has a thousand 'vexations from it every day. * * And what aim has the King? If it 'is to assure himself of me, that is not the way. Madam of Eisenach 'might do it; but a fool not (point une bête);—on the contrary, it is 'morally impossible to love the cause of our misery. The King is reasonable; and I am persuaded he will understand this himself.'[16]

Very passionate pleading; but it might as well address itself to the east-winds. Have east-winds a heart, that they should feel pity? Jarni-bleu, Herr Feldzeugmeister,—only take care he don't overset things again!

Grumkow, in these same hours, is writing a Letter to the Prince, which we still have,[17] How charmed his Majesty is at such obedience; 'shed tears of joy,' writes Grumkow, 'and said it was the happiest day of his life.' Judge Grumkow's feelings soon after, on this furious recalcitration breaking out! Grumkow's Answer, which also we still have,[18] is truculence itself in a polite form:—horrorstruck as a Christian at the suicide notion, at the—in fact at the whole matter; and begs, as a humble individual, not wishful of violent death and destruc-

[15] 26th, did arrive in Berlin: Preuss (in Œuvres, xxvii. part 3d, p. 58 n.).
[16] Œuvres de Frédéric, xvi. 41, 42.
[17] Ib. xvi. 43. [18] Ib. pp. 44-46.

26th Feb. 1732.

tion upon self and family, to wash his poor hands of it altogether. Dangerous for the like of him; 'interfering between Royal Father and Royal Son of such opposite humours, would break the neck of any man,' thinks Grumkow; and sums-up with this pithy reminiscence: 'I remember always what the 'King said to me at Wusterhausen, when your Royal High-'ness lay prisoner in the Castle of Cüstrin, and I wished to 'take your part: "Nein, Grumkow, denket an diese Stelle, Gott 'gebe dass ich nicht wahr rede, aber mein Sohn stirbt nicht eines 'natürlichen Todes; und Gott gebe dass er nicht unter Henkers 'Hände komme. No, Grumkow, think of what I now tell you: 'God grant it do not come true,—but my Son won't die a 'natural death; God grant he do not come into the Hang-'man's hands yet!" I shuddered at these words, and the King 'repeated them twice to me: that is true, or may I never see 'God's face, or have part in the merits of our Lord.'—The Crown-Prince's 'pleadings' may fitly terminate here.

Duke of Lorraine arrives in Potsdam and in Berlin.

Saturday 23d February 1732, his Serene Highness of Lorraine did at length come to hand. Arrived in Potsdam that day; where the two Majesties, with the Serene Beverns, with the Prince Alexander of Würtemberg, and the other high guests, had been some time in expectation. Suitable persons invited for the occasion: Bevern, a titular Austrian Feldmarschall; Prince Alexander of Würtemberg, an actual one (poor old Eberhard Ludwig's Cousin, and likely to be Heir there soon); high quasi-Austrian Serenities;—not to mention Schulenburg and others officially related to Austria, or acquainted with it. Nothing could be more distinguished than the welcome of Duke Franz; and the things he saw and did, during his three-weeks visit, are wonderful to Fassmann and the extinct Gazetteers. Saw the Potsdam Giants do their 'exercitia,' transcendent in perfection; had a boar-hunt; 'did divine-service in the Potsdam Catholic Church;'—went by himself to Spandau, on the Tuesday (26th), where all the guns broke forth, and dinner was ready: King, Queen and Party having made-off for Berlin, in the interim, to be ready for his advent there 'in the evening about five.' Majesties wait at Berlin, with their Party,—among whom, say the old Newspapers, 'is his Royal Highness the Crown-Prince :' Crown-Prince just come in from Cüstrin; just blessed with the first sight of his Charmer, whom he finds perceptibly less detestable than he expected.

Serene Highness of Lorraine arrived punctually at five, with outburst of all the artilleries and hospitalities; balls, soirees, exercitia of the Kleist Regiment, of the Gens-d'Armes; dinners with Grumkow, dinners with Seckendorf, evening party with the Margravine Philip (Margravine in high colours);—one scenic miracle succeeding another, for above a fortnight to come.

The very first spectacle his Highness saw, a private one, and of no intense interest to him, we shall mention here for our own behoof. 'An hour after his arrival the Duke was car-'ried away to his Excellency Herr Creutz the Finance-Minis-'ter's; to attend a wedding there, along with his Majesty. 'Wedding of Excellency Creutz's only daughter to the Herr 'Hofjägermeister von Hacke.'—Hofjägermeister (Master of the Hunt), and more specifically Captain Hacke, of the Potsdam Guard or Giant regiment, much and deservedly a favourite with his Majesty. Majesty has known, a long while, the merits military and other of this Hacke; a valiant expert exact man, of good stature, good service among the Giants and otherwise, though not himself gigantic; age now turned of thirty;—and unluckily little but his pay to depend on. Majesty, by way of increment to Hacke, small increment on the pecuniary side, has lately made him 'Master of the Hunt;' will, before long, make him Adjutant-General, and his right-hand man in Army matters, were he only rich;—has, in the mean while, made this excellent match for him; which supplies that defect. Majesty was the making of Creutz himself; who is grown very rich, and has but one Daughter: "Let Hacke have her!" his Majesty advised;—and snatches-off the Duke of Lorraine to see it done.[19]

Did the reader ever hear of Finance-Minister Creutz, once a poor Regiment's Auditor, when his Majesty, as yet Crown-Prince, found talent in him? Can readers fish-up from their memory, twenty years back, anything of a terrific Spectre walking in the Berlin Palace, for certain nights, during that 'Stralsund Expedition' or famed Swedish-War time, to the terror of mankind? Terrific Spectre, thought to be in Swedish pay,— properly a spy Scullion, in a small concern of Grumkow versus Creutz ?[20] This is the same Creutz; of whom we have never spoken more, nor shall again, now that his rich Daughter is well married to Hacke, a favourite of his Majesty's and ours. It was the Duke's first sight in Berlin; February 26th; prologue to the flood of scenic wonders there.

[19] Fassmann, p. 430

But perhaps the wonderfulest thing, had he quite understood it, was that of the 10th March, which he was invited to. Last obligation laid upon the Crown-Prince, 'to bind him to the House of Austria,' that evening. Of which take this account, external and internal, from authentic Documents in our hand.

Betrothal of the Crown-Prince to the Brunswick Charmer, Niece of Imperial Majesty, Monday Evening, 10th March 1732.

Document first is of an internal nature, from the Prince's own hand, written to his Sister four days before:

'To the Princess Wilhelmina at Baireuth.

'Berlin, 6th March 1732.

'My dearest Sister,—Next Monday comes my Betrothal, which will 'be done just as yours was. The Person in question is neither beau- 'tiful nor ugly, not wanting for sense, but very ill brought-up, timid, and 'totally behind in manners and social behaviour (manières du savoir- 'vivre): that is the candid portrait of this Princess. You may judge 'by that, dearest Sister, if I find her to my taste or not. The greatest 'merit she has is that she has procured me the liberty of writing to you; 'which is the one solacement I have in your absence.

'You never can believe, my adorable Sister, how concerned I am 'about your happiness; all my wishes centre there, and every moment 'of my life I form such wishes. You may see by this that I preserve 'still that sincere friendship which has united our hearts from our ten- 'derest years:—recognise at least, my dear Sister, that you did me a 'sensible wrong when you suspected me of fickleness towards you, and 'believed false reports of my listening to talebearers; me, who love 'only you, and whom neither absence nor lying rumours could change 'in respect of you. At least don't again believe such things on my 'score, and never mistrust me till you have had clear proof,—or till 'God has forsaken me, and I have lost my wits. And being persuaded 'that such miseries are not in store to overwhelm me, I here repeat 'how much I love you, and with what respect and sincere veneration, [20] Antea, vol. i. pp. 312-314; Wilhelmina.

'—I am and shall be till death, my dearest Sister,—Your most humble
'and faithful Brother and Valet, FRIDERICH.'[21]

That was on the Thursday; Betrothal is on the Monday following. Document second is from poor old Fassmann, and quite of external nature; which we much abridge:

'Monday evening, all creatures are in gala, and the Royal Apart'ments upstairs are brilliantly alight; Duke of Lorraine with the other 'high strangers are requested to take their place up there, and wait for 'a short while. Prussian Majesty, Queen and Crown-Prince with him, 'proceeds then, in a solemn official manner, to the Durchlaucht of 'Bevern's Apartment, in a lower floor of the Palace; where the Bevern 'Party, Duke, Duchess, Son and intended Charmer are. Prussian Ma'jesty asks the Durchlaucht and Spouse, "Whether the Marriage, some 'time treated of, between that their Princess here present, and this his 'Crown-Prince likewise here, is really a thing to their mind?" Serene 'Spouses answer, to the effect, "Yea, surely, very much!" Upon 'which they all solemnly ascend to the Royal Apartments upstairs' (where we have seen Wilhelmina dancing before now), 'where Lorraine, 'Würtemberg and the other sublimities are in waiting. Lorraine and the 'sublimities form a semicircle; with the two Majesties, and pair of young 'creatures, in the centre. You young creatures, you are of one intention 'with your parents in this matter? Alas, there is no doubt of it. Pledge 'yourselves, then, by exchange of rings! said his Majesty with due busi'ness brevity. The rings are exchanged: Majesty embraces the two 'young creatures with great tenderness;' as do Queen and Serenities; and then all the world takes to embracing and congratulating; and so the Betrothal is a finished thing. Bassoons and violins, striking up, whirl it off in universal dancing,—in 'supper of above Two hundred and sixty persons,' princely or otherwise sublime in rank, 'with spouses and noble ladies there' in the due proportion.[22]

Here is fraction of another Note from the Crown-Prince to his Sister at Baireuth, a fortnight after that event:

Berlin, 24th March 1732 (To Princess Wilhelmina).—* * 'God
'be praised that you are better, dearest Sister! For nobody can love 'you more tenderly than I do.—As to the Princess of Bevern' (my Betrothed), 'the Queen' (Mamma, whom you have been consulting on these etiquettes) 'bids me answer, That you need not style her "Highness," 'and that you may write to her quite as to an indifferent Princess. As to '"kissing of the hands," I assure you I have not kissed them, nor will 'kiss them; they are not pretty enough to tempt one that way. God
'long preserve you in perfect health! And you, preserve for me always
'the honour of your good graces; and believe, my charming Sister,

[21] Œuvres de Frédéric, xxvii. part 1st, p. 5.
[22] Fassmann, pp. 432, 433.

24th March 1732.

'that never brother in the world loved with such tenderness a sister 'so charming as mine; in short, believe, dear Sister, that without 'compliments, and in literal truth, I am yours wholly (tout à vous): 'FRIDERICH.'[23]

This is the Betrothal of the Crown-Prince to an Insipidity of Brunswick. Insipidity's private feelings, perhaps of a languidly glad sort, are not known to us; Crown-Prince's we have in part seen. He has decided to accept his fate without a murmur farther. Against his poor Bride or her qualities not a word more. In the Schloss of Berlin, amid such tempests of female gossip (Mamma still secretly corresponding with England), he has to be very reserved, on this head especially. It is understood he did not, in his heart, nearly so much dislike the insipid Princess as he wished Papa to think he did.

Duke Franz of Lorraine went off above a week ago, on the Saturday following the Betrothal; an amiable serene young gentleman, well liked by the Crown-Prince and everybody. 'He avoided the Saxon Court, though passing near it,' on his way to old Kur-Mainz; 'which is a sign,' thinks Fassmann, 'that mutual matters are on a weak footing in that quarter;' —Pragmatic Sanction never accepted there, and plenty of intricacies existing. Crown-Prince Friedrich may now go to Ruppin and the Regiment Goltz; his business and destinies being now all reduced to a steady condition;—steady sky, rather leaden, instead of the tempestuous thunder-and-lightning weather which there heretofore was. Leaden sky, he, if left well to himself, will perhaps brighten a little. Study will be possible to him; improvement of his own faculties, at any rate. It is much his determination. Outwardly, besides drilling the Regiment Goltz, he will have a steady correspondence to keep up with his Brunswick Charmer;—let him see that he be not slack in that.

CHAPTER II.

SMALL INCIDENTS AT RUPPIN.

FRIEDRICH, after some farther pause in Berlin, till things were got ready for him, went to Ruppin. This is in the Spring of 1732;[1] and he continued to have his residence there till [23] Fassmann, xxvii. part 1st, p. 5.

[1] Still in Berlin, 6th March; dates from Nauen (in the Ruppin neighbourhood) for the first time, 25th April 1732, among his Letters yet extant: Preuss, Œuvres de Frédéric, xxvii. part 1st, p. 4; xvi. 49.

August 1736. Four important years of young life; of which we must endeavour to give, in some intelligible condition, what traces go hovering about in such records as there are.

Ruppin, where lies the main part of the Regiment Goltz, and where the Crown-Prince Colonel of it dwells, is a quiet dull little Town, in that northwestern region; inhabitants, grown at this day to be 10,000, are perhaps guessable then at 2,000. Regiment Goltz daily rolls its drums in Ruppin: Town otherwise lifeless enough, except on market-days: and the grandest event ever known in it, this removal of the Crown-Prince thither,—which is doubtless much a theme, and proud temporary miracle, to Ruppin at present. Of society there or in the neighbourhood, for such a resident, we hear nothing.

Quiet Ruppin stands in grassy flat country, much of which is natural moor, and less of it reclaimed at that time than now. The environs, except that they are a bit of the Earth, and have a bit of the sky over them, do not set up for loveliness. Natural woods abound in that region, also peatbogs not yet drained; and fishy lakes and meres, of a dark complexion: plenteous cattle there are, pigs among them;—thick-soled husbandmen inarticulately toiling and moiling. Some glass-furnaces, a royal establishment, are the only manufactures we hear of. Not a picturesque country; but a quiet and innocent, where work is cut out, and one hopes to be well left alone after doing it. This Crown-Prince has been in far less desirable localities.

He had a reasonable house, two houses made into one for him, in the place. He laid-out for himself a garden in the outskirts, with what they call a "temple" in it,—some more or less ornamental garden-house,—from which I have read of his 'letting-off rockets' in a summer twilight. Rockets to amuse a small dinner-party, I should guess,—dinner of Officers, such as he had weekly or twice a week. On stiller evenings we can fancy him there in solitude; reading meditative, or musically fluting;—looking out upon the silent death of Day: how the summer gloaming steals over the moorlands, and over all lands; shutting-up the toil of mortals; their very flocks and herds collapsing into silence, and the big Skies and endless Times overarching him and them. With thoughts perhaps sombre enough now and then, but profitable if he face them piously.

His Father's affection is returning; would so fain return if it durst. But the heart of Papa has been sadly torn-up: it is too good news to be quite believed, that he has a son grown wise, and doing son-like! Rumour also is very busy, rumour and the Tobacco-Parliament for or against; a little rumour is capable of stirring-up great storms in the suspicious paternal mind. All along during Friedrich's abode at Ruppin, this is a constantly recurring weather-symptom; very grievous now and then; not to be guarded against by any precaution;—though steady persistence in the proper precaution will abate it, and as good as remove it, in course of time. Already Friedrich Wilhelm begins to understand that "there is much in this Fritz,"—who knows how much, though of a different type from Papa's?—and that it will be better if he and Papa, so discrepant in type, and ticklishly related otherwise, live not too constantly together as heretofore. Which is emphatically the Crown-Prince's notion too.

I perceive he read a great deal at Ruppin: what Books I know not specially: but judge them to be of more serious solid quality than formerly; and that his reading is now generally a kind of studying as well. Not the express Sciences or Technologies; not these, in any sort,—except the military, and that an express exception. These he never cared for, or regarded as the noble knowledges for a king or man. History and Moral Speculation; what mankind have done and been in this world (so far as "History" will give one any glimpse of that), and what the wisest men, poetical or other, have thought about mankind and their world: this is what he evidently had the appetite for; appetite insatiable, which lasted with him to the very end of his days. Fontenelle, Rollin, Voltaire, all the then French lights, and gradually others that lay deeper in the firmament:—what suppers of the gods one may privately have at Ruppin, without expense of wine! Such an opportunity for reading he had never had before.

In his soldier business he is punctual, assiduous; having an interest to shine that way. And is, in fact, approvable as a practical officer and soldier, by the strictest judge then living. Reads on soldiering withal; studious to know the rationale of it, the ancient and modern methods of it, the essential from the unessential in it; to understand it thoroughly,—which he got to do. One already hears of conferences, correspondences, with the Old Dessauer on this head: 'Account of the Siege of Stralsund,' with plans, with didactic commentaries, drawn-up by that gunpowder Sage for behoof of the Crown-Prince, did actually exist, though I know not what has become of it. Now and afterwards this Crown-Prince must have been a great military reader. From Cæsar's Commentaries, and earlier, to the Chevalier Folard, and the Marquis Feuquière;[2] from Epaminondas at Leuctra to Charles XII. at Pultawa, all manner of Military Histories, we perceive, are at his finger-ends; and he has penetrated into the essential heart of each, and learnt what it had to teach him. Something of this, how much we know not, began at Ruppin; and it did not end again.

On the whole, Friedrich is prepared to distinguish himself henceforth by strictly conforming, in all outward particulars possible, to the paternal will, and becoming the most obedient of sons. Partly from policy and necessity, partly also from loyalty; for he loves his rugged Father, and begins to perceive that there is more sense in his peremptory notions than at first appeared. The young man is himself rather wild, as we have seen, with plenty of youthful petulance and longings after forbidden fruit. And then he lives in an element of gossip; his whole life enveloped in a vast Dionysius'-Ear, every word and action liable to be debated in Tobacco-Parliament. He is very scarce of money, too, Papa's allowance being extremely moderate, 'not above 6,000 thalers (900*l.*),' says Seckendorf once.[3] There will be contradictions enough to settle: caution, silence, every kind of prudence will be much recommendable.

In all outward particulars the Crown-Prince will conform; in the inward, he will exercise a judgment, and if he cannot conform, will at least be careful to hide. To do his Commandant duties at Ruppin, and avoid offences, is much his determination. We observe he takes great charge of his men's health; has the Regiment Goltz in a shiningly exact condition at the grand reviews;—is very industrious now and afterwards to get tall recruits, as a dainty to Papa. Knows that nothing in Nature is so sure of conciliating that strange old gentleman; corresponds, accordingly, in distant quarters; lays out, now and afterwards, sums far too heavy for his means upon tall recruits for Papa. But it is good to conciliate in that quarter, by every method, and at every expense;—Argus of Tobacco-Parliament still watching one there; and Rumour needing to be industriously dealt with, difficult to keep down.

[2] Mémoires sur la Guerre (specially on the Wars of Louis XIV., in which Feuquière had himself shone): a new Book at this time (Amsterdam, 1731; first complete edition is, Paris, 1770, 4 vols. 4to); at Ruppin, and afterwards, a chief favourite with Friedrich.

[3] Förster, iii. 114 (Seckendorf to Prince Eugene).

Such, so far as we can gather, is the general figure of Friedrich's life at Ruppin. Specific facts of it, anecdotes about it, are few in those dim Books; are uncertain as to truth, and without importance whether true or not. For all his gravity and Colonelship, it would appear the old spirit of frolic has not quitted him. Here are two small incidents, pointing that way; which stand on record; credible enough, though vague and without importance otherwise. Incident first is to the following feeble effect; indisputable though extremely unmomentous: Regiment Goltz, it appears, used to have gold trimmings; the Colonel Crown-Prince petitioned that they might be of silver, which he liked better. Papa answers, Yes. Regiment Goltz gets its new regimentals done in silver; the Colonel proposes they shall solemnly burn their old regimentals. And they do it, the Officers of them, sub dio, perhaps in the Prince's garden, stripping successively in the 'Temple' there, with such degree of genial humour, loud laughter, or at least boisterous mock-solemnity, as may be in them. This is a true incident of the Prince's history, though a small one.

Incident second is of slightly more significance; and intimates, not being quite alone in its kind, a questionable habit or method the Crown-Prince must have had of dealing with Clerical Persons hereabouts when they proved troublesome. Here are no fewer than three such Persons, or Parsons, of the Ruppin Country, who got mischief by him. How the first gave offence shall be seen, and how he was punished: offences of the second and the third we can only guess to have been perhaps pulpit-rebukes of said punishments: perhaps general preaching against military levities, want of piety, nay open sinfulness, in thoughtless young men with cockades. Whereby the thoughtless young men were again driven to think of nocturnal charivari? We will give the story in Dr. Büsching's own words, who looks before and after to great distances, in a way worth attending to. The Herr Doctor, an endless Collector and Compiler on all manner of subjects, is very authentic always, and does not want for natural sense: but he is also very crude,—and here and there not far from stupid, such his continual haste, and slobbery manner of working-up those Hundred and odd Volumes of his:[4]

'The sanguine-choleric temperament of Friedrich,' says this Doctor, 'drove him, in his youth, to sensual enjoyments and wild amuse-'ments of different kinds; in his middle age, to fiery enterprises; and 'in his old years to decisions and actions of a rigorous and vehement 'nature; yet so that the primary form of utterance, as seen in his 'youth, never altogether ceased with him. There are people still 'among us (1788) who have had, in their own experience, knowledge 'of his youthful pranks; and yet more are living, who know that he 'himself, at table, would gaily recount what merry strokes were done 'by him, or by his order, in those young years. To give an instance 'or two.

'While he was at Neu-Ruppin as Colonel of the Infantry Regiment 'there, the Chaplain of it sometimes waited upon him about the time 'of dinner,—having been used to dine occasionally with the former 'Colonel. The Crown-Prince, however, put him always off, did not 'ask him to dinner; spoke contemptuously of him in presence of the 'Officers. The Chaplain was so inconsiderate, he took to girding at the 'Crown-Prince in his Sermons. "Once on a time," preached he, one 'day, "there was Herod who had Herodias to dance before him; and 'he,—he gave her John the Baptist's head for her pains!"' This Herod, Büsching says, was understood to mean, and meant, the Crown-Prince; Herodias, the merry corps of Officers who made sport for him; John the Baptist's head was no other than the Chaplain not invited to dinner! 'To punish him for such a sally, the Crown-Prince with the young 'Officers of his Regiment went, one night, to the Chaplain's house,' somewhere hard by, with cow's-grass adjoining to it, as we see: and 'first, they knocked-in the windows of his sleeping-room upon him' (hinge-windows, glass not entirely broken, we may hope); 'next there 'were crackers' (Schwärmer, 'enthusiasts,' so to speak!) 'thrown-in 'upon him; and thereby the Chaplain, and his poor Wife,' more or less in an interesting condition, poor woman, 'were driven out into the 'court-yard, and at last into the dung-heap there;'—and so left, with their Head on a Charger to that terrible extent!

That is Büsching's version of the story; no doubt substantially correct; of which there are traces in other quarters,— for it went farther than Ruppin; and the Crown-Prince had like to have got into trouble from it. "Here is piety!" said Rumour, carrying it to Tobacco-Parliament. The Crown-Prince plaintively assures Grumkow that it was the Officers, and that they got punished for it. A likely story, the Prince's!

[4] See his Autobiography, which forms Beyträge, B. vi. (the biggest and last Volume).

'When King Friedrich, in his old days, recounted this after dinner, 'in his merry tone, he was well pleased that the guests, and even the 'pages and valets behind his back, laughed aloud at it.' Not a pious old King, Doctor, still less an orthodox one! The Doctor continues: 'In a like style, at Nauen, where part of his regiment lay, he had,— 'by means of Herr von der Gröben, his First-Lieutenant,' much a comrade of his, as we otherwise perceive,—'the Diaconus of Nauen 'and his Wife hunted out of bed, and thrown into terror of their lives, 'one night:'—offence of the Diaconus not specified. 'Nay he himself 'once pitched his goldheaded stick through Salpius the Church Inspec- 'tor's window,'—offence again not specified, or perhaps merely for a little artillery practice?—'and the throw was so dextrous that it merely 'made a round hole in the glass: stick was lying on the floor; and the 'Prince,' on some excuse or other, 'sent for it next morning.' 'Mar- 'graf Heinrich of Schwedt,' continues the Doctor, very trustworthy on points of fact, 'was a diligent helper in such operations. Kaiserling,' whom we shall hear of, 'First-Lieutenant von der Gröben,' these were prime hands; 'Lieutenant Buddenbrock' (old Feldmarschall's son) 'used, in his old days, when himself grown high in rank and dining 'with the King, to be appealed to as witness for the truth of these 'stories.'[5]

These are the two Incidents at Ruppin, in such light as they have. And these are all. Opulent History yields from a ton of broken nails these two brass farthings, and shuts her pocket on us again. A Crown-Prince given to frolic, among other things; though aware that gravity would beseem him better. Much gay bantering humour in him, cracklings, radiations,—which he is bound to keep well under cover, in present circumstances.

[5] Büsching, Beyträge zu der Lebensgeschichte denkwürdiger Personen, v. 19-21. Vol. v.,—wholly occupied with Friedrich II. King of Prussia (Halle, 1788),—is accessible in French and other languages; many details, and (as Büsching's wont is) few or none not authentic, are to be found in it; a very great secret spleen against Friedrich is also traceable,—for which the Doctor may have had his reasons, not obligatory upon readers of the Doctor. The truth is, Friedrich never took the least special notice of him: merely employed and promoted him, when expedient for both parties; and he really was a man of considerable worth, in an extremely crude form.

CHAPTER III.

THE SALZBURGERS.

FOR three years past there has been much rumour over Germany, of a strange affair going on in the remote Austrian quarter, down in Salzburg and its fabulous Tyrolese valleys. Salzburg, city and territory, has an Archbishop, not theoretically Austrian, but sovereign Prince so-styled; it is from him and his orthodoxies, and pranks with his sovereign crosier, that the noise originates. Strange rumour of a body of the population discovered to be Protestant among the remote Mountains, and getting miserably ill-used, by the Right Reverend Father in those parts. Which rumour, of a singular, romantic, religious interest for the general Protestant world, proves to be but too well founded. It has come forth in the form of practical complaint to the Corpus Evangelicorum at the Diet, without result from the Corpus; complaint to various persons;—in fine, to his Majesty Friedrich Wilhelm, with result.

With result at last; actual 'Emigration of the Salzburgers:' and Germany,—in these very days while the Crown-Prince is at Berlin betrothing himself, and Franz of Lorraine witnessing the exercitia and wonders there,—sees a singular phenomenon of a touching idyllic nature going on; and has not yet quite forgotten it in our days. Salzburg Emigration was all in motion, flowing steadily onwards, by various routes, towards Berlin, at the time the Betrothal took place; and seven weeks after that event, when the Crown-Prince had gone to Ruppin, and again could only hear of it, the first Instalment of Emigrants arrived bodily at the Gates of Berlin, '30th April, at four in the afternoon;' Majesty himself and all the world going out to witness it, with something of a poetic, almost of a psalmist feeling, as well as with a practical on the part of his Majesty. First Instalment this; copiously followed by others, all that year; and flowing on, in smaller rills and drippings, for several years more, till it got completed. A notable phenomenon, full of lively picturesque and other interest to Brandenburg and Germany;—which was not forgotten by the Crown-Prince in coming years, as we shall transiently find; nay which all Germany still remembers, and even occasionally sings. Of which this is in brief the history.

The Salzburg Country, northeastern slope of the Tyrol (Donau draining that side of it, Etsch or Adige the Italian side), is celebrated by the Tourist for its airy beauty, rocky mountains, smooth green valleys, and swift-rushing streams; perhaps some readers have wandered to Bad-Gastein, or Ischl, in these nomadic summers; have looked into Salzburg, Berchtesgaden, and the Bavarian-Austrian boundary-lands; seen the wooden-clock makings, salt-works, toy-manufactures, of those simple people in their slouch-hats; and can bear some testimony to the phenomena of Nature there. Salzburg is the Archbishop's City, metropolis of his bit of sovereignty that then was.[1] A romantic City, far off among its beautiful Mountains, shadowing itself in the Salza River, which rushes down into the Inn, into the Donau, now becoming great with the tribute of so many valleys. Salzburg we have not known hitherto except as the fabulous resting-place of Kaiser Barbarossa: but we are now slightly to see it in a practical light; and mark how the memory of Friedrich Wilhelm makes an incidental lodgment for itself there.

It is well known there was extensive Protestantism once in those countries. Prior to the Thirty-Years War, the fair chance was, Austria too would all become Protestant; an extensive minority among all ranks of men in Austria too, definable as the serious intelligence of mankind in those countries, having clearly adopted it, whom the others were sure to follow. In all ranks of men; only not in the highest rank, which was pleased rather to continue Official and Papal. Highest rank had its Thirty-Years War, 'its sleek Fathers Lämmerlein and Hyacinth 'in Jesuit serge, its terrible Fathers Wallenstein in chain-arm-'our;' and, by working late and early then and afterwards, did manage at length to trample-out Protestantism,—they know with what advantage by this time. Trample-out Protestantism; or drive it into remote nooks, where under sad conditions it might protract an unnoticed existence. In the Imperial Free-Towns, Ulm, Augsburg, and the like, Protestantism continued, and under hard conditions contrives to continue: but in the country parts, except in unnoticed nooks, it is extinct. Salzburg Country is one of those nooks ; an extensive Crypto-Protestantism lodging, under the simple slouch-hats, in the remote valleys there. Protestantism peaceably kept concealed, hurting nobody ; wholesomely forwarding the wooden-clock manufacture, and arable or grazier husbandries, of those poor people. More harmless sons of Adam, probably, did not breathe the vital air, than those dissentient Salzburgers ; generation after generation of them giving offence to no creature.

[1] Tolerable description of it in the Baron Riesbeck's Travels through Germany (London, 1787, Translation by Maty, 3 vols. 8vo), i. 124-222;—whose details otherwise, on this Emigration business, are of no authenticity or value. A kind of Play-actor and miscellaneous Newspaper-man in that time (not so opulent to his class as ours is); who takes the title of 'Baron' on this occasion of coming-out with a Book of Imaginary 'Travels.' Had personally lived, practising the miscellaneous arts, about Lintz and Salzburg,—and may be heard on the look of the Country, if on little else.

Successive Archbishops had known of this Crypto-Protestantism, and in remote periods had made occasional slight attempts upon it ; but none at all for a long time past. All attempts that way, as ineffectual for any purpose but stirring-up strife, had been discontinued for many generations ;[2] and the Crypto-Protestantism was again become a mythical romantic object, ignored by Official persons. However, in 1727, there came a new Archbishop, one "Firmian," Count Firmian by secular quality, of a strict lean character, zealous rather than wise ; who had brought his orthodoxies with him in a rigid and very lean form.

Right Reverend Firmian had not been long in Salzburg till he smelt-out the Crypto-Protestantism, and determined to haul it forth from the mythical condition into the practical ; and in fact, to see his law-beagles there worry it to death as they ought. Hence the rumours that had risen over Germany, in 1729 : Law-terriers penetrating into human cottages in those remote Salzburg valleys, smelling-out some German Bible or devout Book, making lists of Bible-reading cottagers ; haling them to the Right Reverend Father-in-God ; thence to prison, since they would not undertake to cease reading. With fine, with confiscation, tribulation : for the peaceable Salzburgers, respectful creatures, doffing their slouch-hats almost to mankind in general, were entirely obstinate in that matter of the Bible. "Cannot, your Reverence ; must not, dare not !" and went to prison or whithersoever rather ; a wide cry rising, Let us sell our possessions and leave Salzburg then, according to Treaty of Westphalia, Article so-and-so. "Treaty of Westphalia ? Leave Salzburg ?" shrieked the Right Reverend Father : "Are we getting into open mutiny, then ? Open extensive mutiny !" shrieked he. Borrowed a couple of Austrian regiments,—Kaiser and we always on the pleasantest terms;—and marched the most refractory of his Salzburgers over the frontiers (retaining their properties and families); whereupon noise rose louder and louder.

[2] Buchholz, i. 148-151

Refractory Salzburgers sent Deputies to the Diet; appealed, complained to the Corpus Evangelicorum, Treaty of Westphalia in hand,—without result. Corpus, having verified matters, complained to the Kaiser, to the Right Reverend Father. The Kaiser, intent on getting his Pragmatic Sanction through the Diet, and anxious to offend nobody at present, gave good words; but did nothing: the Right Reverend Father answered a Letter or two from the Corpus; then said at last, He wished to close the Correspondence, had the honour to be,—and answered no farther, when written to. Corpus was without result. So it lasted through 1730; rumour, which rose in 1729, waxing ever louder into practicable or impracticable shape, through that next year; tribulation increasing in Salzburg; and noise among mankind. In the end of 1730, the Salzburgers sent Two Deputies to Friedrich Wilhelm at Berlin; solid-hearted, thick-soled men, able to answer for themselves, and give real account of Salzburg and the phenomena: this brought matters into a practicable state.

"Are you actual Protestants, the Treaty of Westphalia applicable to you? Not mere fanatic mystics, as Right Reverend Firmian asserts; protectible by no Treaty?" That was Friedrich Wilhelm's first question; and he set his two chief Berlin Clergymen, learned Roloff one of them, a divine of much fame, to catechise the two Salzburg Deputies, and report upon the point. Their Report, dated Berlin, 30th November 1730, with specimens of the main questions, I have read;[3] and can fully certify, along with Roloff and friend, That here are orthodox Protestants, apparently of very pious peaceable nature, suffering hard wrong;—orthodox beyond doubt, and covered by the Treaty of Westphalia. Whereupon his Majesty dismisses them with assurance, "Return, and say there shall be help!" —and straightway lays hand on the business, strong swift steady hand as usual, with a view that way.

Salzburg being now a clear case, Friedrich Wilhelm writes to the Kaiser; to the King of England, King of Denmark;—orders preparations to be made in Preussen, vacant messuages to be surveyed, moneys to be laid up;—bids his man at the Regensburg Diet signify, That unless this thing is rectified, his Prussian Majesty will see himself necessitated to take effectual steps: 'reprisals' the first step, according to the old method of his Prussian Majesty. Rumour of the Salzburg Protestants rises higher and higher. Kaiser intent on conciliating every Corpus, Evangelical and other, for his Pragmatic Sanction's sake, admonishes Right Reverend Firmian; intimates at last to him, That he will actually have to let those poor people emigrate if they demand it; Treaty of Westphalia being express. In the end of 1731 it has come thus far.

[3] Fassmann, pp. 446-448.

"Emigrate, says your Imperial Majesty? Well, they shall emigrate," answers Firmian; "the sooner the better!" And straightway, in the dead of winter, marches, in convenient divisions, some Nine hundred of them over the frontiers: "Go about your business, then; emigrate—to the Old One, if you like!"—"And our properties, our goods and chattels?" ask they.—"Be thankful you have kept your skins. Emigrate, I say!" And the poor Nine hundred had to go out, in the rigour of winter, 'hoary old men among them, and women coming near their time;' and seek quarters in the wide world mostly unknown to them. Truly Firmian is an orthodox Herr; acquainted with the laws of fair usage and the time of day. The sleeping Barbarossa does not awaken upon him within the Hill here:—but in the Roncalic Fields, long ago, I should not have liked to stand in his shoes!

Friedrich Wilhelm, on this procedure at Salzburg, intimates to his Halberstadt and Minden Catholic gentlemen, That their Establishments must be locked up, and incomings suspended; that they can apply to the Right Reverend Firmian upon it;—and bids his man at Regensburg signify to the Diet that such is the course adopted here. Right Reverend Firmian has to hold his hand; finds both that there shall be Emigration, and that it must go forward on human terms, not inhuman; and that in fact the Treaty of Westphalia will have to guide it, not he henceforth. Those poor ousted Salzburgers cower into the Bavarian cities, till the weather mend, and his Prussian Majesty's arrangements be complete for their brethren and them.

His Prussian Majesty has been maturing his plans, all this while;—gathering moneys, getting lands ready. We saw him hanging Schlubhut in the autumn of 1731, who had peculated from said moneys; and surveying Preussen, under storms of thunder and rain on one occasion. Preussen is to be the place for these people; Tilsit and Memel region, same where the big Fight of Tannenberg and ruin of the Teutsch Ritters took place: in that fine fertile Country there are homes got ready for this Emigration out of Salzburg.

Long ago, at the beginning of this History, did not the reader hear of a pestilence in Prussian Lithuania? Pestilence in old King Friedrich's time; for which the then Crown-Prince, now Majesty Friedrich Wilhelm, vainly solicited help from the Treasury, and only brought about partial change of Ministry and no help. 'Fifty-two Towns' were more or less entirely depopulated; hundreds of thousands of fertile acres fell to waste again, the hands that had ploughed them being swept away. The new Majesty, so soon as ever the Swedish War was got rid of, took this matter diligently in hand; built-up the fifty-two ruined Towns; issued Proclamations once and again (Years 1719, 1721), to the Wetterau, to Switzerland, Saxony, Schwaben;[4] inviting Colonists to come, and, on favourable terms, till and reap there. His terms are favourable, well-considered; and are honestly kept. He has a fixed set of terms for Colonists: their road-expenses thither, so much a day allowed each travelling soul; homesteads, ploughing implements, cattle, land, await them at their journey's end; their rent and services, accurately specified, are light not heavy; and 'immunities' from this and that are granted them, for certain years, till they get well nestled. Excellent arrangements: and his Majesty has, in fact, got about 20,000 families in that way. And still there is room for thousands more. So that if the tyrannous Firmian took to tribulating Salzburg in that manner, Heaven had provided remedies and a Prussian Majesty. Heaven is very opulent; has alchemy to change the ugliest substances into beautifulest. Privately to his Majesty, for months back, this Salzburg Emigration is a most manageable matter. Manage well, it will be a godsend to his Majesty, and fit, as by preëstablished harmony, into the ancient Prussian sorrow; and 'two afflictions well put together shall become a consolation,' as the proverb promises! Go along then, Right Reverend Firmian, with your Emigration there: only no foul-play in it,—or Halberstadt and Minden get locked:—for the rest of the matter we will undertake.

[4] Buchholz, i. 148.

And so, February 2d, 1732, Friedrich Wilhelm's Proclamation[5] flew abroad over the world; brief and business-like, cheering to all but Firmian;—to this purport: 'Come, ye poor 'Salzburgers, there are homes provided for you. Apply at 'Regensburg, at Halle: Commissaries are appointed; will 'take charge of your long march and you. Be kind, all Chris-'tian German Princes: do not hinder them and me.' And in a few days farther, still early in February (for the matter is all ready before proclaiming), an actual Prussian Commissary hangs out his announcements and officialities at Donauwörth, old City known to us, within reach of the Salzburg Boundaries; collects, in a week or two, his first lot of Emigrants, near a thousand strong; and fairly takes the road with them.

A long road and a strange: I think, above five hundred miles before we get to Halle, within Prussian land; and then seven hundred more to our place there, in the utmost East. Men, women, infants and hoary grandfathers are here;—most of their property sold,—still on ruinous conditions, think of it, your Majesty. Their poor bits of preciosities and heirlooms they have with them; made up in succinct bundles, stowed on ticketed baggage-wains; 'some have their own poor cart and 'horse, to carry the too old and the too young, those that can-'not walk.' A pilgrimage like that of the Children of Israel: such a pilgrim caravan as was seldom heard of in our Western Countries. Those poor succinct bundles, the making of them up and stowing of them; the pangs of simple hearts, in those remote native valleys; the tears that were not seen, the cries that were addressed to God only: and then at last the actual turning-out of the poor caravan, in silently practical condition, staff in hand, no audible complaint heard from it; ready to march; practically marching here:—which of us can think of it without emotion, sad, and yet in a sort blessed!

Every Emigrant man has four groschen a day (fourpence odd) allowed him for road expenses, every woman three groschen, every child two: and regularity itself, in the shape of Prussian Commissaries, presides over it. Such marching of the Salzburgers; host after host of them, by various routes, from February onwards; above Seven thousand of them this year, and Ten thousand more that gradually followed,—was heard of at all German firesides, and in all European lands.

[5] Copy of it in Mauvillon, February 1732, ii. 311.

A phenomenon much filling the general ear and imagination; especially at the first emergence of it. We will give from poor old authentic Fassmann, as if caught-up by some sudden photograph apparatus, a rude but undeniable glimpse or two into the actuality of this business: the reader will in that way sufficiently conceive it for himself.

Glimpse first is of an Emigrant Party arriving, in the cold February days of 1732, at Nördlingen, Protestant Free-Town in Bavaria: Three hundred of them; first section, I think, of those Nine hundred who were packed away unceremoniously by Firmian last winter, and have been wandering about Bavaria, lodging 'in Kaufbeuern' and various preliminary Towns, till the Prussian arrangements became definite. Prussian Commissaries are, by this time, got to Donauwörth; but these poor Salzburgers are ahead of them, wandering under the voluntary-principle as yet. Nördlingen, in Bavaria, is an old Imperial Free-Town; Protestantism not suppressed there, as it has been all round; scene of some memorable fighting in the Thirty-Years War, especially of a bad defeat to the Swedes and Bernhard of Weimar, the worst they had in the course of that bad business. The Salzburgers are in number Three hundred and thirty-one; time, 'first days of February 1732, weather very cold and raw.' The charitable Protestant Town has been expecting such an advent:

'Two chief Clergymen, and the Schoolmaster and Scholars, with 'some hundreds of citizens and many young people, went out to meet 'them; there, in the open field, stood the Salzburgers, with their wives 'and their little ones, with their bullock-carts and baggage-wains,' pilgriming towards unknown parts of the Earth. '"Come in, ye blessed 'of the Lord! Why stand ye without?" said the Parson solemnly, by 'way of welcome; and addressed a Discourse to them,' devout and yet human, true every word of it, enough to draw tears from any Fassmann that were there;—Fassmann and we not far from weeping without words. 'Thereupon they ranked themselves two and two, and marched 'into the Town,' straight to the Church, I conjecture, Town all out to participate; 'and there the two reverend gentlemen successively ad-'dressed them again, from appropriate texts: Text of the first reverend 'gentleman was, And every one that hath forsaken houses, or brethren, 'or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my 'name's sake, shall receive an hundredfold, and shall inherit everlasting 'life.[6] Text of the second was, Now the Lord had said unto Abraham, 'Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's

[6] Matthew xix. 29.

'house, unto a land that I will show thee.'[7] Excellent texts; well handled, let us hope,—especially with brevity. 'After which the strangers 'were distributed, some into public-houses, others taken home by the 'citizens to lodge.

'Out of the Spital there was distributed to each person, for the first 'three days, a half-pound of flesh-meat, bread, and a measure of beer. 'The remaining days they got in money six creutzers (two pence) each, 'and bread. On Sunday, at the Church-doors there was a collection: 'no less than eight hundred gulden' (80*l.*; population, say, three thousand) 'for this object. At Sermon they were put into the central part 'of the Church,' all Nördlingen lovingly encompassing them; 'and 'were taught in two sermons,' texts not given, 'What the true Church 'is built of, and then Of true Faith, and what love a Christian ought to 'have;' Nördlingen copiously shedding tears the while (viele Thränen vergossen), as it well might. 'Going to Church, and coming from it, 'each Landlord walked ahead of his party; party followed two and 'two. On other days, there was much catechising of them at different 'parts of the Town;'—orthodox enough, you see, nothing of superstition or fanaticism in the poor people;—'they made a good testimony of their 'Evangelical truth.

'The Baggage-wagons which they had with them, ten in number, 'upon which some of their old people sat, were brought into the Town. 'The Baggage was unloaded, and the packages, Two hundred and 'eighty-one of them in all' (for Fassmann is Photography itself), 'were 'locked in the Zoll-Haus. Over and above what they got from the 'Spital, the Church-collection and the Town-chest, Citizens were liberal; 'daily sent them food, or daily had them by fours and fives to their 'own houses to meat.' And so let them wait for the Prussian Commissary, who is just at hand: 'they would not part from one another, these 'Three hundred and thirty-one,' says Fassmann, 'though their reunion 'was but of that accidental nature.'[8]

Glimpse second: not dated; perhaps some ten days later; and a Prussian Commissary with this party:

'On their getting to the Anspach Territory, there was so incredible 'a joy at the arrival of these exiled Brothers in the Faith (Glaubens-'Brüder) that in all places, almost in the smallest hamlets, the bells 'were set a-tolling; and nothing was heard but a peal of welcome from 'far and near.' Prussian Commissary, when about quitting Anspach, asked leave to pass through Bamberg; Bishop of Bamberg, too orthodox a gentleman, declined; so the Commissary had to go by Nürnberg and Baireuth. Ask not if his welcome was good in those Protestant places. 'At Erlangen, fifteen miles from Nürnberg, where are French 'Protestants and a Dowager Margravine of Baireuth,'—Widow of Wilhelmina's Father-in-law's predecessor (if the reader can count that); daughter of Weissenfels who was for marrying Wilhelmina not long since!—'at Erlangen, the Serene Dowager snatched-up fifty of them 'into her own House for Christian refection; and Burghers of means 'had twelve, fifteen and even eighteen of them, following such example 'set. Nay certain French Citizens, prosperous and childless, besieged 'the Prussian Commissary to allow them a few Salzburg children for 'adoption; especially one Frenchman was extremely urgent and spe-'cific: but the Commissary, not having any order, was obliged to re-'fuse.'[9] These must have been interesting days for the two young Margravines; forwarding Papa's poor pilgrims in that manner.

[7] Gen. xii. 1. [8] Fassmann, pp. 439, 440.

'At Baireuth,' other side of Nürnberg, 'it was towards Good Friday 'when the Pilgrims under their Commissarius arrived. They were 'lodged in the villages about, but came copiously into the Town; came 'all in a body to Church on Good Friday; and at coming out, were 'one and all carried off to dinner, a very scramble arising among the 'Townsfolk to get hold of Pilgrims and dine them. Vast numbers 'were carried to the Schloss;' one figures Wilhelmina among them, figures the Hereditary Prince and old Margraf: their treatment there was 'beyond belief,' says Fassmann; 'not only dinner of the amplest 'quality and quantity, but much money added and other gifts.' From Baireuth the route is towards Gera and Thüringen, circling the Bamberg Territory: readers remember Gera, where the Gera Bond was made?—'At Gera, a commercial gentleman dined the whole party in 'his own premises, and his wife gave four groschen to each individual 'of them; other two persons, brothers in the place, doing the like. 'One of the poor pilgrim women had been brought to bed on the 'journey, a day or two before: the Commissarius lodged her in his 'own inn, for greater safety; Commissarius returning to his inn, finds 'she is off, nobody at first can tell him whither: a lady of quality '(vornehme Dame) has quietly sent her carriage for the poor pilgrim 'sister, and has her in the right softest keeping. No end to people's 'kindness: many wept aloud, sobbing out, "Is this all the help we 'can give?" Commissarius said, "There will others come shortly; 'them also you can help."'

In this manner march these Pilgrims. 'From Donau-'wörth, by Anspach, Nürnberg, Baireuth, through Gera, Zeitz, 'Weissenfels, to Halle,' where they are on Prussian ground, and within few days of Berlin. Other Towns, not upon the first straight route to Berlin, demand to have a share in these grand things; share is willingly conceded: thus the Pilgrims, what has its obvious advantages, march by a good variety of routes. Through Augsburg, Ulm (instead of Donauwörth), thence to Frankfurt; from Frankfurt some direct to Leipzig: some through Cassel, Hanover, Brunswick, by Halberstadt and Magdeburg instead of Halle. Starting all at Salzburg, landing all at Berlin; their routes spread over the Map of Germany in the intermediate space.

[9] Fassmann, p. 441.

'Weissenfels Town and Duke distinguished themselves by liberality: 'especially the Duke did;'—poor old drinking Duke; very Protestant all these Saxon Princes, except the Apostate or Pseudo-Apostate the Physically Strong, for sad political reasons. 'In Weissenfels Town, 'while the Pilgrim procession walked, a certain rude foreign fellow, 'flax-pedlar by trade,[10] by creed Papist or worse, said floutingly, "The 'Archbishop ought to have flung you all into the river, you —!" Upon 'which a menial servant of the Duke's suddenly broke in upon him in 'the way of actuality, the whole crowd blazing into flame; and the 'pedlar would certainly have got irreparable damage, had not the 'Townguard instantly hooked him away.'

April 21st, 1732, the first actual body, a good nine hundred strong,[11] got to Halle; where they were received with devout jubilee, psalm-singing, spiritual and corporeal refection, as at Nördlingen and the other stages; 'Archidiaconus Franke' being prominent in it,—I have no doubt, a connexion of that "chien de Franke," whom Wilhelmina used to know. They were lodged in the Waisenhaus (old Franke's Orphan-house); Official List of them was drawn-up here, with the fit specificality; and, after three days, they took the road again for Berlin. Useful Buchholz, then a very little boy, remembers the arrival of a Body of these Salzburgers, not this but a later one in August, which passed through his native Village, Pritzwalk in the Priegnitz: How village and village authorities were all awake, with opened stores and hearts; how his Father, the Village Parson, preached at five in the afternoon. The same Buchholz, coming afterwards to College at Halle, had the pleasure of discovering two of the Commissaries, two of the three, who had mainly superintended in this Salzburg Pilgrimage. Let the reader also take a glance at them, as specimens worth notice:

Commissarius First: 'Herr von Reck was a nobleman from the 'Hanover Country; of very great piety; who, after his Commission 'was done, settled at Halle; and lived there, without servant, in pri-'vacy, from the small means he had;—seeking his sole satisfaction in 'attendance on the Theological and Ascetic College-Lectures, where I 'used to see him constantly in my student time.'

Commissarius Second: 'Herr Göbel was a medical man by profes-'sion; and had the regular degree of Doctor; but was in no necessity

[10] 'Hechelträger, Hawker of flax-combs or heckles;—is oftenest a Slavon-Austrian (I am told).

[11] Buchholz, i. 156.

'to apply his talents to the gaining of bread. His zeal for religion had 'moved him to undertake this Commission. Both these gentlemen I 'have often seen in my youth,' but do not tell you what they were like farther; 'and both their Christian-names have escaped me.'

A third Commissarius was of Preussen, and had religious-literary tendencies. I suppose these Three served gratis;—volunteers; but no doubt under oath, and tied by strict enough Prussian law. Physician, Chaplain, Road-guide, here they are, probably of supreme quality, ready to our hand.[12]

Buchholz, after 'his student time,' became a poor Country-Schoolmaster, and then a poor Country-Parson, in his native Altmark. His poor Book is of innocent, clear, faithful nature, with some vein of 'unconscious geniality' in it here and there; —a Book by no means so destitute of human worth as some that have superseded it. This was posthumous, this 'Newest History,' and has a Life of the Author prefixed. He has four previous Volumes on the 'Ancient History of Brandenburg,' which are not known to me.—About the Year 1745, there were Four poor Schoolmasters in that region (two at Havelberg, one at Seehausen, one at Werben), of extremely studious turn; who, in spite of the Elbe which ran between, used to meet on stated nights, for colloquy, for interchange of Books and the like. One of them, the Werben one, was this Buchholz; another, Seehausen, was the Winckelmann so celebrated in after years. A third, one of the Havelberg pair, 'went into Meck-'lenburg in a year or two, as Tutor to Karl Ludwig the Prince 'of Strelitz's children,'—whom also mark. For the youngest of these Strelitz children was no other than the actual "Old Queen Charlotte" (ours and George III.'s), just ready for him with her Hornbooks about that time: Let the poor man have what honour he can from that circumstance! 'Prince Karl Ludwig,' rather a foolish-looking creature, we may fall in with personally by and by.

It was the 30th April 1732, seven weeks and a day since Crown-Prince Friedrich's Betrothal, that this first body of Salzburg Emigrants, nine hundred strong, arrived at Berlin; 'four in the afternoon, at the Brandenburg Gate;' Official persons, nay Majesty himself, or perhaps both Majesties, waiting there to receive them. Yes, ye poor footsore mortals, there is the dread King himself; stoutish short figure in blue uniform and white wig, straw-coloured waistcoat, and white gaiters; stands uncommonly firm on his feet; reddish, blue-reddish face, with eyes that pierce through a man: look upon him, and yet live if you are true men. His Majesty's reception of these poor people could not but be good; nothing now wanting in the formal kind. But better far, in all the essentialities of it, there had not been hitherto, nor was henceforth, the least flaw. This Salzburg Pilgrimage has found for itself, and will find, regulation, guidance, ever a stepping-stone at the needful p ace; a paved road, so far as human regularity and punctuality could pave one. That is his Majesty's shining merit. 'Next Sun-'day, after sermon, they' (this first lot of Salzburgers) 'were 'publicly catechised in church; and all the world could hear 'their pertinent answers, given often in the very Scripture texts, 'or express words of Luther.'

[12] Buchholz, Neueste Preussisch-Brandenburgische Geschichte (Berlin, 1775 2 vols. 4to), i. 155 n.

His Majesty more than once took survey of these Pilgrimage Divisions, when they got to Berlin. A pleasant sight, if there were leisure otherwise. On various occasions, too, her Majesty had large parties of them over to Monbijou, to supper there in the fine gardens; and 'gave them Bibles,' among other gifts, if in want of Bibles through Firmian's industry. Her Majesty was Charity itself, Charity and Grace combined, among these Pilgrims. On one occasion she picked-out a handsome young lass among them, and had Painter Pesne over to take her portrait. Handsome lass, by Pesne, in her Tyrolese Hat, shone thenceforth on the walls of Monbijou; and fashion thereupon took-up the Tyrolese Hat, 'which has been much worn 'since by the beautiful part of the Creation,' says Buchholz; 'but 'how many changes they have introduced in it no pen can trace.'

At Berlin the Commissarius ceased; and there was usually given the Pilgrims a Candidatus Theologiæ, who was to conduct them the rest of the way, and be their Clergyman when once settled. Five hundred long miles still. Some were shipped at Stettin; mostly they marched, stage after stage,—four groschen a day. At the farther end they found all ready; tight cottages, tillable fields, all implements furnished, and stock,—even to 'Federvieh,' or Chanticleer with a modicum of Hens. Old neighbours, and such as liked each other, were put together: fields grew green again, desolate scrubs and scrags yielding to grass and corn. Wooden clocks even came to view,—for Berchtesgaden neighbours also emigrated; and Swiss came, and Bavarians and French :—and old trades were revived in those new localities.

Something beautifully real-idyllic in all this, surely :—Yet do not fancy that it all went on like clockwork ; that there were not jarrings at every step, as is the way in things real. Of the Prussian Minister chiefly concerned in settling this new Colony I have heard one saying, forced out of him in some pressure : "There must be somebody for a scolding-stock and scape-goat ; I will be it, then !" And then the Salzburg Officials, what a humour they were in ! No Letters allowed from those poor Emigrants ; the wickedest rumours circulated about them : "All cut to pieces by inroad of the Poles ;" "Pressed for soldiers by the Prussian drill-sergeant ;" "All flung into the Lakes and stagnant waters there ; drowned to the last individual ;" and so on. Truth nevertheless did slowly pierce through. And the "Grosse Wirth," our idyllic-real Friedrich Wilhelm, was wanting in nothing. Lists of their unjust losses in Salzburg were, on his Majesty's order, made out and authenticated, by the many who had suffered in that way there,—forced to sell at a day's notice, and the like : —with these his Majesty was diligent in the Imperial Court ; and did get what human industry could of compensation, a part but not the whole. Contradictory noises had to abate. In the end, sound purpose, built on fact and the Laws of Nature, carried it ; lies, vituperations, rumours and delusion sank to zero ; and the true result remained. In 1738, the Salzburg Emigrant Community in Preussen held, in all their Churches, a Day of Thanksgiving ; and admitted piously that Heaven's blessing, of a truth, had been upon this King and them. There we leave them, a useful solid population ever since in those parts ; increased by this time we know not how many fold.

It cost Friedrich Wilhelm enormous sums, say the Old Histories ; probably 'ten tons of gold,'—that is to say, ten Hundred-thousand Thalers ; almost 150,000*l.*, no less ! But he lived to see it amply repaid, even in his own time ; how much more amply since ;—being a man skilful in investments to a high degree indeed. Fancy 150,000*l.* invested there, in the Bank of Nature herself ; and a Hundred-millions invested, say at Balaclava, in the Bank of Newspaper rumour : and the respective rates of interest they will yield, a million years hence ! This was the most idyllic of Friedrich Wilhelm's feats, and a very real one the while.

We have only to add or repeat, that Salzburgers to the number of about 7,000 souls arrived at their place this first year; and in the year or two following, less noted by the public, but faring steadily forward upon their four groschen a day, 10,000 more. Friedrich Wilhelm would have gladly taken the whole; 'but George II. took a certain number,' say the Prussian Books (George II., or pious Trustees instead of him), 'and settled them at Ebenezer in Virginia,'—read, Ebenezer in Georgia, where General Oglethorpe was busy founding a Colony.[13] There at Ebenezer I calculate they might go ahead, too, after the questionable fashion of that country, and increase and swell;—but have never heard of them since.

Salzburg Emigration was a very real transaction on Friedrich Wilhelm's part; but it proved idyllic too, and made a great impression on the German mind. Readers know of a Book called Hermann and Dorothea? It is written by the great Goethe, and still worth reading. The great Goethe had heard, when still very little, much talk among the elders about this Salzburg Pilgrimage; and how strange a thing it was, twenty years ago and more.[14] In middle life he threw it into Hexameters, into the region of the air; and did that unreal Shadow of it; a pleasant work in its way, since he was not inclined for more.

CHAPTER IV.

PRUSSIAN MAJESTY VISITS THE KAISER.

MAJESTY seeing all these matters well in train,—Salzburgers under way, Crown-Prince betrothed according to his Majesty's and the Kaiser's (not to her Majesty's, and high-flying little George of England my Brother the Comedian's) mind and will,—begins to think seriously of another enterprise, half business half pleasure, which has been hovering in his mind for some time. "Visit to my Daughter at Baireuth," he calls it publicly; but it means intrinsically Excursion into Böhmen, to have a word with the Kaiser, and see his Imperial Majesty in the body for once. Too remarkable a thing to be omitted by us here.

[13] Petition to Parliament, 10th (21st) May 1733, by Oglethorpe and his Trustees, for 10,000*l.* to carry over these Salzburgers; which was granted; Tindal's Rapin (London, 1769), xx. 184.

[14] 1749 was Goethe's birth-year.

Crown-Prince does not accompany on this occasion; Crown-Prince is with his Regiment all this while; busy minding his own affairs in the Ruppin quarter;—only hears, with more or less interest, of these Salzburg-Pilgrim movements, of this Excursion into Böhmen. Here are certain scraps of Letters; which, if once made legible, will assist readers to conceive his situation and employments there. Letters otherwise of no importance; but worth reading on that score. The first (or rather first three, which we huddle into one) is from 'Nauen,' few miles off Ruppin; where one of our Battalions lies; requiring frequent visits there:

1. To Grumkow, at Berlin (from the Crown-Prince).

'Nauen, 25th April 1732.

'Monsieur my dearest Friend,—I send you a big mass of papers, 'which a certain gentleman named Plötz has transmitted me. In faith, 'I know not in the least what it is: I pray you present it' (to his Majesty, or in the proper quarter), 'and make me rid of it.

'Tomorrow I go to Potsdam' (a drive of forty miles southward), 'to see the exercise, and if we do it here according to pattern. Neue 'Besen kehren gut' (New brooms sweep clean, in German); 'I shall 'have to illustrate my new character' of Colonel; 'and show that I am 'ein tüchtiger Officier (a right Officer). Be what I may, I shall to you 'always be,' &c. &c.

Nauen, 7th May 1732. '* * Thousand thanks for informing me 'how everything goes-on in the world. Things far from agreeable, 'those leagues' (imaginary, in Tobacco-Parliament) 'suspected to be 'forming against our House! But if the Kaiser don't abandon us;' 'if 'God second the valour of 80,000 men resolved to spend their life,'—'let us hope there will nothing bad happen.

'Meanwhile, till events arrive, I make a pretty stir here (me tré-'mousse ici d'importance), to bring my Regiment to its requisite perfec-'tion, and I hope I shall succeed. The other day I drank your dear 'health, Monsieur; and I wait only the news from my Cattle-stall that 'the Calf I am fattening there is ready for sending to you. I unite 'Mars and Housekeeping, you see. Send me your Secretary's name, 'that I may address your Letters that way,'—our Correspondence needing to be secret in certain quarters. * * 'With a' truly infinite esteem:—'FRÉDÉRIC.'

Nauen, 10th May 1732. 'You will see by this that I am exact to 'follow your instruction; and that the Schulz of Tremmen' (Village in the Brandenburg quarter, with a Schulz or Mayor to be depended on),

'becomes for the present the mainspring of our correspondence. I 'return you all the things (pièces) you had the goodness to communi- 'cate to me,—except Charles Douze,[1] which attaches me infinitely. 'The particulars hitherto unknown which he reports; the greatness of 'that Prince's actions, and the perverse singularity (bizarrerie) of his 'fortune: all this, joined to the lively, brilliant and charming way the 'Author has of telling it, renders this Book interesting to the supreme 'degree. * * * I send you a fragment of my correspondence with the 'most illustrious Sieur Crochet,' some French Envoy or Emissary, I conclude: 'you perceive we go on very sweetly together, and are in 'a high strain. I am sorry I burnt one of his Letters, wherein he as- 'sured me he would in the Versailles Antechamber itself speak of me 'to the King, and that my name had actually been mentioned at the 'King's Levee. It certainly is not my ambition to choose this illustri- 'ous mortal to publish my renown; on the contrary, I should think 'it soiled by such a mouth, and prostituted if he were the publisher. 'But enough of the Crochet: the kindest thing we can do for so con- 'temptible an object is to say nothing of him at all.'[2]—* *

Letter second is to Jägermeister Hacke, Captain of the Potsdam Guard; who stands in great nearness to the King's Majesty; and, in fact, is fast becoming his factotum in Army-details. We, with the Duke of Lorraine and Majesty in person, saw his marriage to the Excellency Creutz's Fräulein Daughter not long since; who we trust has made him happy;—rich he is at any rate, and will be Adjutant-General before long; powerful in such intricacies as this that the Prince has fallen into.

The Letter has its obscurities; turns earnestly on Recruits tall and short; nor have idle Editors helped us, by the least hint towards 'reading' it with more than the eyes. Old Dessauer at this time is Commandant at Magdeburg; Buddenbrock, perhaps now passing by Ruppin, we know for a high old General, fit to carry messages from Majesty,—or, likelier, it may be Lieutenant Buddenbrock, his Son, merely returning to Ruppin? We can guess, that the flattering Dessauer has sent his Majesty Five gigantic men from the Magdeburg regiments, and that Friedrich is ordered to hustle out Thirty of insignificant stature from his own, by way of counter-gift to the Dessauer;—which Friedrich does instantly, but cannot, for his life, see how (being totally cashless) he is to replace them with better, or replace them at all!

[1] Voltaire's new Book; lately come out, 'Bâle, 1731.'
[2] Œuvres de Frédéric, xvi. 49, 51.

2. To Captain Hacke, of the Potsdam Guard.

'Ruppin, 15th July 1732.

'Mein Goit, what a piece of news Buddenbrock has brought me! 'I am to get nothing out of Brandenburg, my dear Hacke? Thirty 'men I had to shift out of my company in consequence' (of Buddenbrock's order); 'and where am I now to get other thirty? I would 'gladly give the King tall men, as the Dessauer at Magdeburg does; 'but I have no money; and I don't get, or set up for getting, six men 'for one' (thirty short for five tall), 'as he does. So true is that Scrip-'ture: To him that hath shall be given; and from him that hath not 'shall be taken away even that he hath.

'Small art, that the Prince of Dessau's and the Magdeburg Regi-'ments are fine, when they have money at command, and thirty men 'gratis over and above! I, poor devil, have nothing; nor shall have, 'all my days. Prithee, dear Hacke (bitte Ihn, lieber Hacke), think of 'all that: and if I have no money allowed, I must bring Asmus[3] alone 'as Recruit next year; and my Regiment will to a certainty be rubbish '(Kroop). Once I had learned a German Proverb—

> "Versprechen und halten (To promise and to keep) > Ziemt wohl Jungen und Alten (Is pretty for young and for old)!"

'I depend alone on you (Ihn), dear Hacke; unless you help, there 'is a bad outlook. Today I have knocked again' (written to Papa for money); 'and if that does not help, it is over. If I could get any 'money to borrow, it would do; but I need not think of that. Help 'me, then, dear Hacke! I assure you I will ever remember it; who, 'at all times, am my dear Herr Captain's devoted (ganz ergebener) 'servant and friend, FRIDERICH.'[4]

To which add only this Note, two days later, to Seckendorf; indicating that the process of 'borrowing' has already, in some form, begun,—process which will have to continue, and to develop itself;—and that his Majesty, as Seckendorf well knows, is resolved upon his Bohemian journey:

3. To the General Feldzeugmeister Graf von Seckendorf.

'Ruppin, 17th July 1732.

'My very dear General,—I have written to the King, that I owed 'you 2,125 thalers for the Recruits; of which he says there are 600 'paid: there remain, therefore, 1,525, which he will pay you directly.

'The King is going to Prague: I shall not be of the party' (as you will). 'To say truth, I am not very sorry; for it would infallibly give 'rise to foolish rumours in the world. At the same time, I should have 'much wished to see the Emperor, Empress, and Prince of Lorraine, [3] Recruit unknown to me.

[4] In German: Œuvres, xxvii. part 3d, p. 177.

'for whom I have a quite particular esteem. I beg you, Monsieur, to 'assure him of it;—and to assure yourself that I shall always be,— 'with a great deal of consideration, Monsieur, mon très-cher Général,' &c. 'FRÉDÉRIC.'

And now for the Bohemian Journey, "Visit at Kladrup" as they call it;—Ruppin being left in this assiduous and wholesome, if rather hampered condition.

Kaiser Karl and his Empress, in this summer of 1732, were at Karlsbad, taking the waters for a few weeks. Friedrich Wilhelm, who had long, for various reasons, wished to see his Kaiser face to face, thought this would be a good opportunity. The Kaiser himself, knowing how it stood with the Jülich-and-Berg and other questions, was not anxious for such an interview: still less were his official people; among whom the very ceremonial for such a thing was matter of abstruse difficulty. Seckendorf accordingly had been instructed to hunt wide, and throw-in discouragements, so far as possible; —which he did, but without effect. Friedrich Wilhelm had set his heart upon the thing; wished to behold for once a Head of the Holy Roman Empire, and Supreme of Christendom;—also to see a little, with his own eyes, into certain matters Imperial.

And so, since an express visit to Karlsbad might give rise to newspaper rumours, and will not suit, it is settled, there shall be an accidental intersection of routes, as the Kaiser travels homeward,—say in some quiet Bohemian Schloss or Hunting-seat of the Kaiser's own, whither the King may come incognito; and thus, with a minimum of noise, may the needful passage of hospitality be done. Easy all of this: only the Vienna Ministers are dreadfully in doubt about the ceremonial, Whether the Imperial hand can be given (I forget if for kissing or for shaking)?—nay at last they manfully declare that it cannot be given; and wish his Prussian Majesty to understand that it must be refused.[5] "Res summæ consequentiæ," say they; and shake solemnly their big wigs.—Nonsense (Narrenpossen)! answers the Prussian Majesty: You, Seckendorf, settle about quarters, reasonable food, reasonable lodging; and I will do the ceremonial.

Seckendorf,—worth glancing into, for biographical purposes, in this place,—has written to his Court: That as to the victual department, his Majesty goes upon good common meat; flesh, to which may be added all manner of river-fish and crabs: sound old Rhenish is his drink, with supplements of brown and of white beer. Dinner-table to be spread always in some airy place, garden-house, tent, big clean barn,—Majesty likes air, of all things;—will sleep, too, in a clean barn or garden-house: better anything than being stifled, thinks his Majesty. Who, for the rest, does not like mounting stairs.[6] These are the regulations; and we need not doubt they were complied with.

[5] Förster, i. 328.

27th July 1732.

Sunday 27th July 1732, accordingly, his Majesty, with five or six carriages, quits Berlin, before the sun is up, as is his wont: eastward, by the road for Frankfurt-on-Oder; "intends to look at Schulenburg's regiment," which lies in those parts,—Schulenburg's regiment for one thing: the rest is secret from the profane vulgar. Schulenburg's regiment (drawn-up for Church, I should suppose) is soon looked at; Schulenburg himself, by preappointment, joins the travelling party, which now consists of the King and Eight:—known figures, seven, Buddenbrock, Schulenburg, Waldau, Derschau, Seckendorf, Grumkow, Captain Hacke of the Potsdam Guard; and for eighth the Dutch Ambassador, Ginkel, an accomplished knowing kind of man, whom also my readers have occasionally seen. Their conversation, road-colloquy, could it interest any modern reader? It has gone all to dusk; we can know only that it was human, solid, for most part, and had much tobacco intermingled. They were all of the Calvinistic persuasion, of the military profession; knew that life is very serious, that speech without cause is much to be avoided. They travelled swiftly, dined in airy places: they are a fact, they and their summer dust-cloud there, whirling through the vacancy of that dim Time; and have an interest for us, though an unimportant one.

The first night they got to Grünberg; a pleasant Town, of vineyards and of looms, across the Silesian frontier. They are now turning more southeastward; they sleep here, in the Kaiser's territory, welcomed by some Official persons; who signify that the overjoyed Imperial Majesty has, as was extremely natural, paid the bill everywhere. On the morrow, before the shuttles awaken, Friedrich Wilhelm is gone again; towards the Glogau region, intending for Liegnitz that night. Coursing rapidly through the green Silesian Lowlands, blue Giant Mountains (Riesengebirge) beginning to rise on the southwestward far away. Dines, at noon, under a splendid tent, in a country place called Polkwitz,[7] with country Nobility (sorrow on them, and yet thanks to them) come to do reverence. At night he gets to Liegnitz.

[6] Seckendorf's Report (in Förster, i. 330).

Here is Liegnitz, then. Here are the Katzbach and the Blackwater (Schwarzwasser), famed in war, your Majesty; here they coalesce; gray ashlar houses (not without inhabitants unknown to us) looking on. Here are the venerable walls and streets of Liegnitz; and the Castle which defied Baty Khan and his Tartars, five hundred years ago.[8]—Oh, your Majesty, this Liegnitz, with its princely Castle, and wide rich Territory, the bulk of the Silesian Lowland, whose is it if right were done? Hm, his Majesty knows full well; in Seckendorf's presence, and going on such an errand, we must not speak of certain things. But the undisputed truth is, Duke Friedrich II., come of the Sovereign Piasts, made that Erbverbrüderung, and his Grandson's Grandson died childless: so the heirship fell to us, as the biggest wig in the most benighted Chancery would have to grant;—only the Kaiser will not, never would; the Kaiser plants his armed self on Schlesien, and will hear no pleading. Jägerndorf too, which we purchased with our own money—No more of that; it is too miserable! Very impossible too, while we have Berg and Jülich in the wind!—

At Liegnitz, Friedrich Wilhelm 'reviews the garrison, cavalry and infantry,' before starting; then off for Glatz, some sixty miles before we can dine. The goal is towards Bohemia, all this while; and his Majesty, had he liked the mountain-passes, and unlevel ways of the Giant Mountains, might have found a shorter road and a much more picturesque one. Road abounding in gloomy valleys, intricate rock-labyrinths, haunts of Sprite Rübezahl, sources of the Elbe and I know not what. Majesty likes level roads, and interesting rock-labyrinths built by man rather than by Nature. Majesty makes a wide sweep round to the east of all that; leaves the Giant Mountains, and their intricacies, as a blue Sierra far on his right,—had rather see Glatz Fortress than the caverns of the Elbe; and will cross into Bohemia, where the Hills are fallen lowest. At Glatz during dinner, numerous Nobilities are again in waiting. Glatz is in Jägerndorf region: Jägerndorf, which we purchased with our own money, is and remains ours, in spite of the mishaps of the Thirty-Years War;—ours, the darkest Chancery would be obliged to say, from under the immensest wig! Patience, your Majesty; Time brings roses!—

[7] 'Balkowitz,' say Pöllnitz (ii. 407) and Förster; which is not the correct name.
[8] 1241, the Invasion, and Battle here, of this unexpected Barbarian.

28th July 1732.

From Glatz, after viewing the works, drilling the guard a little, not to speak of dining, and dispatching the Nobilities, his Majesty takes the road again; turns now abruptly westward, across the Hills at their lowest point; into Bohemia, which is close at hand. Lewin, Nachod, these are the Bohemian villages, with their remnant of Czechs; not a prosperous population to look upon: but it is the Kaiser's own Kingdom: "King of Bohemia" one of his Titles ever since Sigismund Super-Grammaticam's time. And here now, at the meeting of the waters (Elbe one of them, a brawling mountain-stream) is Jaromierz, respectable little Town, with an Imperial Officiality in it,—where the Official Gentlemen meet us all in gala, "Thrice welcome to this Kingdom, your Majesty!"—and signify that they are to wait upon us henceforth, while we do the Kaiser's Kingdom of Bohemia that honour.

It is Tuesday night 29th July, this first night in Bohemia. The Official Gentlemen lead his Majesty to superb rooms, new-hung with crimson velvet, and the due gold fringes and tresses,—very grand indeed; but probably not so airy as we wish. "This is the way the Kaiser lodges in his journeys; and your Majesty is to be served like him." The goal of our journey is now within few miles. Wednesday 30th July 1732, his Majesty awakens again, within these crimson-velvet hangings with the gold tresses and fringes, not so airy as he could wish; dispatches Grumkow to the Kaiser, who is not many miles off, to signify what honour we would do ourselves.

It was on Saturday last that the Kaiser and Kaiserinn, returning from Karlsbad, illuminated Prag with their serene presence; 'attended high-mass, vespers,' and a good deal of other worship, as the meagre old Newspapers report for us, on that and the Sunday following. And then, 'on Monday, at six in the morning,' both the Majesties left Prag, for a place called Chlumetz, southwestward thirty miles off, in the Elbe region, where they have a pretty Hunting Castle; Kaiser intending 'sylvan sport for a few days,' says the old rag of a Newspaper, 'and then to return to Prag.' It is here that Grumkow, after a pleasant morning's drive of thirty miles with the sun on his back, finds Kaiser Karl VI.; and makes his announcements, and diplomatic inquiries what next.

Had Friedrich Wilhelm been in Potsdam or Wusterhausen, and heard that Kaiser Karl was within thirty miles of him, Friedrich Wilhelm would have cried, with open arms, Come, come! But the Imperial Majesty is otherwise hampered; has his rhadamanthine Aulic Councillors, in vast amplitude of wig, sternly engaged in study of the etiquettes: they have settled that the meeting cannot be in Chlumetz; lest it might lead to night's lodgings, and to intricacies. "Let it be at Kladrup," say the Ample-wigged; Kladrup, an Imperial Stud, or Horse-Farm, half-a-dozen miles from this; where there is room for nothing more than dinner. There let the meeting be, tomorrow at a set hour; and, in the mean time, we will take precautions for the etiquettes. So it is settled, and Grumkow returns with the decision in a complimentary form.

Through Königsgrätz, down the right bank of the Upper Elbe, on the morrow morning, Thursday 31st July 1732, Friedrich Wilhelm rushes on towards Kladrup; finds that little village, with the Horse-edifices, looking snug enough in the valley of Elbe;—alights, welcomed by Prince Eugenio von Savoye, with word that the Kaiser is not come, but steadily expected soon. Prince Eugenio von Savoye: Ach Gott, it is another thing, your Highness, than when we met in the Flanders Wars, long since;—at Malplaquet that morning, when your Highness had been to Brussels, visiting your Lady Mother in case of the worst! Slightly grayer your Highness is grown; I too am nothing like so nimble; the great Duke, poor man, is dead!—Prince Eugenio von Savoye, we need not doubt, took snuff, and answered in a sprightly appropriate manner.

Kladrup is a Country House as well as a Horse-Farm: a square court is the interior, as I gather; the Horse-buildings at a reverent distance forming the fourth side. In the centre of this court,—see what a contrivance the Aulic Councillors have hit upon,—there is a wooden stand built, with three staircases leading up to it, one for each person, and three galleries leading off from it into suites of rooms: no question of precedence here, where each of you has his own staircase and own gallery to his apartment! Friedrich Wilhelm looks down like a rhinoceros on all those cobwebberies. No sooner are the Kaiser's carriage-wheels heard within the court, than Friedrich Wilhelm rushes down, by what staircase is readiest; forward to the very carriage-door; and flings his arms about the Kaiser, embracing and embraced, like mere human friends glad to see one another. On these terms, they mount the wooden stand, Majesty of Prussia, Kaiser, Kaiserinn, each by his own staircase; see, for a space of two hours, the Kaiser's foals and horses led about,—which at least fills-up any gap in conversation that may threaten to occur. The Kaiser, a little man of high and humane air, is not bright in talk; the Empress, a Brunswick Princess of fine carriage, Granddaughter of old Anton Ulrich who wrote the Novels, is likewise of mute humour in public life: but old Nord-Teutschland, cradle of one's existence; Brunswick reminiscences; news of your Imperial Majesty's serene Father, serene Sister, Brother-in-law the Feldmarschall, and Insipid Niece whom we have had the satisfaction to betroth lately,—furnish small-talk where needful.

Dinner being near, you go by your own gallery to dress. From the drawing-room, Friedrich Wilhelm leads out the Kaiserinn; the Kaiser, as Head of the world, walks first, though without any lady. How they drank the healths, gave and received the ewers and towels, is written duly in the old Books, but was as indifferent to Friedrich Wilhelm as it is to us; what their conversation was, let no man presume to ask. Dullish, we should apprehend,—and perhaps better lost to us? But where there are tongues, there are topics: the Loom of Time wags always, and with it the tongues of men. Kaiser and Kaiserinn have both been in Karlsbad lately; Kaiser and Kaiserinn both have sailed to Spain, in old days, and been in sieges and things memorable: Friedrich Wilhelm, solid Squire Western of the North, does not want for topics, and talks as a solid rustic gentleman will. Native politeness he knows on occasion; to etiquette, so far as concerns his own pretensions, he feels callous altogether,—dimly sensible that the Eighteenth Century is setting in, and that solid musketeers and not gold-sticks are now the important thing. "I felt mad to see him so humiliate himself," said Grumkow afterwards to Wilhelmina, "j'enrageais dans ma peau :" why not?

Dinner lasted two hours; the Empress rising, Friedrich Wilhelm leads her to her room; then retires to his own, and 'in a quarter of an hour' is visited there by the Kaiser; 'who conducts him,' in so many minutes exact by the watch, 'back to the Empress,'—for a sip of coffee, as one hopes; which may wind-up the Interview well. The sun is still a good space from setting, when Friedrich Wilhelm, after cordial adieus, neglectful of etiquette, is rolling rapidly towards Nimburg, thirty miles off on the Prag Highway; and Kaiser Karl with his Spouse move deliberately towards Chlumetz to hunt again. In Nimburg Friedrich Wilhelm sleeps, that night;—Imperial Majesties, in a much-tumbled world, of wild horses, ceremonial ewers, and Eugenios of Savoy and Malplaquet, probably peopling his dreams. If it please Heaven, there may be another private meeting, a day or two hence.

Nimburg, ah your Majesty, Son Fritz will have a night in Nimburg too;—riding slowly thither amid the wrecks of Kolin Battle, not to sleep well;—but that happily is hidden from your Majesty. Kolin, Czaslau (Chotusitz), Elbe Teinitz,—here in this Kladrup region, your Majesty is driving amid poor Villages which will be very famous by and by. And Prag itself will be doubly famed in war, if your Majesty knew it, and the Ziscaberg be of bloodier memory than the Weissenberg itself!—His Majesty, the morrow's sun having risen upon Nimburg, rolls into Prag successfully about eleven A.M., Hill of Zisca not disturbing him; goes to the Klein-Seite Quarter, where an Aulic Councillor with fine Palace is ready; all the cannon thundering from the walls at his Majesty's advent; and Prince Eugenio, the ever-present, being there to receive his Majesty,—and in fact to invite him to dinner this day at half-past twelve. It is Friday 1st of August 1732.

By a singular chance, there is preserved for us in Fassmann's Book, what we may call an Excerpt from the old Morning Post of Prag, bringing that extinct Day into clear light again; recalling the vanished Dinner-Party from the realms of Hades, as a thing that once actually was. The List of the Dinner-guests is given complete; vanished ghosts, whom, in studying the old History-Books, you can, with a kind of interest, fish-up into visibility at will. There is Prince Eugenio von Savoye at the bottom of the table, in the Count-Thun Palace where he lodges; there bodily, the little man, in gold-laced coat of unknown cut; the eyes and the temper bright and rapid, as usual, or more; nose not unprovided with snuff, and lips in consequence rather open. Be seated, your Majesty, high gentlemen all.

A big chair-of-state stands for his Majesty at the upper end of the table: his Majesty will none of it; sits down close by Prince Eugene at the very bottom, and opposite Prince Alexander of Würtemberg, whom we had at Berlin lately, a General of note in the Turkish and other wars: here probably there will be better talk; and the big chair may preside over us in vacancy. Which it does. Prince Alexander, Imperial General against the Turks, and Heir-Apparent of Würtemberg withal, can speak of many things,—hardly much of his serene Cousin the reigning Duke; whose health is in a too interesting state, the good though unlucky man. Of the Grävenitz sitting now in limbo, or travelling about disowned, toujours un lavement à ses trousses, let there be deep silence. But the Prince Alexander can answer abundantly on other heads. He comes to his inheritance a few months hence; actual reigning Duke, the poor serene Cousin having died: and perhaps we shall meet him transiently again.

He is Ancestor of the Czars of Russia, this Prince Alexander, who is now dining here in the body, along with Friedrich Wilhelm and Prince Eugene: Paul of Russia, unbeautiful Paul, married the second time, from Mümpelgard (what the French call Montbeillard, in Alsace), a serene Granddaughter of his, from whom come the Czars,—thanks to her or not. Prince Alexander is Ancestor withal of our present "Kings of Würtemberg," if that mean anything: Father (what will mean something) to the serene Duke, still in swaddling-clothes,[9] who will be son-in-law to Princess Wilhelmina of Baireuth (could your Majesty foresee it); and will do strange pranks in the world, upon poet Schiller and others. Him too, and Brothers of his, were they born and become of size, we shall meet. A noticeable man, and not without sense, this Prince Alexander; who is now of a surety eating with us,—as we find by the extinct Morning Post in Fassmann's old Book.

[9] Born 21st January 1732; Karl Eugen the name of him (Michaelis, iii. 450).

Of the other eating figures, Stahrembergs, Sternbergs, Kinsky Ambassador to England, Kinsky Ambassador to France, high Austrian dignitaries, we shall say nothing;—who would listen to us? Hardly can the Hof-Kanzler Count von Sinzendorf, supreme of Aulic men, who holds the rudder of Austrian State-Policy, and probably feels himself loaded with importance beyond most mortals now eating here or elsewhere,—gain the smallest recognition from oblivious English readers of our time. It is certain he eats here on this occasion; and to his Majesty he does not want for importance. His Majesty, intent on Jülich and Berg and other high matters, spends many hours next day, in earnest private dialogue with him. We mention farther, with satisfaction, that Grumkow and Ordnance-Master Seckendorf are both on the list, and all our Prussian party, down to Hacke of the Potsdam grenadiers, friend Schulenburg visibly eating among the others. Also that the dinner was glorious (herrlich), and ended about five.[10] After which his Majesty went to two evening parties, of a high order, in the Hradschin Quarter or elsewhere; cards in the one (unless you liked to dance, or grin idle talk from you), and supper in the other.

His Majesty amused himself for four other days in Prag, interspersing long earnest dialogues with Sinzendorf, with whom he spent the greater part of Saturday,[11]—results as to Jülich and Berg of a rather cloudy nature. On Saturday came the Kaiser, too, and Kaiserinn, to their high House, the Schloss in Prag; and there occurred, in the incognito form, 'as if by accident,' three visits or counter-visits, two of them of some length. The King went dashing about; saw, deliberately or in glimpses, all manner of things,—from 'the Military Hospital' to 'the Tongue of St. Nepomuk' again. Nepomuk, an imaginary Saint of those parts; pitched into the Moldau, as is fancied and fabled, by wicked King Wenzel (King and Deposed-Kaiser, whom we have heard of), for speaking and refusing to speak; Nepomuk is now become the Patron of Bridges, in consequence; stands there in bronze on the Bridge of Prag; and still shows a dried Tongue in the world:[12] this latter, we expressly find, his Majesty saw.

[10] Fassmann, p. 474. [11] Pöllnitz, ii. 411.

[12] Die Legende vom heiligen Johann von Nepomuk, von D. Otto Abel (Berlin, 1855); an acute bit of Historical Criticism.

On Sunday, his Majesty, nothing of a straitlaced man, attended divine or quasi-divine worship in the Cathedral Church, —where high Prince Bishops delivered palliums, did histrionisms; 'manifested the Absurdität of Papistry' more or less. Coming out of the Church, he was induced to step in and see the rooms of the Schloss, or Imperial Palace. In one of the rooms, as if by accident, the Kaiser was found lounging:— "Extremely delighted to see your Majesty!"—and they had the first of their long or considerable dialogues together; purport has not transpired. The second considerable dialogue was on the morrow, when Imperial Majesty, as if by accident, found himself in the Count-Nostitz Palace, where Friedrich Wilhelm lodges. Delighted to be so fortunate again! Hope your Majesty likes Prag? Eternal friendship, Oh ja:—and as to Jülich and Berg? Particulars have not transpired.

Prag is a place full of sights: his Majesty, dashing about in all quarters, has a busy time; affairs of state (Jülich and Berg principally) alternating with what we now call the lions. Zisca's drum, for instance, in the Arsenal here? Would your Majesty wish to see Zisca's own skin, which he bequeathed to be a drum when he had done with it? "Narenpossen!"—for indeed the thing is fabulous, though in character with Zisca. Or the Council-Chamber window, out of which 'the Three Prag Projectiles fell into the Night of things,' as a modern Historian expresses it? Three Official Gentlemen, flung out one morning,[13] 70 feet, but fell on "sewerage," and did not die, but set the whole world on fire? That is too certain, as his Majesty knows: that brought the crowning of the Winter-King, Battle of the Weissenberg, Thirty-Years War; and lost us Jägerndorf and much else.

Or Wallenstein's Palace,—did your Majesty look at that? A thing worth glancing at, on the score of History and even of Natural-History. That rugged son of steel and gunpowder could not endure the least noise in his sleeping-room or even sitting-room,—a difficulty in the soldiering way of life;—and had, if I remember, one hundred and thirty houses torn away in Prag, and sentries posted all round in the distance, to secure silence for his much-meditating indignant soul. And yonder is the Weissenberg, conspicuous in the western suburban region: and here in the eastern, close by, is the Ziscaberg;—

[13] 13th (23d) May 1618 (Köhler, p. 507).

O Heaven, your Majesty, on this Zisca-Hill will be a new "Battle of Prag," which will throw the Weissenberg into eclipse; and there is awful fighting coming on in these parts again!—

The third of the considerable dialogues in Prag was on this same Monday night; when his Majesty went to wait upon the Kaiserinn, and the Kaiser soon accidentally joined them. Precious gracious words passed;—on Berg and Jülich nothing particular, that we hear;—and the High Personages, with assurances of everlasting friendship, said adieu; and met no more in this world. On his toilet-table Friedrich Wilhelm found a gold Tobacco-box, sent by the highest Lady extant; gold Tobacco-box, item gold Tobacco-stopper or Pipe-picker: such the parting gifts of her Imperial Majesty. Very precious indeed, and grateful to the honest heart;—yet testifying too (as was afterwards suggested to the royal mind) what these high people think of a rustic Orson King; and how they fling their nose into the air over his Tabagies and him.

On the morrow morning early, Friedrich Wilhelm rolls away again homewards, by Karlsbad, by Baireuth; all the cannon of Prag saying thrice, Good speed to him. "He has had "a glorious time," said the Berlin Court-lady to Queen Sophie one evening, "no end of kindness from the Imperial Majesties: "but has he brought Berg and Jülich in his pocket?"—Alas, not a fragment of them; nor of any solid thing whatever, except it be the gold Tobacco-box; and the confirmation of our claims on East-Friesland (cheap liberty to let us vindicate them if we can), if you reckon that a solid thing. These two Imperial gifts, such as they are, he has consciously brought back with him;—and perhaps, though as yet unconsciously, a third gift of much more value, once it is developed into clearness: some dim trace of insight into the no-meaning of these high people; and how they consider us as mere Orsons and wild Bisons, whom they will do the honour to consume as provision, if we behave well!

The great King Friedrich, now Crown-Prince at Ruppin, writing of this Journey long afterwards,—hastily, incorrectly, as his wont is, in regard to all manner of minute outward particulars; and somewhat maltreating, or at least misplacing even the inward meaning, which was well known to him without investigation, but which he is at no trouble to date for himself, and has dated at random,—says, in his thin rapid way, with much polished bitterness :

'His' (King Friedrich Wilhelm's) 'experience on this occasion served 'to prove that good-faith and the virtues, so contrary to the corruption 'of the age, do not succeed in it. Politicians have banished sincerity '(la candeur) into private life : they look upon themselves as raised quite 'above the laws which they enjoin on other people ; and give way with-'out reserve to the dictates of their own depraved mind.

'The guaranty of Jülich and Berg, which Seckendorf had formally 'promised in the name of the Emperor, went-off in smoke; and the 'Imperial Ministers were in a disposition so opposed to Prussia, the 'King saw clearly' (not for some years yet) 'that if there was a Court 'in Europe intending to cross his interests, it was certainly that of Vienna. 'This Visit of his to the Emperor was like that of Solon to Crœsus' (Solon not recognisable, in the grenadier costume, amid the tobacco-smoke, and dim accompaniments ?)—'and he returned to Berlin, rich 'still in his own virtue. The most punctilious censors could find no 'fault in his conduct, except a probity carried to excess. The Interview 'ended as those of Kings often do : it cooled' (not for some time yet), 'or, to say better, it extinguished the friendship there had been between 'the two Courts. Friedrich Wilhelm left Prag full of contempt' (dimly, altogether unconsciously, tending to have some contempt, and in the end to be full of it) 'for the deceitfulness and pride of the Imperial Court: 'and the Emperor's Ministers disdained a Sovereign who looked with-'out interest on frivolous ceremonials and precedences. Him they 'considered too ambitious in aiming at the Berg-and-Jülich succession : 'them he regarded' (came to regard) 'as a pack of knaves, who had 'broken their word, and were not punished for it.'

Very bitter, your Majesty; and, in all but the dates, true enough. But what a drop of concentrated absinth follows next, by way of finish,—which might itself have corrected the dating !

'In spite of so many subjects of discontent, the King wedded his 'Eldest Son' (my not too fortunate self), 'out of complaisance to the 'Vienna Court, with a Princess of Brunswick-Bevern, Niece to the 'Empress :'—bitter fact ; necessitating change of date in the paragraphs just written.[14]

Friedrich Wilhelm, good soul, cherishes the Imperial gifts, Tobacco-box included ;—claps the Arms of East-Friesland on his escutcheon ; will take possession of Friesland, if the present Duke die heirless, let George of England say what he will. And so he rolls homeward, by way of Baireuth. He staid but a short while in Karlsbad; has warned his Wilhelmina that he will be at Baireuth on the 9th of the month.[15]

[14] Œuvres de Frédéric (Mémoires de Brandebourg), i. 162, 163.

Wilhelmina is very poorly; "near her time," as wives say; rusticating in 'the Hermitage,' a Country-House in the vicinity of Baireuth; Husband and Father-in-law gone away, towards the Bohemian frontier, to hunt boars. O, the bustle and the bother that high Lady had; getting her little Country-House stretched out to the due pitch to accommodate everybody,—especially her foolish Sister of Anspach and foolish Brother-in-law and suite,—with whom, by negligence of servants and otherwise, there had like to have risen incurable quarrel on the matter. But the dextrous young Wife, gladdest, busiest and weakliest of hopeful creatures, contrived to manage everything, like a Female Fieldmarshal, as she was. Papa was delighted; bullied the foolish Anspach people,—or would have done so, had not I intervened, that the matter might die. Papa was gracious, happy; very anxious about me in my interesting state. "Thou hast lodged me to perfection, good Wilhelmina. Here "I find my wooden stools, tubs to wash in; all things as if I "were at Potsdam :—a good girl; and thou must take care of "thyself, my child (mein Kind)."

At dinner, his Majesty, dreading no ill, but intent only on the practical, got into a quiet, but to me most dreadful, lecture to the old Margraf (my Father-in-law) upon debt and money and arrears: How he, the Margraf, was cheated at every turn, and led-about by the nose, and kept weltering in debt: how he should let the young Margraf go into the Offices, to supervise, and withal to learn tax-matters and economics betimes. How he (Friedrich Wilhelm) would send him a fellow from Berlin who understood such things, and would drill his scoundrels for him! To which the old Margraf, somewhat flushed in the face, made some embarrassed assent, knowing it in fact to be true; and accepted the Berlin man :—but he made me (his poor Daughter-in-law) smart for it afterwards: "Not quite dead yet, Madam; you will have to wait a little!"—and other foolish speech; which required to be tempered-down again by a judicious female mind.

Grumkow himself was pleasant on this occasion; told us of Kladrup, the Prag etiquettes; and how he was like to go mad seeing his Majesty so humiliate himself. Fräulein Grumkow, a niece of his, belonging to the Austrian Court, who is over here with the rest, a satirical intriguing baggage, she, I privately perceive, has made a conquest of my foolish Brother-in-law, the Anspach Margraf here ;—and there will be jealousies, and a cat-and-dog life over yonder, worse than ever! Tush, why should we talk?—These are the phenomena at Baireuth ; Husband and Father-in-law having quitted their boat-hunt and hurried home.

[15] Wilhelmina, ii. 55.

14th Aug. 1732.

After three days, Friedrich Wilhelm rolled away again ; lodged, once more, at Meuselwitz, with abstruse Seckendorf, and his good old Wife, who do the hospitalities well when they must, in spite of the single candle once visible. On the morrow after which, 14th August 1732, his Majesty is off again, 'at four in the morning,' towards Leipzig, intending to be home that night, though it is a long drive. At Leipzig, not to waste time, he declines entering the Town ; positively will not, though the cannon-salvos are booming all round ;—'breakfasts in the 'suburbs, with a certain Horse-dealer (Ross-Händler) now de-'ceased :' a respectable Centaur, capable, no doubt, of bargaining a little about cavalry mountings, while one eats, with appetite and at one's ease. Which done, Majesty darts-off again, the cannon-salvos booming-out a second time ;—and by assiduous driving gets home to Potsdam about eight at night. And so has happily ended this Journey to Kladrup.[16]

CHAPTER V.

GHOST OF THE DOUBLE-MARRIAGE RISES ; TO NO PURPOSE.

We little expected to see the "Double-Marriage" start-up into vitality again, at this advanced stage ; or, of all men, Seckendorf, after riding 25,000 miles to kill the Double-Marriage, engaged in resuscitating it! But so it is : by endless intriguing, matchless in History or Romance, the Austrian Court had, at such expense to the parties and to itself, achieved the first problem of stifling the harmless Double-Marriage ; and now, the wind having changed, it is actually trying its hand the opposite way.

[16] Fassmann, pp. 474-479 ; Wilhelmina, ii. 46-55 ; Pöllnitz, ii. 407-412 ; Förster, i 328-334.

Wind is changed: consummate Robinson has managed to do his thrice-salutary 'Treaty of Vienna;'[1] to clout-up all differences between the Sea-Powers and the Kaiser, and restore the old Law of Nature,—Kaiser to fight the French, Sea-Powers to feed and pay him while engaged in that necessary job. And now it would be gratifying to the Kaiser, if there remained, on this side of the matter, no rent anywhere, if between his chief Sea ally and his chief Land one, the Britannic Majesty and the Prussian, there prevailed a complete understanding, with no grudge left.

The honour of this fine resuscitation project is ascribed to Robinson by the Vienna people: "Robinson's suggestion," they always say: how far it was, or whether at all it was or not, nobody at present knows. Guess rather, if necessary, it had been the Kaiser's own! Robinson, as the thing proceeds, is instructed from St. James's to 'look on and not interfere;'[2] Prince Eugene, too, we can observe, is privately against it, though officially urgent, and doing his best. Who knows, —or need know?

Enough that High Heads are set upon it; that the diplomatic wigs are all wagging with it, from about the beginning of October 1732; and rumours are rife and eager, occasionally spurting-out into the Newspapers: Double-Marriage after all, hint the old Rumours: Double-Marriage somehow or other; Crown-Prince to have his English Princess, Prince Fred of England to console the Brunswick one for loss of her Crown-Prince; or else Prince Karl of Brunswick to— And half-a-dozen other ways; which Rumour cannot settle to its satisfaction. The whispers upon it, from Hanover, from Vienna, at Berlin, and from the Diplomatic world in general, occasionally whistling through the Newspapers, are manifold and incessant,—not worthy of the least attention from us here.[3] What is certain is, Seckendorf, in the end of October, is corresponding on it with Prince Eugene; has got instructions to propose the matter in Tobacco-Parliament; and does not like it at all. Grumkow, who perhaps has seen dangerous clouds threatening to mount upon him, and never been quite himself again in the Royal Mind since that questionable Nosti business, dissuades earnestly, constantly. "Nothing but mischief will come of such a proposal," says Grumkow steadily; and for his own share absolutely declines concern in it.

[1] 16th March 1731, the tail of it (accession of the Dutch, of Spain, &c.) not quite coiled-up till 20th February 1732: Schöll, i. 218-222.
[2] Despatches, in State-Paper Office. [3] Förster, iii. 111, 120, 108, 113, 122.

5th Dec. 1732.

But Prince Eugene's orders are express; remonstrances, cunctations only strengthen the determination of the High Heads or Head: Forward with this beautiful scheme! Seckendorf, puckered into dangerous anxieties, but summoning all his cunning, has at length, after six-weeks hesitation, to open it, as if casually, in some favourable hour, to his Prussian Majesty. December 5th, 1732, as we compute;—a kind of epoch in his Majesty's life. Prussian Majesty stares wide-eyed; the breath as if struck-out of him; repeats, "Jülich and Berg absolutely secured, say you? But—hm, na!"—and has not yet taken-in the unspeakable dimensions of the occurrence. "What? Imperial Majesty will make me break my word before all the world? Imperial Majesty has been whirling me about, face now to the east, face straightway round to the west: Imperial Majesty does not feel that I am a man and king at all; takes me for a mere machine, to be seesawed and whirled hither and thither, like a rotatory Clothes-horse, to dry his Imperial Majesty's linen upon. Tausend Himmel—!—"

The full dimensions of all this did not rise clear upon the intellect of Prussian Majesty,—a slow intellect, but a true and deep, with terrible earthquakes and poetic fires lying under it,—not at once, or for months, perhaps years to come. But they had begun to dawn upon him painfully here; they rose gradually into perfect clearness: all things seen at last as what they were;—with huge submarine earthquake for consequence, and total change of mind towards Imperial Majesty and the drying of his Pragmatic linen, in Friedrich Wilhelm. Amiable Orson, true to the heart; amiable, though terrible when too much put-upon!

This dawning process went on for above two years to come, painfully, reluctantly, with explosions, even with tears. But here, directly on the back of Seckendorf's proposal, and recorded from a sure hand, is what we may call the peep-of-day in that matter: First Session of Tobacco-Parliament, close after that event. Event is on the 5th December 1732; Tobacco Session is of the 6th;—glimpse of it is given by Speaker Grumkow himself; authentic to the bone.

Session of Tobacco-Parliament, 6th December 1732.

Grumkow, shattered into 'headache' by this Session, writes Report of it to Seckendorf before going to bed. Look, reader, into one of the strangest Political Establishments; and how a strange Majesty comports himself there, directly after such proposal from Vienna to marry with England still!—'Schwerin' is incidentally in from Frankfurt-on-Oder, where his Regiment and business usually lie: the other Honourable Members we sufficiently know. Majesty has been a little out of health lately; perceptibly worse the last two days. 'Syberg' is a Gold-cook (Alchemical gentleman, of very high professions), came to Berlin some time ago; whom his Majesty, after due investigation, took the liberty to hang.[4] Readers can now understand what Speaker Grumkow writes, and dispatches by his lackey, in such haste:

'I never saw such a scene as this evening. Derschau, Schwerin, 'Buddenbrock, Rochow, Flanz were present. We had been about an 'hour in the Red Room' (languidly doing our tobacco off and on), 'when he' (the King) 'had us shifted into the Little Room: drove-out 'the servants; and cried, looking fixedly at me: "No, I cannot endure 'it any longer! Es stosset mir das Herz ab," cried he, breaking into 'German: "It crushes the heart out of me; to make me do a bit of 'scoundrelism, me, me! No, I say; no, never! Those damned intrigues; 'may the Devil take them!"—

'Ego (Grumkow). "Of course, I know of nothing. But I do not 'comprehend your Majesty's inquietude, coming thus on the sudden, 'after our common indifferent mood."

'King. "What, make me a villain! I will tell it right out. Cer-'tain damned scoundrels have been about betraying me. People that 'should have known me better have been trying to lead me into a dis-'honourable scrape"—('Here I called-in the hounds, Je rompis les 'chiens,' reports Grumkow, 'for he was going to blab everything; I 'interrupted, saying):

'Ego. "But, your Majesty, what is it ruffles you so? I know not 'what you talk of. Your Majesty has honourable people about you; 'and the man who lets himself be employed in things against your 'Majesty must be a traitor."

'King. "Yes, ja, ja. I will do things that will surprise them. 'I"—

'And, in short, a torrent of exclamations: which I strove to soften 'by all manner of incidents and contrivances; succeeding at last,'—by dexterity and time (but, at this point, the light is now blown out, and we see no more) :—'so that he grew quite calm again, and the rest of 'the evening passed gently enough.

[4] Förster, iii. 126.

6th Dec. 1732.

'Well, you see what the effect of your fine Proposal is, which you 'said he would like! I can tell you, it is the most detestable incident 'that could have turned up. I know, you had your orders: but you 'may believe and depend on it, he has got his heart driven rabid by the 'business, and says, "Who knows now whether that villain Syberg" 'Gold-cook, that was hanged the other day, "was not set-on by some 'people to poison me?" In a word, he was like a madman.

'What struck me most was when he repeated, "Only think! 'Think! Who would have expected it of people that should have 'known me; and whom I know, and have known, better than they 'fancy!"'—Pleasant passage for Seckendorf to chew the cud upon, through the night-watches!

'In fine, as I was somewhat confused; and anxious, above all, to 'keep him from exploding with the secret, I cannot remember every-'thing. But Derschau, who was more at his ease, will be able to give 'you a full account. He' (the King) 'said more than once: "This 'was his sickness; the thing that ailed him, this: it gnawed his heart, 'and would be the death of him!" He certainly did not affect; he was 'in a very convulsive condition.'—(Jarni-bleu, here is a piece of work, Herr Seckendorf!)—'Adieu, I have a headache.' Whereupon to bed. —'GRUMKOW.'[5]

This Hansard Report went-off direct to Prince Eugene; and ought to have been a warning to the high Vienna heads and him. But they persisted not the less to please Robinson or themselves; considering his Prussian Majesty to be, in fact, a mere rotatory Clothes-horse for drying the Imperial linen on; and to have no intellect at all, because he was without guile, and had no vulpinism at all. In which they were very much mistaken indeed. History is proud to report that the guileless Prussian Majesty, steadily attending to his own affairs in a wise manner, though hoodwinked and led-about by Black-Artists as he had been, turned-out when Fact and Nature subsequently pronounced upon it, to have had more intellect than the whole of them together,—to have been, in a manner, the only one of them that had any real 'intellect,' or insight into Fact and Nature, at all. Consummate Black-art Diplomacies overnetting the Universe, went entirely to water, running down the gutters to the last drop; and a prosperous Drilled Prussia, compact, organic in every part, from diligent plough-sock to shining bayonet and iron ramrod, remained standing. "A full Treasury and 200,000

[5] Förster, iii. 135, 136.

"well-drilled men would be the one guarantee to your Prag-"matic Sanction," Prince Eugene had said. But that bit of insight was not accepted at Vienna; Black-art, and Diplomatic spider-webs from pole to pole, being thought the preferable method.

Enough, Seckendorf was ordered to manipulate and soothe-down the Prussian Majesty, as surely would be easy; to continue his galvanic operations on the Double-Match, or produce a rotation in the purposes of the royal breast. Which he diligently strove to do, when once admitted to speech again;—Grumkow steadily declining to meddle, and only Queen Sophie, as we can fancy, auguring joyfully of it. Seckendorf, admitted to speech the third day after that explosive Session, snuffles his softest, his cunningest;—continues to ride diligently, the concluding portion (such it proved) of his 25,000 miles with the Prussian Majesty up and down through winter and spring; but makes not the least progress, the reverse rather.

Their dialogues and arguings on the matter, here and elsewhere, are lost in air; or gone wholly to a single point unexpectedly preserved for us. One day, riding through some village, Priort some say his Majesty calls it, some give another name,—advocate Seckendorf, in the fervour of pleading and arguing, said some word, which went like a sudden flash of lightning through the dark places of his Majesty's mind, and never would go out of it again while he lived after. In passionate moments, his Majesty spoke of it sometimes, a clangorous pathos in his tones, as of a thing hideous, horrible, never to be forgotten, which had killed him,—death from a friend's hand. "It was the "17th of April 1733,[6] riding through Priort, a man said some-"thing to me: it was as if you had turned a dagger about in "my heart. That man was he that killed me; there and 'then I got my death!"

A strange passion in that utterance: the deep dumb soul of his Majesty, of dumb-poetic nature, suddenly brought to a fatal clearness about certain things. "Oh Kaiser, Kaiser of the Holy Roman Empire; and this is your return for my loyal faith in you? I had nearly killed my Fritz, my Wilhelmina, [6] All the Books (Förster, ii. 142, for one) mention this utterance of his Majesty, on what occasion we shall see farther on; and give the date '1732,' not 1733: but except as amended above, it refuses to have any sense visible at this distance. The Village of Priort is in the Potsdam region.

10th Jan. 1733.

broken my Feekin's heart and my own, and reduced the world to ruins for your sake. And because I was of faith more than human, you took me for a dog? Oh Kaiser, Kaiser!"—Poor Friedrich Wilhelm, he spoke of this often, in excited moments, in his later years; the tears running down his cheeks, and the whole man melted into tragic emotion: but if Fritz were there, the precious Fritz whom he had almost killed for their sake, he would say, flashing out into proud rage, "There is one that will avenge me, though; that one! Da steht Einer, der mich rächen wird!"[7] Yes, your Majesty; perhaps that one. And it will be seen whether you were a rotatory Clothes-horse to dry their Pragmatic linen upon, or something different a good deal.

CHAPTER VI.

KING AUGUST MEDITATING GREAT THINGS FOR POLAND.

In the Newyear's days of 1733, the topic among diplomatic gentlemen, which set many big wigs wagging, and even tremulously came out in the gray leaves of gazetteers and garreteers of the period, was a royal drama, dimly supposed to be getting itself up in Poland at this time. Nothing known about it for certain; much guessed. "Something in the rumour!" nods this wig; "Nothing!" wags that, slightly oscillating; and gazetteers, who would earn their wages, and have a peck of coals apiece to glad them in the cold weather, had to watch with all eagerness the movements of King August, our poor old friend, the Dilapidated-Strong, who is in Saxony at present; but bound for Warsaw shortly,—just about lifting the curtain on important events, it is thought and not thought. Here are the certainties of it, now clear enough, so far as they deserve a glance from us.

January 10th, 1733, August the Dilapidated-Strong of Poland has been in Saxony, looking after his poor Electorate a little; and is on the road from Dresden homewards again;—will cross a corner of the Prussian Dominions, as his wont is on such occasions. Prussian Majesty, if not appearing in person, will as usual, by some Official of rank, send a polite Well speed-you as the brother Majesty passes. This time, however it was more than politeness; the Polish Majesty having, as was thought, such intricate affairs in the wind. Let Grumkow, the fittest man in all ways, go, and do the greeting to his old Patroon: greeting, or whatever else may be needed.

[7] Förster, ii. 153.

Patroon left Dresden,—'having just opened the Carnival' or fashionable Season there, opened and nothing more,—January 10th, 1733;[1] being in haste home for a Polish Diet close at hand. On which same day Grumkow, we suppose, drives forth from Berlin, to intersect him, in the Neumark, about Crossen; and have a friendly word again, in those localities, over jolly wine. Intersection took place duly;—there was exuberant joy on the part of the Patroon; and such a dinner and night of drinking, as has seldom been. Abstruse things lie close ahead of August the Dilapidated-Strong, important to Prussia, and for which Prussia is important; let Grumkow try if he can fish the matter into clearness out of these wine-cups. And then August, on his side, wishes to know what the Kaiser said at Kladrup lately; there is much to be fished into clearness.

Many are the times August the Strong has made this journey; many are the carousals, on such and other occasions, Grumkow and he have had. But there comes an end to all things. This was their last meeting, over flowing liquor or otherwise, in the world. Satirical History says, they drank all night, endeavouring to pump one another, and with such enthusiasm that they never recovered it; drank themselves to death at Crossen on that occasion.[2] It is certain August died within three weeks; and people said of Grumkow, who lived six years longer, he was never well after this bout. Is it worth any human creature's while to look into the plans of this precious pair of individuals? Without the least expense of drinking, the secrets they were pumping out of each other are now accessible enough,—if it were of importance now. One glance I may perhaps commend to the reader, out of these multifarious Notebooks in my possession:

'August, by change of his religion, and other sad operations, got 'to be what they called the King of Poland, thirty-five years ago; but, 'though looking glorious to the idle public, it has been a crown of 'stinging-nettles to the poor man,—a sedan-chair running on rapidly, 'with the bottom broken out! To say nothing of the scourgings he 'got, and poor Saxony along with him, from Charles XII., on account

[1] Fassmann, Leben Friedrich Augusti des Grossen, p. 994.
[2] Œuvres de Frédéric (Mémoires de Brandebourg), i. 163.

11th Jan. 1733.

'of this Sovereignty so-called, what has the thing itself been to him? 'In Poland, for these thirty-five years, the individual who had least of 'his real will done in public matters has been, with infinite manage- 'ment, and display of such goodhumour as at least deserves credit, the 'nominal Sovereign Majesty of Poland. Anarchic Grandees have been 'kings over him; ambitious, contentious, unmanageable;—very fanati- 'cal too, and never persuaded that August's Apostasy was more than 'a sham one, not even when he made his Prince apostatise too. Their 'Sovereignty has been a mere peck of troubles, disgraces and vexations: 'for those thirty-five years, an ever-boiling pot of mutiny, contradiction, 'insolence, hardly tolerable even to such nerves as August's.

'August, for a long time back, has been thinking of schemes to 'clap some lid upon all that. To make the Sovereignty hereditary in 'his House: that, with the good Saxon troops we have, would be a 'remedy;—and in fact it is the only remedy. John Casimir (who ab- 'dicated long ago, in the Great Elector's time, and went to Paris,— 'much charmed with Ninon de l'Enclos there) told the Polish Diets, 'With their liberum veto, and "right of confederation" and rebellion, 'they would bring the country down under the feet of mankind, and 'reduce their Republic to zero one day, if they persisted. They have 'not failed to persist. With some hereditary King over it, and a re- 'gulated Saxony to lean upon: truly might it not be a change to the 'better? To the worse, it could hardly be, thinks August the Strong; 'and goes intent upon that method, this long while back;—and at 'length hopes now, in few days longer, at the Diet just assembling, to 'see fruits appear, and the thing actually begin.

'The difficulties truly are many; internal and external:—but there 'are calculated methods, too. For the internal: Get-up, by bribery, 'persuasion, some visible minority to countenance you; with these 'manœuvre in the Diets; on the back of these, the 30,000 Saxon troops. 'But then what will the neighbouring Kings say? The neighbouring 'Kings, with their big-mouthed manifestos, pities for an oppressed 'Republic, overwhelming forces, and invitations to "confederate" and 'revolt: without their tolerance first had, nothing can be done. That 'is the external difficulty. For which too there is a remedy. Cut-off 'sufficient outlying slices of Poland; fling these to the neighbouring 'Kings to produce consent: Partition of Poland, in fact; large sections 'of its Territory sliced away: that will be the method, thinks King 'August.

'Neighbouring Kings, Kaiser, Prussia, Russia, to them it is not 'grievous that Poland should remain in perennial anarchy, in perennial 'impotence; the reverse rather: a dead horse, or a dying, in the next stall,—he at least will not kick upon us, think the neighbouring 'Kings. And yet,—under another similitude,—you do not like your 'next-door neighbour to be always on the point of catching fire; smoke 'issuing, thicker or thinner, through the slates of his roof, as a per- 'ennial phenomenon? August will conciliate the neighbouring Kings.

'Russia, big-cheeked Anne Czarina there, shall have not only Courland 'peaceably henceforth, but the Ukraine, Lithuania, and other large out-'lying slices; that surely will conciliate Russia. To Austria, on its 'Hungarian border, let us give the Country of Zips;—nay there are 'other sops we have for Austria. Pragmatic Sanction, hitherto refused 'as contrary to plain rights of ours,—that, if conceded to a spectre-'hunting Kaiser? To Friedrich Wilhelm we could give West-Preussen; 'West-Preussen torn-away three hundred years ago, and leaving a 'hiatus in the very continuity of Friedrich Wilhelm: would not that 'conciliate him? Of all enemies or friends, Friedrich Wilhelm, close 'at hand with 80,000 men capable of fighting at a week's notice, is by 'far the most important.

'These are August's plans: West-Preussen for the nearest Neigh-'bour; Zips for Austria; Ukraine, Lithuania, and appendages for the 'Russian Czarina: handsome Sections to be sliced off, and flung to 'good neighbours; as it were, all the outlying limbs and wings of the 'Polish Territory sliced off; compact body to remain, and become, by 'means of August and Saxon troops, a Kingdom with government, not 'an imaginary Republic without government any longer. In fact, it 'was the "Partition of Poland," such as took effect forty years after, 'and has kept the Newspapers weeping ever since. Partition of Poland, '—minus the compact interior held under government, by a King with 'Saxon troops or otherwise. Compact interior, in that effective par-'tition, forty years after, was left as anarchic as ever; and had to be 'again partitioned, and cut-away altogether,—with new torrents of 'loud tears from the Newspapers, refusing to be comforted to this day.

'It is not said that Friedrich Wilhelm had the least intention of 'countenancing August in these dangerous operations, still less of 'going shares with August; but he wished much, through Grumkow, 'to have some glimpse into the dim program of them; and August 'wished much to know Friedrich Wilhelm's and Grumkow's humour 'towards them. Grumkow and August drank copiously, or copiously pressed drink on one another, all night (11th-12th January 1733, as I 'compute; some say at Crossen, some say at Frauendorf a royal do-'main near by), with the view of mutually fishing-out those secrets;—'and killed one another in the business, as is rumoured.'

What were Grumkow's news at home-coming, I did not hear; but he continues very low and shaky;—refuses, almost with horror, to have the least hand in Seckendorf's mad project of resuscitating the English Double-Marriage, and breaking-off the Brunswick one, at the eleventh hour and after word pledged. Seckendorf himself continues to dislike and dissuade: but the High Heads at Vienna are bent on it; and command new strenuous attempts;—literally at the last moment; which is now come.

CHAPTER VII.

CROWN-PRINCE'S MARRIAGE.

SINCE November last, Wilhelmina is on visit at Berlin,—first visit since her marriage;—she stays there for almost ten months; not under the happiest auspices, poor child. Mamma's reception of her, just off the long winter journey, and extenuated with fatigues and sickly chagrins, was of the most cutting cruelty: "What do you want here? What is a mendicant like you come hither for?" And next night, when Papa himself came home, it was little better. "Ha, ha," said he, "here you are; I am glad to see you." Then holding-up a light, to take view of me: "How changed you are!" said he: "What is little Frederika" (my little Baby at Baireuth) "doing?" And on my answering, continued: "I am sorry for you, on my "word. You have not bread to eat; and but for me you "might go begging. I am a poor man myself, not able to "give you much; but I will do what I can. I will give you "now and then a twenty or a thirty shillings (par dix ou douze "florins), as my affairs permit: it will always be something "to assuage your want. And you, Madam," said he, turning to the Queen, "You will sometimes give her an old dress; for "the poor child hasn't a shift to her back."[1] This rugged paternal banter was taken too literally by Wilhelmina, in her weak state; and she was like 'to burst in her skin,' poor Princess.

So that,—except her own good Hereditary Prince, who was here, 'over from Pasewalk' and his regimental duties, waiting to welcome her; in whose true heart, full of honest human sunshine towards her, she could always find shelter and defence,—native Country and Court offer little to the brave Wilhelmina. Chagrins enough are here: chagrins also were there. At Baireuth our old Father Margraf has his crotchets, his infirmities and outbreaks; takes more and more to liquor; and does always keep us frightfully bare in money. No help from Papa here, either, on the finance side; no real hope anywhere (thinks Seckendorf, when we consult him), except only in the Margraf's death: "old Margraf will soon drink himself dead," thinks Seckendorf; "and in the mean while there is Vienna, and a noble Kaiserinn who knows her friends in case of extremity!" thinks he.[2] Poor Princess, in her weak shattered state, she has a heavy time of it; but there is a tough spirit in her; bright, sharp, like a swift sabre, not to be quenched in any coil; but always cutting its way, and emerging unsubdued.

[1] Wilhelmina, ii. 85.

One of the blessings reserved for her here, which most of all concerns us, was the occasional sight of her Brother. Brother in a day or two[3] ran over from Ruppin, on short leave, and had his first interview. Very kind and affectionate; quite the old Brother again; and 'blushed' when, at supper, Mamma and the Princesses, especially that wicked Charlotte (Papa not present), tore-up his poor Bride at such a rate. "Has not a word to answer you, but Yes or No," said they; "stupid as a block." "But were you ever at her toilette?" said the wicked Charlotte: "Out of shape, completely: considerable waddings, I promise you: and then"—still worse features, from that wicked Charlotte, in presence of the domestics here. Wicked Charlotte; who is to be her Sister-in-law soon;—and who is always flirting with my Husband, as if she liked that better! —Crown-Prince retired, directly after supper; as did I, to my apartment, where in a minute or two he joined me.

'To the question, How with the King and you? he answered, '"That his situation was changing every moment; that sometimes he 'was in favour, sometimes in disgrace;—that his chief happiness con-'sisted in absence. That he led a soft and tranquil life with his Regi-'ment at Ruppin; study and music his principal occupations; he had 'built himself a House there, and laid-out a Garden, where he could 'read, and walk about." Then as to his Bride, I begged him to tell 'me candidly if the portrait the Queen and my Sister had been making 'of her was the true one. "We are alone," replied he, 'and I will 'conceal nothing from you. The Queen, by her miserable intrigues, 'has been the source of our misfortunes. Scarcely were you gone 'when she began again with England; wished to substitute our Sister 'Charlotte for you; would have had me undertake to contradict the 'King's will again, and flatly refuse the Brunswick Match;—which I 'declined. That is the source of her venom against this poor Princess. 'As to the young Lady herself, I do not hate her so much as I pretend; 'I affect complete dislike, that the King may value my obedience more. 'She is pretty, a complexion lily-and-rose; her features delicate; face

[2] Wilhelmina, ii. 81-111.

[3] '18th November,' she says; which date is wrong, if it were of moment (see Œuvres de Frédéric, xxvii. part 1st, where their Correspondence is).

8th June 1733.

'altogether of a beautiful person. True, she has no breeding, and 'dresses very ill: but I flatter myself, when she comes hither, you will 'have the goodness to take her in hand. I recommend her to you, 'my dear Sister; and beg your protection for her." It is easy to judge, 'my answer would be such as he desired.'[4]

For which small glimpse of the fact itself, at first-hand, across a whirlwind of distracted rumours new and old about the fact, let us be thankful to Wilhelmina. Seckendorf's hopeless attempts to resuscitate extinct English things, and make the Prussian Majesty break his word, continue to the very last; but are worth no notice from us. Grumkow's Drinking-bout with the Dilapidated-Strong at Crossen, which follows now in January, has been already noticed by us. And the Dilapidated-Strong's farewell next morning. "Adieu, dear Grumkow; I think I shall not see you again!" as he rolled-off towards Warsaw and the Diet,—will require farther notice; but must stand-over till this Marriage be got done. Of which latter Event,—Wilhelmina once more kindling the old dark Books into some light for us,—the essential particulars are briefly as follows.

Monday 8th June 1733, the Crown-Prince is again over from Ruppin: King, Queen and Crown-Prince are rendezvoused at Potsdam; and they set-off with due retinues towards Wolfenbüttel, towards Salzdahlum the Ducal Schloss there; Sister Wilhelmina sending blessings, if she had them, on a poor Brother in such interesting circumstances. Mamma was 'plunged in black melancholy;' King not the least; in the Crown-Prince nothing particular to be remarked. They reached Salzdahlum, Duke Ludwig Rudolf the Grandfather's Palace,—one of the finest Palaces, with Gardens, with Antiques, with Picture-Galleries no-end; a mile or two from Wolfenbüttel; built by old Anton Ulrich, and still the ornament of those parts:—reached Salzdahlum, Wednesday the 10th; where Bride, with Father, Mother, much more Grandfather, Grandmother, and all the sublimities interested, are waiting in the highest gala; Wedding to be on Friday next.

Friday morning, this incident fell out, notable and somewhat contemptible: Seckendorf, who is of the retinue, following his bad trade, visits his Majesty who is still in bed:—"Pardon, your Majesty: what shall I say for excuse? Here is a Letter just come from Vienna; in Prince Eugene's hand;—Prince Eugene, or a Higher, will say something, while it is still time!" Majesty, not in impatience, reads the little Prince's and the Kaiser's Letter. "Give-up this, we entreat you for the last time; marry with England after all!" Majesty reads, quiet as a lamb; lays the Letter under his pillow; will himself answer it;—and does straightway, with much simple dignity, to the effect, "For certain, Never, my always respected Prince!"[5] Seckendorf, having thus shot his last bolt, does not stay many hours longer at Salzdahlum;—may as well quit Friedrich Wilhelm altogether, for any good he will henceforth do upon him. This is the one incident between the Arrival at Salzdahlum and the Wedding there.

[4] Wilhelmina, ii. 89.

Same Friday 12th June 1733, at a more advanced hour, the Wedding itself took effect; Wedding which, in spite of the mad rumours and whispers, in the Newspapers, Diplomatic Despatches and elsewhere, went off, in all respects, precisely as other weddings do; a quite human Wedding now and afterwards. Officiating Clergyman was the Reverend Herr Mosheim: readers know with approval the Ecclesiastical History of Mosheim: he, in the beautiful Chapel of the Schloss, with Majesties and Brunswick Sublimities looking on, performed the ceremony: and Crown-Prince Friedrich of Prussia has fairly wedded the Serene Princess Elizabeth Christina of Brunswick-Bevern, age eighteen coming, manners rather awkward, complexion lily-and-rose;—and History is right glad to have done with the wearisome affair, and know it settled on any tolerable terms whatever. Here is a Note of Friedrich's to his dear Sister, which has been preserved:

To Princess Wilhelmina of Baireuth, at Berlin.

'Salzdahlum, Noon, 12th June 1733.

'My dear Sister,—A minute since, the whole Ceremony was got 'finished; and God be praised it is over! I hope you will take it as 'a mark of my friendship that I give you the first news of it.

'I hope I shall have the honour to see you again soon; and to as-'sure you, my dear Sister, that I am wholly yours (tout à vous). I 'write in great haste; and add nothing that is merely formal. Adieu.[6]

'FRÉDÉRIC.'

[5] Account of the Interview by Seckendorf, in Förster, iii. 143-155; Copy of the Answer itself is in the State-Paper Office here.

[6] Œuvres, xxvii. part 1st, p. 9.

One Keyserling, the Prince's favourite gentleman, came over express, with this Letter and the more private news; Wilhelmina being full of anxieties. Keyserling said, The Prince was inwardly 'well content with his lot; though he had kept-'up the old farce to the last; and pretended to be in frightful 'humour, on the very morning; bursting-out upon his valets 'in the King's presence, who reproved him, and looked rather 'pensive,'—recognising, one hopes, what a sacrifice it was. The Queen's Majesty, Keyserling reported, 'was charmed with 'the style and ways of the Brunswick Court; but could not 'endure the Princess-Royal' (new Wife), 'and treated the two 'Duchesses like dogs (comme des chiens).'[7] Reverend Abbot Mosheim (such his title; Head Churchman, theological chief of Helmstädt University in those parts, with a couple of extinct little Abbacies near by, to help his stipend) preached next Sunday, 'On the Marriage of the Righteous,'—felicitous appropriate Sermon, said a grateful public;[8]—and in short, at Salzdahlum all goes, if not as merry as some marriage-bells, yet without jarring to the ear.

On Tuesday, both the Majesties set-out towards Potsdam again; 'where his Majesty,' having business waiting, 'arrived some time before the Queen.' Thither also, before the week ends, Crown-Prince Friedrich with his Bride, and all the Serenities of Brunswick escorting, are upon the road,—duly detained by complimentary harangues, tedious scenic evolutions at Magdeburg and the intervening Towns;—grand entrance of the Princess-Royal into Berlin is not till the 27th, last day of the week following. That was such a day as Wilhelmina never saw; no sleep the night before; no breakfast can one taste: between Charlottenburg and Berlin, there is a review of unexampled splendour; 'above eighty carriages of us,' and only a tent or two against the flaming June sun: think of it! Review begins at four A.M.;—poor Wilhelmina thought she would verily have died, of heat and thirst and hunger, in the crowded tent, under the flaming June sun; before the Review could end itself, and march into Berlin, trumpeting and salvoing, with the Princess-Royal at the head of it.[9]

Of which grand flaming day, and of the unexampled balls and effulgent festivities that followed, 'all Berlin ruining itself

[7] Wilhelmina, ii. 114.
[8] Text, Psalm xcii. 12; 'Sermon printed in Mosheim's Works.'
[9] Wilhelmina, ii. 127-129.

in dresses and equipages,' we will say nothing farther; but give only, what may still have some significance for readers, Wilhelmina's Portrait of the Princess-Royal on their first meeting, which had taken place at Potsdam two days before. The Princess-Royal had arrived at Potsdam too, on that occasion, across a grand Review; Majesty himself riding out, Majesty and Crown-Prince, who had preceded her a little, to usher-in the poor young creature;—Thursday June 25th 1733:

'The King led her into the Queen's Apartment; then seeing, after 'she had saluted us all, that she was much heated and dispowdered '(dépoudrée), he bade my Brother take her to her own room. I followed 'them thither. My Brother said to her, introducing me: "This is a 'Sister I adore, and am obliged to beyond measure. She has had the 'goodness to promise me that she will take care of you, and help you 'with her good counsel; I wish you to respect her beyond even the King 'and Queen, and not to take the least step without her advice: do you 'understand?" I embraced the Princess-Royal, and gave her every 'assurance of my attachment; but she remained like a statue, not ans-'wering a word. Her people not being come, I repowdered her myself, 'and readjusted her dress a little, without the least sign of thanks from 'her, or any answer to all my caressings. My Brother got impatient at 'last; and said aloud: "Devil's in the blockhead (Peste soit de la bête): 'thank my Sister, then!" She made me a curtsy, on the model of that 'of Agnès in the École des Femmes. I took her back to the Queen's 'Apartment; little edified by such a display of talent.

'The Princess-Royal is tall; her figure is not fine: stooping slightly, 'or hanging forward, as she walks or stands, which gives her an awk-'ward air. Her complexion is of dazzling whiteness, heightened by the 'liveliest colours: her eyes are pale blue, and not of much promise for 'spiritual gifts. Mouth small; features generally small,—dainty (mig-'nons) rather than beautiful:—and the countenance altogether is so 'innocent and infantine, you would think this head belonged to a child 'of twelve. Her hair is blond, plentiful, curling in natural locks. 'Teeth are unhappily very bad, black and ill-set; which are a disfigure-'ment in this fine face. She has no manners, nor the least vestige of 'tact; has much difficulty in speaking, and making herself understood: 'for most part you are obliged to guess what she means; which is very 'embarrassing.'[10]

The Berlin gaieties,—for Karl, Heir-Apparent of Brunswick, brother to this Princess-Royal, wedded his Charlotte, too, about a week hence,[11]—did not end, and the serene Guests disappear, till far on in July. After which an Inspection with Papa; and then Friedrich got back to Ruppin and his old way of life there. Intrinsically the old studious, quietly diligent way of life; varied by more frequent excursions to Berlin;—where as yet the Princess-Royal usually resides, till some fit residence be got ready in the Ruppin Country for a wedded Crown-Prince and her.

[10] Wilhelmina, ii. 119-121.

[11] 2d July 1733.

The young Wife had an honest guileless heart; if little articulate intellect, considerable inarticulate sense; did not fail to learn tact, perpendicular attitude, speech enough;—and I hope kept well clear of pouting (faire la fâchée), a much more dangerous rock for her. With the gay temper of eighteen, and her native loyalty of mind, she seems to have shaped herself successfully to the Prince's taste; and growing yearly gracefuler and better-looking, was an ornament and pleasant addition to his Ruppin existence. These first seven years, spent at Berlin or in the Ruppin quarter, she always regarded as the flower of her life.[12]

Papa, according to promise, has faithfully provided a Crown-Prince Palace at Berlin; all trimmed and furnished, for occasional residences there; the late 'Government House' (originally Schomberg House), new-built,—which is, to this day, one of the distinguished Palaces of Berlin. Princess-Royal had Schönhausen given her; a pleasant Royal Mansion some miles out of Berlin, on the Ruppin side. Furthermore, the Prince-Royal, being now a wedded man, has, as is customary in such case, a special Amt (Government District) set apart for his support; the "Amt of Ruppin," where his business lies. What the exact revenues of Ruppin are, is not communicated; but we can justly fear they were far too frugal,—and excused the underhand borrowing, which is evident enough as a painful shadow in the Prince's life henceforth. He does not seem to have been wasteful; but he borrows all round, under sevenfold secrecy, from benevolent Courts, from Austria, Russia, England: and the only pleasant certainty we notice in such painful business is, that, on his Accession, he pays with exactitude,—sends his Uncle George of England, for example, the complete amount in rouleaus of new coin, by the first courier that goes.[13]

A thought too frugal, his Prussian Majesty: but he means to be kind, bountiful; and occasionally launches-out into handsome munificence. This very Autumn, hearing that the Crown-Prince and his Princess fancied Reinsberg, an old Castle in their Amt Ruppin, some miles north of them,—his Majesty, without word spoken, straightway purchased Reinsberg, Schloss and Territory, from the owner; gave it to his Crown-Prince, and gave him money to new-build it according to his mind.[14] Which the Crown-Prince did with much interest, under very wise architectural advice, for the next three years; then went into it, to reside;—yet did not cease new-building, improving, artistically adorning, till it became in all points the image of his taste.

[12] Büsching (Autobiography, Beyträge, vi.) heard her say so, in advanced years.
[13] Despatch (of adjacent date) in the State-Paper Office here.

A really handsome princely kind of residence, that of Reinsberg:—got-up with a thrift that most of all astonishes us. In which improved locality we shall by and by look in upon him again. For the present we must to Warsaw, where tragedies and troubles are in the wind, which turn out to be not quite without importance to the Crown-Prince and us.

CHAPTER VIII.

KING AUGUST DIES; AND POLAND TAKES FIRE.

MEANWHILE, over at Warsaw, there has an Event fallen out. Friedrich, writing rapidly from vague reminiscence, as he often does, records it as 'during the marriage festivities;'[1] but it was four good months earlier. Event we must now look at for a moment.

In the end of January last, we left Grumkow in a low and hypochondriacal state, much shaken by that drinking-bout at Crossen, when the Polish Majesty and he were so anxious to pump one another, by copious priming with Hungary wine. About a fortnight after, in the first days of February following (day is not given), Grumkow reported something curious. 'In 'my presence,' says Wilhelmina, 'and that of forty persons,' for the thing was much talked about, 'Grumkow said to the King 'one morning: "Ah Sire, I am in despair; the poor Patroon is 'dead! I was lying broad awake, last night: all on a sudden, 'the curtains of my bed flew asunder: I saw him; he was in 'a shroud: he gazed fixedly at me: I tried to start up, being 'dreadfully taken; but the phantom disappeared."' Here was [14] 23d Oct. 1733—16th March 1734 (Preuss, i. 75).

[1] Œuvres (Mém. de Brandebourg), i. 163.

an illustrious ghost-story for Berlin, in a day or two when the Courier came. 'Died at the very time of the phantom; Death and phantom were the same night,' say Wilhelmina and the miraculous Berlin public,—but do not say what night for either of them it was.[2] By help of which latter circumstance the phantom becomes reasonably unmiraculous again, in a nervous system tremulous from drink. 'They had been sad at part-'ing,' Wilhelmina says, 'having drunk immensities of Hun-'gary wine; the Patroon almost weeping over his Grumkow: '"Adieu, my dear Grumkow," said he; "I shall never see 'you more!"'

Miraculous or not, the catastrophe is true: August, the once Physically Strong, lies dead;—and there will be no Partition of Poland for the present. He had the Diet ready to assemble; waiting for him, at Warsaw; and good trains laid in the Diet, capable of fortunate explosion under a good engineer. Engineer, alas! The Grumkow drinking-bout had awakened that old sore in his foot: he came to Warsaw, eager enough for business; but with his stock of strength all out, and Death now close upon him. The Diet met, 26th-27th January; engineer all alert about the good trains laid, and the fortunate exploding of them; when, almost on the morrow,—"Inflammation has come on!" said the Doctors, and were futile to help farther. The strong body, and its life, was done; and nothing remained but to call-in the Archbishop, with his extreme unctions and soul-apparatus.

August made no moaning or recalcitrating; took, on the prescribed terms, the inevitable that had come. Has been a very great sinner, he confesses to the Archbishop: "I have not at present strength to name my many and great sins to your Reverence," said he; "I hope for mercy on the"—on the usual rash terms. Terms perhaps known to August to be rash; to have been frightfully rash; but what can he now do? Archbishop thereupon gives absolution of his sins; Archbishop does,—a baddish, unlikely kind of man, as August well knows. August 'laid his hand on his eyes,' during such sad absolution-mummery; and in that posture had breathed his last, before it was well over.[3] Unhappy soul; who shall judge him?—

[2] Wilhelmina, ii. 98. Event happened, 1st February; news of it came to Berlin, 4th February: Fassmann (p. 485); Buchholz; &c.

[3] 'Sunday 1st February 1733, quarter past 4 A.M.' (Fassmann, Leben Frederici Augusti Königs in Pohlen, pp. 994-997).

transcendent King of edacious Flunkies; not without fine qualities, which he turned to such a use amid the temptations of this world!

Poland has to find a new King.

His death brought vast miseries on Poland; kindled foolish Europe generally into fighting, and gave our Crown-Prince his first actual sight and experience of the facts of War. For which reason, hardly for another, the thing having otherwise little memorability at present, let us give some brief synopsis of it, the briefer the better. Here, excerpted from multifarious old Notebooks, are some main heads of the affair:

'On the disappearance of August the Strong, his plans of Partition-'ing Poland disappeared too, and his fine trains in the Diet abolished 'themselves. The Diet had now nothing to do, but proclaim the com-'ing Election, giving a date to it; and go home to consider a little 'whom they would elect.[4] A question weighty to Poland. And not 'likely to be settled by Poland alone or chiefly; the sublime Republic, 'with liberum veto, and Diets capable only of anarchic noise, having 'now reached such a stage that its Neighbours everywhere stood upon 'its skirts; asking, "Whitherward, then, with your anarchy? Not this 'way;—we say, that way!"—and were apt to get to battle about it, 'before such a thing could be settled. A house, in your street, with 'perpetual smoke coming through the slates of it, is not a pleasant 'house to be neighbour to! One honest interest the neighbours have, 'in an Election Crisis there, That the house do not get on fire, and 'kindle them. Dishonest interests, in the way of theft and otherwise, 'they may have without limit.

'The poor house, during last Election Crisis,—when August the 'Strong was flung out, and Stanislaus brought in; Crisis presided over 'by Charles XII., with Czar Peter and others hanging on the outskirts, 'as Opposition party,—fairly got into flame;[5] but was quenched down 'again by that stout Swede; and his Stanislaus, a native Pole, was left 'peaceably as King for the years then running. Years ran; and Stanis-'laus was thrown out, Charles himself being thrown out; and had to 'make way for August the Strong again:—an ejected Stanislaus: King 'only in title; known to most readers of this time.[6] [4] 'Interregnum proclaimed,' 11th February: Preliminary Diet to meet 21st April; —meets; settles, before May is done, that the Election shall begin 25th August: it must end in six weeks thereafter, by law of the land.

[5] Description of it in Köhler, Münzbelustigungen, vi. 228-230.

[6] Stanislaus Lesczinsky, 'Woywode of Posen,' born 1677: King of Poland, Charles XII. superintending, 1704 (age then 27); driven out 1709, went to Charles XII. at Bender; to Zweibrück, 1714; thence, on Charles's death, to Weissenburg (Alsace, or Strasburg Country): Daughter married to Louis XV., 1725. Age now 56.—Hübner, t. 97; Histoire de Stanislas I, Roi de Pologne (English Translation, London, 1741), pp. 96-126; &c.

'Poor man, he has been living in Zweibrück, in Weissenburg and 'such places, in that Debateable French-German region,—which the 'French are more and more getting stolen to themselves, in late cen- 'turies:—generally on the outskirts of France he lives; having now 'connexions of the highest quality with France. He has had fine Coun- 'try-houses in that Zweibrück (Two-Bridge, Deux-Ponts) region; had 'always the ghost of a Court there; plenty of money,—a sinecure 'Country-gentleman life;—and no complaints have been heard from 'him. Charles XII., as proprietor of Deux-Ponts, had first of all sent 'him into those parts for refuge; and in general, easy days have been the lot of Stanislaus there.

'Nor has History spoken of him since, except on one small occa- sion: when the French Politician Gentlemen, at a certain crisis of 'their game, chose a Daughter of his to be Wife for young Louis XV., 'and bring royal progeny, of which they were scarce. This was in '1724-5; Duc de Bourbon, and other Politicians male and female, find- 'ing that the best move. A thing wonderful to the then Gazetteers, 'for nine days; but not now worth much talk. The good young Lady, 'it is well known, a very pious creature, and sore tried in her new sta- 'tion, did bring royal progeny enough,—and might as well have held 'her hand, had she foreseen what would become of them, poor souls! 'This was a great event for Stanislaus, the sinecure Country-gentleman, 'in his French-German rustication. One other thing I have read of 'him, infinitely smaller, out of those ten years: in Zweibrück Country, 'or somewhere in that French-German region, he "built a pleasure- 'cottage," conceivable to the mind, "and called it Schuhflick (Shoe- 'Patch),"[7]—a name that touches one's fancy on behalf of the innocent 'soul. Other fact I will not remember of him. He is now to quit 'Shoe-Patch and his pleasant Weissenburg Castle; to come on the 'public stage again, poor man; and suffer a second season of mischances 'and disgraces still worse than the first. As we shall see presently;— 'a new Polish Election Crisis having come!—

'What individual the Polish Grandees would have chosen for King 'if entirely left alone to do it? is a question not important; and indeed 'was never asked, in this or in late Elections. Not the individual who 'could have been a King among them were they, for a long time back, 'in the habit of seeking after; not him, but another and indeed reverse 'kind of individual,—the one in whom there lay most nourishment, 'nourishment of any kind, even of the cash kind, for a practical Polish 'Grandee. So that the question was no longer of the least importance, 'to Poland or the Universe; and in point of fact, the frugal Destinies 'had ceased to have it put, in that quarter. Not Grandees of Poland; 'but Intrusive Neighbours, carrying Grandees of Poland "in their 'breeches-pocket" (as our phrase is), were the voting parties. To that [7] Büsching, Erdbeschreibung, v. 1194.

'pass it was come. Under such stern penalty had Poland and its Grandees fallen, by dint of false voting: the frugal Destinies had ceased 'to ask about their vote; and they were become machines for voting 'with, or pistols for fighting with, by bad Neighbours who cared to 'vote! Nor did the frugal Destinies consider that the proper method, 'either; but had, as we shall see, determined to abolish that too, in 'about forty years more.'

Of the Candidates; of the Conditions. How the Election went.

It was under such omens that the Polish Election of 1733 had to transact itself. Austria, Russia, Prussia, as next Neighbours, were the chief voting parties, if they cared to intrude;—which Austria and Russia were clear for doing; Prussia not clear, or not beyond the indispensable or evidently profitable. Seckendorf, and one Löwenwolde the Russian Ambassador at Berlin, had, some time ago, in foresight of this event, done their utmost to bring Friedrich Wilhelm into coöperation, —offering fine baits, 'Berg and Jülich' again, among others; —but nothing definite came of it: peaceable, reasonably safe Election in Poland, other interest Friedrich Wilhelm has not in the matter; and compliance, not coöperation, is what can be expected of him by the Kaiser and Czarina. Coöperating or even complying, these Three could have settled it; and would, —had no other Neighbour interfered. But other neighbours can interfere; any neighbour that has money to spend, or likes to bully in such a matter! And that proved to be the case, in this unlucky instance.

Austria and Russia, with Prussia complying, had,—a year ago, before the late August's decease, his life seeming then an extremely uncertain one, and foresight being always good,—privately come to an understanding,[8] in case of a Polish Election:

'1°. That France was to have no hand in it whatever,— 'no tool of France to be King; or, as they more politely ex- 'pressed it, having their eye upon Stanislaus, No Piast or na- 'tive Pole could be eligible.

'2°. That neither could August's Son, the new August, [8] 31st December 1731, 'Treaty of Löwenwolde' (which never got completed or became valid): Schöll, ii. 223.

'who would then be Kurfürst of Saxony, be admitted King of 'Poland.—And, on the whole,

'3°. That an Emanuel Prince of Portugal would be the 'eligible man.' Emanuel of Portugal, King of Portugal's Brother; a gentleman without employment, as his very Title tells us: gentleman never heard of before or since, in those parts or elsewhere; but doubtless of the due harmless quality, as Portugal itself was: he is to be the Polish King,—vote these Intrusive Neighbours. What the vote of Poland itself may be, the Destinies do not, of late, ask; finding it a superfluous question.

So had the Three Neighbours settled this matter:—or rather, I should say, so had Two of them; for Friedrich Wilhelm wanted, now or afterwards, nothing in this Election, but that it should not take fire and kindle him. Two of the Neighbours: and of these two, perhaps we might guess the Kaiser was the principal contriver and suggester; France and Saxony being both hateful to him,—obstinate refusers of the Pragmatic Sanction, to say nothing more. What the Czarina, Anne with the big cheek, specially wanted, I do not learn,—unless it were peaceable hold of Courland; or perhaps merely to produce herself in these parts, as a kind of regulating Pallas, along with the Jupiter Kaiser of Western Europe;—which might have effects by and by.

Emanuel of Portugal was not elected, nor so much as spoken of in the Diet. Nor did one of these Three Regulations take effect; but much the contrary,—other Neighbours having the power to interfere. France saw good to interfere, a rather distant neighbour: Austria, Russia, could not endure the French vote at all; and so the whole world got on fire by the business.

France is not a near Neighbour; but it has a Stanislaus much concerned, who is eminently under the protection of France:—who may be called the "Father of France," in a sense, or even the "Grandfather;" his Daughter being Mother of a young creature they call Dauphin, or "Child of France." Fleury and the French Court decide that Stanislaus, Grandfather of France, was once King of Poland: that it will behove, for various reasons, he be King again. Some say, old Fleury did not care for Stanislaus; merely wanted a quarrel with the Kaiser,—having got himself in readiness, 'with Lorraine in his eye;' and seeing the Kaiser not ready. It is likelier the hot young spirits, Belleisle and others, controlled old Fleury into it. At all events, Stanislaus is summoned from his rustication; the French Ambassador at Warsaw gets his instructions. French Ambassador opens himself largely, at Warsaw, by eloquent speech, by copious money, on the subject of Stanislaus; finds large audience, enthusiastic receptivity;—and readers will now understand the following chronological phenomena of the Polish Election:

'August 25th, 1733. This day the Polish Election begins. So has 'the Preliminary Diet (kind of Polish Caucus) ordered it;—Preliminary 'Diet itself a very stormy matter; minority like to be "thrown out of 'window," to be "shot through the head," on some occasions.[9] Actual 'Election begins; continues sub dio, "in the Field of Wola," in a very 'tempestuous fashion; bound to conclude within six weeks. Kaiser 'has his troops assembled over the border, in Silesia, "to protect the 'freedom of election;" Czarina has 30,000 under Marshal Lacy, lying 'on the edge of Lithuania, bent on a like object; will increase them to '50,000, as the plot thickens.

'So that Emanuel of Portugal is not heard of; and French interference is, with a vengeance,—and Stanislaus, a born Piast, is overwhelmingly the favourite. Intolerable to Austria, to Russia; the reverse 'to Friedrich Wilhelm, who privately thinks him the right man. And 'Kurfürst August of Saxony is the other Candidate,—with troops of 'his own in the distance, but without support in Poland; and depending wholly on the Kaiser and Czarina for his chance. And our "three 'settled points" are gone to water in this manner!

'August seeing there was not the least hope in Poland's own vote, 'judiciously went to the Kaiser first of all: "Imperial Majesty, I will 'accept your Pragmatic Sanction root and branch, swallow it whole; 'make me King of Poland!"—"Done!" answers Imperial Majesty;[10] 'brings the Czarina over, by good offers of August's and his;—and now 'there is an effective Opposition Candidate in the field, with strength 'of his own, and good backing close at hand. Austrian, Russian Ambassadors at Warsaw lift up their voice, like the French one; open 'their purse, and bestir themselves; but with no success in the Field 'of Wola, except to the stirring-up of noise and tumult there. They 'must look to other fields for success. The voice of Wola and of Poland, if it had now a voice, is enthusiastic for Stanislaus.

'September 7th. A couple of quiet-looking Merchants arrive in 'Warsaw,—one of whom is Stanislaus in person. Newspapers say he 'is in the French Fleet of War, which is sailing minatory towards these Coasts: and there is in truth a Gentleman in Stanislaus's clothes on [9] History of Stanislaus (cited above), p. 136.

[10] 16th July 1733: Treaty in Schöll, ii. 224-231.

'board there;—to make the Newspapers believe. Stanislaus himself 'drove through Berlin, a day or two ago; gave the sentry a ducat at 'the Gate, to be speedy with the Passports,—whom Friedrich Wilhelm 'affected to put under arrest for such negligent speed. And so, on the '10th of the month, Stanislaus being now rested and trimmed, makes 'his appearance on the Field of Wola itself; and captivates all hearts 'by the kind look of him. So that, on the second day after, 12th Sep-'tember 1733, he is, as it were, unanimously elected; with acclama-'tion, with enthusiasm; and sees himself actual King of Poland,—if 'France send proper backing to continue him there. As, surely, she 'will not fail?—But there are alarming news that the Russians are 'advancing: Marshal Lacy with 30,000; and reinforcements in the 'rear of him.

'September 22d. Russians advancing more and more, no French 'help arrived yet, and the enthusiastic Polish Chivalry being good for 'nothing against regular musketry,—King Stanislaus finds that he will 'have to quit Warsaw, and seek covert somewhere. Quits Warsaw this 'day; gets covert in Dantzig. And, in fact, from this 22d of September, 'day of the autumnal equinox, 1733, is a fugitive, blockaded, besieged 'Stanislaus: an Imaginary King thenceforth. His real Kingship had 'lasted precisely ten days.

'October 3d. Lacy and his Russians arrive in the suburbs of War-'saw, intent upon "protecting freedom of election." Bridges being 'broken, they do not yet cross the River, but invite the free electors to 'come across, and vote: "A real King is very necessary,—Stanislaus 'being an imaginary one, brought-in by compulsion, by threats of fling-'ing people out of window, and the like." The free electors do not 'cross. Whereupon a small handful, now free enough, and not to be 'thrown out of window, whom Lacy had about him, proceed to elect 'August of Saxony: he, on the 5th of October, still one day within the 'legal six weeks, is chosen and declared the real King:—"twelve sena-'tors and about six hundred gentlemen" voting for him there, free they 'in Lacy's quarters, the rest of Poland having lain under compulsion 'when voting for Stanislaus. That is the Polish Election, so far as 'Poland can settle it. We said the Destinies had ceased, some time 'since, to ask Poland for its vote; it is other people who have now got 'the real power of voting. But that is the correct state of the poll at 'Warsaw, if important to anybody.'

August is crowned in Cracow before long; "August III.," whom we shall meet again in important circumstances. Lacy and his Russians have voted for August; able, they, to disperse all manner of enthusiastic Polish Chivalry; which indeed, we observe, usually stands but one volley from the Russian musketry; and flies elsewhither, to burn and plunder its own domestic enemies. Far and wide, robbery and arson are prevalent in Poland; Stanislaus lying under covert in Dantzig,—an imaginary King ever since the equinox, but well trusting that the French will give him a plumper vote. French War-fleet is surely under way hither.

Poland on Fire; Dantzig stands Siege.

These are the news our Crown-Prince hears at Ruppin, in the first months of his wedded life there. With what interest we may fancy. Brandenburg is next neighbour; and these Polish troubles reach far enough;—the ever-smoking house having taken fire; and all the street threatening to get on blaze. Friedrich Wilhelm, nearest neighbour, stands anxious to quench, carefully sweeping the hot coals across again from his own borders; and will not interfere on one or the other side, for any persuasion.

Dantzig, strong in confidence of French help, refuses to give-up Stanislaus when summoned; will stand siege rather. Stands siege, furious lengthy siege,—with enthusiastic defence; 'a Lady of Rank firing-off the first gun,' against the Russian batteries. Of the Siege of Dantzig, which made the next Spring and Summer loud for mankind (February—June 1734), we shall say nothing,—our own poor field, which also grows loud enough, lying far away from Dantzig,—except:

First, That no French help came, or as good as none; the minatory War-fleet having landed a poor 1,500 men, headed by the Comte de Plelo, who had volunteered along with them; that they attempted one onslaught on the Russian lines, and that Plelo was shot, and the rest were blown to miscellaneous ruin, and had to disappear, not once getting into Dantzig. Secondly, That the Saxons, under Weissenfels, our poor old friend, with proper siege-artillery, though not with enough, did, by effort (end of May), get upon the scene; in which this is to be remarked, that Weissenfels's siege-artillery 'came by post;' two big mortars expressly passing through Berlin, marked as part of the Duke of Weissenfels's Luggage. And thirdly, That Münnich, who had succeeded Lacy as Besieging General, and was in hot haste, and had not artillery enough, made unheard-of assaults (2,000 men, some say 4,000, lost in one night-attack upon a post they call the Hagelberg; rash attack, much blamed by military men);[11]—but nevertheless, having now (by Russian Fleet, middle of June) got siege-artillery enough, advances irrepressibly day by day.

14th Oct. 1733.

So that at length, things being now desperate, Stanislaus, disguised as a cattle-dealer, privately quitted Dantzig, night of 27th June 1734; got across the intricate mud-and-water difficulties of the Weichsel and its mouths, flying perilously towards Preussen and Friedrich Wilhelm's protection.[12] Whereby the Siege of Dantzig ended in chamade, and levying of penalties; penalties severe to a degree, though Friedrich Wilhelm interceded what he could. And with the Siege of Dantzig, the blazing Polish Election went out in like manner;[13]—having already kindled, in quarters far away from it, conflagrations quite otherwise interesting to us. Whitherward we now hasten.

CHAPTER IX.

KAISER'S SHADOW-HUNT HAS CAUGHT FIRE.

FRANZ of Lorraine, the young favourite of Fortune, whom we once saw at Berlin on an interesting occasion, was about this time to have married his Imperial Archduchess; Kaiser's consent to be formally demanded and given; nothing but joy and splendour looked for in the Court of Vienna at present. Nothing to prevent it,—had there been no Polish Election; had not the Kaiser, in his Shadow-Hunt (coursing the Pragmatic Sanction chiefly, as he has done these twenty years past), gone rashly into that combustible foreign element. But so it is: this was the fatal limit. The poor Kaiser's Shadow-Hunt, going scot-free this long while, and merely tormenting other people, has, at this point, by contact with inflammable Poland, unexpectedly itself caught fire; goes now plunging, all in mad flame, over precipices one knows not how deep: and there will be a lamentable singeing and smashing before the Kaiser get out of this, if he ever get! Kaiser Karl, from this point, plunges down and down, all his days; and except in that Shadow of a Pragmatic Sanction, if he can still save that, has no comfort left. Marriages are not the thing to be thought of at present !—

[11] Œuvres de Frédéric, xxvii. part 2d, p. 31.
[12] Narrative by himself, in History, pp. 235-248.
[13] Clear account, especially of Siege, in Mannstein (pp. 71-83), who was there as Münnich's Aide-de-Camp.

Scarcely had the news of August's Election, and Stanislaus's flight to Dantzig, reached France, when France, all in a state of readiness, informed the Kaiser, ready for nothing, his force lying in Silesia, doing the Election functions on the Polish borders there, "That he the Kaiser had, by such treatment of the Grandfather of France and the Polish Kingdom fairly fallen to him, insulted the most Christian Majesty; that in consequence the most Christian Majesty did hereby declare War against the said Kaiser,"—and in fact had, that very day (14th of October 1733), begun it. Had marched over into Lorraine, namely, secured Lorraine against accidents; and, more specially, gone across from Strasburg to the German side of the Rhine, and laid siege to Kehl. Kehl Fortress; a dilapidated outpost of the Reich there, which cannot resist many hours. Here is news for the Kaiser, with his few troops all on the Polish borders; minding his neighbours' business, or chasing Pragmatic Sanction, in those inflammable localities.

Pacific Fleury, it must be owned, if he wanted a quarrel with the Kaiser, could not have managed it on more advantageous terms. Generals, a Duc de Berwick, a Noailles, Belleisle; generals, troops, artillery, munitions, nothing is wanting to Fleury; to the Kaiser all things. It is surmised, the French had their eye on Lorraine, not on Stanislaus, from the first. For many centuries, especially for these last two,—ever since that Siege of Metz, which we once saw, under Kaiser Karl V. and Albert Alcibiades,—France has been wrenching and screwing at this Lorraine, wriggling it off bit by bit; till now, as we perceived on Lyttelton junior of Hagley's visit, Lorraine seems all lying unscrewed; and France, by any good opportunity, could stick it in her pocket. Such opportunity sly Fleury contrived, they say;—or more likely it might be Belleisle and the other adventurous spirits that urged it on pacific Fleury;—but, at all events, he has got it. Dilapidated Kehl yields straightway:[1] Sardinia, Spain, declare alliance with Fleury; and not Lorraine only, and the Swabian Provinces, but Italy itself lies at his discretion,—owing to your treatment of the Grandfather of France, and these Polish Elective methods.

[1] 29th October 1733. Mémoires du Maréchal de Berwick (in Petitot's Collection, Paris, 1828), ii. 303.

14th Oct. 1733.

The astonished Kaiser rushes forward to fling himself into the arms of the Sea-Powers, his one resource left: "Help! moneys, subsidies, ye Sea-Powers!" But the Sea-Powers stand obtuse, arms not open at all, hands buttoning their pockets: "Sorry we cannot, your Imperial Majesty. Fleury engages not to touch the Netherlands, the Barrier Treaty; Polish Elections are not our concern!" and callously decline. The Kaiser's astonishment is extreme; his big heart swelling even with a martyr-feeling; and he passionately appeals: "Ungrateful, blind Sea-Powers! No money to fight France, say you? Are the Laws of Nature fallen void?" Imperial astonishment, sublime martyr-feeling, passionate appeals to the Laws of Nature, avail nothing with the blind Sea-Powers: "No money in us," answer they: "we will help you to negotiate."—"Negotiate!" answers he; and will have to pay his own Election broken-glass, with a sublime martyr-feeling, without money from the Sea-Powers.

Fleury has got the Sardinian Majesty: 'Sardinian door-keeper of the Alps,' who opens them now this way, now that, for a consideration: "A slice of the Milanese, your Majesty;" bargains Fleury. Fleury has got the Spanish Majesty (our violent old friend the Termagant of Spain) persuaded to join: "Your infant Carlos made Duke of Parma and Piacenza, with such difficulty: what is that? Naples itself, crown of the Two Sicilies, lies in the wind for Carlos;—and your junior infant, great Madam, has he no need of apanages?" The Termagant of Spain, "offended by Pragmatic Sanction" (she says), is ready on those terms; the Sardinian Majesty is ready: and Fleury, this same October, with an overwhelming force, Spaniards and Sardinians to join, invades Italy; great Marshal Villars himself taking the command. Marshal Villars, an extremely eminent old military gentleman,—somewhat of a friend, or husband of a lady-friend, to M. de Voltaire, for one thing;—and capable of slicing Italy to pieces at a fine rate, in the condition it was in.

Never had Kaiser such a bill of broken-glass to pay for meddling in neighbours' elections before. The year was not yet ended, when Villars and the Sardinian Majesty had done their stroke on Lombardy; taken Milan Citadel, taken Piz-zighetone, the Milanese in whole, and appropriated it; swept the poor unprepared Kaiser clear out of those parts. Baby Carlos and the Spaniards are to do the Two Sicilies, Naples or the land one to begin with, were the Winter gone. For the present, Louis XV. 'sings Te Deum at Paris, 23d December 1733'[2]—a merry Christmas there. Villars, now above fourscore, soon died of those fatigues; various Marshals, Broglio, Coigny, Noailles, succeeding him, some of whom are slightly notable to us; and there was one Maillebois, still a subordinate under them, whose name also may reappear in this History.

Subsequent Course of the War, in the Italian Part of it.

The French-Austrian War, which had now broken out, lasted a couple of years; the Kaiser steadily losing, though he did his utmost; not so much a War, on his part, as a Being Beaten and Being Stript. The Scene was Italy and the Upper-Rhine Country of Germany; Italy the deciding scene; where, except as it bears on Germany, our interest is nothing, as indeed in Germany too it is not much. The principal events, on both stages, are chronologically somewhat as follows;—beginning with Italy:

'March 29th, 1734. Baby Carlos with a Duke of Montemar for 'General, a difficult impetuous gentleman, very haughty to the French 'allies and others, lands in Naples Territory; intending to seize the 'Two Sicilies, according to bargain. They find the Kaiser quite un-'prepared, and their enterprise extremely feasible.

'May 10th. Baby Carlos,—whom we ought to call Don Carlos, 'who is now eighteen gone, and able to ride the great horse,—makes 'triumphant entry into Naples, having easily swept the road clear; 'styles himself "King of the Two Sicilies" (Papa having surrendered 'him his "right" there); whom Naples, in all ranks of it, willingly 'homages as such. Wrecks of Kaiser's forces intrench themselves, 'rather strongly, at a place called Bitonto, in Apulia, not far off.

'May 25th. Montemar, in an impetuous manner, storms them 'there;—which feat procures for him the title, Duke of Bitonto; and 'finishes-off the First of the Sicilies. And indeed, we may say, finishes 'Both the Sicilies: our poor Kaiser having no considerable force in 'either, nor means of sending any; the Sea-Powers having buttoned 'their pockets, and the Combined Fleet of France and Spain being on the waters there.

[2] Fastes du Règne de Louis XV (Paris, 1766), i. 248.

'We need only add, on this head, that, for ten months more, Baby 'Carlos and Montemar went about besieging, Gaeta, Messina, Syracuse; 'and making triumphal entries;—and that, on the 30th of June 1735, 'Baby Carlos had himself fairly crowned at Palermo:[3] "King of the 'Two Sicilies" de facto; in which eminent post he and his continue, 'not with much success, to this day.

'That will suffice for the Two Sicilies. As to Lombardy again, 'now that Villars is out of it, and the Coignys and Broglios have 'succeeded:

'June 29th, 1734. Kaiser, rallying desperately for recovery of the 'Milanese, has sent an Army thither, Graf von Mercy leader of it: 'Battle of Parma between the French and it (29th June);—totally lost 'by the Kaiser's people, after furious fighting; Graf von Mercy himself 'killed in the action. Graf von Mercy, and what comes nearer us, a 'Prince of Culmbach, amiable Uncle of our Wilhelmina's Husband, a 'brave man and Austrian Soldier, who was much regretted by Wil-'helmina and the rest; his death and obsequies making a melancholy 'Court of Baireuth in this agitated year. The Kaiser, doing his utmost, 'is beaten at every point.

'September 15th. Surprisal of the Secchia. Kaiser's people rally, '—under a General Graf von Königseck worth noting by us,—and 'after some manœuvering, in the Guastalla-Modena region, on the 'Secchia and Po rivers there, dextrously steal across the Secchia that 'night (15th September), cutting-off the small guard-party at the ford 'of the Secchia, then wading silently; and burst-in upon the French 'Camp in a truly alarming manner.[4] So that Broglio, in command 'there, had to gallop with only one boot on, some say "in his shirt," '—till he got some force rallied, and managed to retreat more Parthian-'like upon his brother Maréchal's Division. Artillery, war-chest, secret 'correspondence, "King of Sardinia's tent," and much cheering plunder 'beside Broglio's odd boot, were the consequences; the Kaiser's one 'success in this War; abolished, unluckily, in four days!—The Broglio 'who here gallops is the second French Maréchal of the name, son of 'the first; a military gentleman whom we shall but too often meet in 'subsequent stages. A son of this one's, a third Maréchal Broglio, 'present at the Secchia that bad night, is the famous War-god of the 'Bastille time, fifty-five years hence,—unfortunate old War-god, the 'Titans being all up about him. As to Broglio with the one boot, it 'is but a triumph over him till—

'September 19th. Battle of Guastalla, that day. Battle lost by the 'Kaiser's people, after eight-hours hot fighting; who are then obliged 'to hurry across the Secchia again;—and in fact do not succeed in 'fighting any more in that quarter, this year or afterwards. For, next 'year (1735), Montemar is so advanced with the Two Sicilies, he can 'assist in these Northern operations; and Noailles, a better Maréchal, [3] Fastes de Louis XV, i. 278.

[4] Hormayr, xx. 84; Fastes, as it is liable to do, misdates.

'replaces the Broglio and Coigny there; who, with learned strategic 'movements, sieges, threatenings of siege, sweeps the wrecks of Austria, 'to a satisfactory degree, into the Tyrol, without fighting, or event 'mentionable thenceforth.

'This is the Kaiser's War of two Campaigns, in the Italian, which 'was the decisive, part of it: a continual Being Beaten, as the reader 'sees; a Being Stript, till one was nearly bare in that quarter.'

Course of the War, in the German Part of it.

In Germany the mentionable events are still fewer; and indeed, but for one small circumstance binding on us, we might skip them altogether. For there is nothing comfortable in it to the human memory otherwise.

Maréchal Duc de Berwick, a cautious considerable General (Marlborough's Nephew, on what terms is known to readers), having taken Kehl and plundered the Swabian outskirts last Winter, had extensive plans of operating in the heart of Germany, and ruining the Kaiser there. But first he needs, and the Kaiser is aware of it, a 'basis on the Rhine;' free bridge over the Rhine, not by Strasburg and Kehl alone: and for this reason, he will have to besiege and capture Philipsburg first of all. Strong Town of Philipsburg, well down towards Speyer-and-Heidelberg quarter on the German side of the Rhine:* here will be our bridge. Lorraine is already occupied, since the first day of the War; Trarbach, strong-place of the Moselle and Electorate of Trier, cannot be difficult to get. Thus were the Rhine Country, on the French side, secure to France; and so Berwick calculates he will have a basis on the Rhine, from which to shoot forth into the very heart of the Kaiser.

Berwick besieged Philipsburg accordingly (Summer and Autumn); Kaiser doing his feeble best to hinder: at the Siege, Berwick lost his life, but Philipsburg surrendered to his successor, all the same;—Kaiser striving to hinder; but in a most paralysed manner, and to no purpose whatever. And—and this properly was the German War; the sum of all done in it during those two years.

Seizure of Nanci (that is, of Lorraine), seizure of Kehl we already heard of; then, prior to Philipsburg, there was siege or seizure of Trarbach by the French; and, posterior to it, seizure of Worms by them; and by the Germans there was 'burning of a magazine in Speyer by bombs.' And, in brief, on both sides, there was marching and manœuvering under various generals (our old rusty Seckendorf one of them), till the end of 1735, when the Italian decision arrived, and Truce and Peace along with it; but there was no other action worth naming, even in the Newspapers as a wonder of nine days. The Siege of Philipsburg, and what hung flickering round that operation, before and after, was the sum-total of the German War.

* Map at p. 170.

Philipsburg, key of the Rhine in those parts, has had many sieges; nor would this one merit the least history from us, were it not for one circumstance: That our Crown-Prince was of the Opposing Army, and made his first experience of arms there. A Siege of Philipsburg slightly memorable to us, on that one account. What Friedrich did there, which in the military way was as good as nothing; what he saw and experienced there, which, with some 'eighty Princes of the Reich,' a Prince Eugene for General, and three months under canvas on the field, may have been something: this, in outline, by such obscure indications as remain, we would fain make conceivable to the reader. Indications, in the History-Books, we have as good as none; but must gather what there is from Wilhelmina and the Crown-Prince's Letters,—much studying to be brief, were it possible!

CHAPTER X.

CROWN-PRINCE GOES TO THE RHINE CAMPAIGN.

THE Kaiser,—with Kehl snatched from him, the Rhine open, and Louis XV. singing Te Deum in the Christmas time for what Villars in Italy had done,—applied, in passionate haste, to the Reich. The Reich, though Fleury tried to cajole it, and apologise for taking Kehl from it, declares for the Kaiser's quarrel; War against France on his behalf;[1]—it was in this way that Friedrich Wilhelm and our Crown-Prince came to be concerned in the Rhine Campaign. The Kaiser will have a Reich's-Army (were it good for much, as is not likely) to join to his own Austrian one. And if Prince Eugene, who is Reich's-Feldmarschall, one of the two Feldmarschalls, get the Generalship as men hope, it is not doubted but there will be great work on the Rhine, this Summer of 1734.

[1] 13th March 1734 (Buchholz, i. 131).

Unhappily the Reich's-Army, raised from multifarious contingents, and guided and provided for by many heads, is usually good for little. Not to say that old Kur-Pfalz, with an eye to French help in the Berg-and-Jülich matter; old Kur-Pfalz, and the Bavarian set (Kur-Baiern and Kur-Köln, Bavaria and Cologne, who are Brothers, and of old cousinship to Kur-Pfalz), —quite refuse their contingents; protest in the Diet, and openly have French leanings. These are bad omens for the Reich's-Army. And in regard to the Reich's-Feldmarschall Office, there also is a difficulty. The Reich, as we hinted, keeps two supreme Feldmarschalls; one Catholic, one Protestant, for equilibrium's sake; illustrious Prince Eugenio von Savoye is the Catholic;—but as to the Protestant, it is a difficulty worth observing for a moment.

Old Duke Eberhard Ludwig of Würtemberg, the unfortunate old gentleman bewitched by the Grävenitz "Deliver us from evil," used to be the Reich's-Feldmarschall of Protestant persuasion;—Commander-in-Chief for the Reich, when it tried fighting. Old Eberhard had been at Blenheim, and had marched up and down: I never heard he was much of a General; perhaps good enough for the Reich, whose troops were always bad. But now that poor Duke, as we intimated once or more, is dead; there must be, of Protestant type, a new Reich's-Feldmarschall had. One Catholic, unequalled among Captains, we already have; but where is the Protestant, Duke Eberhard being dead?

Duke Eberhard's successor in Würtemberg, Karl Alexander by name, whom we once dined with at Prag on the Kladrup journey, he, a General of some worth, would be a natural person. Unluckily Duke Karl Alexander had, while an Austrian Officer and without outlooks upon Protestant Würtemberg, gone over to Papacy, and is now Catholic. "Two Catholic Feldmarschalls!" cries the Corpus Evangelicorum; "that will never do!"

Well, on the other or Protestant side there appear two Candidates; one of them not much expected by the reader: no other than Ferdinand Duke of Brunswick-Bevern, our Crown-Prince's Father-in-law; whom we knew to be a worthy man, but did not know to be much of a soldier, or capable of these ambitious views. He is Candidate First. Then there is a Second, much more entitled: our gunpowder friend the Old Dessauer; who, to say nothing of his soldier qualities, has promises from the Kaiser,—he surely were the man, if it did not hurt other people's feelings. But it surely does and will. There is Ferdinand of Bevern applying upon the score of old promises too. How can people's feelings be saved? Protestants these two last: but they cannot both have it; and what will Würtemberg say to either of them? The Reich was in very great affliction about this preliminary matter. But Friedrich Wilhelm steps in with a healing recipe: "Let there be Four Reich's-Feldmarschalls," said Friedrich Wilhelm; "Two Protestant and two Catholic: won't that do?"—Excellent! answers the Reich: and there are Four Feldmarschalls for the time being; no lack of commanders to the Reich's-Army. Brunswick-Bevern tried it first; but only till Prince Eugene were ready, and indeed he had of himself come to nothing before that date. Prince Eugene next; then Karl Alexander next; and in fact they all might have had a stroke at commanding, and at coming to nothing or little,—only the Old Dessauer sulked at the office in this its fourfold state, and never would fairly have it, till, by decease of occupants, it came to be twofold again. This glimpse into the distracted effete interior of the poor old Reich and its Politics, with friends of ours concerned there, let it be welcome to the reader.[2]

Friedrich Wilhelm was without concern in this War, or in what had led to it. Practical share in the Polish Election (after that preliminary theoretic program of the Kaiser's and Czarina's went to smoke) Friedrich Wilhelm steadily refused to take: though considerable offers were made him on both sides,—offer of West Preussen (Polish part of Prussia, which once was known to us) on the French side.[3] But his primary fixed resolution was to stand out of the quarrel; and he abides by that; suppresses any wishes of his own in regard to the Polish Election;—keeps ward on his own frontiers, with good military besom in hand, to sweep it out again if it intruded there. "What King you like, in God's name; only don't come over my threshold with his brabbles and him!"

[2] Leopoldi von Anhalt-Dessau Leben (by Ranfft), p. 127; Buchholz, i. 131.
[3] By De la Chétardie, French Ambassador at Berlin (Buchholz, i. 130).

But seeing the Kaiser got into actual French War, with the Reich consenting, he is bound, by Treaty of old date (date older than Wusterhausen, though it was confirmed on that famous occasion), 'To assist the Kaiser with ten thousand men;' and this engagement he intends amply to fulfil. No sooner, therefore, had the Reich given sure signs of assenting ('Reich's assent' is the condition of the ten thousand), than Friedrich Wilhelm's orders were out, "Be in readiness!" Friedrich Wilhelm, by the time of the Reich's actual assent, or Declaration of War on the Kaiser's behalf, has but to lift his finger: squadrons and battalions, out of Pommern, out of Magdeburg, out of Preussen, to the due amount, will get on march whitherward you bid, and be with you there at the day you indicate, almost at the hour. Captains, not of an imaginary nature, these are always busy; and the King himself is busy over them. From big guns and wagon-horses down to gun-flints and gaiter-straps, all is marked in registers; nothing is wanting, nothing out of its place at any time, in Friedrich Wilhelm's Army.

From an early period, the French intentions upon Philipsburg might be foreseen or guessed: and in the end of March, Maréchal Berwick, 'in three divisions,' fairly appears in that quarter; his purpose evident. So that the Reich's-Army, were it in the least ready, ought to rendezvous, and reinforce the handful of Austrians there. Friedrich Wilhelm's part of the Reich's-Army does accordingly straightway get on march; leaves Berlin, after the due reviewing, '8th April:'[4] eight regiments of it, three of Horse and five of Foot, Goltz Foot-regiment one of them;—a General Röder, unexceptionable General, to command in chief;—and will arrive, though the farthest off, 'first of all the Reich's-Contingents;' 7th of June, namely. The march, straight south, must be some four hundred miles.

Besides the Official Generals, certain high military dignitaries, Schulenburg, Bredow, Majesty himself at their head, propose to go as volunteers;—especially the Crown-Prince, whose eagerness is very great, has got liberty to go. "As volunteer" he too: as Colonel of Goltz, it might have had its unsuitabilities, in etiquette and otherwise. Few volunteers are more interested than the Crown-Prince. Watching the great War-theatre uncurtain itself in this manner, from Dantzig down to Naples; and what his own share in it shall be: this, much more than his Marriage, I suppose, has occupied his thoughts since that event. Here out of Ruppin, dating six or seven weeks before the march of the Ten Thousand, is a small sign, one among many, of his outlooks in this matter. Small Note to his Cousin, Margraf Heinrich, the ill-behaved Margraf, much his comrade, who is always falling into scrapes; and whom he has just, not without difficulty, got delivered out of something of the kind.[5] He writes in German and in the intimate style of Thou:

[4] Fassmann, p. 495.

'Ruppin, 23d February 1734. My dear Brother,—I can with pleasure answer that the King hath spoken of thee altogether favourably 'to me' (scrape now abolished, for the time):—'and I think it would 'not have an ill effect, wert thou to apply for leave to go with the Ten 'Thousand whom he is sending to the Rhine, and do the Campaign 'with them as volunteer. I am myself going with that Corps; so I 'doubt not the King would allow thee.

'I take the freedom to send herewith a few bottles of Champagne; 'and wish' all manner of good things. 'FRIEDRICH.'[6]

This Margraf Heinrich goes; also his elder Brother, Margraf Friedrich Wilhelm,—who long persecuted Wilhelmina with his hopes; and who is now about getting Sophie Dorothee, a junior Princess, much better than he merits: Betrothal is the week after these Ten Thousand march;[7] he thirty, she fifteen. He too will go; as will the other pair of Cousin Margraves,—Karl, who was once our neighbour in Cüstrin; and the Younger Friedrich Wilhelm, whose fate lies at Prag if he knew it. Majesty himself will go as volunteer. Are not great things to be done, with Eugene for General?—To understand the insignificant Siege of Philipsburg, sum-total of the Rhine Campaign, which filled the Crown-Prince's and so many other minds brimful that Summer, and is now wholly out of every mind, the following Excerpt may be admissible:

'The unlucky little Town of Philipsburg, key of the Rhine in that 'quarter, fortified under difficulties by old Bishops of Speyer, who some-'times resided there,[8] has been dismantled and refortified, has had its 'Rhine-bridge torn down and set up again; been garrisoned now by this 'party, now by that, who had "right of garrison there;" nay France 'has sometimes had "the right of garrison;"—and the poor little Town

[5] Œuvres de Frédéric, xxvii. part 2d, pp. 8, 9.
[6] Ib. xxvii. part 2d, p. 10.
[7] 16th April 1734 (Ib. part 1st, p. 14 n.).
[8] Köhler, Münzbelustigungen, vi. 169.

'has suffered much, and been tumbled sadly about in the Succession-'Wars and perpetual controversies between France and Germany in 'that quarter. In the time we are speaking of, it has a "flying-bridge" '(of I know not what structure), with fortified "bridge-head (tête-de-'pont)," on the western or Franceward side of the River. Town's bul-'warks, and complex engineering defences, are of good strength, all 'put in repair for this occasion: Reich and Kaiser have an effective 'garrison there, and a commandant determined on defence to the utter-'most: what the unfortunate Inhabitants, perhaps a thousand or so in 'number, thought or did under such a visitation of ruin and bombshells, 'History gives not the least hint anywhere. "Quite used to it!" thinks 'History, and attends to other points.

'The Rhine Valley here is not of great breadth: eastward the 'heights rise to be mountainous in not many miles. By way of defence 'to this Valley, in the Eugene-Marlborough Wars, there was, about 'forty miles southward, or higher up the River than Philipsburg, a 'military line or chain of posts; going from Stollhofen, a boggy hamlet 'on the Rhine, with cunning indentations, and learned concatenation 'of bog and bluff, up into the inaccessibilities,—Lines of Stollhofen, the 'name of it,—which well-devised barrier did good service for certain 'years. It was not till, I think, the fourth year of their existence, year '1707, that Villars, the same Villars who is now in Italy, "stormed 'the Lines of Stollhofen;" which made him famous that year.

'The Lines of Stollhofen have now, in 1734, fallen flat again; but 'Eugene remembers them, and, I could guess, it was he who suggests 'a similar expedient. At all events, there is a similar expedient fallen 'upon: Lines of Ettlingen this time; one-half nearer Philipsburg; run-'ning from Mühlburg on the Rhine-brink up to Ettlingen in the Hills.* 'Nearer, by twenty miles; and, I guess, much more slightly done. We 'shall see these Lines of Ettlingen, one point of them, for a moment: '—and they would not be worth mentioning at all, except that in care-'less Books they too are called Lines of Stollhofen,[9] and the ingenuous 'reader is sent wandering on his map to no purpose.'

'Lines of Ettlingen' they are; related, as now said, to the Stollhofen set. Duke Ferdinand of Brunswick-Bevern, one of the Four Feldmarschalls, has some ineffectual handful of Imperial troops dotted about, within these Lines and on the skirts of Philipsburg;—eagerly waiting till the Reich's-Army gather to him; otherwise he must come to nothing. Will at any rate, I should think, be happy to resign in favour of Prince Eugene, were that little hero once on the ground.

On Mayday, Maréchal Berwick, who has been awake in this quarter, 'in three divisions,' for a month past,—very impatient till Belleisle with the first division should have taken Trarbach, and made the Western interior parts secure,—did actually cross the Rhine, with his second division, 'at Fort Louis,' well up the River, well south of Philipsburg; intending to attack the Lines of Ettlingen, and so get in upon the Town. There is a third division, about to lay pontoons for itself a good way farther down, which will attack the Lines simultaneously from within,—that is to say, shall come upon the back of poor Bevern and his defensive handful of troops, and astonish him there. All prospers to Berwick in this matter: Noailles his lieutenant (not yet gone to Italy till next year), with whom is Maurice Comte de Saxe (afterwards Maréchal de Saxe), an excellent observant Officer, marches up to Ettlingen, May 3d; bivouacks 'at the base of the mountain' (no great things of a mountain); ascends the same in two columns, horse and foot, by the first sunlight next morning; forms on a little plain on the top; issues through a thin wood,—and actually beholds those same Lines of Ettlingen, the outmost eastern end of them: a somewhat inconsiderable matter, after all! Here is Noailles's own account:

* Map at p. 170.

[9] Wilhelmina (ii. 206), for instance; who, or whose Printer, calls them 'Lines of Stokoff' even.

4th-7th June 1734.

'These retrenchments, made in Turk fashion, consisted of big trees 'set zigzag (en échiquier), twisted together by the branches; the whole 'about five fathoms thick. Inside of it were a small forlorn of Aus-'trians: these steadily await our grenadiers, and do not give their vol-'ley till we are close. Our grenadiers receive their volley; clear the 'intertwisted trees, after receiving a second volley (total loss seventy-'five killed and wounded); and—the enemy quits his post; and the 'Lines of Ettlingen are stormed!'[10] This is not like storming the Lines of Stollhofen; a thing to make Noailles famous in the Newspapers for a year. But it was a useful small feat, and well enough performed on his part. The truth is, Berwick was about attacking the Lines simultaneously on the other or Mühlburg end of them (had not Noailles, now victorious, galloped to forbid); and what was far more considerable, those other French, to the northward, "upon pontoons," are fairly across; like to be upon the back of Duke Ferdinand and his handful of defenders. Duke Ferdinand perceives that he is come to nothing; hastily collects his people from their various posts; retreats with them that same night, unpursued, to Heilbronn; and gives-up the command to Prince Eugene, who is just arrived there,—who took quietly two pinches of snuff on hearing this news of Ettlingen, and said, "No matter, after all!"

Berwick now forms the Siege, at his discretion; invests

[10] Noailles, Mémoires (in Petitot's Collection), iii. 207.

Philipsburg, 13th May;[11] begins firing, night of the 3d-4th June;—Eugene waiting at Heilbronn till the Reich's-Army come up. The Prussian Ten Thousand do come, all in order, on the 7th: the rest by degrees, all later, and all not quite in order. Eugene, the Prussians having joined him, moves down towards Philipsburg and its cannonading; encamps close to rearward of the besieging French. "Camp of Wiesenthal" they call it; Village of Wiesenthal with bogs, on the left, being his head-quarters; Village of Waghäusel, down near the River, a five-miles distance, being his limit on the right. Berwick, in front, industriously battering Philipsburg into the River, has thrown-up strong lines behind him, strongly manned, to defend himself from Eugene; across the River, Berwick has one Bridge, and at the farther end one battery with which he plays upon the rear of Philipsburg. He is much criticised by unoccupied people, "Eugene's attack will ruin us on those terms!"—and much incommoded by overflowings of the Rhine; Rhine swoln by melting of the mountain-snows, as is usual there. Which inundations Berwick had well foreseen, though the War-minister at Paris would not: "Haste!" answered the War-minister always: "We shall be in right time. I tell you there have fallen no snows this winter: how can inundation be?"—"Depends on the heat," said Berwick; "there are snows enough always in stock up there!"

And so it proves, though the War-minister would not believe; and Berwick has to take the inundations, and to take the circumstances;—and to try if, by his own continual best exertions, he can but get Philipsburg into the bargain. On the 12th of June, visiting his posts, as he daily does, the first thing, Berwick stept out of the trenches, anxious for clear view of something; stept upon 'the crest of the sap,' a place exposed to both French and Austrian batteries, and which had been forbidden to the soldiers,—and there, as he anxiously scanned matters through his glass, a cannon-ball, unknown whether French or Austrian, shivered away the head of Berwick; left others to deal with the criticisms, and the inundations, and the operations big or little, at Philipsburg and elsewhere! Siege went on, better or worse, under the next in command; 'Paris in great anxiety,' say the Books.

It is a hot siege, a stiff defence; Prince Eugene looks on, [11] Berwick, ii. 312; 23d, says Noailles's Editor (iii. 210).

29th June 1734.

but does not attack in the way apprehended. Southward in Italy, we hear there is marching, strategying in the Parma Country; Graf von Mercy likely to come to an action before long. Northward, Dantzig by this time is all wrapt in fire-whirlwinds; its sallyings and outer defences all driven in; mere torrents of Russian bombs raining on it day and night; French auxiliaries, snapt-up at landing, are on board Russian ships; and poor Stanislaus and 'the Lady of Quality who shot the first gun' have a bad outlook there. Towards the end of the month, the Berlin volunteer Generals, our Crown-Prince and his Margraves among them, are getting on the road for Philipsburg;—and that is properly the one point we are concerned with. Which took effect in manner following.

Tuesday evening 29th June, there is Ball at Monbijou; the Crown-Prince and others busy dancing there, as if nothing special lay ahead. Nevertheless, at three in the morning he has changed his ball-dress for a better, he and certain more; and is rushing southward, with his volunteer Generals and Margraves, full speed, saluted by the rising sun, towards Philipsburg and the Seat of War. And the same night, King Stanislaus, if any of us cared for him, is on flight from Dantzig, 'disguised as a cattle-dealer;' got out on the night of Sunday last, Town under such a rain of bombshells being palpably too hot for him: got out, but cannot get across the muddy intricacies of the Weichsel; lies painfully squatted up and down, in obscure alehouses, in that Stygian Mud-Delta,—a matter of life and death to get across, and not a boat to be had, such the vigilance of the Russian. Dantzig is capitulating, dreadful penalties exacted, all the heavier as no Stanislaus is to be found in it; and search all the keener rises in the Delta after him. Through perils and adventures of the sort usual on such occasions,[12] Stanislaus does get across; and in time does reach Preussen; where, by Friedrich Wilhelm's order, safe opulent asylum is afforded him, till the Fates (when this War ends) determine what is to become of the poor Imaginary Majesty. We leave him, squatted in the intricacies of the Mud-Delta, to follow our Crown-Prince, who in the same hour is rushing far elsewhither.

[12] Credible modest detail of them, in a Letter from Stanislaus himself (History of Stanislaus, already cited, pp. 235-248).

Margraves, Generals and he, in their small string of carriages, go on, by extra-post, day and night; no rest till they get to Hof, in the Culmbach neighbourhood, a good two hundred miles off,—near Wilhelmina, and more than halfway to Philipsburg. Majesty Friedrich Wilhelm is himself to follow in about a week: he has given strict order against waste of time: "Not to part company; go together, and not by Anspach or Baireuth,"—though they lie almost straight for you.

This latter was a sore clause to Friedrich, who had counted all along on seeing his dear faithful Wilhelmina, as he passed: therefore, as the Papa's Orders, dangerous penalty lying in them, cannot be literally disobeyed, the question rises, How see Wilhelmina and not Baireuth? Wilhelmina, weak as she is and unfit for travelling, will have to meet him in some neutral place, suitablest for both. After various shiftings, it has been settled between them that Berneck, a little town twelve miles from Baireuth on the Hof road, will do; and that Friday, probably early, will be the day. Wilhelmina, accordingly, is on the road that morning, early enough; Husband with her, and ceremonial attendants, in honour of such a Brother; morning is of sultry windless sort; day hotter and hotter;—at Berneck is no Crown-Prince, in the House appointed for him; hour after hour, Wilhelmina waits there in vain. The truth is, one of the smallest accidents has happened: the Generals 'lost a wheel at Gera yesterday;' were left behind there with their smiths, have not yet appeared; and the insoluble question among Friedrich and the Margraves is, "We dare not go on without them, then? We dare;—dare we?" Question like to drive Friedrich mad, while the hours, at any rate, are slipping on! Here are Three Letters of Friedrich, legible at last; which, with Wilhelmina's account from the other side, represent a small entirely human scene in this French-Austrian War,—nearly all of human we have found in the beggarly affair:

1. To Princess Wilhelmina, at Baireuth, or on the road to Berneck.

'Hof, 2d July' (not long after 4 A.M.) '1734.

'My dear Sister,—Here am I within six leagues' (say eight or more, twenty-five miles English) 'of a Sister whom I love; and I have to 'decide that it will be impossible to see her, after all!'—Does decide so, accordingly, for reasons known to us.

2d July 1734.

'I have never so lamented the misfortune of not depending on my'self as at this moment! The King being but very sour-sweet on my 'score, I dare not risk the least thing: Monday come a week, when he 'arrives himself, I should have a pretty scene (serais joliment traité) in 'the Camp, if I were found to have disobeyed orders.

* * 'The Queen commands me to give you a thousand regards from 'her. She appeared much affected at your illness; but for the rest, I 'could not warrant you how sincere it was; for she is totally changed,
'and I have quite lost reckoning of her (n'y connais rien). That goes
'so far that she has done me hurt with the King, all she could: how'ever, that is over now. As to Sophie' (young Sister just betrothed to the eldest Margraf whom you know), 'she also is no longer the same;
'for she approves all that the Queen says or does; and she is charmed
' with her big clown (gros nigaud) of a Bridegroom.

'The King is more difficult than ever: he is content with nothing,
'so as to have lost whatsoever could be called gratitude for all pleasures
'one can do him,'—marrying against one's will, and the like. 'As to 'his health, it is one day better, another worse; but the legs, they are 'always swelled. Judge what my joy must be to get out of that turpitude,
'—for the King will only stay a fortnight, at most, in the Camp.

'Adieu, my adorable Sister: I am so tired, I cannot stir; having 'left on Tuesday night, or rather Wednesday morning at three o'clock, 'from a Ball at Monbijou, and arrived here this Friday morning at 'four. I recommend myself to your gracious remembrance; and am,
'for my own part, till death, dearest Sister,'—Your—

'FRIEDRICH.'[13]

This is Letter First; written Friday morning, on the edge of getting into bed, after such fatigue; and it has, as natural in that mood, given-up the matter in despair. It did not meet Wilhelmina on the road; and she had left Baireuth;—where it met her, I do not know; probably at home, on her return, when all was over. Let Wilhelmina now speak her own lively experiences of that same Friday:

'I got to Berneck at ten. The heat was excessive; I found myself
'quite worn-out with the little journey I had done. I alighted at the 'House which had been got ready for my Brother. We waited for 'him, and in vain waited, till three in the afternoon. At three we lost 'patience; had dinner served without him. Whilst we were at table,
'there came on a frightful thunderstorm. I have witnessed nothing so
'terrible: the thunder roared and reverberated among the rocky cliffs
'which begirdle Berneck; and it seemed as if the world was going to 'perish: a deluge of rain succeeded the thunder.

'It was four o'clock; and I could not understand what had become
'of my Brother. I had sent out several persons on horseback to get tidings of him, and none of them came back. At length, in spite of 'all my prayers, the Hereditary Prince' (my excellent Husband) 'himself would go in search. I remained waiting till nine at night, and 'nobody returned. I was in cruel agitations: these cataracts of rain 'are very dangerous in the mountain countries; the roads get suddenly 'overflowed, and there often happen misfortunes. I thought for certain, 'there had one happened to my Brother or to the Hereditary Prince.' Such a 2d of July to poor Wilhelmina!

[13] Œuvres de Frédéric, xxvii. part 1st, p. 13.

'At last, about nine, somebody brought word that my Brother had 'changed his route, and was gone to Culmbach' (a House of ours, lying westward, known to readers); 'there to stay over night. I was 'for setting out thither,—Culmbach is twenty miles from Berneck; but 'the roads are frightful,' White Mayn, still a young River, dashing through the rock-labyrinths there, 'and full of precipices:—everybody 'rose in opposition, and, whether I would or not, they put me into the 'carriage for Himmelkron' (partly on the road thither), 'which is only 'about ten miles off. We had like to have got drowned on the road; 'the waters were so swoln' (White Mayn and its angry brooks), 'the 'horses could not cross but by swimming.

'I arrived at last, about one in the morning. I instantly threw 'myself on a bed. I was like to die with weariness; and in mortal 'terrors that something had happened to my Brother or the Hereditary 'Prince. This latter relieved me on his own score; he arrived at last, 'about four o'clock,—had still no news farther of my Brother. I was 'beginning to doze a little, when they came to warn me that "M. von 'Knobelsdorf wished to speak with me from the Prince-Royal." I darted out of bed, and ran to him. He,' handing me a Letter, 'brought 'word that'—

But let us now give Letter Second, which has turned up lately, and which curiously completes the picture here. Friedrich, on rising refreshed with sleep at Hof, had taken a cheerfuler view; and the Generals still lagging rearward, he thinks it possible to see Wilhelmina after all. Possible; and yet so very dangerous,—perhaps not possible? Here is a second Letter written from Münchberg, some fifteen miles farther on, at an after period of the same Friday: purport still of a perplexed nature, "I will, and I dare not;"—practical outcome, of itself uncertain, is scattered now by torrents and thunderstorms. This is the Letter, which Knobelsdorf now hands to Wilhelmina at that untimely hour of Saturday:

2. To Princess Wilhelmina (by Knobelsdorf).

'Münchberg, 2d July 1734.

'My dearest Sister,—I am in despair that I cannot satisfy my im-'patience and my duty,—to throw myself at your feet this day. But 3d July 1734.

'alas, dear Sister, it does not depend on me: we poor Princes,' the Margraves and I, 'are obliged to wait here till our Generals' (Bredow, Schulenburg and Company) 'come up; we dare not go along without 'them. They broke a wheel in Gera' (fifty miles behind us); 'hearing 'nothing of them since, we are absolutely forced to wait here. Judge 'in what a mood I am, and what sorrow must be mine! Express order 'not to go by Baireuth or Anspach:—forbear, dear Sister, to torment 'me on things not depending on myself at all.

'I waver between hope and fear of paying my court to you. I 'hope it might still be at Berneck,' this evening,—'if you could con- 'trive a road into the Nürnberg Highway again; avoiding Baireuth: 'otherwise I dare not go. The Bearer, who is Captain Knobelsdorf' (excellent judicious man, old acquaintance from the Cüstrin time, who attends upon us, actual Captain once, but now titular merely, given to architecture and the fine arts[14]), 'will apprise you of every particular: 'let Knobelsdorf settle something that may be possible. This is how 'I stand at present; and instead of having to expect some favour from 'the King' (after what I have done by his order), 'I get nothing but 'chagrin. But what is crueler upon me than all, is that you are ill. 'God, in his grace, be pleased to help you, and restore the precious 'health which I so much wish you!' ✿ ✿

'FRIEDRICH.'[15]

Judicious Knobelsdorf settles that the meeting is to be this very morning at eight; Wilhelmina (whose memory a little fails her in the insignificant points) does not tell us where: but, by faint indications, I perceive it was in the Lake-House, pleasant Pavilion in the ancient artificial Lake, or big ornamental Fishpond, called Brandenburger Weiher, a couple of miles to the north of Baireuth: there Friedrich is to stop,—keeping the Paternal Order from the teeth outwards in this manner. Eight o'clock: so that Wilhelmina is obliged at once to get upon the road again,—poor Princess, after such a day and night. Her description of the Interview is very good:

'My Brother overwhelmed me with caresses; but found me in so 'pitiable a state, he could not restrain his tears. I was not able to 'stand on my limbs; and felt like to faint every moment, so weak was 'I. He told me the King was much angered at the Margraf' (my Father-in-Law) 'for not letting his Son make the Campaign,'—concerning which point, said Son, my Husband, being Heir-Apparent, there had been much arguing in Court and Country, here at Baireuth, and endless anxiety on my poor part, lest he should get killed in the Wars. 'I told him all the Margraf's reasons; and added, that surely they were 'good, in respect of my dear Husband. "Well," said he, "let him 'quit soldiering, then, and give back his regiment to the King. But 'for the rest, quiet yourself as to the fears you may have about him if 'he do go; for I know, by certain information, that there will be no 'blood spilt."—"They are at the Siege of Philipsburg, however."—'"Yes," said my Brother; "but there will not be a battle risked to 'hinder it."

[14] Seyfarth (Anonymous), Lebens- und Regierungs-Geschichte Friedrichs des Andern (Leipzig, 1786), ii. 200. Œuvres de Frédéric, vii. 33. Preuss, Friedrich mit seinen Verwandten (Berlin, 1838), pp. 8, 17.

[15] Œuvres de Frédéric, xxvii. part 1st, p. 15.

'The Hereditary Prince,' my Husband, 'came in while we were 'talking so; and earnestly entreated my Brother to get him away from 'Baireuth. They went to a window, and talked a long time together. 'In the end, my Brother told me he would write a very obliging Letter 'to the Margraf, and give him such reasons in favour of the Campaign, 'that he doubted not it would turn the scale. "We will stay together," 'said he, addressing the Hereditary Prince; "and I shall be charmed 'to have my dear Brother always beside me." He wrote the Letter; 'gave it to Baron Stein' (Chamberlain or Goldstick of ours), 'to deliver 'to the Margraf. He promised to obtain the King's express leave to 'stop at Baireuth on his return;—after which he went away. It was 'the last time I saw him on the old footing with me: he has much 'changed since then!—We returned to Baireuth; where I was so ill 'that, for three days, they did not think I should get over it.'[16]

Crown-Prince dashes off, southwestward, through cross country, into the Nürnberg Road again; gets to Nürnberg that same Saturday night; and there, among other Letters, writes the following; which will wind-up this little Incident for us, still in a human manner:

3. To Princess Wilhelmina at Baireuth.

'Nürnberg, 3d July 1734.

'My dearest (très-chère) Sister,—It would be impossible to quit this 'place without signifying, dearest Sister, my lively gratitude for all the 'marks of favour you showed me in the Weiherhaus' (House on the Lake, today). 'The highest of all that it was possible to do, was that 'of procuring me the satisfaction of paying my court to you. I beg 'millions of pardons for so putting you about, dearest Sister; but I 'could not help it; for you know my sad circumstances well enough. 'In my great joy, I forgot to give you the Enclosed. I entreat you, 'write me often news of your health! Question the Doctors; and'—and in certain contingencies, the Crown-Prince 'would recommend 'goat's-milk' for his poor Sister. Had already, what was noted of him in after life, a tendency to give medical advice, in cases interesting to him?—

[16] Wilhelmina, ii. 200-202.

7th July 1734.

'Adieu, my incomparable and dear Sister. I am always the same 'to you, and will remain so till my death.—FRIEDRICH.'[17]

Generals with their wheel mended, Margraves, Prince and now the Camp Equipage too, are all at Nürnberg; and start on the morrow; hardly a hundred miles now to be done,—but on slower terms, owing to the Equipage. Heilbronn, place of arms or central stronghold of the Reich's-Army, they reach on Monday: about Eppingen, next night, if the wind is westerly, one may hear the cannon,—not without interest. It was Wednesday forenoon, 7th July 1734, on some hill-top coming down from Eppingen side, that the Prince first saw Philipsburg Siege, blotting the Rhine Valley yonder with its fire and counter-fire; and the Tents of Eugene stretching on this side: first view he ever had of the actualities of war. His account to Papa is so distinct and good, we look through it almost as at first-hand for a moment:

'Camp at Wiesenthal, Wednesday, 7th July 1734.

'Most All-gracious Father, * * We left Nürnberg' (nothing said of our Baireuth affair), '4th early, and did not stop till Heilbronn; where, 'along with the Equipage, I arrived on the 5th. Yesterday I came 'with the Equipage to Eppingen' (twenty miles, a slow march, giving the fourgons time); 'and this morning we came to the Camp at Wie-'senthal. I have dined with General Röder' (our Prussian Commander); 'and, after dinner, rode with Prince Eugene while giving the parole. I 'handed him my All-gracious Father's Letter, which much rejoiced 'him. After the parole, I went to see the relieving of our outposts' (change of sentries there), 'and view the French retrenchment.

'We,' your Majesty's Contingent, 'are throwing-up three redoubts: 'at one of them today, three musketeers have been miserably shot' (geschossen, wounded, not quite killed); 'two are of Röder's, and one 'is of Finkenstein's regiment.

'Tomorrow I will ride to a village which is on our right wing; 'Waghäusel is the name of it'[18] (some five miles off, north of us, near by the Rhine): 'there is a steeple there, from which one can see the 'French Camp; from this point I will ride down, between the two 'Lines,' French and ours, 'to see what they are like.

'There are quantities of hurdles and fascines being made; which, 'as I hear, are to be employed in one of two different plans. The first 'plan is, To attack the French retrenchment generally; the ditch which 'is before it, and the morass which lies on our left wing, to be made 'passable with these fascines. The other plan is, To amuse the Enemy 'by a false attack, and throw succour into the Town.—One thing is [17] Œuvres de Frédéric, xxvii. part 1st, p. 57. [18] Büsching, v. 1152.

'certain, in a few days we shall have a stroke of work here. Happen 'what may, my All-gracious Father may be assured that' &c., 'and 'that I will do nothing unworthy of him. FRIEDRICH.'[19]

Neither of those fine plans took effect; nor did anything take effect, as we shall see. But in regard to that 'survey 'from the steeple of Waghäusel, and ride home again between 'the Lines,'—in regard to that, here is an authentic fraction of anecdote, curiously fitting in, which should not be omitted. A certain Herr von Suhm, Saxon Minister at Berlin, occasionally mentioned here, stood in much Correspondence with the Crown-Prince in the years now following: Correspondence which was all published at the due distance of time; Suhm having, at his decease, left the Prince's Letters carefully assorted with that view, and furnished with a Prefatory 'Character of the Prince-Royal (Portrait du Prince-Royal, par M. de Suhm).' Of which Preface this is a small paragraph, relating to the Siege of Philipsburg; offering us a momentary glance into one fibre of the futile War now going on there. Of Suhm, and how exact he was, we shall know a little by and by. Of 'Prince von Lichtenstein,' an Austrian man and soldier of much distinction afterwards, we have only to say that he came to Berlin next year on Diplomatic business, and that probably enough he had been eyewitness to the little fact, —fact credible perhaps without much proving. One rather regretted there was no date to it, no detail to give it whereabout and fixity in our conception; that the poor little Anecdote, though indubitable, had to hang vaguely in the air. Now, however, the above dated Letter does, by accident, date Suhm's Anecdote too; date 'July 8' as good as certain for it; the Siege itself having ended (July 18) in ten days more. Herr von Suhm writes (not for publication till after Friedrich's death and his own):

'It was remarked in the Rhine Campaign of 1734, that this Prince 'has a great deal of intrepidity (beaucoup de valeur). On one occasion, 'among others' (to all appearance, this very day, 'July 8,' riding home from Waghäusel between the lines), 'when he had gone to reconnoitre 'the Lines of Philipsburg, with a good many people about him,—passing, on his return, along a strip of very thin wood, the cannon-shot 'from the Lines accompanied him incessantly, and crashed down several 'trees at his side; during all which he walked his horse along at the 'old pace, precisely as if nothing were happening, nor in his hand upon

[19] Œuvres, xxvii. part 3d, p. 79.

'the bridle was there the least trace of motion perceptible. Those who 'gave attention to the matter remarked, on the contrary, that he did 'not discontinue speaking very tranquilly to some Generals who accom- 'panied him; and who admired his bearing, in a kind of danger with 'which he had not yet had occasion to familiarise himself. It is from 'the Prince von Lichtenstein that I have this anecdote.'[20]

On the 15th arrived his Majesty in person, with the Old Dessauer, Buddenbrock, Derschau and a select suite; in hopes of witnessing remarkable feats of war, now that the crisis of Philipsburg was coming on. Many Princes were assembled there, in the like hope: Prince of Orange (honeymoon well ended[21]), a vivacious light gentleman, slightly crooked in the back; Princes of Baden, Darmstadt, Waldeck: all manner of Princes and distinguished personages, Fourscore Princes of them by tale, the eyes of Europe being turned on this matter, and on old Eugene's guidance of it. Prince Fred of England, even he had a notion of coming to learn war.

It was about this time, not many weeks ago, that Fred, now falling into much discrepancy with his Father, and at a loss for a career to himself, appeared on a sudden in the Antechamber at St. James's, one day; and solemnly demanded an interview with his Majesty. Which his indignant Majesty, after some conference with Walpole, decided to grant. Prince Fred, when admitted, made three demands: 1°. To be allowed to go upon the Rhine Campaign, by way of a temporary career for himself; 2°. That he might have something definite to live upon, a fixed revenue being suitable in his circumstances; 3°. That, after those sad Prussian disappointments, some suitable Consort might be chosen for him,—heart and household lying in such waste condition. Poor Fred, who of us knows what of sense might be in these demands? Few creatures more absurdly situated are to be found in this world. To go where his equals were, and learn soldiering a little, might really have been useful. Paternal Majesty received Fred and his Three Demands with fulminating look; answered, to the first two, nothing; to the third, about a Consort, "Yes, you shall; but be respectful to the Queen;—and now off with you; away!"[22]

[20] Correspondance de Frédéric II avec M. de Suhm (Berlin, 1787); Avant-propos, p. xviii. (written 28th April 1740). The Correspondance is all in Œuvres de Frédéric (xvi. 247-408); but the Suhm Preface not.

[21] Had wedded Princess Anne, George II.'s eldest, 25th (14th) March 1734; to the joy of self and mankind, in England here.

[22] Coxe's Walpole, i. 322.

Poor Fred, he has a circle of hungry Parliamenteers about him; young Pitt, a Cornet of Horse, young Lyttelton of Hagley, our old Soissons friend, not to mention others of worse type; to whom this royal Young Gentleman, with his vanities, ambitions, inexperiences, plentiful inflammabilities, is important for exploding Walpole. He may have, and with great justice I should think, the dim consciousness of talents for doing something better than 'write madrigals' in this world: infinitude of wishes and appetites he clearly has;—he is full of inflammable materials, poor youth. And he is the Fireship those older hands make use of for blowing Walpole and Company out of their anchorage. What a school of virtue for a young gentleman;—and for the elder ones concerned with him! He did not get to the Rhine Campaign; nor indeed ever to anything, except to writing madrigals, and being very futile, dissolute and miserable with what of talent Nature had given him. Let us pity the poor constitutional Prince. Our Fritz was only in danger of losing his life; but what is that, to losing your sanity, personal identity almost, and becoming Parliamentary Fireship to his Majesty's Opposition?

Friedrich Wilhelm stayed a month campaigning here; graciously declined Prince Eugene's invitation to lodge in Head Quarters, under a roof and within built walls; preferred a tent among his own people, and took the common hardships,—with great hurt to his weak health, as was afterwards found.

In these weeks, the big Czarina, who has set a price (100,000 rubles, say 15,000*l.*) upon the head of poor Stanislaus, hears that his Prussian Majesty protects him; and thereupon signifies, in high terms, That she, by her Feldmarschall Münnich, will come across the frontiers and seize the said Stanislaus. To which his Prussian Majesty answers positively, though in proper Diplomatic tone, "Madam, I will in no wise permit it!" Perhaps his Majesty's remarkablest transaction, here on the Rhine, was this concerning Stanislaus. For Seckendorf the Feldzeugmeister was here also, on military function, not forgetful of the Diplomacies; who busily assailed his Majesty, on the Kaiser's part, in the same direction: "Give up Stanislaus, your Majesty! How ridiculous (lächerlich) to be perhaps ruined for Stanislaus!" But without the least effect, now or afterwards.

Poor Stanislaus, in the beginning of July, got across into Preussen, as we intimated; and there he continued, safe against any amount of rubles and Feldmarschalls, entreaties and menaces. At Angerburg, on the Prussian frontier, he found a steadfast veteran, Lieutenant-General von Katte, Commandant in those parts (Father of a certain poor Lieutenant, whom we tragically knew of long ago!)—which veteran gentleman received the Fugitive Majesty,[23] with welcome in the King's name, and assurances of an honourable asylum till the times and roads should clear again for his fugitive Majesty. Fugitive Majesty, for whom the roads and times were very dark at present, went to Marienwerder; talked of going 'to Pillau, for a sea-passage,' of going to various places; went finally to Königsberg, and there,—with a considerable Polish Suite of Fugitives, very moneyless, and very expensive, most of them, who had accumulated about him,—set-up his abode. There for almost two years, in fact till this War ended, the Fugitive Polish Majesty continued; Friedrich Wilhelm punctually protecting him, and even paying him a small Pension (50*l.* a month),—France, the least it could do for the Grandfather of France, allowing a much larger one; larger, though still inadequate. France has left its Grandfather strangely in the lurch here; with '100,000 rubles on his head.' But Friedrich Wilhelm knows the sacred rites, and will do them; continues deaf as a doorpost alike to the menaces and the entreaties of Kaiser and Czarina; strictly intimating to Münnich what the Laws of Neutrality are, and that they must be observed. Which, by his Majesty's good arrangements, Münnich, willing enough to the contrary had it been feasible, found himself obliged to comply with. Prussian Majesty, like a King and a gentleman, would listen to no terms about dismissing or delivering-up, or otherwise failing in the sacred rites to Stanislaus; but honourably kept him there till the times and routes cleared themselves again.[24] A plain piece of duty; punctually done: the beginning of it falls here in the Camp at Philipsburg, July-August 1734; in May 1736 we shall see some glimpse of the end!—

His Prussian Majesty in Camp at Philipsburg,—so distinguished a volunteer, doing us the honour to encamp here, [23] Militair-Lexikon, ii. 254. [24] Förster, ii. 132, 134-136.

—' was asked to all the Councils-of-War that were held,' say the Books. And he did attend, the Crown-Prince and he, on important occasions: but, alas, there was, so to speak, nothing to be consulted of. Fascines and hurdles lay useless; no attempt was made to relieve Philipsburg. On the third day after his Majesty's arrival, July 18th, Philipsburg, after a stiff defence of six weeks, growing hopeless of relief, had to surrender;—French then proceeded to repair Philipsburg, no attempt on Eugene's part to molest them there. If they try ulterior operations on this side the River, he counter-tries; and that is all.

Our Crown-Prince, somewhat of a judge in after years, is maturely of opinion, That the French Lines were by no means inexpugnable; that the French Army might have been ruined under an attack of the proper kind.[25] Their position was bad; no room to unfold themselves for fight, except with the Town's cannon playing on them all the while; only one Bridge to get across by, in case of coming to the worse: defeat of them probable, and ruin to them inevitable in case of defeat. But Prince Eugene, with an Army little to his mind (Reich's-Contingents not to be depended on, thought Eugene), durst not venture: "Seventeen victorious Battles, and if we should be defeated in the eighteenth and last?"

It is probable the Old Dessauer, had he been Generalissimo, with this same Army,—in which, even in the Reich's part of it, we know Ten Thousand of an effective character,—would have done some stroke upon the French; but Prince Eugene would not try. Much dimmed from his former self this old hero; age now 73;—a good deal wearied with the long march through Time. And this very Summer, his Brother's Son, the last male of his House, had suddenly died of inflammatory fever; left the old man very mournful: "Alone, alone, at the end of one's long march; laurels have no fruit, then?" He stood cautious, on the defensive; and in this capacity is admitted to have shown skilful management.

But Philipsburg being taken, there is no longer the least event to be spoken of; the Campaign passed into a series of advancings, retreatings, facings, and then right-about facings, —painful manœuverings, on both sides of the Rhine and of the Neckar,—without result farther to the French, without memorability to either side. About the middle of August, Friedrich Wilhelm went away;—health much hurt by his month under canvas, amid Rhine inundations, and mere distressing phenomena. Crown-Prince Friedrich and a select party escorted his Majesty to Mainz, where was a Dinner of unusual sublimity by the Kurfürst there;[26]—Dinner done, his Majesty stept on board 'the Electoral Yacht;' and in this fine hospitable vehicle went sweeping through the Binger Loch, rapidly down towards Wesel; and the Crown-Prince and party returned to their Camp, which is upon the Neckar at this time.

[25] Œuvres de Frédéric, i. 167.

15th Aug. 1734.

Camp shifts about, and Crown-Prince in it: to Heidelberg, to Waiblingen, Weinheim; close to Mainz at one time: but it is not worth following: nor in Friedrich's own Letters, or in other documents, is there, on the best examination, anything considerable to be gleaned respecting his procedures there. He hears of the ill-success in Italy, Battle of Parma at the due date, with the natural feelings; speaks with a sorrowful gaiety, of the muddy fatigues, futilities here on the Rhine;—has the sense, however, not to blame his superiors unreasonably. Here, from one of his Letters to Colonel Camas, is a passage worth quoting for the credit of the writer. With Camas, a distinguished Prussian Frenchman, whom we mentioned elsewhere, still more with Madam Camas in time coming, he corresponded much, often in a fine filial manner:

'The present Campaign is a school, where profit may be reaped from 'observing the confusion and disorder which reigns in this Army: it 'has been a field very barren in laurels; and those who have been used, 'all their life, to gather such, and on Seventeen distinguished occasions 'have done so, can get none this time.' Next year, we all hope to be on the Moselle, and to find that a fruitfuler field. * * * 'I am afraid, 'dear Camas, you think I am going to put on the cothurnus; to set-up 'for a small Eugene, and, pronouncing with a doctoral tone what each 'should have done and not have done, condemn and blame to right 'and left. No, my dear Camas; far from carrying my arrogance to 'that point, I admire the conduct of our Chief, and do not disapprove 'that of his worthy Adversary; and far from forgetting the esteem 'and consideration due to persons who, scarred with wounds, have by 'years and long service gained a consummate experience, I shall hear 'them more willingly than ever as my teachers, and try to learn from 'them how to arrive at honour, and what is the shortest road into the 'secret of this Profession.'[27]

[26] 15th August (Fassmann, p. 511).

[27] 'Camp at Heidelberg, 11th September 1734' (Œuvres, xvi. 131).

This other, to Lieutenant Gröben, three weeks earlier in date, shows us a different aspect; which is at least equally authentic; and may be worth taking with us. Gröben is Lieutenant,—I suppose still on the Regiment Goltz, though he is left there behind;—at any rate, he is much a familiar with the Prince at Ruppin; was ringleader, it is thought, in those midnight pranks upon parsons, and the other escapades there;[28] a merry man, eight years older than the Prince,—with whom it is clear enough he stands on a very free footing. Philipsburg was lost a month ago; French are busy repairing it: and manœuvering, with no effect, to get into the interior of Germany a little. Weinheim is a little Town on the north side of the Neckar, a dozen miles or so from Mannheim;—out of which, and into which, the Prussian Corps goes shifting from time to time, as Prince Eugene and the French manœuvre to no purpose in that Rhine-Neckar Country. 'Herdek Teremtetem,' it appears, is a bit of Hungarian swearing; should be Ordek teremtete; and means "The Devil made you!"

[28] Büsching, v. 20.

17th Aug. 1734.

'Weinheim, 17th August 1734.

'Herdek Teremtetem! "Went with them, got hanged with them,"[29] 'said the Bielefeld Innkeeper! So will it be with me, poor devil; for 'I go dawdling about with this Army here; and the French will have 'the better of us. We want to be over the Neckar again' (to the South or Philipsburg side), 'and the rogues won't let us. What most pro-'vokes me in the matter is, that while we are here in such a wilderness 'on trouble, doing our utmost, by military labours and endurances, to 'make ourselves heroic, thou sittest, thou devil, at home!

'Duc de Bouillon has lost his equipage; our Hussars took it at 'Landau' (other side the Rhine, a while ago). 'Here we stand in 'mud to the ears; fifteen of the Regiment Alt-Baden have sunk alto-'gether in the mud. Mud comes of a waterspout, or sudden cataract 'on rain, there was in these Heidelberg Countries; two villages, 'Fuhrenheim and Sandhausen, it swam away, every stick of them '(ganz und gar).

'Captain von Stojentin, of Regiment Flans,' one of our eight Regiments here, 'has got wounded in the head, in an affair of honour; he 'is still alive, and it is hoped he will get through it.

'The Drill-Demon has now got into the Kaiser's people too: Prince 'Eugene is grown heavier with his drills than we ourselves. He is often 'three hours at it;—and the Kaiser's people curse us for the same, at 'a frightful rate. Adieu. If the Devil don't get thee, he ought. There-'fore vale.[30] FRIEDRICH.'

No laurels to be gained here; but plenty of mud, and laborious hardship,—met, as we perceive, with youthful stoicism, of the derisive, and perhaps of better forms. Friedrich is twenty-two and some months, when he makes his first Campaign. The general physiognomy of his behaviour in it we have to guess from these few indications. No doubt he profited by it, on the military side; and would study with quite new light and vivacity after such contact with the fact studied of. Very didactic to witness even 'the confusions of this Army,' and what comes of them to Armies! For the rest, the society of Eugene, [29] 'Mitgegangen, mitgehangen:' Letter is in German.

[30] Œuvres de Frédéric, xxvii. part 3d, p. 181.

Lichtenstein, and so many Princes of the Reich, and Chiefs of existing mankind, could not but be entertaining to the young man; and silently, if he wished to read the actual Time, as sure enough he, with human and with royal eagerness, did wish,—they were here as the alphabet of it to him: important for years coming. Nay it is not doubted, the insight he here got into the condition of the Austrian Army and its management,—'Army left seven days without bread,' for one instance, —gave him afterwards the highly important notion, that such Army could be beaten if necessary!—

Wilhelmina says, his chief comrade was Margraf Heinrich; —the Ill Margraf; who was cut by Friedrich, in after years, for some unknown bad behaviour. Margraf Heinrich 'led him into all manner of excesses,' says Wilhelmina,—probably in the language of exaggeration. He himself tells her, in one of his Letters, a day or two before Papa's departure: 'The Camp 'is soon to be close on Mainz, nothing but the Rhine between 'Mainz and our right wing where my place is; and so soon as 'Serenissimus goes' (Le Sérénissime, so he irreverently names Papa), 'I mean to be across for some sport,'[31]—no doubt the Ill Margraf with me! With the Elder Margraf, little Sophie's Betrothed, whom he called 'big clown' in a Letter we read, he is at this date in open quarrel,—'brouillé à toute outrance 'with the mad Son-in-law, who is the wildest wild-beast of all 'this Camp.'[32]

Wilhelmina's Husband had come, in the beginning of August; but was not so happy as he expected. Considerably cut-out by the Ill Heinrich. Here is a small adventure they had; mentioned by Friedrich, and copiously recorded by Wilhelmina: adventure on some River,—which we could guess, if it were worth guessing, to have been the Neckar, not the Rhine. French had a fortified post on the farther side of this River; Crown-Prince, Ill Margraf, and Wilhelmina's Husband were quietly looking about them, riding up the other side: Wilhelmina's Husband decided to take a pencil-drawing of the French post, and paused for that object. Drawing was proceeding unmolested, when his foolish Baireuth Hussar, having an excellent rifle (arquebuse rayée) with him, took it into his head to have a shot at the French sentries at long range. His shot hit nothing; but it awakened the French animosity, as was natural· the French began diligently firing; and might easily have done mischief. My Husband, volleying-out some rebuke upon the blockhead of a Hussar, finished his drawing, in spite of the French bullets; then rode up to the Crown-Prince and Ill Margraf, who had got their share of what was going, and were in no good humour with him. Ill Margraf rounded things into the Crown-Prince's ear, in an unmannerly way, with glances at my Husband;—who understood it well enough; and promptly coerced such ill-bred procedures, intimating, in a polite impressive way, that they would be dangerous if persisted in. Which reduced the Ill Margraf to a spiteful but silent condition. No other harm was done at that time; the French bullets all went awry, or 'even fell short, being sucked-in by the river,' thinks Wilhelmina.[33]

[31] Œuvres de Frédéric, xxvii. part 1st, p. 17 (10th Aug.). [32] Ib.

A more important feature of the Crown-Prince's life in these latter weeks is the news he gets of his Father. Friedrich Wilhelm, after quitting the Electoral Yacht, did his reviewing at Wesel, at Bielefeld, all his reviewing in those Rhine and Weser Countries; then turned aside to pay a promised visit to Ginkel the Berlin Dutch Ambassador, who has a fine House in those parts; and there his Majesty has fallen seriously ill. Obliged to pause at Ginkel's, and then at his own Schloss of Moyland, for some time; does not reach Potsdam till the 14th September, and then in a weak, worsening, and altogether dangerous condition, which lasts for months to come.[34] Wrecks of gout, they say, and of all manner of nosological mischief; falling to dropsy. Case desperate, think all the Newspapers, in a cautious form; which is Friedrich Wilhelm's own opinion pretty much, and that of those better informed. Here are thoughts for a Crown-Prince; well-affected to his Father, yet suffering much from him which is grievous. To bystanders, one now makes a different figure: "A Crown-Prince, who may be King one of these days,—whom a little adulation were well spent upon!" From within and from without come agitating influences; thoughts which must be rigorously repressed, and which are not wholly repressible. The soldiering Crown-Prince, from about the end of September, for the last week or two of this Campaign, is secretly no longer quite the same to himself or to others.

[33] Wilhelmina, ii. 208, 209; Œuvres de Frédéric, xxvii. part 1st, p. 19.
[34] Fassmann, pp. 512-533: September 1734-January 1735.

Glimpse of Lieutenant Chasot, and of other Acquisitions.

We have still two little points to specify, or to bring up from the rearward whither they are fallen, in regard to this Campaign. After which the wearisome Campaign shall terminate; Crown-Prince leading his Ten Thousand to Frankfurt, towards their winter-quarters in Westphalia; and then himself running across from Frankfurt (October 5th), to see Wilhelmina for a day or two on the way homewards:—with much pleasure to all parties, my readers and me included!

First point is, That, some time in this Campaign, probably towards the end of it, the Crown-Prince, Old Dessauer and some others with them, 'procured passports,' went across, and 'saw the French Camp,' and what new phenomena were in it for them. Where, when, how, or with what impression left on either side, we do not learn. It was not much of a Camp for military admiration, this of the French.[35] There were old soldiers of distinction in it here and there; a few young soldiers diligently studious of their art; and a great many young fops of high birth and high ways, strutting about 'in red-heeled shoes,' with 'Commissions got from Court' for this War, and nothing of the soldier but the epaulettes and plumages,—apt to be 'insolent' among their poorer comrades. From all parties, young and old, even from that insolent red-heel party, nothing but the highest finish of politeness could be visible on this particular occasion. Doubtless all passed in the usual satisfactory manner; and the Crown-Prince got his pleasant excursion, and materials, more or less, for after thought and comparison. But as there is nothing whatever of it on record for us but the bare fact, we leave it to the reader's imagination,—fact being indubitable, and details not inconceivable to lively readers. Among the French dignitaries doing the honours of their Camp on this occasion, he was struck by the General's Adjutant, a "Count de Rottembourg" (properly von Rothenburg, of German birth, kinsman to the Rothenburg whom we have seen as French Ambassador at Berlin long since); a promising young soldier; whom he did not lose sight of again, but acquired in due time to his own service, and found to be of eminent worth there. A Count von Schmettau, two Brothers von Schmettau, here in the Austrian service; superior men, Prussian by birth, and very fit to be acquired by and by; these the Crown-Prince had already noticed in this Rhine Campaign,—having always his eyes open to phenomena of that kind.

[35] Mémoires de Noailles (passim).

The second little point is of date perhaps two months anterior to that of the French Camp; and is marked sufficiently in this Excerpt from our confused Manuscripts:

Before quitting Philipsburg, there befel one slight adventure, which, though it seemed to be nothing, is worth recording here. One day, date not given, a young French Officer, of ingenuous prepossessing look, though much flurried at the moment, came across as involuntary deserter; flying from a great peril in his own camp. The name of him is Chasot, Lieutenant of such and such a Regiment: "Take me to Prince Eugene!" he entreats, which is done. Peril was this: A high young gentleman, one of those fops in red heels, ignorant, and capable of insolence to a poorer comrade of studious turn, had fixed a duel upon Chasot. Chasot ran him through, in fair duel; dead, and is thought to have deserved it. "But Duc de Boufflers is his kinsman: run, or you are lost!" cried everybody. The Officers of his Regiment hastily redacted some certificate for Chasot, hastily signed it; and Chasot ran, scarcely waiting to pack his baggage.

"Will not your Serene Highness protect me?"—"Certainly!" said Eugene;—gave Chasot a lodging among his own people; and appointed one of them, Herr Brender by name, to show him about, and teach him the nature of his new quarters. Chasot, a brisk, ingenuous young fellow, soon became a favourite; eager to be useful where possible; and very pleasant in discourse, said everybody.

By and by,—still at Philipsburg, as would seem, though it is not said,—the Crown-Prince heard of Chasot; asked Brender to bring him over. Here is Chasot's own account: through which, as through a small eylet-hole, we peep once more, and for the last time, direct into the Crown-Prince's Campaign-life on this occasion:

'Next morning, at ten o'clock the appointed hour, Brender having 'ordered out one of his horses for me, I accompanied him to the Prince; 'who received us in his Tent,—behind which he had, hollowed out to 'the depth of three or four feet, a large Dining-room, with windows, 'and a roof,' I hope of good height, 'thatched with straw. His Royal 'Highness, after two-hours conversation, in which he had put a hundred 'questions to me' (a Prince desirous of knowing the facts), 'dismissed 'us; and at parting, bade me return often to him in the evenings.

'It was in this Dining-room, at the end of a great dinner, the day 'after next, that the Prussian guard introduced a Trumpet from Monsieur d'Asfeld' (French Commander-in-Chief since Berwick's death),

'with my three horses, sent over from the French Army. Prince Eugene, 'who was present, and in good humour, said, "We must sell those 'horses, they don't speak German; Brender will take care to mount you 'some way or other." Prince Lichtenstein immediately put a price 'on my horses; and they were sold on the spot at three times their 'worth. The Prince of Orange, who was of this Dinner' (slightly crook-backed witty gentleman, English honeymoon well over), 'said to me 'in a half-whisper, "Monsieur, there is nothing like selling horses to 'people who have dined well."

'After this sale, I found myself richer than I had ever been in my 'life. The Prince-Royal sent me, almost daily, a groom and led horse, 'that I might come to him, and sometimes follow him in his excursions. 'At last, he had it proposed to me, by M. de Brender, and even by 'Prince Eugene, to accompany him to Berlin.' Which, of course, I did; taking Ruppin first. 'I arrived at Berlin from Ruppin, in 1734, 'two days after the marriage of Friedrich Wilhelm Margraf of Schwedt' (Ill Margraf's elder Brother, wildest wild-beast of this Camp) 'with the 'Princess Sophie,'—that is to say, 12th of November; Marriage having been on the 10th, as the Books teach us. Chasot remembers that, on the 14th, 'the Crown-Prince gave, in his Berlin mansion, a dinner to 'all the Royal Family,' in honour of that auspicious wedding.[36]

Thus is Chasot established with the Crown-Prince. He will turn-up fighting well in subsequent parts of this History; and again duelling fatally, though nothing of a quarrelsome man, as he asserts.

Crown-Prince's Visit to Baireuth on the Way home.

October 4th, the Crown-Prince has parted with Prince Eugene,—not to meet again in this world; 'an old hero gone to the shadow of himself,' says the Crown-Prince;[37]—and is giving his Prussian War-Captains a farewell dinner at Franfurt-on-Mayn; having himself led the Ten Thousand so far, towards Winter-quarters, and handing them over now to their usual commanders. They are to winter in Westphalia, these Ten Thousand, in the Paderborn-Münster Country; where they are nothing like welcome to the Ruling Powers; nor are intended to be so,—Kur-Köln (proprietor there) and his Brother of Bavaria having openly French leanings. The Prussian Ten Thousand will have to help themselves to the essential, therefore, without welcome;—and things are not pleasant. And the Ruling Powers, by protocolling, still more the Commonalty if it try at mobbing,[38] can only make them worse. Indeed it is said the Ten Thousand, though their bearing was so perfect otherwise, generally behaved rather ill in their marches over Germany, during this War,—and always worst, it was remarked by observant persons, in the countries (Bamberg and Würzburg, for instance) where their officers had in past years been in recruiting troubles. Whereby observant persons explained the phenomenon to themselves. But we omit all that; our concern lying elsewhere. 'Directly after dinner at Frankfurt,' the Crown-Prince drives off, rapidly as his wont is, towards Baireuth. He arrives there on the morrow; 'October 5th,' says Wilhelmina,—who again illuminates him to us, though with oblique lights, for an instant.

[36] Kurd von Schlözer, Chasot (Berlin, 1856), pp. 20-22. A pleasant little Book; tolerably accurate, and of very readable quality.
[37] Œuvres (Mém. de Brandebourg), i. 167.

5th Oct. 1734.

Wilhelmina was in low spirits:—weak health; add funeral of the Prince of Culmbach (killed in the Battle of Parma), illness of Papa, and other sombre events:—and was by no means content with the Crown-Prince, on this occasion. Strangely altered since we met him in July last! It may be, the Crown-Prince, looking, with an airy buoyancy of mind, towards a certain Event probably near, has got his young head inflated a little, and carries himself with a height new to this beloved Sister;—but probably the sad humour of the Princess herself has a good deal to do with it. Alas, the contrast between a heart knowing secretly its own bitterness, and a friend's heart conscious of joy and triumph, is harsh and shocking to the former of the two! Here is the Princess's account; with the subtrahend, twenty-five or seventy-five per cent, not deducted from it:

'My Brother arrived, the 5th of October. He seemed to me put 'out (décontenancé); and to break-off conversation with me, he said he 'had to write to the King and Queen. I ordered him pen and paper. 'He wrote in my room; and spent more than a good hour in writing 'a couple of Letters, of a line or two each. He then had all the Court, 'one after the other, introduced to him; said nothing to any of them, 'looked merely with a mocking air at them; after which we went to 'dinner.

'Here his whole conversation consisted in quizzing (turlupiner) 'whatever he saw; and repeating to me, above a hundred times over, 'the words "little Prince," "little Court." I was shocked; and could 'not understand how he had changed so suddenly towards me. The [38] '28th March 1735' (Fassmann, p. 547); Buchholz, i. 136.

'etiquette of all Courts in the Empire is, that nobody who has not at 'the least the rank of Captain can sit at a Prince's table: my Brother 'put a Lieutenant there, who was in his suite; saying to me, "A 'King's Lieutenants are as good as a Margraf's Ministers." I swal-'lowed this incivility, and showed no sign.

'After dinner, being alone with me, he said,'—turning up the flippant side of his thoughts, truly, in a questionable way:—'"Our Sire 'is going to end (tire à sa fin); he will not live-out this month. I 'know I have made you great promises; but I am not in a condition 'to keep them. I will give you up the Half of the sum which the late 'King" (our Grandfather) "lent you;[39] I think you will have every 'reason to be satisfied with that." I answered, That my regard for 'him had never been of an interested nature; that I would never ask 'anything of him, but the continuance of his friendship; and did not 'wish one sou, if it would in the least inconvenience him. "No, no," 'said he, "you shall have those 100,000 thalers; I have destined them 'for you.—People will be much surprised," continued he, "to see me 'act quite differently from what they had expected. They imagine I 'am going to lavish all my treasures, and that money will become as 'common as pebbles at Berlin: but they will find I know better. I 'mean to increase my Army, and to leave all other things on the old 'footing. I will have every consideration for the Queen my Mother, 'and will sate her (rassasierai) with honours; but I do not mean that 'she shall meddle in my affairs; and if she try it, she will find so."' What a speech; what an outbreak of candour in the young man, preoccupied with his own great thoughts and difficulties,—to the exclusion of any other person's!

'I fell from the clouds, on hearing all that; and knew not if I was 'sleeping or waking. He then questioned me on the affairs of this 'Country. I gave him the detail of them. He said to me: "When 'your goose (benêt) of a Father-in-law dies, I advise you to break-up 'the whole Court, and reduce yourselves to the footing of a private 'gentleman's establishment, in order to pay your debts. In real truth, 'you have no need of so many people; and you must try also to re-'duce the wages of those whom you cannot help keeping. You have 'been accustomed to live at Berlin with a table of four dishes; that is 'all you want here: and I will invite you now and then to Berlin; 'which will spare table and housekeeping."

'For a long while my heart had been getting big; I could not re-'strain my tears, at hearing all these indignities. "Why do you cry?" 'said he: "Ah, ah, you are in low spirits, I see. We must dissipate 'that dark humour. The music waits us; I will drive that fit out of 'you by an air or two on the flute." He gave me his hand, and led 'me into the other room. I sat down to the harpsichord; which I 'inundated (inondai) with my tears. Marwitz' (my artful Demoiselle d'Atours, perhaps too artful in time coming) 'placed herself opposite 'me, so as to hide from the others what disorder I was in.'[40]

[39] Suprà, vol. ii. pp. 228-229.

For the last two days of the visit, Wilhelmina admits her Brother was a little kinder. But on the fourth day there came, by estafette, a Letter from the Queen, conjuring him to return without delay, the King growing worse and worse. Wilhelmina, who loved her Father, and whose outlooks in case of his decease appeared to be so little flattering, was overwhelmed with sorrow. Of her Brother, however, she strove to forget that strange outbreak of candour; and parted with him as if all were mended between them again. Nay, the day after his departure, there goes a beautifully affectionate Letter to him; which we could give, if there were room:[41] 'the happiest time 'I ever in my life had;' 'my heart so full of gratitude and 'so sensibly touched;' 'every one repeating the words "dear 'Brother" and "charming Prince-Royal:"'—a Letter in very lively contrast to what we have just been reading. A Prince-Royal not without charm, in spite of the hard practicalities he is meditating, obliged to meditate!—

As to the outbreak of candour, offensive to Wilhelmina and us, we suppose her report of it to be in substance true, though of exaggerated, perhaps perverted tone; and it is worth the reader's notice, with these deductions. The truth is, our charming Princess is always liable to a certain subtrahend. In 1744, when she wrote those Mémoires, 'in a Summerhouse at Baireuth,' her Brother and she, owing mainly to go-betweens acting on the susceptible female heart, were again in temporary quarrel (the longest and worst they ever had), and hardly on speaking terms; which of itself made her heart very heavy;—not to say that Marwitz, the too artful Demoiselle, seemed to have stolen her Husband's affections from the poor Princess, and made the world look all a little grim to her. These circumstances have given their colour to parts of her Narrative, and are not to be forgotten by readers.

The Crown-Prince,—who goes by Dessau, lodging for a night with the Old Dessauer, and writes affectionately to his Sister from that place, their Letters crossing on the road,—gets home on the 12th to Potsdam. October 12th, 1734, he has ended his Rhine Campaign, in that manner;—and sees his poor Father, with a great many other feelings besides those expressed in the dialogue at Baireuth.

[40] Wilhelmina, ii. 216-218.

[41] Œuvres, xxvii. part 1st, p. 23.

CHAPTER XI.

IN PAPA'S SICK-ROOM; PRUSSIAN INSPECTIONS: END OF WAR.

It appears, Friedrich met a cordial reception in the sick-room at Potsdam; and, in spite of his levities to Wilhelmina, was struck to the heart by what he saw there. For months to come, he seems to be continually running between Potsdam and Ruppin, eager to minister to his sick Father, when military leave is procurable. Other fact about him, other aspect of him, in those months, is not on record for us.

Of his young Madam, or Princess-Royal, peaceably resident at Berlin or at Schönhausen, and doing the vacant officialities, formal visitings and the like, we hear nothing; of Queen Sophie and the others, nothing: anxious, all of them, no doubt, about the event at Potsdam, and otherwise silent to us. His Majesty's illness comes and goes; now hope, and again almost none. Margraf of Schwedt and his young Bride, we already know, were married in November; and Lieutenant Chasot (two days old in Berlin) told us, there was Dinner by the Crown-Prince to all the Royal Family on that occasion;—poor Majesty out at Potsdam languishing in the background, meanwhile.

His Carnival the Crown-Prince passes naturally at Berlin. We find he takes a good deal to the French Ambassador, one Marquis de la Chétardie; a showy restless character, of fame in the Gazettes of that time; who did much intriguing at Petersburg some years hence, first in a signally triumphant way, and then in a signally untriumphant; and is not now worth any knowledge but a transient accidental one. Chétardie came hither about Stanislaus and his affairs; tried hard, but in vain, to tempt Friedrich Wilhelm into interference;—is naturally anxious to captivate the Crown-Prince, in present circumstances.

Friedrich Wilhelm lay at Potsdam, between death and life, for almost four months to come; the Newspapers speculating much on his situation; political people extremely anxious what would become of him,—or in fact, when he would die; for that was considered the likely issue. Fassmann gives dolorous clippings from the Leyden Gazette, all in a blubber of tears, according to the then fashion, but full of impertinent curiosity withal. And from the Seckendorf private Papers there are Extracts of a still more inquisitive and notable character: Seckendorf and the Kaiser having an intense interest in this painful occurrence.

Seckendorf is not now himself at Berlin; but running much about, on other errands; can only see Friedrich Wilhelm, if at all, in a passing way. And even this will soon cease;—and in fact, to us it is by far the most excellent result of this French-Austrian War, that it carries Seckendorf clear away; who now quits Berlin and the Diplomatic line, and obligingly goes out of our sight henceforth. The old Ordnance-Master, as an Imperial General of rank, is needed now for War-Service, if he has any skill that way. In those late months, he was duly in attendance at Philipsburg and the Rhine-Campaign, in a subaltern torpid capacity, like Brunswick-Bevern and the others; ready for work, had there been any: but next season, he expects to have a Division of his own, and to do something considerable.—In regard to Berlin and the Diplomacies, he has appointed a Nephew of his, a Seckendorf Junior, to take his place there; to keep the old machinery in gear, if nothing more; and furnish copious reports during the present crisis. These Reports of Seckendorf Junior,—full of eavesdroppings, got from a Kammermohr (Nigger Lackey), who waits in the sick-room at Potsdam, and is sensible to bribes,—have been printed; and we mean to glance slightly into them. But as to Seckendorf Senior, readers can entertain the fixed hope that they have at length done with him; that, in these our premises, we shall never see him again;—nay shall see him, on extraneous dim fields, far enough away, smarting and suffering, till even we are almost sorry for the old knave!—

Friedrich Wilhelm's own prevailing opinion is, that he cannot recover. His bodily sufferings are great: dropsically swollen, sometimes like to be choked: no bed that he can bear to lie on;—oftenest rolls about in a Bath-chair; very heavy-laden indeed; and I think of tenderer humour than in former sicknesses. To the Old Dessauer he writes, few days after getting home to Potsdam: 'I am ready to quit the world, as Your 'Dilection knows, and has various times heard me say. 'One ship sails faster, another slower; but they come all to 'one haven. Let it be with me, then, as the Most High has 'determined for me.'[1] He has settled his affairs, Fassmann says, so far as possible; settled the order of his funeral, How he is to be buried, in the Garrison Church of Potsdam, without pomp or fuss, like a Prussian Soldier; and what regiment or regiments it is that are to do the triple volley over him, by way of finis and long farewell. His soul's interests too,—we need not doubt he is in deep conference, in deep consideration about these; though nothing is said on that point. A serious man always, much feeling what immense facts he was surrounded with; and here is now the summing-up of all facts. Occasionally, again, he has hopes; orders up 'two hundred of his Potsdam Giants to march through the sick-room,' since he cannot get out to them; or old Generals, Buddenbrock, Waldau, come and take their pipe there, in reminiscence of a Tabagie. Here, direct from the fountain-head, or Nigger Lackey bribed by Seckendorf Junior, is a notice or two:

'Potsdam, September 30th, 1734. Yesterday, for half an hour, the 'King could get no breath: he keeps them continually rolling him 'about' in his Bath-chair, 'over the room, and cries: "Luft, Luft '(Air, air)!"

'October 2d. The King is not going to die just yet; but will 'scarcely see Christmas. He gets-on his clothes; argues with the 'Doctors, is impatient; won't have people speak of his illness;—is 'quite black in the face; drinks nothing but Moll' (which we suppose to be small bitter beer), 'takes physic, writes in bed.'

'October 5th. The Nigger tells me things are better. The King 'begins to bring-up phlegm; drinks a great deal of oatmeal-water' (Hafergrützwasser, comfortable to the sick); 'says to the Nigger: "Pray 'diligently, all of you; perhaps I shall not die!"'

October 5th: this is the day the Crown-Prince arrives at Baireuth; to be called away by express four days after. How valuable, at Vienna or elsewhere, our dark friend the Lackey's medical opinion is, may be gathered from this other Entry, three weeks farther on,—enough to suffice us on that head:

'The Nigger tells me he has a bad opinion of the King's health. 'If you roll the King a little fast in his Bath-chair, you hear the water 'jumble in his body,'—with astonishment! 'King gets into passions; 'has beaten the pages' (may we hope, our dark friend among the rest?), 'so that it was feared apoplexy would take him.'

[1] Orlich, Geschichte der Schlesischen Kriege (Berlin, 1841), i. 14. 'From the Dessau Archives; date, 21st September 1734.'

This will suffice for the physiological part; let us now hear our poor friend on the Crown-Prince and his arrival:

'October 12*th*. Return of the Prince-Royal to Potsdam; tender re-'ception.—October 21*st*. Things look ill in Potsdam. The other leg 'is now also begun running; and above a quart (maas) of water has 'come from it. Without a miracle, the King cannot live,'—thinks our dark friend. 'The Prince-Royal is truly affected (véritablement attendri) 'at the King's situation; has his eyes full of water, has wept the eyes 'out of his head: has schemed in all ways to contrive a commodious 'bed for the King; wouldn't go away from Potsdam. King forced 'him away; he is to return Saturday afternoon. The Prince-Royal 'has been heard to say, "If the King will let me live in my own way, 'I would give an arm to lengthen his life for twenty years." King al-'ways calls him Fritzchen. But Fritzchen,' thinks Seckendorf Junior, 'knows nothing about business. The King is aware of it; and said in 'the face of him one day: "If thou begin at the wrong end with things, 'and all go topsy-turvy after I am gone, I will laugh at thee out of my 'grave!"'[2]—

So Friedrich Wilhelm; labouring amid the mortal quicksands; looking into the Inevitable, in various moods. But the memorablest speech he made to Fritzchen or to anybody at present, was that covert one about the Kaiser and Seckendorf, and the sudden flash of insight he got, from some word of Seckendorf's, into what they had been meaning with him all along. Riding through the Village of Priort, in debate about Vienna politics of a strange nature, Seckendorf said something, which illuminated his Majesty, dark for so many years, and showed him where he was. A ghastly horror of a country, yawning indisputable there; revealed to one as if by momentary lightning, in that manner! This is a speech which all the Ambassadors report, and which was already mentioned by us,—in reference to that opprobrious Proposal about the Crown-Prince's Marriage, "Marry with England, after all; never mind breaking your word!" Here is the manner of it, with time and place:

'Sunday last,' Sunday 17th October 1734, reports Seckendorf Junior, through the Nigger or some better witness, 'the King said to 'the Prince-Royal: "My dear Son, I tell thee I got my death at 'Priort. I entreat thee, above all things in the world, don't trust 'those people (denen Leuten), however many promises they make. 'That day, it was April 17th, 1733, there was a man said something 'to me: it was as if you had turned a dagger round in my heart."'[3]— [2] Seckendorf (Baron), Journal Secret; cited in Förster, ii. 142. [3] Ib.

Figure that, spoken from amid the dark sick whirlpools, the mortal quicksands, in Friedrich Wilhelm's voice, clangorously plaintive; what a wild sincerity, almost pathos, is in it; and whether Fritzchen, with his eyes all bewept even for what Papa had suffered in that matter, felt lively gratitudes to the House of Austria at this moment!—

It was four months after, '21st January 1735,'[4] when the King first got back to Berlin, to enlighten the eyes of the Carnival a little, as his wont had been. The crisis of his Majesty's illness is over, present danger gone; and the Carnival people, not without some real gladness, though probably with less than they pretend, can report him well again. Which is far from being the fact, if they knew it. Friedrich Wilhelm is on his feet again; but he never more was well. Nor has he forgotten that word at Priort, 'like the turning of a dagger in one's heart;'—and indeed gets himself continually reminded of it by practical commentaries from the Vienna Quarter.

In April, Prince Lichtenstein arrives on Embassy with three requests or demands from Vienna: '1°. That, besides 'the Ten Thousand due by Treaty, his Majesty would send 'his Reich's-Contingent,'—not comprehended in those Ten Thousand, thinks the Kaiser. '2°. That he would have the 'goodness to dismiss Marquis de la Chétardie the French Am-'bassador, as a plainly superfluous person at a well-affected 'German Court in present circumstances;'—person excessively dangerous, should the present Majesty die, Crown-Prince being so fond of that Chétardie. '3°. That his Prussian Majesty 'do give-up the false Polish Majesty Stanislaus, and no longer 'harbour him in East Preussen or elsewhere.' The whole of which demands his Prussian Majesty refuses; the latter two especially, as something notably high on the Kaiser's part, or on any mortal's, to a free Sovereign and Gentleman. Prince Lichtenstein is eloquent, conciliatory; but it avails not. He has to go home empty-handed;—manages to leave with Herr von Suhm, who took care of it for us, that Anecdote of the Crown-Prince's behaviour under cannon-shot from Philipsburg last year; and does nothing else recordable, in Berlin.

The Crown-Prince's hopes were set, with all eagerness, on getting to the Rhine-Campaign next ensuing; nor did the King refuse, for a long while, but still less did he consent; and in the end there came nothing of it. From an early period of the year, Friedrich Wilhelm sees too well what kind of campaigning the Kaiser will now make; at a certain Wedding-dinner where his Majesty was,—precisely a fortnight after his Majesty's arrival in Berlin,—Seckendorf Junior has got, by eavesdropping, this utterance of his Majesty's: "The Kaiser "has not a groschen of money. His Army in Lombardy is "gone to Twenty-four Thousand men, will have to retire into "the Mountains. Next campaign" (just coming) "he will "lose Mantua and the Tyrol. God's righteous judgment it is: "a War like this! Comes of flinging old principles overboard, "—of meddling in business that was none of yours;" and more, of a plangent alarming nature.[5]

[4] Fassmann, p. 533.

April 1735.

Friedrich Wilhelm sends back his Ten Thousand, according to contract; sends, over and above, a beautiful stock of 'copper pontoons' to help the Imperial Majesty in that River Country, says Fassmann;—sends also a supernumerary Troop of Hussars, who are worth mentioning, 'Six-score horse of Hussar type,' under one Captain Ziethen, a taciturn, much-enduring, much-observing man, whom we shall see again: these are to be diligently helpful, as is natural; but they are also, for their own behoof, to be diligently observant, and learn the Austrian Hussar methods, which his Majesty last year saw to be much superior. Nobody that knows Ziethen doubts but he learnt; Hussar-Colonel Baronay, his Austrian teacher here, became too well convinced of it when they met on a future occasion.[6] All this his Majesty did for the ensuing campaign: but as to the Crown-Prince's going thither, after repeated requests on his part, it is at last signified to him, deep in the season, that it cannot be: "Won't answer for a Crown-Prince to be sharer in such a Campaign;—be patient, my good Fritzchen, I will find other work for thee."[7] Fritzchen is sent into Preussen, to do the Reviewings and Inspections there; Papa not being able for them this season; and strict manifold Inspection, in those parts, being more than usually necessary, owing to the Russian-Polish troubles. On this errand, which is clearly a promotion, though in present circumstances not a welcome one for the Crown-Prince, he sets out without delay; and passes there the equinoctial and autumnal season, in a much more useful way than he could have done in the Rhine-Campaign.

[5] Förster, ii. 144 (and date it from Militair-Lexikon, ii. 54).

[6] Life of Ziethen (veridical but inexact, by the Frau von Blumenthal, a kinswoman of his; English Translation, very ill printed, Berlin, 1803), p. 54.

[7] Friedrich's Letter, 5th September 1735; Friedrich Wilhelm's Answer next day (Œuvres de Frédéric, xxvii. part 3d, 93-95).

In the Rhine-Moselle Country and elsewhere the poor Kaiser does exert himself to make a Campaign of it; but without the least success. Having not a groschen of money, how could he succeed? Noailles, as foreseen, manœuvres him, hitch after hitch, out of Italy; French are greatly superior, more especially when Montemar, having once got Carlos crowned in Naples and put secure, comes to assist the French; Kaiser has to lean for shelter on the Tyrol Alps, as predicted. Italy, all but some sieging of strong places, may be considered as lost for the present.

Nor on the Rhine did things go better. Old Eugene, 'the shadow of himself,' had no more effect this year than last: nor, though Lacy and Ten Thousand Russians came as allies, Poland being all settled now, could the least good be done. Reich's-Feldmarschall Karl Alexander of Würtemberg did 'burn a Magazine' (probably of hay among better provender), by his bomb-shells, on one occasion. Also the Prussian Ten Thousand,—Old Dessauer leading them, General Röder having fallen ill,—burnt something: an Islet in the Rhine, if I recollect, 'Islet of Lorch near Bingen,' where the French had a post; which and whom the Old Dessauer burnt away. And then Seckendorf, at the head of Thirty Thousand, he, after long delays, marched to Trarbach in the interior Moselle Country: and got into some explosive sputter of battle with Belleisle, one afternoon,—some say, rather beating Belleisle; but a good judge says, it was a mutual flurry and terror they threw one another into.[8] Seckendorf meant to try again on the morrow: but there came an estafette that night: 'Preliminaries signed (Vienna, 3d October 1735);—try no farther!'[9] And this was the second Rhine-Campaign, and the end of the Kaiser's French War. The Sea-Powers, steadily refusing money, diligently run about, offering terms of arbitration; and the Kaiser, beaten at every point, and reduced to his last groschen, is obliged to comply. He will have a pretty bill to pay for his Polish-

[8] Œuvres de Frédéric, i. 168.

[9] 'Cessation is to be, 5th November for Germany, 15th for Italy; Preliminaries' were, Vienna, '3d October' 1735 (Schöll, ii. 245).

Election frolic, were the settlement done! Fleury is pacific, full of bland candour to the Sea-Powers; the Kaiser, after long higgling upon articles, will have to accept the bill.

The Crown-Prince, meanwhile, has a successful journey into Preussen; sees new interesting scenes, Salzburg Emigrants, exiled Polish Majesties; inspects the soldiering, the schooling, the tax-gathering, the domain-farming, with a perspicacity, a dexterity and completeness that much pleases Papa. Fractions of the Reports sent home exist for us: let the reader take a glance of one only; the first of the series; dated Marienwerder (just across the Weichsel, fairly out of Polish Preussen and into our own), 27th September 1735, and addressed to the 'Most All-gracious King and Father;' —abridged for the reader's behoof:

* * 'In Polish Preussen, lately the Seat of War, things look hide-'ously waste; one sees nothing but women and a few children; it is 'said the people are mostly running away,'—owing to the Russian-Polish procedures there, in consequence of the blessed Election they have had. King August, whom your Majesty is not in love with, has prevailed at this rate of expense. King Stanislaus, protected by your Majesty in spite of Kaisers and Czarinas, waits in Königsberg, till the Peace, now supposed to be coming, say what is to become of him: once in Königsberg, I shall have the pleasure to see him. 'A detach-'ment of five-and-twenty Saxon Dragoons of the Regiment Arnstedt, 'marching towards Dantzig, met me: their horses were in tolerable 'case; but some are piebald, some sorrel, and some brown among 'them,' which will be shocking to your Majesty, 'and the people did 'not look well.' * *

'Got hither to Marienwerder, last night: have inspected the two 'Companies which are here, that is to say, Lieutenant-Col. Meier's 'and Rittmeister Hans's. In very good trim, both of them; and though 'neither the men nor their horses are of extraordinary size, they are 'handsome well-drilled fellows, and a fine set of stiff-built horses '(gedrungenen Pferden). The fellows sit them like pictures (reiten wie 'die Puppen); I saw them do their wheelings. Meier has some fine 'recruits; in particular two;'—nor has the Rittmeister been wanting in that respect. 'Young horses' too are coming well on, sleek of skin. In short, all is right on the military side.[10]

Civil business, too, of all kinds, the Crown-Prince looked into, with a sharp intelligent eye;—gave praise, gave censure in the right place; put various things on a straight footing, which were awry when he found them. In fact, it is Papa's second self; looks into the bottom of all things quite as Papa would have done, and is fatal to mendacities, practical or vocal, wherever he meets them. What a joy to Papa: "Here, after all, is one that can replace me, in case of accident. This Apprentice of mine, after all, he has fairly learned the Art; and will continue it when I am gone!"—

[10] Œuvres de Frédéric, xxvii. part 3d, p. 97.

Yes, your Majesty, it is a Prince-Royal wise to recognise your Majesty's rough wisdom, on all manner of points; will not be a Devil's-friend, I think, any more than your Majesty was. Here truly are rare talents; like your Majesty and unlike;—and has a steady swiftness in him, as of an eagle, over and above! Such powers of practical judgment, of skilful action, are rare in one's twenty-third year. And still rarer, have readers noted what a power of holding his peace this young man has? Fruit of his sufferings, of the hard life he has had. Most important power; under which all other useful ones will more and more ripen for him. This Prince already knows his own mind, on a good many points; privately, amid the world's vague clamour jargoning round him to no purpose, he is capable of having his mind made up into definite Yes and No,—so as will surprise us one day.

Friedrich Wilhelm, we perceive,[11] was in a high degree content with this performance of the Prussian Mission: a very great comfort to his sick mind, in those months and afterwards. Here are talents, here are qualities,—visibly the Friedrich-Wilhelm stuff throughout, but cast in an infinitely improved type:—what a blessing we did not cut off that young Head, at the Kaiser's dictation, in former years!—

At Königsberg, as we learn in a dim indirect manner, the Crown-Prince sees King Stanislaus twice or thrice,—not formally, lest there be political offence taken, but incidentally at the houses of third-parties;—and is much pleased with the old gentleman; who is of cultivated good-natured ways, and has surely many curious things, from Charles XII. downwards, to tell a young man.[12] Stanislaus has abundance of useless refugee Polish Magnates about him, with their useless crowds of servants, and no money in pocket; Königsberg all on flutter, with their draperies and them, 'like a little Warsaw:' so that

[11] His Letter, 24th Oct. 1735. (Œuvres de Frédéric, xxvii. part 3d, p. 99.)
[12] Came 8th October, went 21st (Œuvres de Frédéric, xxvii. part 3d, p. 98).

Oct. 1735.

Stanislaus's big French pension, moderate Prussian monthly allowance, and all resources, are inadequate; and, in fact, in the end, these Magnates had to vanish, many of them, without settling their accounts in Königsberg.[13] For the present they wait here, Stanislaus and they, till Fleury and the Kaiser, shaking the urn of doom in abstruse treaty after battle, decide what is to become of them.

Friedrich returned to Dantzig: saw that famous City, and late scene of War; tracing with lively interest the footsteps of Münnich and his Siege operations,—some of which are much blamed by judges, and by this young Soldier among the rest. There is a pretty Letter of his from Dantzig, turning mainly on those points. Letter written to his young Brother-in-law, Karl of Brunswick, who is now become Duke there; Grandfather and Father both dead;[14] and has just been blessed with an Heir, to boot. Congratulation on the birth of this Heir is the formal purport of the Letter, though it runs ever and anon into a military strain. Here are some sentences in a condensed form:

'Dantzig, 26th October 1735. * * Thank my dear Sister for her 'services. I am charmed that she has made you papa with so good a 'grace. I fear you won't stop there; but will go on peopling the world,' —one knows not to what extent,—'with your amiable race. Would 'have written sooner; but I am just returning from the depths of the 'barbarous Countries; and having been charged with innumerable com-'missions which I did not understand too well, had no good possibility 'to think or to write.

'I have viewed all the Russian labours in these parts; have had the 'assault on the Hagelsberg narrated to me; been on the grounds;— 'and own I had a better opinion of Marshal Münnich than to think him 'capable of so distracted an enterprise.[15] * * Adieu, my dear Brother. 'My compliments to the amiable young Mother. Tell her, I beg you, 'that her proof-essays are masterpieces (coups d'essai sont des coups de 'maître).' * * 'Your most' &c.—'FRÉDÉRIC.'

The Brunswick Masterpiece, achieved on this occasion, grew to be a man and Duke, famous enough in the Newspapers in time coming: Champagne, 1792; Jena, 1806; George

[13] History of Stanislaus.

[14] Grandfather, 1st March 1735; Father (who lost the Lines of Ettlingen lately in our sight), 3d September 1735. Suprà, p. 63.

[15] Œuvres de Frédéric, xxvii. part 2d, p. 31. Pressed for time, and in want of battering-cannon, he attempted to seize this Hagelsberg, one of the outlying defences of Dantzig, by nocturnal storm; lost two thousand men; and retired, without doing 'what was flatly impossible,' thinks the Crown-Prince. See Mannstein, pp. 77-79, for an account of it.

IV.'s Queen Caroline; these and other distracted phenomena (pretty much blotting-out the earlier better sort), still keep him hanging painfully in men's memory. From his birth, now in this Prussian Journey of our Crown-Prince, to his death-stroke on the Field of Jena, what a Seventy-one years!—

Fleury and the Kaiser, though it is long before the signature and last finish can take place, are come to terms of settlement, at the Crown-Prince's return; and it is known, in political circles, what the Kaiser's Polish-Election damages will probably amount to. Here are, in substance, the only conditions that could be got for him:

'1°. Baby Carlos, crowned in Naples, cannot be pulled out again: 'Naples, the Two Sicilies, are gone without return. That is the first 'loss; please Heaven it be the worst! On the other hand, Baby Carlos 'will, as some faint compensation, surrender to your Imperial Majesty 'his Parma and Piacenza apanages; and you shall get back your Lom-'bardy,—all but a scantling which we fling to the Sardinian Majesty; 'who is a good deal huffed, having had possession of the Milanese these 'two years past, in terms of his bargain with Fleury. Pacific Fleury 'says to him: "Bargain cannot be kept, your Majesty; please to quit 'the Milanese again, and put-up with this scantling."

'2°. The Crown of Poland, August III. has got it, by Russian bom-'bardings and other measures: Crown shall stay with August,—all the 'rather as there would be no dispossessing him, at this stage. He was 'your Imperial Majesty's Candidate; let him be the winner there, for 'your Imperial Majesty's comfort.

'3°. And then as to poor Stanislaus? Well, let Stanislaus be Titular 'Majesty of Poland for life;—which indeed will do little for him:— 'but in addition, we propose, That, the Dukedom of Lorraine being 'now in our hands, Majesty Stanislaus have the life-rent of Lorraine to 'subsist upon; and—and that Lorraine fall to us of France on his de-'cease!—"Lorraine?" exclaim the Kaiser, and the Reich, and the 'Kaiser's intended Son-in-law Franz Duke of Lorraine. There is in-'deed a loss and a disgrace; a heavy item in the Election damages!

'4°. As to Duke Franz, there is a remedy. The old Duke of 'Florence, last of the Medici, is about to die childless: let the now 'Duke of Lorraine, your Imperial Majesty's intended Son-in-law, have 'Florence instead.—And so it had to be settled. "Lorraine? To 'Stanislaus, to France?" exclaimed the poor Kaiser, still more the 'poor Reich, and poor Duke Franz. This was the bitterest cut on all; 'but there was no getting past it. This too had to be allowed, this 'item for the Election breakages in Poland. And so France, after 'nibbling for several centuries, swallows Lorraine whole. Duke Franz 'attempted to stand out; remonstrated much, with Kaiser and Horath,

'at Vienna, on this unheard-of proposal: but they told him it was ir-'remediable; told him at last (one Bartenstein, a famed Aulic Official, 'told him), "No Lorraine, no Archduchess, your Serenity!"—and 'Franz had to comply. Lorraine is gone; cunning Fleury has swallowed
'it whole. "That was what he meant in picking this quarrel!" said
'Teutschland mournfully. Fleury was very pacific, candid in aspect
'to the Sea-Powers and others; and did not crow afflictively, did not 'say what he had meant.

'5°. One immense consolation for the Kaiser, if for no other, is:
'France guarantees the Pragmatic Sanction,—though with very great 'difficulty; spending a couple of years, chiefly on this latter point as was 'thought.[16] How it kept said guarantee, will be seen in the sequel.'

And these were the damages the poor Kaiser had to pay for meddling in Polish Elections; for galloping thither in chase of his Shadows. No such account of broken windows was ever presented to a man before. This may be considered as the consummation of the Kaiser's Shadow-Hunt; or at least its igniting and exploding point. His Duel with the Termagant has at last ended; in total defeat to him on every point. Shadow-Hunt does not end; though it is now mostly vanished, exploded in fire. Shadow-Hunt is now gone all to Pragmatic Sanction, as it were: that now is the one thing left in Nature for a Kaiser; and that he will love, and chase, as the summary of all things. From this point he steadily goes down, and at a rapid rate;—getting into disastrous Turk Wars, with as little preparation for War or Fact as a life-long Hunt of Shadows presupposes; Eugene gone from him, and nothing but Seckendorfs to manage for him;—and sinks to a low pitch indeed. We will leave him here; shall hope to see but little more of him.

In the summer of 1736, in consequence of these arrangements,—which were completed so far, though difficulties on Pragmatic Sanction and other points retarded the final signature for many months longer,—the Titular Majesty Stanislaus girt himself together for departure towards his new Dominion or Life-rent; quitted Königsberg; traversed Prussian Poland, safe this time, 'under escort of Lieutenant-General von Katte' (our poor Katte of Cüstrin's Father) 'and fifty cuirassiers;' reached Berlin in the middle of May, under flowerier aspects than usual. He travelled under the title of 'Count' Something, and alighted at the French Ambassador's in Berlin: but Friedrich Wilhelm treated him like a real Majesty, almost like a real Brother; had him over to the Palace; rushed out to meet him there, I forget how many steps beyond the proper limits; and was hospitality itself and munificence itself;—and, in fact, that night and all the other nights, 'they smoked above thirty pipes together,' for one item. May 21st, 1736,[17] Ex-Majesty Stanislaus went on his way again; towards France,—towards Meudon, a quiet Royal House in France,—till Lunéville, Nanci, and their Lorraine Palaces are quite ready. There, in these latter, he at length does find resting-place, poor innocent insipid mortal, after such tossings to and fro: and M. de Voltaire, and others of mark, having sometimes enlivened the insipid Court there, Titular King Stanislaus has still a kind of remembrance among mankind.

[16] Treaty on it not signed till 18th November 1738 (Schöll, ii. 246).

Of his Prussian Majesty we said that, though the Berlin populations reported him well again, it was not so. The truth is, his Majesty was never well again. From this point, age only forty-seven, he continues broken in bodily constitution; clogged more and more with physical impediments; and his History, personal and political withal, is as that of an old man, finishing his day. To the last he pulls steadily, neglecting no business, suffering nothing to go wrong. Building operations go on at Berlin; pushed more than ever, in these years, by the rigorous Derschau, who has got that in charge. No man of money or rank in Berlin but Derschau is upon him, with heavier and heavier compulsion to build: which is felt to be tyrannous; and occasions an ever-deepening grumble among the moneyed classes. At Potsdam his Majesty himself is the Builder; and gives the Houses away to persons of merit.[18]

Nor is the Army less an object, perhaps almost more. Nay, at one time, old Kur-Pfalz being reckoned in a dying condition, Friedrich Wilhelm is about ranking his men, prepared to fight for his rights in Jülich and Berg; Kaiser having openly gone over, and joined with France against his Majesty in that matter. However, the old Kur-Pfalz did not die, and there came nothing of fight in Friedrich Wilhelm's time. But his History, [17] Förster (i. 227), following loose Pöllnitz (ii. 478), dates it 1735: a more considerable error, if looked into, than is usual in Herr Förster; who is not an ill-informed nor inexact man;—though, alas, in respect of method (that is to say, want of visible method, indication, or human arrangement), probably the most confused of all the Germans!

[18] Pöllnitz, ii. 469.

on the political side, is henceforth mainly a commentary to him on that "word" he heard in Priort, "which was as if you had turned a dagger in my heart!" With the Kaiser he is fallen out: there arise unfriendly passages between them, sometimes sarcastic on Friedrich Wilhelm's part, in reference to this very War now ended. Thus, when complaint rose about the Prussian misbehaviours on their late marches (misbehaviours notable in Countries where their recruiting operations had been troubled), the Kaiser took a high severe tone, not assuaging, rather aggravating the matter; and, for his own share, winded-up by a strict prohibition of Prussian recruiting in any and every part of the Imperial Dominions. Which Friedrich Wilhelm took extremely ill. This is from a letter of his to the Crown-Prince, and after the first gust of wrath had spent itself: 'It is a clear disadvantage, this prohibition of recruiting in the 'Kaiser's Countries. That is our thanks for the Ten Thou-'sand men sent him, and for all the deference I have shown 'the Kaiser at all times; and by this you may see that it would 'be of no use if one even sacrificed oneself to him. So long 'as they need us, they continue to flatter; but no sooner is the 'strait thought to be over, and help not wanted, than they pull-'off the mask, and have not the least acknowledgment. The 'considerations that will occur to you on this matter may put it 'in your power to be prepared against similar occasions in time 'coming.'[19]

Thus, again, in regard to the winter-quarters of the Ziethen Hussars. Prussian Majesty, we recollect, had sent a Supernumerary Squadron to the last Campaign on the Rhine. They were learning their business, Friedrich Wilhelm knew; but also were fighting for the Kaiser,—that was what the Kaiser knew about them. Somewhat to his surprise, in the course of next year, Friedrich Wilhelm received, from the Vienna War-Office, a little Bill of 10,284 florins (1,028*l.* 8*s.*) charged to him for the winter-quarters of these Hussars. He at once paid the little Bill, with only this observation: 'Heartily glad that I can help 'the Imperial Ærarium with that 1,028*l.* 8*s.* With the sin-'cerest wishes for hundred-thousandfold increase to it in said 'Ærarium; otherwise it won't go very far!'[20]

At a later period, in the course of his disastrous Turk War, [19] 6th February 1736: Œuvres de Frédéric, xxvii. part 3d, p. 102.

[20] Letter to Seckendorf (Senior): Förster, ii. 150.

the Kaiser, famishing for money, set about borrowing a million gulden (100,000*l.*) from the Banking House Splittgerber and Daun at Berlin. Splittgerber and Daun had not the money, could not raise it: "Advance us that sum, in their name, your Majesty," proposes the Vienna Court: "There shall be three-per-cent bonus, interest six per cent, and security beyond all question!" To which fine offer his Majesty answers, addressing Seckendorf Junior: 'Touching the proposal of my giving 'the Bankers Splittgerber and Daun a lift, with a million gul-'den, to assist in that loan of theirs,—said proposal, as I am 'not a merchant accustomed to deal in profits and percentages, 'cannot in that form take effect. Out of old friendship, how-'ever, I am, on Their*o* Imperial Majesty's request, extremely 'ready to pay down, once and away (à fond perdu), a couple of 'million gulden, provided the Imperial Majesty will grant me 'the conditions known to your Uncle' (fulfilment of that now oldish Jülich-and-Berg promise, namely!), 'which are fair. In 'such case the thing shall be rapidly completed!'[21]

In a word, Friedrich Wilhelm falls-out with the Kaiser more and more; experiences more and more what a Kaiser this has been towards him. Queen Sophie has fallen silent in the History Books; both the Majesties may look remorsefully, but perhaps best in silence, over the breakages and wrecks this Kaiser has brought upon them. Friedrich Wilhelm does not meanly hate the Kaiser: good man, he sometimes pities him; sometimes, we perceive, has a touch of authentic contempt for him. But his thoughts, in that quarter, premature old age aggravating them, are generally of a tragic nature, not to be spoken without tears; and the tears have a flash at the bottom of them, when he looks round on Fritz and says, "There is one, though, that will avenge me!" Friedrich Wilhelm, to the last a broad strong phenomenon, keeps wending downward, homeward, from this point; the Kaiser too, we perceive, is rapidly consummating his enormous Spectre-Hunts and Duels with Termagants, and before long will be at rest. We have well-nigh done with both these Majesties.

The Crown-Prince, by his judicious obedient procedures in these Four Years at Ruppin, at a distance from Papa, has, as it were, completed his Apprenticeship; and, especially by this last Inspection-Journey into Preussen, may be said to have delivered his Proof-Essay with a distinguished success. He is now out of his Apprenticeship; entitled to take-up his Indentures, whenever need shall be. The rugged old Master cannot but declare him competent, qualified to try his own hand without supervision :—after all those unheard-of confusions, like to set the shop on fire at one time, it is a blessedly successful Apprenticeship! Let him now, theoretically at least, in the realms of Art, Literature, Spiritual Improvement, do his Wanderjahre, over at Reinsberg, still in the old region,—still well apart from Papa, who agrees best not in immediate contact;—and be happy in the new Domesticities, and larger opportunities, provided for him there; till a certain time come, which none of us are in haste for.

[21] Förster, ii. 151 (without date there).

May 1736.

BOOK X.

AT REINSBERG.

1736–1740.

CHAPTER I.

MANSION OF REINSBERG.

On the Crown-Prince's Marriage, three years ago, when the Amt or Government-District Ruppin, with its incomings, was assigned to him for revenue, we heard withal of a residence getting ready. Hint had fallen from the Prince, that Reinsberg, an old Country-seat, standing with its Domain round it in that little Territory of Ruppin, and probably purchaseable as was understood, might be pleasant, were it once his and well put in repair. Which hint the kind paternal Majesty instantly proceeded to act upon. He straightway gave orders for the purchase of Reinsberg; concluded said purchase, on fair terms, after some months bargaining;[1]—and set his best Architect, one Kemeter, to work, in concert with the Crown-Prince, to new-build and enlarge the decayed Schloss of Reinsberg into such a Mansion as the young Royal Highness and his Wife would like.

Kemeter has been busy, all this while; a solid, elegant, yet frugal builder: and now the main body of the Mansion is complete, or nearly so, the wings and adjuncts going steadily forward; Mansion so far ready that the Royal Highnesses can take-up their abode in it. Which they do, this Autumn, 1736; and fairly commence Joint Housekeeping, in a permanent manner. Hitherto it has been intermittent only: hitherto the Crown-Princess has resided in their Berlin Mansion, or in her own Country-house at Schönhausen; Husband not habitually with her, except when on leave of absence from Ruppin, in Carnival time or for shorter periods. At Ruppin his life has been rather that of a bachelor, or husband abroad on business, up to this time. But now at Reinsberg they do kindle the sacred hearth together; '6th August 1736' the date of that important event. They have got their Court about them, dames and cavaliers more than we expected; they have arranged the furnitures of their existence here on fit scale, and set-up their Lares and Penates on a thrifty footing. Majesty and Queen come out on a visit to them next month;[2]—raising the sacred hearth into its first considerable blaze, and crowning the operation in a human manner.

[1] 23d October 1733, order given,—16th March 1734, purchase completed (Preuss, i. 75).

6th Aug. 1736.

And so there has a new epoch arisen for the Crown-Prince and his Consort. A new and much-improved one. It lasted into the fourth year; rather improving all the way: and only Kingship, which, if a higher sphere, was a far less pleasant one, put an end to it. Friedrich's happiest time was this at Reinsberg; the little Four Years of Hope, Composure, realisable Idealism: an actual snatch of something like the Idyllic, appointed him in a life-pilgrimage consisting otherwise of realisms oftenest contradictory enough, and sometimes of very grim complexion. He is master of his work, he is adjusted to the practical conditions set him; conditions once complied with, daily work done, he lives to the Muses, to the spiritual improvements, to the social enjoyments; and has, though not without flaws of ill-weather,—from the Tobacco-Parliament perhaps rather less than formerly, and from the Finance-quarter perhaps rather more,—a sunny time. His innocent insipidity of a Wife, too, appears to have been happy. She had the charm of youth, of good looks; a wholesome perfect loyalty of character withal; and did not 'take to pouting,' as was once apprehended of her, but pleasantly gave and received of what was going. This poor Crown-Princess, afterwards Queen, has been heard, in her old age, reverting, in a touching transient way, to the glad days she had at Reinsberg. Complaint openly was never heard from her, in any kind of days; but these doubtless were the best of her life.

Reinsberg, we said, is in the Amt Ruppin; naturally under the Crown-Prince's government at present: the little Town or Village of Reinsberg stands about ten miles north of the Town

[2] 4th September 1736 (Preuss, i. 75).

Ruppin;—not quite a third-part as big as Ruppin is in our time, and much more pleasantly situated. The country about is of comfortable, not unpicturesque character; to be distinguished almost as beautiful, in that region of sand and moor. Lakes abound in it; tilled fields; heights called "hills;" and wood of fair growth,—one reads of 'beech-avenues,' of 'high linden-avenues:'—a country rather of the ornamented sort, before the Prince with his improvements settled there. Many lakes and lakelets in it, as usual hereabouts; the loitering waters straggle, all over that region, into meshes of lakes. Reinsberg itself, Village and Schloss, stands on the edge of a pleasant Lake, last of a mesh of such: the summary, or outfall, of which, already here a good strong brook or stream, is called the Rhein, Rhyn or Rein; and gives name to the little place. We heard of the Rein at Ruppin: it is there counted as a kind of river; still more, twenty miles farther down, where it falls into the Havel, on its way to the Elbe. The waters, I think, are drab-coloured, not peat-brown: and here, at the source, or outfall from that mesh of lakes, where Reinsberg is, the country seems to be about the best;—sufficient, in picturesqueness and otherwise, to satisfy a reasonable man.

The little Town is very old; but, till the Crown-Prince settled there, had no peculiar vitality in it. I think there are now some potteries, glass-manufactories: Friedrich Wilhelm, just while the Crown-Prince was removing thither, settled a first Glass-work there; which took good root, and rose to eminence in the crystal, Bohemian-crystal, white-glass, cut-glass, and other commoner lines, in the Crown-Prince's time.[3]

Reinsberg stands on the east or southeast side of its pretty Lake: Lake is called "the Grinerick See" (as all those remote Lakes have their names); Mansion is between the Town and Lake. A Mansion fronting, we may say, four ways; for it is of quadrangular form, with a wet moat from the Lake begirdling it, and has a spacious court for interior: but the principal entrance is from the Town side; for the rest, the Building is ashlar on all sides, front and rear. Stands there, handsomely abutting on the Lake with two Towers, a Tower at each angle, which it has on that lakeward side; and looks, over Reinsberg, and its steeple rising amid friendly umbrage which hides the housetops, towards the rising sun. Townward there is room for a spacious esplanade; and then for the stables, outbuildings, well masked; which still farther shut-off the Town. To this day, Reinsberg stands with the air of a solid respectable Edifice; still massive, rain-tight, though long since deserted by the Princeships,—by Friedrich nearly six-score years ago, and nearly three-score by Prince Henri, a Brother of Friedrich's, who afterwards had it. Last accounts I got were, of talk there had risen of planting an extensive Normal-School there; which promising plan had been laid aside again for the time.

[3] Beschreibung des Lustschlosses &c. zu Reinsberg (Berlin, 1788): Author, a 'Lieutenant Hennert,' thoroughly acquainted with his subject.

The old Schloss, residence of the Bredows and other feudal people for a long while, had good solid masonry in it, and around it orchards, potherb gardens; which Friedrich Wilhelm's Architects took good care to extend and improve, not to throw away: the result of their art is what we see, a beautiful Country-House, what might be called a Country-Palace with all its adjuncts;—and at a rate of expense which would fill English readers, of this time, with amazement. Much is admirable to us as we study Reinsberg, what it had been, what it became, and how it was made; but nothing more so than the small modicum of money it cost. To our wondering thought, it seems as if the shilling, in those parts, were equal to the guinea in these; and the reason, if we ask it, is by no means flattering altogether. "Change in the value of money?" Alas, reader, no; that is not above the fourth part of the phenomenon. Three-fourths of the phenomenon are change in the methods of administering money,—difference between managing it with wisdom and veracity on both sides, and managing it with unwisdom and mendacity on both sides. Which is very great indeed; and infinitely sadder than any one, in these times, will believe!—But we cannot dwell on this consideration. Let the reader take it with him, as a constant accompaniment in whatever work of Friedrich Wilhelm's or of Friedrich his Son's, he now or at any other time may be contemplating. Impious waste, which means disorder and dishonesty, and loss of much other than money to all parties,—disgusting aspect of human creatures, master and servant, working together as if they were not human,—will be spared him in those foreign departments; and in an English heart thoughts will arise, perhaps, of a wholesome tendency, though very sad, as times are.

It would but weary the reader to describe this Crown-Prince Mansion; which, by desperate study of our abstruse materials, it is possible to do with auctioneer minuteness. There are engraved Views of Reinsberg and its Environs; which used to lie conspicuous in the portfolios of collectors,—which I have not seen.[4] Of the House itself, engraved Frontages (Façades), Groundplans, are more accessible; and along with them, descriptions which are little descriptive,—wearisomely detailed, and as it were dark by excess of light (auctioneer light) thrown on them. The reader sees, in general, a fine symmetrical Block of Buildings, standing in rectangular shape, in the above locality:—about two hundred English feet, each, the two longer sides measure, the Townward and the Lakeward, on their outer front: about a hundred and thirty, each, the two shorter; or a hundred and fifty, taking-in their Towers just spoken of. The fourth or Lakeward side, however, which is one of the longer pair, consists mainly of 'Colonnade;' spacious Colonnade 'with vases and statues;' catching-up the outskirts of said Towers, and handsomely uniting everything.

Beyond doubt, a dignified, substantial pile of stonework; all of good proportions. Architecture everywhere of cheerfully serious, solidly graceful character; all of sterling ashlar; the due risalites (projecting spaces) with their attics and statues atop, the due architraves, cornices and corbels,—in short the due opulence of ornament being introduced, and only the due. Genuine sculptors, genuine painters, artists have been busy; and in fact all the suitable fine arts, and all the necessary solid ones, have worked together, with a noticeable fidelity, comfortable to the very beholder to this day. General height is about forty feet; two stories of ample proportions: the Towers overlooking them are sixty feet in height. Extent of outer frontage, if you go all round, and omit the Colonnade, will be five hundred feet and more: this, with the rearward face, is a thousand feet of room frontage:—fancy the extent of lodging space. For 'all the kitchens and appurtenances are underground;' the 'left front' (which is a new part of the Edifice) rising comfortably over these. Windows I did not count; but they must go high up into the Hundreds. No end to lodging space. Nay in a detached side-edifice subsequently built, called Cavalier House, I read of there being, for one item, 'fifty lodging rooms,' and for another 'a theatre.' And if an English Duke of Trumps were to look at the bills for all that,—his astonishment would be extreme, and perhaps in a degree painful and salutary to him.

[4] See Hennert, just cited, for the titles of them.

In one of these Towers the Crown-Prince has his Library: a beautiful apartment; nothing wanting to it that the arts could furnish, 'ceiling done by Pesne' with allegorical geniuses and what not; looks out on mere sky, mere earth and water in an ornamental state: silent as in Elysium. It is there we are to fancy the Correspondence written, the Poetries and literary industries going on. There, or stepping down for a turn in the open air, or sauntering meditatively under the Colonnade with its statues and vases (where weather is no object), one commands the Lake, with its little tufted Islands, 'Remus Island' much famed among them, and 'high beech-woods' on the farther side. The Lake is very pretty, all say; lying between you and the sunset;—with perhaps some other lakelet, or solitary pool in the wilderness, many miles away, 'revealing itself as a cup of molten gold,' at that interesting moment. What the Book-Collection was, in the interior, I know not except by mere guess.

The Crown-Princess's Apartment, too, which remained unaltered at the last accounts had of it,[5] is very fine;—take the anteroom for specimen: 'This fine room,' some twenty feet height of ceiling, 'has six windows; three of them, in the main 'front, looking towards the Town, the other three towards the 'Interior Court. The light from these windows is heightened 'by mirrors covering all the piers (Schäfte, interspaces of the 'walls), to an uncommonly splendid pitch; and shows the 'painting of the ceiling, which again is by the famous Pesne, 'to much perfection. The Artist himself, too, has managed 'to lay-on his colours there so softly, and with such delicate 'skill, that the light-beams seem to prolong themselves in the 'painted clouds and air, as if it were the real sky you had over-'head.' There in that cloud-region 'Mars is being disarmed 'by the Love-Goddesses, and they are sporting with his wea-'pons. He stretches out his arm towards the Goddess, who 'looks upon him with fond glances. Cupids are spreading-out 'a draping.' That is Pesne's luxurious performance in the ceiling.—'Weapon-festoons, in basso-relievo, gilt, adorn the [5] From Hennert, namely, in 1778.

'walls of this room; and two Pictures, also by Pesne, which 'represent, in life size, the late King and Queen' (our good friends Friedrich Wilhelm and his Sophie), 'are worthy of at-'tention. Over each of the doors, you find in low-relief the 'Profiles of Hannibal, Pompey, Scipio, Cæsar, introduced as 'Medallions.'

All this is very fine: but all this is little to another ceiling, in some big Saloon elsewhere, Music-saloon, I think: Black Night, making off, with all her sickly dews, at one end of the ceiling; and at the other end, the Steeds of Phœbus bursting forth, and the glittering shafts of Day,—with Cupids, Love-goddesses, War-gods, not omitting Bacchus and his vines, all getting beautifully awake in consequence. A very fine room indeed;—used as a Music-Saloon, or I know not what,—and the ceiling of it almost an ideal, say the connoisseurs.

Endless gardens, pavilions, grottos, hermitages, orangeries, artificial ruins, parks and pleasances surround this favoured spot and its Schloss; nothing wanting in it that a Prince's establishment needs,—except indeed it be hounds, for which this Prince never had the least demand.

Except the old Ruppin duties, which imply continual journeyings thither, distance only a morning's ride; except these, and occasional commissions from Papa, Friedrich is left master of his time and pursuits in this new Mansion. There are visits to Potsdam, periodical appearances at Berlin; some Correspondence to keep the Tobacco-Parliament in tune. But Friedrich's taste is for the Literatures, Philosophies: a young Prince bent seriously to cultivate his mind; to attain some clear knowledge of this world, so all-important to him. And he does seriously read, study and reflect a good deal; his main recreations, seemingly, are Music, and the converse of well-informed friendly men. In Music we find him particularly rich. Daily, at a fixed hour of the afternoon, there is concert held; the reader has seen in what kind of room: and if the Artists entertained here for that function were enumerated (high names, not yet forgotten in the Musical world), it would still more astonish readers. I count them to the number of Twenty or Nineteen; and mention only that 'the two Brothers Graun' and 'the two Brothers Benda' were of the lot; suppressing four other Fiddlers of eminence, and 'a Pianist who is known to everybody.'[6] The Prince has a fine sensibility to Music: does himself, with thrilling adagios on the flute, join in these harmonious acts; and, no doubt, if rightly vigilant against the Nonsenses, gets profit, now and henceforth, from this part of his resources.

He has visits, calls to make, on distinguished persons within reach; he has much Correspondence, of a Literary or Social nature. For instance, there is Suhm the Saxon Envoy translating Wolf's Philosophy into French for him; sending it in fascicles; with endless Letters to and from, upon it,—which were then highly interesting, but are now dead to every reader. The Crown-Prince has got a Post-Office established at Reinsberg; leathern functionary of some sort comes lumbering round, southward, 'from the Mecklenburg quarter twice a week, and goes by Fehrbellin,' for the benefit of his Correspondences. Of his calls in the neighbourhood, we mean to show the reader one sample, before long; and only one.

There are Lists given us of the Prince's 'Court' at Reinsberg; and one reads, and again reads, the dreariest unmemorable accounts of them; but cannot, with all one's industry, attain any definite understanding of what they were employed in, day after day, at Reinsberg:—still more are their salaries and maintenance a mystery to us, in that frugal establishment. There is Wolden for Hofmarschall, our old Cüstrin friend; there is Colonel Senning, old Marlborough Colonel with the wooden leg, who taught Friedrich his drillings and artillery-practices in boyhood, a fine sagacious old gentleman this latter. There is a M. Jordan, Ex-Preacher, an ingenious Prussian-Frenchman, still young, who acts as 'Reader and Librarian;' of whom we shall hear a good deal more. 'Intendant' is Captain (Ex-Captain) Knobelsdorf; a very sensible accomplished man, whom we saw once at Baireuth; who has been to Italy since, and is now returned with beautiful talents for Architecture: it is he that now undertakes the completing of Reinsberg,[7] which he will skilfully accomplish in the course of the next three years. Twenty Musicians on wind or string; Painters, Antoine Pesne but one of them; Sculptors, Glume and others of eminence; and Hof-Cavaliers, to we know not what extent:—How was such a Court kept up, in harmonious free dignity, and no halt in its finances, or mean pinch of any kind visible?

[6] Hennert, p. 21. [7] Ib. p. 29.

The Prince did get in debt; but not deep, and it was mainly for the tall recruits he had to purchase. His money-accounts are by no means fully known to me: but I should question if his expenditure (such is my guess) ever reached 3,000*l.* a year; and am obliged to reflect more and more, as the ancient Cato did, what an admirable revenue frugality is!

Many of the Cavaliers, I find, for one thing, were of the Regiment Goltz; that was one evident economy. 'Rittmeister von Chasot,' as the Books call him: readers saw that Chasot flying to Prince Eugene, and know him since the Siege of Philipsburg. He is not yet Rittmeister, or Captain of Horse, as he became; but is of the Ruppin Garrison; Hof-Cavalier; 'attended Friedrich on his late Prussian journey;' and is much a favourite, when he can be spared from Ruppin. Captain Wylich, afterwards a General of mark; the Lieutenant Buddenbrock who did the parson-charivari at Ruppin, but is now reformed from those practices: all these are of Goltz. Colonel Keyserling, not of Goltz, nor in active military duty here, is a friend of very old standing; was officially named as 'Companion' to the Prince, a long while back; and got into trouble on his account in the disastrous Ante-Cüstrin or Flight Epoch: one of the Prince's first acts, when he got pardoned after Cüstrin, was to beg for the pardon of this Keyserling; and now he has him here, and is very fond of him. A Courlander, of good family, this Keyserling; of good gifts too,—which, it was once thought, would be practically sublime; for he carried off all manner of college prizes, and was the Admirable-Crichton of Königsberg University and the Graduates there. But in the end they proved to be gifts of the vocal sort rather: and have led only to what we see. A man, I should guess, rather of buoyant vivacity than of depth or strength in intellect or otherwise. Excessively buoyant, ingenious; full of wit, kindly exuberance; a loyal-hearted, gay-tempered man, and much a favourite in society as well as with the Prince. If we were to dwell on Reinsberg, Keyserling would come prominently forward.

Major von Stille, ultimately Major-General von Stille, I should also mention: near twenty years older than the Prince; a wise thoughtful soldier (went, by permission, to the Siege of Dantzig lately, to improve himself); a man capable of rugged service, when the time comes. His military writings were once in considerable esteem with professional men ; and still impress a lay reader with favourable notions towards Stille, as a man of real worth and sense.[8]

Of Monsieur Jordan and the Literary Set.

There is, of course, a Chaplain in the Establishment : a Reverend 'M. Deschamps ;' who preaches to them all,—in French no doubt. Friedrich never hears Deschamps : Friedrich is always over at Ruppin on Sundays ; and there 'himself reads a sermon to the Garrison,' as part of the day's duties. Reads finely, in a melodious feeling manner, says Formey, who can judge : 'even in his old days, he would incidentally,' when some Emeritus Parson, like Formey, chanced to be with him, 'roll out choice passages from Bossuet, from Massillon,' in a voice and with a look, which would have been perfection in the pulpit, thinks Formey.[9]

M. Jordan, though he was called 'Lecteur (Reader),' did not read to him, I can perceive ; but took charge of the Books ; busied himself honestly to be useful in all manner of literary or quasi-literary ways. He was, as his name indicates, from the French-refugee department: a recent acquisition, much valued at Reinsberg. As he makes a figure afterwards, we had better mark him a little.

Jordan's parents were wealthy religious persons, in trade at Berlin ; this Jordan (Charles Etienne, age now thirty-six) was their eldest son. It seems they had destined him from birth, consulting their own pious feelings merely, to be a Preacher of the Gospel ; the other sons, all of them reckoned clever too, were brought-up to secular employments. And preach he, this poor Charles Etienne, accordingly did ; what best Gospel he had ; in an honest manner, all say,—though never with other than a kind of reluctance on the part of Nature, forced out of her course. He had wedded, been clergyman in two successive country places ; when his wife died, leaving him one little daughter, and a heart much overset by that event. Friends, wealthy Brothers probably, had pushed him out into the free air, in these circumstances : "Take a Tour ; Holland, England; feel the winds blowing, see the sun shining, as in times past: it will do you good!"

[8] Campagnes du Roi de Prusse ;—a posthumous Book ; anterior to the Seven-Years War.

[9] Souvenirs d'un Citoyen (2de édition, Paris, 1797), i. 37.

Jordan, in the course of his Tour, came to composure on several points. He found that, by frugality, by wise management of some peculium already his, his little Daughter and he might have quietness at Berlin, and the necessary food and raiment;—and, on the whole, that he would altogether cease preaching, and settle down there, among his Books, in a frugal manner. Which he did;—and was living so, when the Prince, searching for that kind of person, got tidings of him. And here he is at Reinsberg; bustling about, in a brisk, modestly frank and cheerful manner: well liked by everybody; by his Master very well and ever better, who grew into real regard, esteem and even friendship for him, and has much Correspondence, of a freer kind than is common to him, with little Jordan, so long as they lived together. Jordan's death, ten years hence, was probably the one considerable pain he had ever given his neighbours, in this the ultimate section of his life.

I find him described, at Reinsberg, as a small nimble figure, of Southern-French aspect; black, uncommonly bright eyes; and a general aspect of adroitness, modesty, sense, sincerity; good prognostics, which on acquaintance with the man were pleasantly fulfilled.

For the sake of these considerations, I fished-out, from the Old-Book Catalogues and sea of forgetfulness, some of the poor Books he wrote; especially a Voyage Littéraire,[10] Journal of that first Sanitary Excursion or Tour he took, to get the clouds blown from his mind. A Literary Voyage which awakens a kind of tragic feeling; being itself dead, and treating of matters which are all gone dead. So many immortal writers, Dutch chiefly, whom Jordan is enabled to report as having effloresced, or being soon to effloresce, in such and such forms, of Books important to the learned: leafy, blossomy Forest of Literature, waving glorious in the then sunlight to Jordan;—and it lies all now, to Jordan and us, not withered only, but abolished; compressed into a film of indiscriminate peat. Consider what that peat is made of, O celebrated or uncelebrated reader, and take a moral from Jordan's Book! Other merit, except indeed clearness and commendable brevity, the Voyage Littéraire or other little Books of Jordan's have not now. A few of his Letters to Friedrich, which exist, are the only writings with the least life left in them, and this an accidental life, not momentous to him or us. Dryasdust informs me, 'Abbé Jordan, alone of 'the Crown-Prince's cavaliers, sleeps in the Town of Reins-'berg, not in the Schloss:' and if I ask, Why?—there is no answer. Probably his poor little Daughterkin was beside him there?—

[10] Histoire d'un Voyage Littéraire fait, en MDCCXXXIII, en France, en Angleterre et en Hollande (2de édition, à La Haye, 1736).

We have to say of Friedrich's Associates, that generally they were of intelligent type, each of them master of something or other, and capable of rational discourse upon that at least. Integrity, loyalty of character, was indispensable; good humour, wit if it could be had, were much in request. There was no man of shining distinction there; but they were the best that could be had, and that is saying all. Friedrich cannot be said, either as Prince or as King, to have been superlatively successful in his choice of associates. With one single exception, to be noticed shortly, there is not one of them whom we should now remember except for Friedrich's sake;—uniformly they are men whom it is now a weariness to hear of, except in a cursory manner. One man of shining parts he had, and one only; no man ever of really high and great mind. The latter sort are not so easy to get; rarely producible on the soil of this Earth! Nor is it certain how Friedrich might have managed with one of this sort, or he with Friedrich;—though Friedrich unquestionably would have tried, had the chance offered. For he loved intellect as few men on the throne, or off it, ever did; and the little he could gather of it round him often seems to me a fact tragical rather than otherwise.

With the outer Berlin social world, acting and reacting, Friedrich has his connexions, which obscurely emerge on us now and then. Literary Eminences, who are generally of Theological vesture; any follower of Philosophy, especially if he be of refined manners withal, or known in fashionable life, is sure to attract him; and gains ample recognition at Reinsberg or on Town-visits. But the Berlin Theological or Literary world at that time, still more the Berlin Social, like a sunk extinct object, continues very dim in those old records; and to say truth, what features we have of it do not invite to miraculous efforts for farther acquaintance. Venerable Beausobre, with his History of the Manicheans,[11] and other learned things,—we heard of him long since, in Toland and the Republican Queen's time, as a light of the world. He is now fourscore, grown white as snow; very serene, polite, with a smack of French noblesse in him, perhaps a smack of affectation traceable too. The Crown-Prince, on one of his Berlin visits, wished to see this Beausobre; got a meeting appointed, in somebody's rooms 'in the French College,' and waited for the venerable man. Venerable man entered, loftily serene as a martyr Preacher of the Word, something of an ancient Seigneur de Beausobre in him, too; for the rest, soft as sunset, and really with fine radiances, in a somewhat twisted state, in that good old mind of his. "What have you been reading lately, M. de Beausobre?" said the Prince, to begin conversation. "Ah, Monseigneur, I "have just risen from reading the sublimest piece of writing "that exists."—"And what?" "The exordium of St. John's "Gospel: In the Beginning was the Word; and the Word was "with God, and the Word was—" Which somewhat took the Prince by surprise, as Formey reports; though he rallied straightway, and got good conversation out of the old gentleman. To whom, we perceive, he writes once or twice,[12]—a copy of his own verses to correct, on one occasion,—and is very respectful and considerate.

Formey tells us of another French sage, personally known to the Prince since Boyhood; for he used to be about the Palace, doing something. This is one La Croze; Professor of, I think, "Philosophy" in the French College: sublime monster of Erudition, at that time; forgotten now, I fear, by everybody. Swag-bellied, short of wind; liable to rages, to utterances of a coarse nature; a decidedly ugly, monstrous and rather stupid kind of man. Knew twenty languages, in a coarse inexact way. Attempted deep kinds of discourse, in the lecture-room and elsewhere; but usually broke-off into endless welters of anecdote, not always of cleanly nature; and after every two or three words, a desperate sigh, not for sorrow, but on account of flabbiness and fat. Formey gives a portraiture of him; not [11] Histoire critique de Manichée et du Manichéisme: wrote also Remarques &c. sur le Nouveau Testament, which were once famous; Histoire de la Réformation; &c. &c. He is Beausobre Senior; there were two Sons (one of them born in second wedlock, after Papa was 70), who were likewise given to writing.—See Formey, Souvenirs d'un Citoyen, i. 33-39.

[12] Œuvres de Frédéric, xvi. 121-126. Dates are all of 1737; the last of Beausobre's years.

worth copying farther. The same Formey, standing one day somewhere on the streets of Berlin, was himself, he cannot doubt, seen by the Crown-Prince in passing; 'who asked M. Jordan, who that was,' and got answer:—is not that a comfortable fact? Nothing farther came of it;—respectable Ex-Parson Formey, though ever ready with his pen, being indeed of very vapid nature, not wanted at Reinsberg, as we can guess.

There is M. Achard, too, another Preacher, supreme of his sort, in the then Berlin circles; to whom or from whom a Letter or two exist. Letters worthless, if it were not for one dim indication: That, on inquiry, the Crown-Prince had been consulting this supreme Achard on the difficulties of Orthodoxy;[13] and had given him texts, or a text, to preach from. Supreme Achard did not abolish the difficulties for his inquiring Prince,—who complains respectfully that 'his faith is weak,' and leaves us dark as to particulars. This Achard passage is almost the only hint we have of what might have been an important chapter: Friedrich's Religious History at Reinsberg. The expression 'weak faith' I take to be meant not in mockery, but in ingenuous regret and solicitude; much painful fermentation, probably, on the religious question in those Reinsberg years! But the old 'Gnadenwahl' business, the Free-Grace controversy, had taught him to be cautious as to what he uttered on those points. The fermentation, therefore, had to go on under cover; what the result of it was, is notorious enough; though the steps of the process are not in any point known.

Enough now of such details. Outwardly or inwardly, there is no History, or almost none, to be had of this Reinsberg Period; the extensive records of it consisting, as usual, mainly of chaotic nugatory matter, opaque to the mind of readers. There is copious correspondence of the Crown-Prince, with at least dates to it for most part: but this, which should be the main resource, proves likewise a poor one; the Crown-Prince's Letters, now or afterwards, being almost never of a deep or intimate quality; and seldom turning on events or facts at all, and then not always on facts interesting, on facts clearly apprehensible to us in that extinct element.

The Thing, we know always, is there; but vision of the Thing is only to be had faintly, intermittently. Dim inane twilight, with here and there a transient spark falling somewhither in it;—you do at last, by desperate persistence, get to discern outlines, features:—"The Thing cannot always have been No-thing," you reflect! Outlines, features:—and perhaps, after all, those are mostly what the reader wants on this occasion.

[13] Œuvres de Frédéric, xvi. pp. 112-117: date, March-June 1736.

CHAPTER II.

OF VOLTAIRE AND THE LITERARY CORRESPONDENCES.

ONE of Friedrich's grand purposes at Reinsberg, to himself privately the grandest there, which he follows with constant loyalty and ardour, is that of scaling the heights of the Muses' Hill withal; of attaining mastership, discipleship, in Art and Philosophy;—or in candour let us call it, what it truly was, that of enlightening and fortifying himself with clear knowledge, clear belief, on all sides; and acquiring some spiritual panoply in which to front the coming practicalities of life. This, he feels well, will be a noble use of his seclusion in those still places; and it must be owned, he struggles and endeavours towards this, with great perseverance, by all the methods in his power, here, or wherever afterwards he might be.

Here at Reinsberg, one of his readiest methods, his pleasantest if not his usefulest, is that of getting into correspondence with the chief spirits of his time. Which accordingly he forthwith sets about, after getting into Reinsberg, and continues, as we shall see, with much assiduity. Rollin, Fontenelle, and other French lights of the then firmament,—his Letters to them exist; and could be given in some quantity: but it is better not. They are intrinsically the common Letters on such occasions: "O sublime demigod of literature, how small are princely distinctions to such a glory as thine; thou who enterest within the veil of the temple, and issuest with thy face shining!"—To which the response is: "Hm, think you so, most happy, gracious, illustrious Prince, with every convenience round you, and such prospects ahead? Well, thank you, at any rate,—and, as the Irish say, more power to your Honour's Glory!" This really is nearly all that said Sets of Letters contain; and except perhaps the Voltaire Set, none of them give symptoms of much capacity to contain more.

Aug. 1736.

Certainly there was no want of Literary Men discernible from Reinsberg at that time; and the young Prince corresponds with a good many of them; temporal potentate saluting spiritual, from the distance,—in a way highly interesting to the then parties, but now without interest, except of the reflex kind, to any creature. A very cold and empty portion, this, of the Friedrich Correspondence; standing there to testify what his admiration was for literary talent, or the great reputation of such; but in itself uninstructive utterly, and of freezing influence on the now living mind. Most of those French lights of the then firmament are gone out. Forgotten altogether; or recognised, like Rollin and others, for polished dullards, university bigwigs, and longwinded commonplace persons, deserving nothing but oblivion. To Montesquieu,—not yet called "Baron de Montesquieu" with Esprit des Lois, but "M. de Secondat" with (Anonymous) Lettres Persanes, and already known to the world for a person of sharp audacious eyesight,—it does not appear that Friedrich addressed any Letter, now or afterwards. No notice of Montesquieu; nor of some others, the absence of whom is a little unexpected. Probably it was want of knowledge mainly; for his appetite was not fastidious at this time. And certainly he did hit the centre of the mark, and get into the very kernel of French literature, when, in 1736, hardly yet established in his new quarters, he addressed himself to the shining figure known to us as "Arouet Junior" long since, and now called M. de Voltaire; which latter is still a name notable in Friedrich's History and that of Mankind. Friedrich's first Letter, challenging Voltaire to correspondence, dates itself 8th August 1736; and Voltaire's Answer,—the Reinsberg Household still only in its second month,—was probably the brightest event which had yet befallen there.

On various accounts it will behove us to look a good deal more strictly into this Voltaire; and, as his relations to Friedrich and to the world are so multiplex, endeavour to disengage the real likeness of the man from the circumambient noise and confusion which in his instance continue very great. 'Voltaire was the spiritual complement of Friedrich,' says Sauerteig once: 'what little of lasting their poor Century 'produced lies mainly in these Two. A very somnambulat-'ing Century! But what little it did, we must call Friedrich;

'what little it thought, Voltaire. Other fruit we have not 'from it to speak of, at this day. Voltaire, and what can be 'faithfully done on the Voltaire Creed; "Realised Voltair-'ism;"—admit it, reader, not in a too triumphant humour,—'is not that pretty much the net historical product of the 'Eighteenth Century? The rest of its history either pure 'somnambulism; or a mere Controversy, to the effect, "Re-'alised Voltairism? How soon shall it be realised, then? 'Not at once, surely!" So that Friedrich and Voltaire are 'related, not by accident only. They are, they for want of 'better, the two Original Men of their Century; the chief and 'in a sense the sole products of their Century. They alone 'remain to us as still living results from it,—such as they 'are. And the rest, truly, ought to depart and vanish (as 'they are now doing); being mere ephemera; contemporary 'eaters, scramblers for provender, talkers of acceptable hear-'say; and related merely to the butteries and wiggeries of their 'time, and not related to the Perennialities at all, as these 'Two were.'—With more of the like sort from Sauerteig.

M. de Voltaire, who used to be M. François-Marie Arouet, was at this time about forty,[1] and had gone through various fortunes; a man, now and henceforth, in a high degree conspicuous, and questionable to his fellow-creatures. Clear knowledge of him ought, at this stage, to be common; but unexpectedly it is not. What endless writing and biographying there has been about this man; in which one still reads, with a kind of lazy satisfaction, due to the subject, and to the French genius in that department! But the man himself, and his environment and practical aspects, what the actual physiognomy of his life and of him can have been, is dark from beginning to ending; and much is left in an ambiguous undecipherable condition to us. A proper History of Voltaire, in which should be discoverable, luminous to human creatures, what he was, what element he lived in, what work he did: this is still a problem for the genius of France!—

His Father's name is known to us; the name of his Father's profession, too, but not clearly the nature of it; still less his Father's character, economic circumstances, physiognomy

[1] Born 20th February 1694; the younger of two sons: Father, 'François Arouet, 'a Notary of the Châtelet, ultimately Treasurer of the Chamber of Accounts;' Mother, 'Marguerite d'Aumart, of a noble family of Poitou.'

Aug. 1736.

spiritual or social: not the least possibility granted you of forming an image, however faint, of that notable man and household, which distinguished itself to all the earth by producing little François into the light of this sun. Of Madame Arouet, who, or what, or how she was, nothing whatever is known. A human reader, pestered continually with the Madame-Denises, Abbé-Mignots and enigmatic nieces and nephews, would have wished to know, at least, what children, besides François, Madame Arouet had: once for all, How many children? Name them, with year of birth, year of death, according to the church-registers: they all, at any rate, had that degree of history! No; even that has not been done. Beneficent correspondents of my own make answer, after some research, No register of the Arouets anywhere to be had. The very name VOLTAIRE, if you ask whence came it? there is no answer, or worse than none.—The fit "History" of this man, which might be one of the shining Epics of his Century, and the lucid summary and soul of any History France then had, but which would require almost a French demigod to do it, is still a great way off, if on the road at all! For present purposes, we select what follows from a well-known hand:

'Youth of Voltaire (1694-1725).—French Biographers have left the 'Arouet Household very dark for us; meanwhile we can perceive, or 'guess, that it was moderately well in economic respects; that François 'was the second of the Two Sons; and that old Arouet, a steady, prac-'tical and perhaps rather sharp-tempered old gentleman, of official legal 'habits and position, "Notary of the Châtelet" and something else, 'had destined him for the Law Profession; as was natural enough to 'a son of M. Arouet, who had himself succeeded well in Law, and 'could there, best of all, open roads for a clever second son. François 'accordingly sat "in chambers," as we call it; and his fellow-clerks 'much loved him,—the most amusing fellow in the world. Sat in 'chambers, even became an advocate; but did not in the least take to 'advocateship;—took to poetry, and other airy dangerous courses, spe-'culative, practical; causing family explosions and rebukes, which were 'without effect on him. A young fool, bent on sportful pursuits in-'stead of serious; more and more shuddering at Law. To the surprise 'and indignation of M. Arouet Senior. Law, with its wigs and sheep-'skins, pointing towards high honours and deep flesh-pots, had no 'charms for the young fool; he could not be made to like Law.

'Whereupon arose explosions, as we hint; family explosions on the 'part of M. Arouet Senior; such that friends had to interfere, and it 'was uncertain what would come of it. One judicious friend, "M.

'Caumartin," took the young fellow home to his house in the country 'for a time;—and there, incidentally, brought him acquainted with old 'gentlemen deep in the traditions of Henri Quatre and the cognate 'topics; which much inflamed the young fellow, and produced big 'schemes in the head of him.

'M. Arouet Senior stood strong for Law; but it was becoming 'daily more impossible. Madrigals, dramas (not without actresses), 'satirical wit, airy verse, and all manner of adventurous speculation, 'were what this young man went upon; and was getting more and 'more loved for; introduced, even, to the superior circles, and recog- 'nised there as one of the brightest young fellows ever seen. Which 'tended, of course, to confirm him in his folly, and open other out- 'looks and harbours of refuge than the paternal one.

'Such things, strange to M. Arouet Senior, were in vogue then; 'wicked Regent d'Orléans having succeeded sublime Louis XIV., and 'set strange fashions to the Quality. Not likely to profit this fool 'François, thought M. Arouet Senior; and was much confirmed in 'his notion, when a rhymed Lampoon against the Government having 'come out (Les j'ai vu, as they call it[2]), and become the rage, as a 'clever thing of the kind will, it was imputed to the brightest young 'fellow in France, M. Arouet's Son. Who, in fact, was not the Author; 'but was not believed on his denial; and saw himself, in spite of his 'high connexions, ruthlessly lodged in the Bastille in consequence. '"Let him sit," thought M. Arouet Senior, "and come to his senses 'there!" He sat for eighteen months (age still little above twenty); 'but privately employed his time, not in repentance, or in serious legal 'studies, but in writing a Poem on his Henri Quatre. "Epic Poem," 'no less; La Ligue, as he then called it; which it was his hope the 'whole world would one day fall in love with;—as it did. Nay, in 'two years more, he had done a Play, Œdipe the renowned name of 'it; which "ran for forty-eight nights" (18th November 1718, the first 'of them); and was enough to turn any head of such age. Law may 'be considered hopeless, even by M. Arouet Senior.

'Try him in the Diplomatic line; break these bad habits and con- 'nexions, thought M. Arouet, at one time; and sent him to the French 'Ambassador in Holland,—on good behaviour, as it were, and by way 'of temporary banishment. But neither did this answer. On the con- 'trary, the young fellow got into scrapes again; got into amatory in- 'trigues,—young lady visiting you in men's clothes, young lady's mother 'inveigling, and I know not what;—so that the Ambassador was glad 'to send him home again unmarried; marked, as it were, "Glass, with 'care!" And the young lady's mother printed his Letters, not the least 'worth reading:—and the old M. Arouet seems now to have flung-up 'his head; to have settled some small allowance on him, with peremp-

[2] 'I have seen (j'ai vu)' this ignominy occur, 'I have seen' that other,—to the amount of a dozen or two;—'and am not yet twenty.' Copy of it, and guess as to authorship, in Œuvres de Voltaire, i. 321.

Aug. 1736.

'tory no-hope of more, and said, "Go your own way, then, foolish 'junior: the elder shall be my son." M. Arouet disappears at this 'point, or nearly so, from the history of his son François; and I think 'must have died in not many years. Poor old M. Arouet closed his 'old eyes without the least conception what a prodigious ever-memor-'able thing he had done unknowingly, in sending this François into 'the world, to kindle such universal "dry dungheap of a rotten world," 'and set it blazing! François, his Father's synonym, came to be re-'presentative of the family, after all; the elder Brother also having 'died before long. Except certain confused niece-and-nephew person-'ages, progeny of the sisters, François has no more trouble or solace-'ment from the paternal household. François meanwhile is his Father's 'synonym, and signs Arouet Junior, "François Arouet l. j. (le jeune)."

'"All of us Princes, then, or Poets!" said he, one night at supper, 'looking to right and left: the brightest fellow in the world, well fit 'to be Phœbus Apollo of such circles; and great things now ahead of 'him. Dissolute Regent d'Orléans, politest, most debauched of men, 'and very witty, holds the helm; near him Dubois the Devil's Cardinal, 'and so many bright spirits. All the Luciferous Spiritualism there is 'in France is lifting anchor, under these auspices, joyfully towards new 'latitudes and Isles of the Blest. What may not François hope to be-'come? "Hmph!" answers M. Arouet Senior, steadily, so long as 'he lives. Here are one or two subsequent phases, epochs or turning-'points, of the young gentleman's career.

'Phasis First (1725-1728).—The accomplished Duc de Sulli (Year '1725, day not recorded), is giving in his hôtel a dinner, such as usual; 'and a bright witty company is assembled;—the brightest young fel-'low in France sure to be there; and with his electric coruscations il-'luminating everything, and keeping the table in a roar. To the 'delight of most; not to that of a certain splenetic ill-given Duc de 'Rohan; grandee of high rank, great haughtiness, and very ill-behavi-'our in the world; who feels impatient at the notice taken of a mere 'civic individual, Arouet Junior. "Quel est donc ce jeune homme qui 'parle si haut, Who is this young man that talks so loud, then?" ex-'claims the proud splenetic Duke. "Monseigneur," flashes the young 'man back upon him in an electric manner, "It is one who does not 'drag a big name about with him; but who secures respect for the 'name he has!" Figure that, in the penetrating grandly clangorous 'voice (voix sombre et majestueuse), and the momentary flash of eyes 'that attended it. Duc de Rohan rose, in a sulphurous frame of 'mind; and went his ways. What date? You ask the idle French 'Biographer in vain;—see only, after more and more inspection, that 'the incident is true; and with labour date it, summer of the Year '1725. Treaty of Utrecht itself, though all the Newspapers and Own 'Correspondents were so interested in it, was perhaps but a foolish 'matter to date in comparison!

'About a week after, M. Arouet Junior was again dining with the 'Duc de Sulli, and a fine company as before. A servant whispers 'him, That somebody has called, and wants him below. "Cannot 'come," answers Arouet; "how can I, so engaged?" Servant returns 'after a minute or two: "Pardon, Monsieur; I am to say, it is to do 'an act of beneficence that you are wanted below!" Arouet lays down 'his knife and fork; descends instantly to see what act it is. A car-'riage is in the court, and hackney-coach near it: "Would Monsieur 'have the extreme goodness to come to the door of the carriage, in a 'case of necessity?" At the door of the carriage, hands seize the 'collar of him, hold him as in a vice; diabolic visage of Duc de Rohan 'is visible inside, who utters, looking to the hackney-coach, some '"Voilà, Now then!" Whereupon the hackney-coach opens, gives 'out three porters, or hired bullies, with the due implements: scanda-'lous actuality of horsewhipping descends on the back of poor Arouet, 'who shrieks and execrates to no purpose, nobody being near. "That 'will do," says Rohan at last, and the gallant ducal party drive off; 'young Arouet, with torn frills and deranged hair, rushing up-stairs 'again, in such a mood as is easy to fancy. Everybody is sorry, in-'consolable, everybody shocked; nobody volunteers to help in aveng-'ing. "Monseigneur de Sulli, is not such atrocity done to one of 'your guests, an insult to yourself?" asks Arouet. "Well, yes perhaps, 'but"—Monseigneur de Sulli shrugs his shoulders, and proposes no-'thing. Arouet withdrew, of course in a most blazing condition, to 'consider what he could, on his own strength, do in this conjuncture.

'His Biographer Duvernet says, he decided on doing two things: 'learning English and the small-sword exercise.[3] He retired to the 'country for six months, and perfected himself in these two branches. 'Being perfect, he challenged Duc de Rohan in the proper manner; 'applying ingenious compulsives withal, to secure acceptance of the 'challenge. Rohan accepted, not without some difficulty, and com-'pulsion at the Theatre or otherwise:—accepted, but withal confessed 'to his wife. The result was, no measuring of swords took place; 'and Rohan only blighted by public opinion, or incapable of farther 'blight that way, went at large; a convenient Lettre de Cachet having 'put Arouet again in the Bastille. Where for six months Arouet 'lodged a second time, the innocent not the guilty; making, we can 'well suppose, innumerable reflections on the phenomena of human 'life. Imprisonment once over, he hastily quitted for England; shaking 'the dust of ungrateful France off his feet,—resolved to change his un-'happy name, for one thing.

[3] La Vie de Voltaire, par M (à Genève, 1786), pp. 55-57; or pp. 60-63, in his second form of the Book. The 'M' is an Abbé Duvernet; of no great mark otherwise. He got into Revolution trouble afterwards, but escaped with his head; and republished his Book, swollen-out somewhat by new 'Anecdotes' and republican bluster, in this second instance; signing himself T. J. D. V- - - (Paris, 1797). A vague but not dark or mendacious little Book: with traces of real eyesight in it,—by one who had personally known Voltaire, or at least seen and heard him.

Aug. 1736.

'Smelfungus, denouncing the torpid fatuity of Voltaire's Biogra'phers, says he never met with one Frenchman, even of the Literary 'classes, who could tell him whence this name VOLTAIRE originated.
'"A petite terre, small family estate," they said; and sent him hunting 'through Topographies, far and wide, to no purpose. Others answered
'"Volterra in Italy, some connexion with Volterra,"—and seemed
'even to know that this was but fatuity. "In ever-talking, ever-print'ing Paris, is it as in Timbuctoo, then, which neither prints nor has 'anything to print?" exclaims poor Smelfungus! He tells us at last,
'the name Voltaire is a mere Anagram of Arouet l. j.—you try it;
'A.R.O.U.E.T.L.J.=V.O.L.T.A.I.R.E; and perceive at once, with obli'gations to Smelfungus, that he has settled this small matter for you,
'and that you can be silent upon it forever thenceforth.

'The anagram VOLTAIRE, gloomily settled in the Bastille in this 'manner, can be reckoned a very famous wide-sounding outer result 'of the Rohan impertinence and blackguardism; but it is not worth
'naming beside the inner intrinsic result, of banishing Voltaire to 'England at this point of his course. England was full of Constitution-
'ality and Freethinking; Tolands, Collinses, Wollastons, Bolingbrokes, 'still living; very free indeed. England, one is astonished to see, has 'its royal-republican ways of doing; something Roman in it, from Peer'age down to Plebs; strange and curious to the eye of M. de Voltaire.
'Sciences flourishing; Newton still alive, white with fourscore years,
'the venerable hoary man; Locke's Gospel of Common Sense in full 'vogue, or even done into verse, by incomparable Mr. Pope, for the 'cultivated upper classes. In science, in religion, in politics, what a 'surprising "liberty" allowed or taken! Never was a freer turn of 'thinking. And (what to M. de Voltaire is a pleasant feature) it is 'Freethinking with ruffles to its shirt and rings on its fingers;—never 'yet, the least, dreaming of the shirtless or sansculottic state that lies 'ahead for it! That is the palmy condition of English Liberty, when
'M. de Voltaire arrives there.

'In a man just out of the Bastille on those terms, there is a mind
'driven by hard suffering into seriousness, and provoked by indignant
'comparisons and remembrances. As if you had elaborately ploughed
'and pulverised the mind of this Voltaire to receive with its utmost
'avidity, and strength of fertility, whatever seed England may have
'for it. That was a notable conjuncture of a man with circumstances.
'The question, Is this man to grow-up a Court Poet; to do legitimate 'dramas, lampoons, witty verses, and wild spiritual and practical
'magnificences, the like never seen; Princes and Princesses recognising
'him as plainly divine, and keeping him tied by enchantments to that 'poor trade as his task in life? is answered in the negative. No: and 'it is not quite to decorate and comfort your "dry dungheap" of a 'world, or the fortunate cocks that scratch on it, that the man Voltaire 'is here; but to shoot lightnings into it, and set it ablaze one day!
'That was an important alternative; truly of world-importance to the 'poor generations that now are; and it was settled, in good part, by 'this voyage to England, as one may surmise. Such is sometimes the 'use of a dissolute Rohan in this world; for the gods make implements 'of all manner of things.

'M. de Voltaire (for we now drop the Arouet altogether, and never 'hear of it more) came to England—when? Quitted England—when? 'Sorrow on all fatuous Biographers, who spend their time not in lay- 'ing permanent foundation-stones, but in fencing with the wind!—I at 'last find indisputably, it was in 1726 that he came to England:[4] and 'he himself tells us that he quitted it 'in 1728.' Spent, therefore, 'some two years there in all,—last year of George I.'s reign, and first 'of George II.'s. But mere inanity and darkness visible reign, in all 'his Biographies, over this period of his life, which was above all others 'worth investigating: seek not to know it; no man has inquired into 'it, probably no competent man now ever will. By hints in certain 'Letters of the period, we learn that he lodged, or at one time lodged, 'in "Maiden Lane, Covent Garden;" one of those old Houses that 'yet stand in Maiden Lane: for which small fact let us be thankful. 'His own Letters of the period are dated now and then from "Wands- 'worth." Allusions there are to Bolingbroke; but the Wandsworth is 'not Bolingbroke's mansion, which stood in Battersea; the Wandsworth 'was one Edward Fawkener's; a man somewhat admirable to young 'Voltaire, but extinct now, or nearly so, in human memory. He had 'been a Turkey Merchant, it would seem, and nevertheless was ad- 'mitted to speak his word in intellectual, even in political circles; 'which was wonderful to young Voltaire. This Fawkener, I think, 'became Sir Edward Fawkener, and some kind of "Secretary to the 'Duke of Cumberland:"—I judge it to be the same Fawkener; a man 'highly unmemorable now, were it not for the young Frenchman he 'was hospitable to. Fawkener's and Bolingbroke's are perhaps the 'only names that turn-up in Voltaire's Letters of this English Period: 'over which generally there reigns, in the French Biographies, inane 'darkness, with an intimation, half involuntary, that it should have 'been made luminous, and would if perfectly easy.

'We know, from other sources, that he had acquaintance with 'many men in England, with all manner of important men: Notes to 'Pope in Voltaire-English, visit of Voltaire to Congreve, Notes even 'to such as Lady Sundon in the interior of the Palace, are known of. 'The brightest young fellow in the world did not want for introduc- 'tions to the highest quarters, in that time of political alliance, and 'extensive private acquaintance, between his Country and ours. And 'all this he was the man to improve, both in the trivial and the deep 'sense. His bow to the divine Princess Caroline and suite, could it 'fail in graceful reverence or what else was needed? Dextrous right 'words in the right places, winged with esprit so-called: that was the [4] Got out of the Bastille, with orders to leave France, '29th April' of that year (Œuvres de Voltaire, i. 40 n.).

Aug. 1736.

'man's supreme talent, in which he had no match, to the last. A most 'brilliant, swift, far-glancing young man, disposed to make himself 'generally agreeable. For the rest, his wonder, we can see, was kept 'awake; wonder readily inclining, in his circumstances, towards admir- 'ation. The stereotype figure of the Englishman, always the same, 'which turns-up in Voltaire's Works, is worth noting in this respect. 'A rugged surly kind of fellow, much-enduring, not intrinsically bad; 'splenetic without complaint, standing oddly inexpugnable in that na- 'tural stoicism of his; taciturn, yet with strange flashes of speech in 'him now and then, something which goes beyond laughter and articu- 'late logic, and is the taciturn elixir of these two, what they call '"humour" in their dialect: this is pretty much the reverse of Voltaire's 'own self, and therefore all the welcomer to him; delineated always 'with a kind of mockery, but with evident love. What excellences 'are in England, thought Voltaire; no Bastille in it, for one thing! 'Newton's Philosophy annihilated the vortexes of Descartes for him; 'Locke's Toleration is very grand (especially if all is uncertain, and 'you are in the minority); then Collins, Wollaston and Company,— 'no vile Jesuits here, strong in their mendacious malodorous stupidity, 'despicablest yet most dangerous of creatures, to check freedom of 'thought! Illustrious Mr. Pope, of the Essay on Man, surely he is 'admirable; as are Pericles Bolingbroke, and many others. Even 'Bolingbroke's high-lackered brass is gold to this young French friend 'of his.—Through all which admirations and exaggerations the pro- 'gress of the young man, toward certain very serious attainments and 'achievements, is conceivable enough.

'One other man, who ought to be mentioned in the Biographies, 'I find Voltaire to have made acquaintance with, in England: a Ger- 'man M. Fabrice, one of several Brothers called Fabrice or Fabricius, '—concerning whom, how he had been at Bender, and how Voltaire 'picked Charles Douze from the memory of him, there was already 'mention. The same Fabrice who held poor George I. in his arms 'while they drove, galloping, to Osnabrück, that night, in extremis: '—not needing mention again. The following is more to the point.

'Voltaire, among his multifarious studies while in England, did not 'forget that of economics: his Poem La Ligue,—surreptitiously printed, 'three years since, under that title (one Desfontaines, a hungry Ex- 'Jesuit, the perpetrator),[5]—he now took in hand for his own benefit; 'washed it clean of its blots; christened it Henriade, under which name 'it is still known over all the world;—and printed it; published it 'here, by subscription, in 1726; one of the first things he undertook. 'Very splendid subscription; headed by Princess Caroline, and much 'favoured by the opulent of quality. Which yielded an unknown but 'very considerable sum of thousands sterling, and grounded not only 'the world-renown but the domestic finance of M. de Voltaire. For [5] 1723, Vie, par T. J. D. V. (that is, 'M' in the second form), p. 59.

'the fame of the "new epic," as this Henriade was called, soon spread 'into all lands. And such fame, and other agencies on his behalf, 'having opened the way home for Voltaire, he took this sum of Thou- 'sands Sterling along with him; laid it out judiciously in some city 'lottery, or profitable scrip then going at Paris, which at once doubled 'the amount: after which he invested it in Corn-trade, Army Clothing, 'Barbary-trade, Commissariat Bacon-trade, all manner of well-chosen 'trades,—being one of the shrewdest financiers on record;—and never 'from that day wanted abundance of money, for one thing. Which he 'judged to be extremely expedient for a literary man, especially in 'times of Jesuit and other tribulation. "You have only to watch," he 'would say, "what scrips, public loans, investments in the field of agio, 'are offered; if you exert any judgment, it is easy to gain there: do not 'the stupidest of mortals gain there, by intensely attending to it?"

'Voltaire got almost nothing by his Books, which he generally had 'to disavow, and denounce as surreptitious suppositious scandals, 'when some sharp-set Bookseller, in whose way he had laid the sa- 'voury article as bait, chose to risk his ears for the profit of snatching 'and publishing it. Next to nothing by his Books; but by his fine 'finance-talent otherwise, he had become possessed of ample moneys. 'Which were so cunningly disposed, too, that he had resources in every 'Country; and no conceivable combination of confiscating Jesuits and 'dark fanatic Official Persons could throw him out of a livelihood, 'whithersoever he might be forced to run. A man that looks facts in 'the face; which is creditable of him. The vulgar call it avarice and 'the like, as their way is: but M. de Voltaire is convinced that effects 'will follow causes; and that it well beseems a lonely Ishmaelite, hunt- 'ing his way through the howling wildernesses and confused ravenous 'populations of this world, to have money in his pocket. He died 'with a revenue of some 7,000*l.* a year, probably as good as 20,000*l.* 'at present; the richest literary man ever heard of hitherto, as well as 'the remarkablest in some other respects. But we have to mark the 'second phasis of his life' (in which Friedrich now sees him), 'and 'how it grew out of this first one.

'Phasis Second (1728-1733).—Returning home as if quietly triumph- 'ant, with such a talent in him, and such a sanction put upon it and 'him by a neighbouring Nation, and by all the world, Voltaire was 'warmly received, in his old aristocratic circles, by cultivated France 'generally; and now in 1728, in his thirty-second year, might begin to 'have definite outlooks of a sufficiently royal kind, in Literature and 'otherwise. Nor is he slow, far from it, to advance, to conquer and 'enjoy. He writes successful literature, falls in love with women of 'quality; encourages the indigent and humble; eclipses, and in case of 'need tramples down, the too proud. He elegises poor Adrienne Le- 'couvreur, the Actress,—our poor friend the Comte de Saxe's female 'friend; who loyally emptied out her whole purse for him, 30,000*l.* in

Aug. 1736.

'one sum, that he might try for Courland, and whether he could fall 'in love with her of the Swollen Cheek there; which proved impos- 'sible. Elegises Adrienne, we say, and even buries her under cloud 'of night: ready to protect unfortunate-females of merit. Especially 'theatrical females; having much to do in the theatre, which we per- 'ceive to be the pulpit or real preaching-place of cultivated France in 'those years. All manner of verse, all manner of prose, he dashes-off 'with surprising speed and grace: showers of light spray for the mo- 'ment; and always some current of graver enterprise, Siècle de Louis 'Quatorze or the like, going on beneath it. For he is a most diligent, 'swift, unresting man; and studies and learns amazingly in such a 'rackety existence. Victorious enough in some senses; defeat, in Litera- 'ture, never visited him. His Plays, coming thick on the heels of one 'another, rapid brilliant pieces, are brilliantly received by the unofficial 'world; and ought to dethrone dull Crébillon, and the sleepy potentates 'of Poetry that now are. Which in fact is their result with the public; 'but not yet in the highest courtly places;—a defect much to be con- 'demned and lamented.

'Numerous enemies arise, as is natural, of an envious venomous 'description; this is another ever-widening shadow in the sunshine. In 'fact we perceive he has, besides the inner obstacles and griefs, two 'classes of outward ones: There are Lions on his path and also Dogs. 'Lions are the Ex-Bishop of Mirepoix, and certain other dark Holy 'Fathers, or potent orthodox Official Persons. These, though Voltaire 'does not yet declare his heterodoxy (which, indeed, is but the ortho- 'doxy of the cultivated private circles), perceive well enough, even by 'the Henriade, and its talk of "tolerance," horror of "fanaticism" and 'the like, what this one's 'doxy is; and how dangerous he, not a mere 'mute man of quality, but a talking spirit with winged words, may be; '—and they much annoy and terrify him, by their roaring in the dist- 'ance. Which roaring cannot, of course, convince; and since it is not 'permitted to kill, can only provoke a talking spirit into still deeper 'strains of heterodoxy for his own private behoof. These are the Lions 'on his path: beasts conscious to themselves of good intentions; but 'manifesting from Voltaire's point of view, it must be owned, a physi- 'ognomy unlovely to a degree. "Light is superior to darkness, I 'should think," meditates Voltaire; "power of thought to the want of 'power! The Ane de Mirepoix (Ass of Mirepoix),[6] pretending to use 'me in this manner, is it other, in the court of Rhadamanthus, than 'transcendent Stupidity, with transcendent Insolence superadded?" Vol- 'taire grows more and more heterodox; and is ripening towards dan- 'gerous utterances, though he strives to hold in.

'The Dogs upon his path, again, are all the disloyal envious per-

[6] Poor joke of Voltaire's, continually applied to this Bishop, or Ex-Bishop,—who was thought, generally, a rather tenebrific man for appointment to the Feuille des Bénéfices (charge of nominating Bishops, keeping King's conscience, &c.); and who, in that capacity, signed himself Anc. (by no means 'Ane,' but 'Ancien, Whilom') de Mirepoix,—to the enragement of Voltaire often enough.

'sons of the Writing Class, whom his success has offended; and, more 'generally, all the dishonest hungry persons who can gain a morsel 'by biting him: and their name is legion. It must be owned, about 'as ugly a Doggery ("infâme Canaille" he might well reckon them) as 'has, before or since, infested the path of a man. They are not hired 'and set on, as angry suspicion might suggest; but they are covertly 'somewhat patronised by the Mirepoix, or orthodox Official class. 'Scandalous Ex-Jesuit Desfontaines, Thersites Fréron,—these are but 'types of an endless Doggery; whose names and works should be blotted 'out; whose one claim to memory is, that the riding man so often 'angrily sprang down, and tried horsewhipping them into silence. A 'vain attempt. The individual hound flies howling, abjectly petition-'ing and promising; but the rest bark all with new comfort, and even 'he starts again straightway. It is bad travelling in those woods, with 'such Lions and such Dogs. And then the sparsely scattered Human 'Creatures (so we may call them in contrast, persons of Quality for 'most part) are not always what they should be. The grand mansions 'you arrive at, in this waste-howling solitude, prove sometimes essen-'tially Robber-towers;—and there may be Armida Palaces, and divine-'looking Armidas, where your ultimate fate is still worse.

"Que le monde est rempli d'enchanteurs, je ne dis rien d'enchanteresses!"

'To think of it, the solitary Ishmaelite journeying, never so well mounted, 'through such a wilderness: with lions, dogs, human robbers and Ar-'midas all about him; himself lonely, friendless under the stars:—one 'could pity him withal, though that is not the feeling he solicits; nor 'gets hitherto, even at this impartial distance.

'One of the beautiful creatures of Quality,—we hope, not an Ar-'mida,—who came athwart Voltaire, in these times, was a Madame du 'Châtelet; distinguished from all the others by a love of mathematics 'and the pure sciences, were it nothing else. She was still young, under 'thirty; the literary man still under forty. With her Husband, to whom 'she had brought a child, or couple of children, there was no formal 'quarrel; but they were living apart, neither much heeding the other, 'as was by no means a case without example at that time; Monsieur 'soldiering, and philandering about, in garrison or elsewhere; Madame, 'in a like humour, doing the best for herself in the high circle of society, 'to which he and she belonged. Most wearisome barren circles to a 'person of thought, as both she and M. de Voltaire emphatically ad-'mitted to one another, on first making acquaintance. But is there 'no help?

'Madame had tried the pure sciences and philosophies, in Books: 'but how much more charming, when they come to you as a Human 'Philosopher; handsome, magnanimous, and the wittiest man in the 'world! Young Madame was not regularly beautiful; but she was very 'piquant, radiant, adventurous; understood other things than the pure 'sciences, and could be abundantly coquettish and engaging. I have 'known her scuttle-off, on an evening, with a couple of adventurous 'young wives of Quality, to the remote lodging of the witty M. de Vol- 'taire, and make his dim evening radiant to him.[7] Then again, in 'public crowds, I have seen them; obliged to dismount to the peril of 'Madame's diamonds, there being a jam of carriages, and no getting 'forward for half the day. In short, they are becoming more and more 'intimate, to the extremest degree; and, scorning the world, thank 'Heaven that they are mutually indispensable. Cannot we get away 'from this scurvy wasp's-nest of a Paris, thought they, and live to our- 'selves and our books?

Aug. 1736.

'Madame was of high quality, one of the Breteuils; but was poor 'in comparison, and her Husband the like. An old Château of theirs, 'named Cirey, stands in a pleasant enough little valley in Champagne; 'but so dilapidated, gaunt and vacant, nobody can live in it. Vol- 'taire, who is by this time a man of ample moneys, furnishes the re- 'quisite cash; Madame and he, in sweet symphony, concert the plans: 'Cirey is repaired, at least parts of it are, into a boudoir of the gods, 'regardless of expense; nothing ever seen so tasteful, so magnificent; 'and the two withdraw thither to study, in peace, what sciences, pure 'and other, they have a mind to. They are recognised as lovers, by 'the Parisian public, with little audible censure from anybody there, '—with none at all from the easy Husband; who occasionally even 'visits Cirey, if he be passing that way; and is content to take matters 'as he finds them, without looking below the surface.[8] For the Ten 'Commandments are at a singular pass in cultivated France at this 'epoch. Such illicit-idyllic form of life has been the form of Voltaire's 'since 1733,'—for some three years now, when Friedrich and we first make acquaintance with him. 'It lasted above a dozen years more: 'an illicit marriage after its sort, and subject only to the liabilities of 'such. Perhaps we may look in upon the Cirey Household, ourselves, 'at some future time; and'—This Editor hopes not!

'Madame admits that for the first ten years it was, on the whole, 'sublime; a perfect Eden on Earth, though stormy now and then.[9] 'After ten years, it began to grow decidedly dimmer; and in the course 'of few years more, it became undeniably evident that M. de Voltaire '"did not love me as formerly:"—in fact, if Madame could have seen 'it. M. de Voltaire was growing old, losing his teeth, and the like; and 'did not care for anything as formerly! Which was a dreadful discovery, 'and gave rise to results by and by.

[7] One of Voltaire's Letters.

[8] See (whoever is curious) Madame de Grafigny, Vie Privée de Voltaire et de Madame du Châtelet (Paris, 1820). A six months of actual Letters written by poor Grafigny, while sheltering at Cirey, Winter and Spring 1738-1739; straitened there in various respects,—extremely ill-off for fuel, among other things. Rugged practical Letters, shadowing-out to us, unconsciously oftenest, and like a very mirror, the splendid and the sordid, the seamy side and the smooth, of Life at Cirey, in her experience of it. Published, fourscore years after, under the above title.

[9] Lettres Inédites de Madame la Marquise du Chastelet; auxquelles on a joint une Dissertation (&c. of hers): Paris, 1806.

'In this retreat at Cirey, varied with flying visits to Paris, and kept 'awake by multifarious Correspondences, the quantity of Literature 'done by the two was great and miscellaneous. By Madame, chiefly 'in the region of the pure sciences, in Newtonian Dissertations, com- 'petitions for Prizes, and the like: really sound and ingenious Pieces, 'entirely forgotten long since. By Voltaire, in serious Tragedies, His- 'tories, in light Sketches and deep Dissertations:—mockery getting 'ever wilder with him; the satirical vein, in prose and verse, amazingly 'copious, and growing more and more heterodox, as we can perceive. 'His troubles from the ecclesiastical or Lion kind in the Literary forest, 'still more from the rabid Doggery in it, are manifold, incessant. And 'it is pleasantly notable,—during these first ten years,—with what des- 'perate intensity, vigilance and fierceness, Madame watches over all his 'interests and liabilities and casualties great and small; leaping with 'her whole force into M. de Voltaire's scale of the balance, careless of 'antecedences and consequences alike; flying, with the spirit of an angry 'brood-hen, at the face of mastiffs, in defence of any feather that is M. 'de Voltaire's. To which Voltaire replies, as he well may, with elo- 'quent gratitude; with Verses to the divine Emilie, with Gifts to her, 'verses and gifts the prettiest in the world;—and industriously celebrates 'the divine Emilie to herself and all third parties.

'An ardent, aerial, gracefully predominant, and in the end some- 'what termagant female figure, this divine Emilie. Her temper, radiant 'rather than bland, was none of the patientest on occasion; nor was 'M. de Voltaire the least of a Job, if you came athwart him the wrong 'way. I have heard, their domestic symphony was liable to furious 'flaws,—let us hope at great distances apart:—that "plates," in pre- 'sence of the lackeys, actual crockery or metal, have been known to 'fly from end to end of the dinner-table; nay they mention "knives" '(though only in the way of oratorical action); and Voltaire has been 'heard to exclaim, the sombre and majestic voice of him risen to a very 'high pitch: "Ne me regardez tant de ces yeux hagards et louches, Don't 'fix those haggard sidelong eyes on me in that way!"—mere shrillness 'of pale rage presiding over the scene. But we hope it was only once 'in the quarter, or seldomer: after which the element would be clearer 'for some time. A lonesome literary man, who has got a Brood Phœnix 'to preside over him, and fly at the face of gods and men for him in 'that manner, ought to be grateful.

'Perhaps we shall one day glance, personally, as it were, into Cirey 'with our readers;'—Not with this Editor or his! 'It will turn out 'beyond the reader's expectation. Tolerable illicit resting-place, so 'far as the illicit can be tolerable, for a lonesome Man of Letters, who 'goes into the illicit. Helpfulness, affection, or the flattering image of 'such, are by no means wanting: squalls of infirm temper are not more 'frequent than in the most licit establishments of a similar sort. Ma- 'dame, about this time, has a swift Palfrey, "Rossignol (Nightingale)" 'the name of him; and gallops fairy-like through the winding valleys;

Aug. 1736.

'being an ardent rider, and well-looking on horseback. Voltaire's study 'is inlaid with—the Grafigny knows all what:—mere china tiles, gilt 'sculptures, marble slabs, and the supreme of taste and expense: study 'fit for the Phœbus Apollo of France, so far as Madame could contrive 'it. Takes coffee with Madame, in the Gallery, about noon. And his 'bedroom, I expressly discern,[10] looks out upon a running brook, the 'murmur of which is pleasant to one.'

Enough, enough. We can perceive what kind of Voltaire it was to whom the Crown-Prince now addressed himself; and how luminous an object, shining afar out of the solitudes of Champagne upon the ardent young man, still so capable of admiration. Model Epic, Henriade; model History, Charles Douze; sublime Tragedies, César, Alzire and others, which readers still know though with less enthusiasm, are blooming fresh in Friedrich's memory and heart; such Literature as man never saw before; and in the background Friedrich has inarticulately a feeling as if, in this man, there were something grander than all Literatures: a Reform of human Thought itself; a new "Gospel," good-tidings or God's-Message, by this man;—which Friedrich does not suspect, as the world with horror does, to be a new Ba'spel, or Devil's-Message of bad-tidings! A sublime enough Voltaire; radiant enough, over at Cirey yonder. To all lands, a visible Phœbus Apollo, climbing the eastern steeps; with arrows of celestial "new light" in his quiver; capable of stretching many a big foul Python, belly uppermost, in its native mud, and ridding the poor world of her Nightmares and Mud-Serpents in some measure, we may hope!—

And so there begins, from this point, a lively Correspondence between Friedrich and Voltaire; which, with some interruptions of a notable sort, continued during their mutual Life; and is a conspicuous feature in the Biographies of both. The world talked much of it, and still talks; and has now at last got it all collected, and elucidated into a dimly legible form for studious readers.[11] It is by no means the diabolically wicked Correspondence it was thought to be; the reverse, indeed, on both sides;—but it has unfortunately become a very dull one, to the actual generation of mankind. Not without intrinsic merit; on the contrary (if you read intensely, and bring the extinct alive again), it sparkles notably with epistolary grace and vivacity; and, on any terms, it has still passages of biographical and other interest: but the substance of it, then so new and shining, has fallen absolutely commonplace, the property of all the world, since then; and is now very wearisome to the reader. No doctrine or opinion in it that you have not heard, with clear belief or clear disbelief, a hundred times, and could wish rather not to hear again. The common fate of philosophical originalities in this world. As a Biographical Document, it is worth a very strict perusal, if you are interested that way in either Friedrich or Voltaire: finely significant hints and traits, though often almost evanescent, so slight are they, abound in this Correspondence; frankness, veracity under graceful forms, being the rule of it, strange to say! As an illustration of Two memorable Characters, and of their Century; showing on what terms the sage Plato of the Eighteenth Century and his Tyrant Dionysius correspond, and what their manners are to one another, it may long have a kind of interest to mankind: otherwise it has not much left.

[10] Letters of Voltaire.

[11] Preuss, Œuvres de Frédéric (xxi. xxii. xxiii., Berlin, 1853); who supersedes the lazy French Editors in this matter.

In Friedrich's History it was, no doubt, an important fact, that there lived a Voltaire along with him, twenty years his senior. With another Theory of the Universe than the Voltaire one, how much other had Friedrich too been! But the Theory called by Voltaire's name was not properly of Voltaire's creating, but only of his uttering and publishing; it lay ready for everybody's finding, and could not well have been altogether missed by such a one as Friedrich. So that perhaps we exaggerate the effects of Voltaire on him, though undoubtedly they were considerable. Considerable; but not derived from this express correspondence, which seldom turns on didactic points at all; derived rather from Voltaire's Printed Works, where they lay derivable to all the world. Certain enough it is, Voltaire was at this time, and continued all his days, Friedrich's chief Thinker in the world; unofficially, the chief Preacher, Prophet and Priest of this Working King;—no better off for a spiritual Trismegistus was poor Friedrich in the world! On the practical side, Friedrich soon outgrew him,—perhaps had already outgrown, having far more veracity of character, and an intellect far better built in the silent parts of it, and trained too by hard experiences to know shadow from substance;—outgrew him, and gradually learned to look down upon him, occasionally with much contempt, in regard to the practical. But in all changes of humour towards Voltaire, Friedrich, we observe, considers him as plainly supreme in speculative intellect; and has no doubt but, for thinking and speaking, Nature never made such another. Which may be taken as a notable feature of Friedrich's History; and gives rise to passages between Voltaire and him, which will make much noise in time coming.

8th Aug. 1736.

Here, meanwhile, faithfully presented though in condensed form, is the starting of the Correspondence: First Letter of it, and first Response. Two Pieces which were once bright as the summer sunrise on both sides, but are now fallen very dim; and have much needed condensation, and abridgment by omission of the unessential,—so lengthy are they, so extinct and almost dreary to us! Sublime 'Wolf' and his 'Philosophy,' how he was hunted out of Halle with it, long since; and now shines from Marburg, his 'Philosophy' and he supreme among mankind: this, and other extinct points, the reader's fancy will endeavour to rekindle in some slight measure:

To M. de Voltaire, at Cirey (From the Crown-Prince).

'Berlin, 8th August 1736.

'Monsieur,—Although I have not the satisfaction of knowing you 'personally, you are not the less known to me through your Works. 'They are treasures of the mind, if I may so express myself; and they 'reveal to the reader new beauties at every fresh perusal. I think I 'have recognised in them the character of their ingenious Author, who 'does honour to our age and to human nature. If ever the dispute on 'the comparative merits of the Moderns and the Ancients should be re-'vived, the modern great men will owe it to you, and to you only, that 'the scale is turned in their favour. With the excellent quality of Poet 'you join innumerable others more or less related to it. Never did Poet 'before put Metaphysics into rhythmic cadence: to you the honour was 'reserved of doing it first.

'This taste for Philosophy manifested in your writings, induces me 'to send you a translated Copy of the Accusation and Defence of M. 'Wolf, the most celebrated Philosopher of our days; who, for having 'carried light into the darkest places of Metaphysics, is cruelly accused 'of irreligion and atheism. Such is the destiny of great men; their 'superior genius exposes them to the poisoned arrows of calumny and 'envy. I am about getting a Translation made of the Treatise on God, 'the Soul, and the World,'—Translation done by an Excellency Suhm, as has been hinted, — 'from the pen of the same Author. I will 'send it you when it is finished; and I am sure that the force of evid- 'ence in all his propositions, and their close geometrical sequence, will 'strike you.

'The kindness and assistance you afford to all who devote them- 'selves to the Arts and Sciences, makes me hope that you will not ex- 'clude me from the number of those whom you find worthy of your 'instructions:—it is so I would call your intercourse by Correspondence 'of Letters; which cannot be other than profitable to every thinking 'being. * *

* * 'beauties without number in your works. Your Henriade 'delights me. The tragedy of César shows us sustained characters; the 'sentiments in it are magnificent and grand, and one feels that Brutus 'is either a Roman, or else an Englishman (ou un Romain ou un Ang- 'lais). Your Alzire, to the graces of novelty adds' * *

'Monsieur, there is nothing I wish so much as to possess all your 'Writings,' even those not printed hitherto. 'Pray, Monsieur, do 'communicate them to me without reserve. If there be amongst your 'Manuscripts any that you wish to conceal from the eyes of the public, 'I engage to keep them in the profoundest secrecy. I am unluckily 'aware, that the faith of Princes is an object of little respect in our 'days; nevertheless I hope you will make an exception from the gene- 'ral rule in my favour. I should think myself richer in the possession 'of your Works than in that of all the transient goods of Fortune. 'These the same chance grants and takes away: your Works one can 'make one's own by means of memory, so that they last us whilst it 'lasts. Knowing how weak my own memory is, I am in the highest 'degree select in what I trust to it.

'If Poetry were what it was before your appearance, a strumming 'of wearisome idyls, insipid eclogues, tuneful nothings, I should re- 'nounce it forever:' but in your hands it becomes ennobled; a melo- dious 'course of morals; worthy of the admiration and the study of 'cultivated minds (des honnêtes gens). You'—in fine, 'you inspire the 'ambition to follow in your footsteps. But I, how often have I said 'to myself: "Malheureux, throw down a burden which is above thy 'strength! One cannot imitate Voltaire, without being Voltaire!"

'It is in such moments that I have felt how small are those ad- 'vantages of birth, those vapours of grandeur, with which vanity would 'solace us! They amount to little, properly to nothing (pour mieux 'dire, à rien). Nature, when she pleases, forms a great soul, endowed 'with faculties that can advance the Arts and Sciences; and it is the 'part of Princes to recompense his noble toils. Ah, would Glory but 'make use of me to crown your successes! My only fear would be, 'lest this Country, little fertile in laurels, proved unable to furnish 'enough of them.

'If my destiny refuse me the happiness of being able to possess you, 'may I, at least, hope one day to see the man whom I have admired

26th Aug. 1736.

'so long now from afar; and to assure you, by word of mouth, that I 'am,—With all the esteem and consideration due to those who, follow- 'ing the torch of truth for guide, consecrate their labours to the Public, '—Monsieur, your affectionate friend,

'FRÉDÉRIC, P. R. of Prussia.'[12]

By what route or conveyance this Letter went, I cannot say. In general, it is to be observed, these Friedrich-Voltaire Letters,—liable perhaps to be considered contraband at both ends of their course,—do not go by the Post; but by French-Prussian Ministers, by Hamburg Merchants, and other safe subterranean channels. Voltaire, with enthusiasm, and no doubt promptly, answers within three weeks:

To the Crown-Prince, at Reinsberg (From Voltaire).

'Cirey, 26th August 1736.

'Monseigneur,—A man must be void of all feeling who were not 'infinitely moved by the Letter which your Royal Highness has deigned 'to honour me with. My self-love is only too much flattered by it: but 'my love of Mankind, which I have always nourished in my heart, and 'which, I venture to say, forms the basis of my character, has given me 'a very much purer pleasure,—to see that there is, now in the world, 'a Prince who thinks as a man; a Philosopher Prince, who will make 'men happy.

'Permit me to say, there is not a man on the earth but owes thanks 'for the care you take to cultivate by sound philosophy a soul that is 'born for command. Good kings there never were except those that 'had begun by seeking to instruct themselves; by knowing good men 'from bad; by loving what was true, by detesting persecution and super- 'stition. No Prince, persisting in such thoughts, but might bring back 'the golden age into his Countries! And why do so few Princes seek 'this glory? You feel it, Monseigneur, it is because they all think more 'of their Royalty than of Mankind. Precisely the reverse is your case: '—and, unless, one day, the tumult of business and the wickedness of 'men alter so divine a character, you will be worshipped by your Peo- 'ple, and loved by the whole world. Philosophers, worthy of the name, 'will flock to your States; thinkers will crowd round that throne, as 'the skilfulest artisans do to the city where their art is in request. The 'illustrious Queen Christina quitted her kingdom to go in search of the 'Arts; reign you, Monseigneur, and the Arts will come to seek you.

'May you only never be disgusted with the Sciences by the quar- 'rels of their Cultivators! A race of men no better than Courtiers; 'often enough as greedy, intriguing, false and cruel as these,' and still more ridiculous in the mischief they do. 'And how sad for mankind [12] Œuvres de Frédéric, xxi. 6.

'that the very Interpreters of Heaven's commandments, the Theolo'gians, I mean, are sometimes the most dangerous of all! Professed 'messengers of the Divinity, yet men sometimes of obscure ideas and 'pernicious behaviour; their soul blown-out with mere darkness; full of 'gall and pride, in proportion as it is empty of truths. Every thinking
'being who is not of their opinion is an Atheist; and every King who 'does not favour them will be damned. Dangerous to the very throne;
'and yet intrinsically insignificant:' best way is, leave their big talk and them alone; speedy collapse will follow. * * *

'I cannot sufficiently thank your Royal Highness for the gift of that 'little Book about Monsieur Wolf. I respect Metaphysical ideas; rays
'of lightning they are in the midst of deep night. More, I think, is 'not to be hoped from Metaphysics. It does not seem likely that the 'First-principles of things will ever be known. The mice that nestle in 'some little holes of an immense Building, know not whether it is eter'nal, or who the Architect, or why he built it. Such mice are we;
'and the Divine Architect who built the Universe has never, that I 'know of, told his secret to one of us. If anybody could pretend to 'guess correctly, it is M. Wolf.' Beautiful in your Royal Highness to protect such a man. And how beautiful it will be, to send me his chief Book, as you have the kindness to promise! 'The Heir of a Monarchy,
'from his palace, attending to the wants of a recluse far off! Condescend
'to afford me the pleasure of that Book, Monseigneur. * *

'What your Royal Highness thinks of poetry is just: verses that do 'not teach men new and touching truths, do not deserve to be read.'
As to my own poor verses—But, after all, 'that Henriade is the writing 'of an Honest Man: fit, in that sense, that it find grace with a Philo'sopher Prince.

'I will obey your commands as to sending those unpublished Pieces.
'You shall be my public, Monseigneur; your criticisms will be my re'ward: it is a price few Sovereigns can pay. I am sure of your secrecy:
'your virtue and your intellect must be in proportion. I should indeed
'consider it a precious happiness to come and pay my court to your 'Royal Highness! One travels to Rome to see paintings and ruins:
'a Prince such as you is a much more singular object; worthier of a 'long journey! But the friendship' (divine Emilie's) 'which keeps me 'in this retirement does not permit my leaving it. No doubt you think
'with Julian, that great and much-calumniated man, who said, "Friends 'should always be preferred to Kings."

'In whatever corner of the world I may end my life, be assured,
'Monseigneur, my wishes will continually be for you,—that is to say,
'for a whole People's happiness. My heart will rank itself among your 'subjects; your glory will ever be dear to me. I shall wish, May you 'always be like yourself, and may other Kings be like you!—I am,
'with profound respect, your Royal Highness's most humble

'VOLTAIRE."[13]

[13] Œuvres de Frédéric, xxi. 10.

Aug. 1736.

The Correspondence, once kindled, went on apace; and soon burst forth, finding nourishment all round, into a shining little household fire, pleasant to the hands and hearts of both parties. Consent of opinions on important matters is not wanting; nor is emphasis in declaring the same. The mutual admiration, which is high,—high and intrinsic on Friedrich's side; and on Voltaire's, high if in part *ex*trinsic,—by no means wants for emphasis of statement: superlatives, tempered by the best art, pass and repass. Friedrich, reading Voltaire's immortal Manuscripts, confesses with a blush, before long, that he himself is a poor Apprentice that way. Voltaire, at sight of the Princely Productions, is full of admiration, of encouragement; does a little in correcting, solecisms of grammar chiefly; a little, by no means much. But it is a growing branch of employment; now and henceforth almost the one reality of function Voltaire can find for himself in this beautiful Correspondence. For, "Oh what a Crown-Prince, ripening forward to be the delight of human nature, and realise the dream of sages, Philosophy upon the Throne!" And on the other side, "Oh what a Phœbus Apollo, mounting the eastern sky, chasing the Nightmares,—sowing the Earth with Orient pearl, to begin with!"—In which fine duet, it must be said, the Prince is perceptibly the truer singer; singing within compass, and from the heart; while the Phœbus shows himself acquainted with art, and warbles in seductive quavers, now and then beyond the pitch of his voice. We must own also, Friedrich proves little seducible; shows himself laudably indifferent to such siren-singing;—perhaps more used to flattery, and knowing by experience how little meal is to be made of chaff. Voltaire, in an ungrateful France, naturally plumes himself a good deal on such recognition by a Foreign Rising Sun; and, of the two, though so many years the elder, is much more like losing head a little.

Elegant gifts are dispatched to Cirey; gold-amber trinkets for Madame, perhaps an amber inkholder for Monsieur: priceless at Cirey as the gifts of the very gods. By and by, a messenger goes express: the witty Colonel Keyserling, witty but experienced, whom we once named at Reinsberg; he is to go and see with his eyes, since his Master cannot. What a messenger there; ambassador from star to star! Keyserling's report at Reinsberg is not given; but we have Grafigny's, which is probably the more impartial. Keyserling's embassy was in the end of next year;[14] and there is plenty of airy writing about it and him, in these Letters.

Friedrich has translated the name Keyserling (diminutive of Kaiser) into "Cæsarion;"—and I should have said, he plays much upon names and also upon things, at Reinsberg, in that style; and has a good deal of airy symbolism, and cloudwork ingeniously painted round the solidities of his life there. Especially a "Bayard Order," as he calls it: Twelve of his selectest Friends made into a Chivalry Brotherhood, the names of whom are all changed, "Cæsarion" one of them; with dainty devices, and mimetic procedures of the due sort. Which are not wholly mummery; but have a spice of reality, to flavour them to a serious young heart. For the selection was rigorous, superior merit and behaviour a strict condition; and indeed several of these Bayard Chevaliers proved notable practical Champions in time coming;—for example Captain Fouquet, of whom we have heard before, in the dark Cüstrin days. This is a mentionable feature of the Reinsberg life, and of the young Prince's character there: pleasant to know of, from this distance; but not now worth knowing more in detail.

The Friedrich-Voltaire Correspondence contains much incense; due whiffs of it, from Reinsberg side, to the "divine Emilie," Voltaire's quasi better-half or worse-half; who responds always in her divinest manner to Reinsberg, eager for more acquaintance there. The Du Châtelets had a Lawsuit in Brabant; very inveterate, perhaps a hundred years old or more; with the 'House of Honsbrouck:'[15] this, not to speak of other causes, flights from French peril and the like, often brought Voltaire and his Dame into those parts; and gave rise to occasional hopes of meeting with Friedrich; which could not take effect. In more practical style, Voltaire solicits of him: "Could not your Royal Highness perhaps graciously speak to some of those Judicial Bigwigs in Brabant, and flap them up a little!" Which Friedrich, I think, did, by some good means. Happily, by one means or other, Voltaire got the Lawsuit ended,—1740, we might guess, but the time is not specified;—and Friedrich had a new claim, had there been need of new, to be regarded with worship by Madame.[16] But the proposed meeting with [14] 3d November 1737 (as we gather from the Correspondence).

[15] Lettres Inédites de Voltaire (Paris, 1826), p. 9.

[16] Record of all this, left, like innumerable other things there, in an intrinsically dark condition, lies in Voltaire's Letters,—not much worth hunting-up into clear daylight, the process being so difficult to a stranger.

Aug. 1736.

Madame could never take effect; not even when Friedrich's hands were free. Nay I notice at last, Friedrich had privately determined it never should; Madame evidently an inconvenient element to him. A young man not wanting in private power of eyesight; and able to distinguish chaff from meal! Voltaire and he will meet; meet, and also part; and there will be passages between them:—and the reader will again hear of this Correspondence of theirs, where it has a biographical interest. We are to conceive it, at present, as a principal light of life to the young heart at Reinsberg; a cheerful new fire, almost an altar-fire, irradiating the common dusk for him there.

Of another Correspondence, beautifully irradiative for the young heart, we must say almost nothing: the Correspondence with Suhm. Suhm the Saxon Minister, whom we have occasionally heard of, is an old Friend of the Crown-Prince's, dear and helpful to him: it is he who is now doing those Translations of Wolf, of which Voltaire lately saw specimen; translating Wolf at large, for the young man's behoof. The young man, restless to know the best Philosophy going, had tried reading of Wolf's chief Book; found it too abstruse, in Wolf's German: wherefore Suhm translates; sends it to him in limpid French; fascicle by fascicle, with commentaries; young man doing his best to understand and admire,—gratefully, not too successfully, we can perceive. That is the staple of the famous Suhm Correspondence; staple which nobody could now bear to be concerned with.

Suhm is also helpful in finance difficulties, which are pretty frequent; works-out subventions, loans under a handsome form, from the Czarina's and other Courts. Which is an operation of the utmost delicacy; perilous, should it be heard of at Potsdam. Wherefore Suhm and the Prince have a covert language for it: and affect still to be speaking of 'Publishers' and 'new Volumes,' when they mean Lenders and Bank-Draughts. All these loans, I will hope, were accurately paid one day, as that from George II. was, in 'rouleaus of new gold.' We need not doubt the wholesome charm and blessing of so intimate a Correspondence to the Crown-Prince; and indeed his real love of the amiable Suhm, as Suhm's of him, comes beautifully to light in these Letters: but otherwise they are not now to be read without weariness, even dreariness, and have become a biographical reminiscence merely.

Concerning Graf von Manteufel, a third Literary Correspondent, and the only other considerable one, here, from a German Commentator on this matter, is a Clipping that will suffice:

'Manteufel was Saxon by birth, long a Minister of August the 'Strong, but quarrelled with August, owing to some frail female it is 'said, and had withdrawn to Berlin a few years ago. He shines there 'among the fashionable philosophical classes; underhand, perhaps does 'a little in the volunteer political line withal; being a very busy push-'ing gentleman. Tall of stature, "perfectly handsome at the age of 'sixty;"[17] great partisan of Wolf and the Philosophies, awake to the 'Orthodoxies too. Writes flowing elegant French, in a softly trench-'ant, somewhat too all-knowing style. High manners traceable in 'him; but nothing of the noble loyalty, natural politeness and pious 'lucency of Suhm. One of his Letters to Friedrich has this slightly 'impertinent passage;—Friedrich, just getting settled in Reinsberg, 'having transiently mentioned "the quantity of fair sex" that had come 'about him there:

'"Berlin, 26th August 1736 (To the Crown-Prince). * * I am 'well persuaded your Royal Highness will regulate all that to perfec-'tion, and so manage that your fair-sex will be charmed to find them-'selves with you at Reinsberg, and you charmed to have them there. 'But permit me, your Royal Highness, to repeat in this place, what I 'one day took the liberty of saying here at Berlin: Nothing in the 'world would better suit the present interests of your Royal Highness 'and of us all, than some Heir of your Royal Highness's making! 'Perhaps the tranquil convenience with which your Royal Highness 'at Reinsberg can now attend to that object, will be of better effect 'than all those hasty and transitory visits at Berlin were. At least I 'wish it with the best of my heart. I beg pardon, Monseigneur, for 'intruding thus into everything which concerns your Royal Highness;" '—In truth, I am a rather impudent busybodyish fellow, with super-'abundant dashing manner, speculation, utterance; and shall get my-'self ordered out of the Country, by my present correspondent, by and 'by.—"Being ever," with the due enthusiasm,

'"MANTEUFEL."'[18]

'To which Friedrich's Answer is of a kind to put a gag in the foul 'mouth of certain extraordinary Pamphleteerings, that were once very 'copious in the world; and, in particular, to set at rest the Herr Dr. 'Zimmermann, and his poor puddle of calumnies and credulities, got 'together in that weak pursuit of physiology under obscene circum-'stances;—

[17] Formey, Souvenirs d'un Citoyen, i. 39-45.
[18] Œuvres de Frédéric, xxv. 487;—Friedrich's Answer is, Reinsberg, 23d September (Ib. 489).

'Which is the one good result I have gathered from the 'Manteufel Correspondence,' continues our German friend; whom I vote with!—Or if the English reader never saw those Zimmermann or other dog-like Pamphleteerings and surmisings, let this Excerpt be mysterious and superfluous to the thankful English reader.

On the whole, we conceive to ourselves the abundant nature of Friedrich's Correspondence, literary and other; and what kind of event the transit of that Post functionary 'from Fehrbellin northwards,' with his leathern bags, 'twice a-week,' may have been at Reinsberg, in those years.

CHAPTER III.

CROWN-PRINCE MAKES A MORNING CALL.

THURSDAY 25th October 1736, the Crown-Prince, with Lieutenant Buddenbrock and an attendant or two, drove over into Mecklenburg, to a Village and serene Schloss called Mirow, intending a small act of neighbourly civility there; on which perhaps an English reader of our time will consent to accompany him. It is but some ten or twelve miles off, in a northerly direction; Reinsberg being close on the frontier there. A pleasant enough morning's-drive, with the October sun shining on the silent heaths, on the many-coloured woods and you.

Mirow is an Apanage for one of the Mecklenburg-Strelitz junior branches: Mecklenburg-Strelitz being itself a junior compared to the Mecklenburg-Schwerin of which, and its infatuated Duke, we have heard so much in times past. Mirow and even Strelitz are not in a very shining state,—but indeed, we shall see them, as it were, with eyes. And the English reader is to note especially those Mirow people, as perhaps of some small interest to him, if he knew it. The Crown-Prince reports to Papa, in a satirical vein, not ungenially, and with much more freedom than is usual in those Reinsberg letters of his:

'To his Prussian Majesty (From the Crown-Prince).

'Reinsberg, 26th October 1736.

* * 'Yesterday I went across to Mirow. To give my Most All-'gracious Father an idea of the place, I cannot liken it to anything 'higher than Gross-Kreutz' (term of comparison lost upon us; say Garrat, at a venture, or the Clachan of Aberfoyle): 'the one house in it, 'that can be called a house, is not so good as the Parson's there. I 'made straight for the Schloss; which is pretty much like the Garden-'house in Bornim: only there is a rampart round it; and an old Tower, 'considerably in ruins, serves as a Gateway to the House.

'Coming on the Drawbridge, I perceived an old stocking-knitter 'disguised as Grenadier, with his cap, cartridge-box and musket laid 'to a side, that they might not hinder him in his knitting-work. As 'I advanced, he asked, "Whence I came, and whitherward I was 'going?" I answered, that "I came from the Posthouse, and was 'going over this Bridge:" whereupon the Grenadier, quite in a passion, 'ran to the Tower; where he opened a door and called out the Cor-'poral. The Corporal seemed to have hardly been out of bed; and 'in his great haste, had not taken time to put-on his shoes, nor quite 'button his breeches; with much flurry he asked us, "Where we were 'for, and how we came to treat the Sentry in that manner?" Without 'answering him at all, we went our way towards the Schloss.

'Never in my life should I have taken this for a Schloss, had it 'not been that there were two glass lamps fixed at the door-posts, and 'the figures of two Cranes standing in front of them, by way of Guards. 'We made-up to the House; and after knocking almost half an hour 'to no purpose, there peered out at last an exceedingly old woman, 'who looked as if she might have nursed the Prince of Mirow's father. 'The poor woman, at sight of strangers, was so terrified, she slammed 'the door to in our faces. We knocked again; and seeing there could 'nothing be made of it, we went round to the stables; where a fellow 'told us, "The young Prince with his Consort was gone to Neu-Strelitz, 'a couple of miles off" (ten miles English); "and the Duchess his 'Mother, who lives here, had given him, to make the better figure, all 'her people along with him; keeping nobody but the old woman to 'herself."

'It was still early; so I thought I could not do better than profit 'by the opportunity, and have a look at Neu-Strelitz. We took post-'horses; and got thither about noon. Neu-Strelitz is properly a Village; 'with only one street in it, where Chamberlains, Office-Clerks, Domes-'tics all lodge, and where there is an Inn. I cannot better describe it 'to my Most All-gracious Father than by that street in Gumbinnen 'where you go up to the Townhall,—except that no house here is 'whitewashed. The Schloss is fine, and lies on a lake, with a big 'garden; pretty much like Reinsberg in situation.

'The first question I asked here was for the Prince of Mirow: but 'they told me he had just driven off again to a place called Kanow; 'which is only a couple of miles English from Mirow, where we had 'been. Buddenbrock, who is acquainted with Neu-Strelitz, got me, 'from a chamberlain, something to eat; and in the mean while that 'Böhme came in, who was Adjutant in my Most All-gracious Father's 'Regiment' (not of Goltz, but King's presumably): 'Böhme did not 'know me till I hinted to him who I was. He told me, "The Duke 'of Strelitz was an excellent seamster;" fit to be Tailor to your Majesty 'in a manner, had not Fate been cruel, "and that he made beautiful 'dressing-gowns (cassaquins) with his needle." This made me curious 'to see him: so we had ourselves presented as Foreigners; and it went-'off so well that nobody recognised me. I cannot better describe the 'Duke than by saying he is like old Stahl' (famed old medical man at Berlin, dead last year, physiognomy not known to actual readers), 'in 'a blonde Abbé's-periwig. He is extremely silly (blöde); his Hofrath 'Altrock tells him, as it were, everything he has to say.' About fifty, this poor Duke; shrunk into needlework, for a quiet life, amid such tumults from Schwerin and elsewhere.

'Having taken leave, we drove right off to Kanow; and got thither 'about six. It is a mere Village; and the Prince's Pleasure-House '(Lusthaus) here is nothing better than an ordinary Hunting-Lodge, 'such as any Forest-keeper has. I alighted at the Miller's; and had 'myself announced' at the Lusthaus 'by his maid: upon which the 'Major-Domo (Haus-Hofmeister) came over to the Mill, and compli-'mented me; with whom I proceeded to the Residenz,'—that is, back again to Mirow, 'where the whole Mirow Family were assembled. 'The Mother is a Princess of Schwartzburg, and still the cleverest of 'them all,'—still under sixty; good old Mother, intent that her poor Son should appear to advantage, when visiting the more opulent Serenities. 'His Aunt also,' mother's sister, 'was there. The Lady 'Spouse is small; a Niece to the Prince of Hildburghausen, who is in 'the Kaiser's service: she was in the family-way; but (aber) seemed 'otherwise to be a very good Princess.

'The first thing they entertained me with was, the sad misfortune 'come upon their best Cook; who, with the cart that was bringing 'the provisions, had overset, and broken his arm; so that the provisions 'had all gone to nothing. Privately I have had inquiries made; there 'was not a word of truth in the story. At last we went to table; and, 'sure enough, it looked as if the Cook and his provisions had come to 'some mishap; for certainly in the Three Crowns at Potsdam' (worst inn, one may guess, in the satirical vein), 'there is better eating than 'here.

'At table there was talk of nothing but of all the German Princes 'who are not right in their wits (nicht recht klug),'—as Mirow himself, your Majesty knows, is reputed to be! 'There was Weimar,[1] Gotha, 'Waldeck, Hoym, and the whole lot of them, brought upon the car-'pet:—and after our good Host had got considerably drunk, we rose, '—and he lovingly promised me that "he and his whole Family would [1] Wilhelmina's acquaintance; wedded, not without difficulty, to a superfluous Baireuth Sister-in-law by Wilhelmina (Mémoires de Wilhelmina, ii. 185-194): Grand-father of Goethe's Friend;—is nothing like fairly out of his wits; only has a flea (as we may say) dancing occasionally in the ear of him. Perhaps it is so with the rest of these Serenities, here fallen upon evil tongues?

'come and visit Reinsberg." Come he certainly will; but how I shall 'get rid of him, God knows.

'I most submissively beg pardon of my Most All-gracious Father 'for this long Letter; and'—we will terminate here.[2]

Dilapidated Mirow and its inmates, portrayed in this satirical way, except as a view of Serene Highnesses fallen into Sleepy Hollow, excites little notice in the indolent mind; and that little, rather pleasantly contemptuous than really profitable. But one fact ought to kindle momentary interest in English readers: the young foolish Herr, in this dilapidated place, is no other than our "Old Queen Charlotte's" Father that is to be,—a kind of Ancestor of ours, though we little guessed it! English readers will scan him with new curiosity, when he pays that return visit at Reinsberg. Which he does within the fortnight.

'To his Prussian Majesty (From the Crown-Prince).

'Reinsberg, 8th November 1736.

* * 'that my Most All-gracious Father has had the graciousness 'to send us some Swans. My Wife also has been exceedingly delighted 'at the fine Present sent her.' * * 'General Prætorius,' Danish Envoy, with whose Court there is some tiff of quarrel, 'came hither 'yesterday to take leave of us; he seems very unwilling to quit 'Prussia.

'This morning, about three o'clock, my people woke me, with word 'that there was a Stafette come with Letters,'—from your Majesty or Heaven knows whom! 'I spring up in all haste; and opening the 'Letter,—find it is from the Prince of Mirow; who informs me that '"he will be here today at noon." I have got all things in readiness 'to receive him, as if he were the Kaiser in person; and I hope there 'will be material for some amusement to my Most All-gracious Father, 'by next post.'—Next post is half-a-week hence:

'To his Prussian Majesty (From the Crown-Prince).

'Reinsberg, 11th November.

* * 'The Prince of Mirow's visit was so curious, I must give my 'Most All-gracious Father a particular report of it. In my last I men-'tioned how General Prætorius had come to us: he was in the room, 'when I entered with the Prince of Mirow; at sight of him Prætorius 'exclaimed, loud enough to be heard by everybody, "Voilà le Prince 'Cajuca!"[3] Not one of us could help laughing; and I had my own 'trouble to turn it so that he did not get angry.

[2] Œuvres de Frédéric, xxvii. part 3d, pp. 104-106.
[3] Nickname out of some Romance, fallen extinct long since.

'Scarcely was the Prince got in, when they came to tell me, for his 'worse luck, that Prince Heinrich,' the Ill Margraf, 'was come;—who 'accordingly trotted him out, in such a way that we thought we should 'all have died with laughing. Incessant praises were given him, espe- 'cially for his fine clothes, his fine air, and his uncommon agility in 'dancing. And indeed I thought the dancing would never end.

'In the afternoon, to spoil his fine coat,'—a contrivance of the Ill Margraf's, I should think,—'we stept out to shoot at target in the rain: 'he would not speak of it, but one could observe he was in much 'anxiety about the coat. In the evening, he got a glass or two in his 'head, and grew extremely merry; said at last, "He was sorry that, 'for divers state-reasons and businesses of moment, he must of neces- 'sity return home;"—which, however, he put-off till about two in the 'morning. I think, next day he would not remember very much of it.

'Prince Heinrich is gone to his Regiment again;' Prætorius too is off;—and we end with the proper Kow-tow.[4]

These Strelitzers, we said, are juniors to infatuated Schwerin; and poor Mirow is again junior to Strelitz: plainly one of the least opulent of Residences. At present, it is Dowager Apanage (Wittwen-Sitz) to the Widow of the late Strelitz of blessed memory: here, with her one Child, a boy now grown to what manhood we see, has the Serene Dowager lived, these twenty-eight years past; a Schwartzburg by birth, 'the cleverest head among them all.' Twenty-eight years in dilapidated Mirow: so long has that Tailoring Duke, her eldest stepson (child of a prior wife) been Supreme Head of Mecklenburg-Strelitz; employed with his needle, or we know not how,—collapsed plainly into tailoring at this date. There was but one other Son; this clever Lady's, twenty years junior,—"Prince of Mirow" whom we now see. Karl Ludwig Friedrich is the name of this one; age now twenty-eight gone. He, ever since the third month of him, when the poor Serene Father died ('May 1708'), has been at Mirow with Mamma; getting what education there was,—not too successfully, as would appear. Eight years ago, 'in 1726,' Mamma sent him off upon his travels; to Geneva, Italy, France: he looked in upon Vienna, too; got a Lieutenant-Colonelcy in the Kaiser's Service, but did not like it; soon gave it up; and returned home to vegetate, perhaps to seek a wife, —having prospects of succession in Strelitz. For the Serene Half-Brother proves to have no children: were his tailoring once finished in the world, our Prince of Mirow is Duke in [4] Œuvres de Frédéric, xvii. part 3d, p. 109.

Chief. On this basis he wedded last year: the little Wife has already brought him one child, a Daughter; and has (as Friedrich notices) another under way, if it prosper. No lack of Daughters, nor of Sons by and by: eight years hence came the little Charlotte,—subsequently Mother of England: much to her and our astonishment.[5]

The poor man did not live to be Duke of Strelitz: he died, 1752, in little Charlotte's eighth year; Tailor Duke surviving him a few months. Little Charlotte's Brother did then succeed, and lasted till 1794: after whom a second Brother, father of the now Serene Strelitzes:—who also is genealogically notable. For from him there came another still more famous Queen: Louisa of Prussia; beautiful to look upon, as "Aunt Charlotte" was not, in a high degree; and who showed herself a Heroine in Napoleon's time, as Aunt Charlotte never was called to do. Both Aunt and Niece were women of sense, of probity, propriety; fairly beyond the average of Queens. And as to their early poverty, ridiculous to this gold-nugget generation, I rather guess it may have done them benefits which the gold-nugget generation, in its Queens and otherwise, stands far more in want of than it thinks.

But enough of this Prince of Mirow, whom Friedrich has accidentally unearthed for us. Indeed there is no farther history of him, for or against. He evidently was not thought to have invented gunpowder, by the public. And yet who knows but, in his very simplicity, there lay something far beyond the Ill Margraf to whom he was so quizzable? Poor downpressed brother mortal; somnambulating so pacifically in Sleepy Hollow yonder, and making no complaint!

He continued, though soon with less enthusiasm, and in the end very rarely, a visitor of Friedrich's during this Reinsberg time. Patriotic English readers may as well take the few remaining vestiges too, before quite dismissing him to Sleepy Hollow. Here they are, swept accurately together, from that Correspondence of Friedrich with Papa:

'Reinsberg, 18*th November* 1736. * * * report most submissively that 'the Prince of Mirow has again been here, with his Mother, Wife, Aunt, 'Hofdames, Cavaliers and entire Household; so that I thought it was [5] Born (at Mirow), 19th May 1744: married (London), 8th September 1761: died, 18th November 1818 (Michaelis, ii. 445, 446: Hübner, i. 195: Oertel, pp. 42, 52).

Oct.-Nov. 1736.

'the Flight out of Egypt' (Exodus of the Jews). 'I begin to have a fear 'of those good people, as they assured me they would have such plea-'sure in coming often!'

'Reinsberg, 1st February 1737.' Let us give it in the Original too, as a specimen of German spelling:

'Der Printz von Mihrau ist vohr einigen thagen hier gewessen und 'haben wier einige Wasser schwermer in der See ihm zu Ehren gesmissen, 'seine frau ist mit einer thoten Printzesin nieder geKomen.—Der Gene-'ral schulenburg ist heute hier gekommen und wirdt morgen'—That is to say:

'The Prince of Mirow was here a few days ago; and we let-off, in 'honour of him, a few water-rockets over the Lake: his Wife has been 'brought to bed of a dead Princess. General Schulenburg' (with a small s) 'came hither today; and tomorrow will' * *

'Reinsberg, 28th March 1737. * * Prince von Mirow was here 'yesterday; and tried shooting at the popinjay with us; he cannot see 'rightly, and shoots always with help of an opera-glass.'

'Ruppin, 20th October 1737. The Prince of Mirow was with us 'last Friday; and babbled much in his high way; among other things, 'white-lied to us, that the Kaiserinn gave him a certain porcelain snuff-'box he was handling; but on being questioned more tightly, he con-'fessed to me he had bought it in Vienna.'[6]

And so let him somnambulate yonder, till the two Queens, like winged Psyches, one after the other, manage to emerge from him.

Friedrich's Letters to his Father are described by some Prussian Editors as 'very attractive, sehr anziehende Briefe;' which, to a Foreign reader, seems a strange account of them. Letters very hard to understand completely; and rather insignificant when understood. They turn on Gifts sent to and sent from, 'swans,' 'hams,' with the unspeakable thanks for them; on recruits of so many inches; on the visitors that have been; they assure us that 'there is no sickness in the regiment,' or tell expressly how much:—wholly small facts; nothing of speculation, and of ceremonial pipeclay a great deal. We know already under what nightmare conditions Friedrich wrote to his Father! The attitude of the Crown Prince, sincerely reverent and filial, though obliged to appear ineffably so, and on the whole struggling under such mountains of encumbrance, yet loyally maintaining his equilibrium, does at last acquire, Briefe an Vater, p. 71 (caret in Œuvres); pp. 85-114.—See Ib., 6th November 737, for faint trace of a visit; and 25th September 1739, for another still fainter, the st there is.

in these Letters, silently a kind of beauty to the best class of readers. But that is nearly their sole merit. By far the most human of them, that on the first visit to Mirow, the reader has now seen; and may thank us much that we show him no more of them.[7]

CHAPTER IV.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

WHILE these Mirow visits are about their best, and much else at Reinsberg is in comfortable progress, Friedrich's first year there just ending, there come accounts from England of quarrels broken out between the Britannic Majesty and his Prince of Wales. Discrepancies risen now to a height; and getting into the very Newspapers;—the Rising Sun too little under the control of the Setting, in that unquiet Country!

Prince Fred of England did not get to the Rhine Campaign, as we saw: he got some increase of Revenue, a Household of his own; and finally a Wife, as he had requested: a Sachsen-Gotha Princess; who, peerless Wilhelmina being unattainable, was welcome to Prince Fred. She is in the family-way, this summer 1737, a very young lady still; result thought to be due —When? Result being potential Heir to the British Nation, there ought to have been good calculation of the time when! But apparently nobody had well turned his attention that way. Or if Fred and Spouse had, as is presumable, Fred had given no notice to the Paternal Majesty,—"Let Paternal Majesty, always so cross to me, look-out for himself in that matter." Certain it is, Fred and Spouse, in the beginning of August 1737, are out at Hampton Court; potential Heir due before long, and no preparation made for it. August 11th in the evening, out at solitary Hampton Court; the poor young Mother's pains came on; no Chancellor there, no Archbishop to see the birth,—in fact, hardly the least medical help, and of political altogether none. Fred, in his flurry, or by forethought, —instead of dashing-off expresses, at a gallop as of Epsom, to summon the necessary persons and appliances, yoked wheeled vehicles and rolled-off to the old unprovided Palace of St.

[7] Friedrich des Grossen Briefe an seinen Vater (Berlin, 1838). Reduced in size, by suitable omissions; and properly spelt; but with little other elucidation for a stranger: in Œuvres, xxvii. part 3d, pp. 1-123 (Berlin, 1856).

James's, London, with his poor Wife in person! Unwarned, unprovided; where nevertheless she was safely delivered that same night,—safely, as if by miracle. The crisis might have taken her on the very highway: never was such an imprudence. Owing, I will believe, to Fred's sudden flurry in the unprovided moment,—unprovided, by reason of prior desuetudes and discouragements to speech, on Papa's side. A shade of malice there might also be. Papa doubts not, it was malice aforethought all of it. "Had the potential Heir of the British Nation gone to wreck, or been born on the highway, from my quarrels with this bad Fred, what a scrape had I been in!" thinks Papa, and is in a towering permanence of wrath ever since; the very Newspapers and coffee-houses and populaces now all getting vocal with it.

Papa, as it turned out, never more saw the face of Fred. Judicious Mamma, Queen Caroline, could not help a visit, one visit to the poor young Mother, so soon as proper: coming out from the visit, Prince Fred obsequiously escorting her to her carriage, found a crowd of people and populace, in front of St. James's; and there knelt down on the street, in his fine silk breeches, careless of the mud, to "beg a Mother's blessing," and show what a son he was, he for his part, in this sad discrepancy that had risen! Mamma threw a silent glance on him, containing volumes of mixed tenor; drove off; and saw no more of Fred, she either. I fear, this kneeling in the mud tells against Prince Fred; but in truth I do not know, nor even much care.[1] What a noise in England about nothing at all! —What a noisy Country, your Prussian Majesty! Foolish 'rising sun' not restrainable there by the setting or shining one; opposition parties bowling him about among the constellations, like a very mad object!—

But in a month or two, there comes worse news out of England; falling heavy on the heart of Prussian Majesty: news that Queen Caroline herself is dead.[2] Died as she had lived, with much constancy of mind, with a graceful modest courage and endurance; sinking quietly under the load of private miseries long quietly kept hidden, but now become too heavy, and for which the appointed rest was now here. Little George blubbered a good deal; fidgeted and flustered a good deal:

[1] Lord Hervey, Memoirs of George the Second, ii. 362-370, 409.
[2] 'Sunday evening, 1st December (20th Nov.) 1737.' Ib. pp. 510-539.

much put about, poor foolish little soul. The dying Caroline recommended him to Walpole; advised his Majesty to marry again. "Non, j'aurai des maîtresses (No, I'll have mistresses)!" sobbed his Majesty passionately. "Ah, mon Dieu, cela n'empêche pas (that does not hinder)!" answered she, from long experience of the case. There is something stoically tragic in the history of Caroline with her flighty vapouring little King: seldom had foolish husband so wise a wife. "Dead!" thought Friedrich Wilhelm, looking back through the whirlwinds of life, into sunny young scenes far enough away: "Dead!"—Walpole continued to manage the little King; but not for long; England itself rising in objection. Jenkins's Ear, I understand, is lying in cotton; and there are mad inflammable strata in that Nation, capable of exploding at a great rate.

From the Eastern regions our Newspapers are very full of events: War with the Turk going on there; Russia and Austria both doing their best against the Turk. The Russians had hardly finished their Polish-Election fighting, when they decided to have a stroke at the Turk,—Turk always an especial eye-sorrow to them, since that "Treaty of the Pruth," and Czar Peter's sad rebuff there:—Münnich marched direct out of Poland through the Ukraine, with his eye on the Crimea and furious business in that quarter. This is his second Campaign there, this of 1737; and furious business has not failed. Last year he stormed the Lines of Perecop, tore open the Crimea; took Azoph, he or Lacy under him; took many things: this year he had laid his plans for Oczakow;—takes Oczakow,—fiery event, blazing in all the Newspapers, at Reinsberg and elsewhere. Concerning which will the reader accept this condensed testimony by an eye-witness?

'Oczakow, 13*th July* 1737. Day before yesterday, Feldmarschall 'Münnich got to Oczakow, as he had planned,'—strong Turkish Town in the nook between the Black Sea and the estuary of the Dnieper;—'with intention to besiege it. Siege-train, stores of every sort, which 'he had set afloat upon the Dnieper in time enough, were to have been 'ready for him at Oczakow. But the flotilla had been detained by 'shallows, by waterfalls; not a boat was come, nor could anybody say 'when they were coming. Meanwhile nothing is to be had here; the 'very face of the earth the Turks have burnt: not a blade of grass for 'cavalry within eight miles, nor a stick of wood for engineers; not a 'hole for covert, and the ground so hard you cannot raise redoubts on 'it: Münnich perceives he must attempt, nevertheless.

'On his right, by the seashore, Münnich finds some remains of gardens, palisades; scrapes together some vestige of shelter there (five thousand, or even ten thousand pioneers working desperately all that first night, 11th July, with only half success); and on the morrow commences firing with what artillery he has. Much out-fired by the Turks inside;—his enterprise as good as desperate, unless the Dnieper flotilla come soon. July 12th, all day the firing continues, and all night; Turks extremely furious: about an hour before daybreak, we notice burning in the interior, "Some wooden house kindled by us, town got on fire yonder,"—and, praise to Heaven, they do not seem to succeed in quenching it again. Münnich turns out, in various divisions; intent on trying something, had he the least engineer furniture; —hopes desperately there may be promise for him in that internal burning still visible.

'In the centre of Münnich's line is one General Keith, a deliberate stalwart Scotch gentleman, whom we shall know better; Münnich himself is to the right: Could not one try it by scalade; keep the internal burning free to spread, at any rate? "Advance within musket-shot, General Keith!" orders Münnich's Aide-de-Camp cantering up. "I have been this good while within it," answers Keith, pointing to his dead men. Aide-de-Camp canters up a second time: "Advance within half musket-shot, General Keith, and quit any covert you have!" Keith does so; sends, with his respects to Feldmarschall Münnich, his remonstrance against such a waste of human life. Aide-de-Camp canters up a third time: "Feldmarschall Münnich is for trying a scalade; hopes General Keith will do his best to coöperate!" "Forward, then!" answers Keith; advances close to the glacis; finds a wet ditch twelve feet broad, and has not a stick of engineer furniture. Keith waits there two hours; his men, under fire all the while, trying this and that to get across; Münnich's scalade going off ineffectual in like manner:—till at length Keith's men, and all men, tire of such a business, and roll back in great confusion out of shot-range. Münnich gives himself up for lost. And indeed, says Mannstein, had the Turks sallied out in pursuit at that moment, they might have chased us back to Russia. But the Turks did not sally. And the internal conflagration is not quenched, far from it;—and about nine A.M. their Powder-Magazine, conflagration reaching it, roared aloft into the air, and killed seven thousand of them.'[3]

So that Oczakow was taken, sure enough; terms, life only: and every remaining Turk packs-off from it, some 'twenty thousand inhabitants young and old' for one sad item.—A very blazing semi-absurd event, to be read of in Prussian military circles,—where General Keith will be better known one day.

Russian War with the Turk: that means withal, by old

[3] Mannstein, pp. 151-156.

Treaties, aid of thirty thousand men from the Kaiser to Russia. Kaiser, so ruined lately, how can he send thirty thousand, and keep them recruited, in such distant expedition? Kaiser, much meditating, is advised it will be better to go frankly into the Turk on his own score, and try for slices of profit from him in this game. Kaiser declares war against the Turk; and what is still more interesting to Friedrich Wilhelm and the Berlin Circles, Seckendorf is named General of it. Feldzeugmeister now Feldmarschall Seckendorf, envy may say what it will, he has marched this season into the Lower-Donau Countries,—going to besiege Widdin, they say,—at the head of a big Army (on paper, almost a hundred and fifty thousand, light troops and heavy)—virtually Commander-in-Chief; though nominally our fine young friend Franz of Lorraine bears the title of Commander, whom Seckendorf is to dry-nurse in the way sometimes practised. Going to besiege Widdin, they say. So has the poor Kaiser been advised. His wise old Eugene is now gone;[4] I fear his advisers,—a youngish Feldzeugmeister, Prince of Hildburghausen, the chief favourite among them,—are none of the wisest. All Protestants, we observe, these favourite Hildburghausens, Schmettaus, Seckendorfs of his; and Vienna is an orthodox papal Court;—and there is a Hofkriegsrath (Supreme Council of War), which has ruined many a General, poking too meddlesomely into his affairs! On the whole, Seckendorf will have his difficulties. Here is a scene, on the Lower Donau, different enough from that at Oczakow, not far from contemporaneous with it. The Austrian Army is at Kolitz, a march or two beyond Belgrad:

'Kolitz, 2d July 1737. This day, the Army not being on march, but 'allowed to rest itself, Grand Duke Franz went into the woods to hunt. 'Hunting up and down, he lost himself; did not return at evening; and, 'as the night closed in and no Generalissimo visible, the Generalissimo 'ad Latus (such the title they had contrived for Seckendorf) was in 'much alarm. Generalissimo ad Latus ordered out his whole force of 'drummers, trumpeters: To fling themselves, postwise, deeper and 'deeper into the woods all round; to drum there, and blow, in ever-'widening circle, in prescribed notes, and with all energy, till the Grand 'Duke were found. Grand Duke being found, Seckendorf remonstrated, 'rebuked; a thought too earnestly, some say, his temper being flurried,'—voice snuffling somewhat in alt, with lisp to help:—'so that the Grand 'Duke took offence; flung-off in a huff: and always looked askance on [4] Died 30th April 1736.

'the Feldmarschall from that time;'[5]—quitting him altogether before long; and marching with Khevenhüller, Wallis, Hildburghausen, or any of the subordinate Generals rather. Probably Widden will not go the road of Oczakow, nor the Austrians prosper like the Russians, this summer.

Pöllnitz, in Tobacco-Parliament, and in certain Berlin circles foolishly agape about this new Feldmarschall, maintains always, Seckendorf will come to nothing; which his Majesty zealously contradicts,—his Majesty, and some short-sighted private individuals still favourable to Seckendorf.[6] Exactly one week after that singular drum-and-trumpet operation on Duke Franz, the Last of the Medici dies at Florence;[7] and Serene Franz, if he knew it, is Grand Duke of Tuscany, according to bargain: a matter important to himself chiefly, and to France, who, for Stanislaus and Lorraine's sake, has had to pay him some 200,000*l.* a-year during the brief intermediate state.

Of Berg and Jülich again; and of Luiscius with the One Razor.

These remote occurrences are of small interest to his Prussian Majesty, in comparison with the Pfalz affair, the Cleve-Jülich succession, which lies so near home. His Majesty is uncommonly anxious to have this matter settled, in peace, if possible. Kaiser and Reich, with the other Mediating Powers, go on mediating; but when will they decide? This year the old Bishop of Augsburg, one Brother of the older Kur-Pfalz Karl Philip, dies; nothing now between us and the event itself, but Karl Philip alone, who is verging towards eighty: the decision, to be peaceable, ought to be speedy! Friedrich Wilhelm, in January last, sent the expert Degenfeld, once of London, to old Karl Philip; and has him still there, with the most conciliatory offers: "Will leave your Sulzbachs a part, then; will be content with part, instead of the whole, which is mine if there be force in sealed parchment; will do anything for peace!" To which the old Kur-Pfalz, foolish old creature, is steadily deaf; answers vaguely, negatively always, in a polite manner; pushing his Majesty upon extremities painful to think of. "We hate war; but cannot quite do without justice, your Serenity," thinks Friedrich Wilhelm: "must it be the eighty thousand iron ramrods, then?" Obstinate Serenity continues deaf; and Friedrich Wilhelm's negotiations, there at Mannheim, over in Holland, and through Holland with England, not to speak of Kaiser and Reich close at hand, become very intense; vehemently earnest, about this matter, for the next two years. The details of which, inexpressibly uninteresting, shall be spared the reader.

[5] See Lebensgeschichte des Grafen von Schmettau (by his Son: Berlin, 1806), i. 27.

[6] Pöllnitz, Memoiren, ii. 497-502. [7] 9th July (Fastes de Louis XV. p. 304).

Summary is, these Mediating Powers will be of no help to his Majesty; not even the Dutch will, with whom he is specially in friendship: nay, in the third year it becomes fatally manifest, the chief Mediating Powers, Kaiser and France, listening rather to political convenience, than to the claims of justice, go direct in Kur-Pfalz's favour;—by formal treaty of their own,[8] France and the Kaiser settle, "That the Sulzbachers shall, as a preliminary, get provisional possession, on the now Serenity's decease; and shall continue undisturbed for two years, till Law decide between his Prussian Majesty and them." Two years; Law decide;—and we know what are the nine-points in a Law-case! This, at last, proved too much for his Majesty. Majesty's abstruse dubitations, meditations on such treatment by a Kaiser and others, did then, it appears, gloomily settle into fixed private purpose of trying it by the iron ramrods, when old Kur-Pfalz should die,—of marching with eighty thousand men into the Cleve Countries, and so welcoming any Sulzbach or other guests that might arrive. Happily old Kur-Pfalz did not die in his Majesty's time; survived his Majesty several years: so that the matter fell into other hands,—and was settled very well, near a century after.

Of certain wranglings with the little Town of Herstal,—Prussian Town (part of the Orange Heritage, once King Pepin's Town, if that were any matter now) in the Bishop of Liége's neighbourhood, Town highly insignificant otherwise,—we shall say nothing here, as they will fall to be treated, and be settled, at an after stage. Friedrich Wilhelm was much grieved by the contumacies of that paltry little Herstal; and by the Bishop of Liége's highflown procedures in countenancing them;—especially in a recruiting case that had fallen out there, and brought matters to a head.[9] The Kaiser too was afflictively high in countenancing the Bishop ;—for which both Kaiser and Bishop got due payment in time. But his Prussian Majesty would not kindle the world for such a paltriness ; and so left it hanging in a vexatious condition. Such things, it is remarked, weigh heavier on his now infirm Majesty than they were wont. He is more subject to fits of hypochondria, to talk of abdicating. "All gone wrong!" he would say, if any little flaw rose, about recruiting or the like. "One might go and live at Venice, were one rid of it!"[10] And his deep-stung clangorous growl against the Kaiser's treatment of him bursts out, from time to time ; though he oftenest pities the Kaiser, too ; seeing him at such a pass with his Turk War and otherwise.

[8] 'Versailles, 13th January 1739' (Olrich, Geschichte der Schlesischen Kriege, i. 13); Mauvillon, ii. 405-446; &c.

It was in this Pfalz business that Herr Luiscius, the Prussian Minister in Holland, got into trouble ; of whom there is a light dash of outline-portraiture by Voltaire, which has made him memorable to readers. This 'fat King of Prussia,' says Voltaire, was a dreadfully avaricious fellow, unbeautiful to a high degree in his proceedings with mankind :

'He had a Minister at the Hague called Luiscius; who certainly of 'all Ministers of Crowned Heads was the worst paid. This poor man, 'to warm himself, had made some trees be felled in the Garden of 'Honslardik, which belonged at that time to the House of Prussia; he 'thereupon received despatches from the King, intimating that a year 'of his salary was forfeited. Luiscius, in despair, cut his throat with 'probably the one razor he had (seul rasoir qu'il eût); an old valet came 'to his assistance, and unhappily saved his life. In after years, I found 'his Excellency at the Hague; and have occasionally given him an alms 'at the door of the Vieille Cour (Old Court), a Palace belonging to the 'King of Prussia, where this poor Ambassador had lived a dozen years. 'It must be owned, Turkey is a republic in comparison to the despotism 'exercised by Friedrich Wilhelm.'[11]

Here truly is a witty sketch ; consummately dashed off, as nobody but Voltaire could ; 'round as Giotto's O,' done at one stroke. Of which the prose facts are only as follows. Luiscius, Prussian Resident, not distinguished by salary or otherwise, had, at one stage of these negotiations, been told, from headquarters, He might, in casual extra-official ways, if it seemed furthersome, give their High Mightinesses the hope, or notion, that his Majesty did not intend actual war about that Cleve-Jülich Succession,—being a pacific Majesty, and unwilling to involve his neighbours and mankind. Luiscius, instead of casual hint delicately dropped in some good way, had proceeded by direct declaration; frank assurance to the High Mightinesses, That there would be no war. Which had never been quite his Majesty's meaning, and perhaps was now becoming rather the reverse of it. Disavowal of Luiscius had to ensue thereupon; who produced defensively his instruction from head-quarters; but got only rebukes for such heavy-footed clumsy procedure, so unlike Diplomacy with its shoes of felt;—and, in brief, was turned out of the Diplomatic function, as unfit for it; and appointed to manage certain Orange Properties, fragments of the Orange Heritage which his Majesty still has in those Countries. This misadventure sank heavily on the spirits of Luiscius, otherwise none of the strongest-minded of men. Nor did he prosper in managing the Orange Properties: on the contrary, he again fell into mistakes; got soundly rebuked for injudicious conduct there,—'cutting trees,' planting trees, or whatever it was;—and this produced such an effect on Luiscius, that he made an attempt on his own throat, distracted mortal; and was only stopped by somebody rushing in. 'It 'was not the first time he had tried that feat,' says Pöllnitz, 'and been prevented; nor was it long till he made a new 'attempt, which was again frustrated: and always afterwards 'his relations kept him close in view:' Majesty writing comfortable forgiveness to the perturbed creature, and also 'settling a pension on him;' adequate, we can hope, and not excessive; 'which Luiscius continued to receive, at the Hague, so long 'as he lived.' These are the prose facts; not definitely dated to us, but perfectly clear otherwise.[12]

[9] 'December 1738' is crisis of the recruiting case (Helden-Geschichte, ii. 63); '17th February 1739,' Bishop's highflown appearance in it (ib. 67); Kaiser's in consequence, '10th April 1739.'

[10] Förster (place lost).

[11] Œuvres de Voltaire (Vie Privée, or what they now call Mémoires), ii. 15.

Voltaire, in his Dutch excursions, did sometimes, in after years, lodge in that old vacant Palace, called Vieille Cour, at the Hague; where he gracefully celebrates the decayed forsaken state of matters; dusky vast rooms with dim gilding; forgotten libraries 'veiled under the biggest spiderwebs in Europe;' for the rest, an uncommonly quiet place, convenient for a writing man, besides costing nothing. A son of this Luiscius, a good young lad, it also appears, was occasionally Voltaire's amanuensis there; him he did recommend zealously to the new King of Prussia, who was not deaf on the occasion. This, in the fire of satirical wit, is what we can transiently call 'giving alms to a Prussian Excellency;'—not now excellent, but pensioned and cracked; and the reader perceives, Luiscius had probably more than one razor, had not one been enough, when he did the rash act! Friedrich employed Luiscius Junior, with no result that we hear of farther; and seems to have thought Luiscius Senior an absurd fellow, not worth mentioning again: 'ran away from the Cleve Country' (probably some madhouse there) 'above a year ago, I hear; and what is the matter where such a crackbrain end?'[13]

[12] Pöllnitz, ii. 495, 496;—the 'new attempt' seems to have been 'June 1739' (Gentleman's Magazine, in mense, p. 331).

8th July 1738.

CHAPTER V.

VISIT AT LOO.

THE Pfalz question being in such a predicament, and Luiscius diplomatising upon it in such heavy-footed manner, his Majesty thinks a journey to Holland, to visit one's Kinsfolk there, and incidentally speak a word with the High Mightinesses upon Pfalz, would not be amiss. Such journey is decided on; Crown-Prince to accompany. Summer of 1738: a short visit, quite without fuss; to last only three days;—mere sequel to the Reviews held in those adjacent Cleve Countries; so that the Gazetteers may take no notice. All which was done accordingly: Crown-Prince's first sight of Holland; and one of the few reportable points of his Reinsberg life, and not quite without memorability to him and us.

On the 8th of July 1738, the Review Party got upon the road for Wesel: all through July, they did their reviewing in those Cleve Countries; and then struck across for the Palace of Loo in Geldern, where a Prince of Orange countable kinsman to his Prussian Majesty, and a Princess still more nearly connected,—English George's Daughter, own niece to his Prussian Majesty,—are in waiting for this distinguished honour. The Prince of Orange we have already seen, for a moment once; at the siege of Philipsburg four years ago, when the sale of Chasot's horses went off so well. "Nothing like selling horses when your company have dined well," whispered he to Chasot, at that time; since which date we have heard nothing of his Highness.

[13] Voltaire, Œuvres (Letter to Friedrich, 7th October 1740), lxxii. 261; and Friedrich's answer (wrong dated), ib. 265; Preuss, xxii. 33.

He is not a beautiful man; he has a crooked back, and features conformable; but is of prompt vivacious nature, and does not want for sense and good-humour. Paternal George, the gossips say, warned his Princess, when this marriage was talked of, "You will find him very ill-looking, though!" "And if I found him a baboon—!" answered she; being so heartily tired of St. James's. And in fact, for anything I have heard, they do well enough together. She is George II.'s eldest Princess;—next elder to our poor Amelia, who was once so interesting to us! What the Crown-Prince now thought of all that, I do not know; but the Books say, poor Amelia wore the willow, and specially wore the Prince's miniature on her breast all her days after, which were many. Grew corpulent, somewhat a huddle in appearance and equipment, 'eyelids like upper-lips,' for one item: but when life itself fled, the miniature was found in its old place, resting on the old heart after some sixty years. O Time, O Sons and Daughters of Time!—

His Majesty's reception at Loo was of the kind he liked, —cordial, honourable, unceremonious; and these were three pleasant days he had. Pleasant for the Crown-Prince too; as the whole Journey had rather been; Papa, with covert satisfaction, finding him a wise creature, after all, and "more serious" than formerly. "Hm, you don't know what things are in that Fritz!" his Majesty murmured sometimes, in these later years, with a fine light in his eyes.

Loo itself is a beautiful Palace: 'Loo, close by the Village 'Appeldoorn, is a stately brick edifice, built with architectural 'regularity; has finely decorated rooms, beautiful gardens, and 'round are superb alleys of oak and linden.'[1] There saunters pleasantly our Crown-Prince, for these three days;—and one glad incident I do perceive to have befallen him there: the arrival of a Letter from Voltaire. Letter much expected, which had followed him from Wesel; and which he answers here, in this brick Palace, among the superb avenues and gardens.[2]

[1] Büsching, Erdbeschreibung, viii. 69.
[2] Œuvres, xxi. 203, the Letter, 'Cirey, June 1738;' Ib. 222, the Answer to it 'Loo, 6th August 1738.'

No doubt a glad incident, irradiating, as with a sudden sunburst in gray weather, the commonplace of things. Here is news worth listening to; news as from the empyrean! Free interchange of poetries and proses, of heroic sentiments and opinions, between the Unique of Sages and the Paragon of Crown-Princes; how charming to both! Literary business, we perceive, is brisk on both hands; at Cirey the Discours sur l'Homme ('Sixth Discours' arrives in this packet at Loo, surely a deathless piece of singing); nor is Reinsberg idle: Reinsberg is copiously doing verse, such verse! and in prose, very earnestly, an "Anti-Macchiavel;" which soon afterwards filled all the then world, though it has now fallen so silent again. And at Paris, as Voltaire announces with a flourish, 'M. de Maupertuis's excellent Book, Figure de la Terre, is out';[3] M. de Maupertuis, home from the Polar regions and from measuring the Earth there; the sublimest miracle in Paris society at present. Might build, new-build, an Academy of Sciences at Berlin for your Royal Highness, one day? suggests Voltaire, on this occasion: and Friedrich, as we shall see, takes the hint. One passage of the Crown-Prince's Answer is in these terms;—fixing this Loo Visit to its date for us, at any rate:

'Loo in Holland, 6th August 1739. ✡ ✡ I write from a place 'where there lived once a great man' (William III. of England, our Dutch William); 'which is now the Prince of Orange's House. The 'demon of Ambition sheds its unhappy poisons over his days. He 'might be the most fortunate of men; and he is devoured by chagrins 'in his beautiful Palace here, in the middle of his gardens and of a 'brilliant Court. It is pity in truth; for he is a Prince with no end 'of wit (infiniment d'esprit), and has respectable qualities.' Not Stadtholder, unluckily; that is where the shoe pinches; the Dutch are on the Republican tack, and will not have a Stadtholder at present. No help for it in one's beautiful gardens and avenues of oak and linden.

'I have talked a great deal about Newton with the Princess,'—about Newton; never hinted at Amelia; not permissible!—'from New-'ton we passed to Leibnitz; and from Leibnitz to the late Queen of 'England,' Caroline lately gone, 'who, the Prince told me, was of 'Clarke's sentiment' on that important theological controversy now dead to mankind.——And of Jenkins and his Ear did the Princess say nothing? That is now becoming a high phenomenon in England! But readers must wait a little.

[3] Paris, 1738: Maupertuis's 'measurement of a degree,' in the utmost North, 1736-7 (to prove the Earth flattened there). Vivid Narrative; somewhat gesticulative, but duly brief. The only Book of that great Maupertuis which is now readable to human nature.

Pity that we cannot give these two Letters in full; that no reader, almost, could be made to understand them, or to care for them when understood. Such the cruelty of Time upon this Voltaire-Friedrich Correspondence, and some others; which were once so rosy, sunny, and are now fallen drearily extinct, —studiable by Editors only! In itself the Friedrich-Voltaire Correspondence, we can see, was charming; very blossomy at present: businesses increasing; mutual admiration now risen to a great height,—admiration sincere on both sides, most so on the Prince's, and extravagantly expressed on both sides, most so on Voltaire's.

Crown-Prince becomes a Freemason; and is harangued by Monsieur de Bielfeld.

His Majesty, we said, had three pleasant days at Loo; discoursing, as with friends, on public matters, or even on more private matters, in a frank unconstrained way. He is not to be called "Majesty" on this occasion; but the fact, at Loo, and by the leading Mightinesses of the Republic, who come copiously to compliment him there, is well remembered. Talk there was, with such leading Mightinesses, about the Jülich-and-Berg question, aim of this Journey: earnest enough private talk with some of them: but it availed nothing; and would not be worth reporting now to any creature, if we even knew it. In fact, the Journey itself remains mentionable chiefly by one very trifling circumstance; and then by another, not important either, which followed out of that. The trifling circumstance is,—That Friedrich, in the course of this Journey, became a Freemason: and the unimportant sequel was, That he made acquaintance with one Bielfeld, on the occasion; who afterwards wrote a Book about him, which was once much read, though never much worth reading, and is still citable, with precaution, now and then.[4] Trifling circumstance, of Freemasonry, as we read in Bielfeld and in many Books after him, befell in manner following.

Among the dinner-guests at Loo, one of those three days, was a Prince of Lippe-Bückeburg,—Prince of small territory, but of great speculation; whose territory lies on the Weser, [4] Monsieur le Baron de Bielfeld, Lettres Familières et Autres, 1763;—second edition, 2 vols. à Leide, 1767, is the one we use here.

leading to Dutch connexions; and whose speculations stretch over all the Universe, in a high fantastic style:—he was a dinner-guest; and one of the topics that came up was Freemasonry; a phantasmal kind of object, which had kindled itself, or rekindled, in those years, in England first of all; and was now hovering about, a good deal, in Germany and other countries; pretending to be a new light of Heaven, and not a bog-meteor of phosphorated hydrogen, conspicuous in the murk of things. Bog-meteor, foolish putrescent will-o'-wisp, his Majesty promptly defined it to be: Tomfoolery and Kinderspiel, what else? Whereupon ingenious Bückeburg, who was himself a Mason, man of forty by this time, and had high things in him of the Quixotic type, ventured on defence; and was so respectful, eloquent, dextrous, ingenious, he quite captivated, if not his Majesty, at least the Crown-Prince, who was more enthusiastic for high things. Crown-Prince, after table, took his Durchlaucht of Bückeburg aside; talked farther on the subject, expressed his admiration, his conviction,—his wish to be admitted into such a Hero Fraternity. Nothing could be welcomer to Durchlaucht. And so, in all privacy, it was made-up between them, That Durchlaucht, summoning as many mystic Brothers out of Hamburg as were needful, should be in waiting with them, on the Crown-Prince's road homeward,—say at Brunswick, night before the Fair, where we are to be,—and there make the Crown-Prince a Mason.[5]

This is Bielfeld's account, repeated ever since; substantially correct, except that the scene was not Loo at all: dinner and dialogue, it now appears, took place in Durchlaucht's own neighbourhood, during the Cleve Review time; 'probably at Minden, 17th July;' and all was settled into fixed program before Loo came in sight.[6] Bielfeld's report of the subsequent procedure at Brunswick, as he saw it and was himself part of it, is liable to no mistakes, at least of the involuntary kind; and may, for anything we know, be correct in every particular.

He says (veiling it under discreet asterisks, which are now decipherable enough), The Durchlaucht of Lippe-Bückeburg

[5] Bielfeld, i. 14-16; Preuss, i. 111; Preuss, Buch für Jedermann, i. 41.

[6] Œuvres de Frédéric, xvi. 201: Friedrich's Letter to this Durchlaucht, 'Comte de Schaumbourg-Lippe' he calls him; date, 'Moyland, 26th July 1738:' Moyland, a certain Schloss, or habitable Mansion, of his Majesty's, few miles to north of Mörs in the Cleve Country; where his Majesty used often to pause;—and where (what will be much more remarkable to readers) the Crown-Prince and Voltaire had their first meeting, two years hence.

had summoned six Brethren of the Hamburg Lodge; of whom we mention only a Graf von Kielmannsegge, a Baron von Oberg, both from Hanover, and Bielfeld himself, a Merchant's Son, of Hamburg; these, with 'Kielmannsegge's Valet to act as Tiler,' Valet being also a Mason, and the rule equality of mankind,—were to have the honour of initiating the Crown-Prince. They arrived at the Western Gate of Brunswick on the 11th of August, as prearranged; Prussian Majesty not yet come, but coming punctually on the morrow. It is Fair-time; all manner of traders, pedlars, showmen rendezvousing; many neighbouring Nobility too, as was still the habit. "Such a bulk of light luggage?" said the Custom-house people at the Gate;—but were pacified by slipping them a ducat. Upon which we drove to 'Korn's Hôtel' (if anybody now knew it) and there patiently waited. No great things of a Hôtel, says Bielfeld; but can be put-up with;—worst feature is, we discover a Hanover acquaintance lodging close by, nothing but a wooden partition between us: How if he should overhear!—

Prussian Majesty and suite, under universal cannon salvos, arrived, Sunday the 12th; to stay till Wednesday (three days) with his august Son-in-law and Daughter here. Durchlaucht Lippe presents himself at Court, the rest of us not; privately settles with the Prince: "Tuesday night, eve of his Majesty's departure; that shall be the night: at Korn's Hôtel, late enough!" And there, accordingly, on the appointed night, 14th-15th August 1738, the light-luggage trunks have yielded their stage-properties; Jachin and Boaz are set up, and all things are ready; Tiler (Kielmannsegge's Valet) watching with drawn sword against the profane. As to our Hanover neighbour, on the other side the partition, says Bielfeld, we waited on him, this day after dinner, successively paying our respects; successively pledged him in so many bumpers, he is lying dead drunk hours ago, could not overhear a cannon-battery, he. And soon after midnight, the Crown-Prince glides in, a Captain Wartensleben accompanying, who is also a candidate; and the mysterious rites are accomplished on both of them, on the Crown-Prince first, without accident, and in the usual way.

Bielfeld could not enough admire the demeanour of this Prince, his clearness, sense, quiet brilliancy; and how he was so 'intrepid,' and 'possessed himself so gracefully in the most critical instants.' Extremely genial air, and so young, looks younger even than his years: handsome to a degree, though of short stature. Physiognomy, features, quite charming; fine auburn hair (beau brun), a negligent plenty of it; 'his large blue eyes have something at once severe, sweet and gracious.' Eligible Mason indeed. Had better make dispatch at present, lest Papa be getting on the road before him!—Bielfeld delivered a small address, composed beforehand; with which the Prince seemed to be content. And so, with masonic grip, they made their adieus for the present; and the Crown-Prince and Wartensleben were back at their posts, ready for the road along with his Majesty.

His Majesty came on Sunday; goes on Wednesday, home now at a stretch; and, we hope, has had a good time of it here, these three days. Daughter Charlotte and her Serene Husband, well with their subjects, well with one another, are doing well; have already two little Children; a Boy the elder, of whom we have heard: Boy's name is Karl, age now three; sprightly, reckoned very clever, by the fond parents;—who has many things to do in the world, by and by; to attack the French Revolution, and be blown to pieces by it on the Field of Jena, for final thing! That is the fate of little Karl, who frolics about here, so sunshiny and ingenuous at present.

Karl's Grandmother, the Serene Dowager Duchess, Friedrich's own Mother-in-law, his Majesty and Friedrich would also of course see here. Fine Younger Sons of hers are coming forward; the reigning Duke beautifully careful about the furtherance of these Cadets of the House. Here is Prince Ferdinand, for instance; just getting ready for the Grand Tour; goes in a month hence:[7] a fine eupeptic loyal young fellow; who, in a twenty years more, will be Chatham's Generalissimo, and fight the French to some purpose. A Brother of his, the next elder, is now fighting the Turks for his Kaiser; does not like it at all, under such Seckendorfs and War-Ministries as there are. Then, elder still, eldest of all the Cadets, there is Anton Ulrich, over at Petersburg for some years past, with outlooks high enough: To wed the Mecklenburg Princess there (Daughter of the unutterable Duke), and be as good as Czar of all the Russias one day. Little to his profit, poor soul!—These, historically ascertainable, are the aspects of the Brunswick Court during those three days of Royal Visit, in Fair-time; and may serve to date the Masonic Transaction for us, which the Crown-Prince has just accomplished over at Korn's.

[7] Mauvillon (Fils, son of him whom we cite otherwise), Geschichte Ferdinands Herzogs von Braunschweig-Lüneburg (Leipzig, 1794), i. 17-25.

As for the Transaction itself, there is intrinsically no harm in this initiation, we will hope: but it behoves to be kept well hidden from Papa. Papa's good opinion of the Prince has sensibly risen, in the course of this Journey, "so rational, serious, not dangling about among the women as formerly;"—and what a shock would this of Korn's Hôtel be, should Papa hear of it! Poor Papa, from officious talebearers he hears many things: is in distress about Voltaire, about Heterodoxies;—and summoned the Crown-Prince, by express, from Reinsberg, on one occasion lately, over to Potsdam, 'to take the Communion' there, by way of case-hardening against Voltaire and Heterodoxies! Think of it, human readers!—We will add the following stray particulars, more or less illustrative of the Masonic Transaction; and so end that trifling affair.

The Captain Wartensleben, fellow-recipient of the mysteries at Brunswick, is youngest son, by a second marriage, of old Feldmarschall Wartensleben, now deceased; and is consequently Uncle, Half-Uncle, of poor Lieutenant Katte, though some years younger than Katte would now have been. Tender memories hang by Wartensleben, in a silent way! He is Captain in the Potsdam Giants; somewhat an intimate, and not undeservedly so, of the Crown-Prince;—succeeds Wolden as Hofmarschall at Reinsberg, not many months after this; Wolden having died of an apoplectic stroke. Of Bielfeld comes a Book, slightly citable; from no other of the Brethren, or their Feat at Korn's, comes (we may say) anything whatever. The Crown-Prince prosecuted his Masonry, at Reinsberg or elsewhere, occasionally, for a year or two; but was never ardent in it; and very soon after his Accession, left off altogether: "Child's-play and ignis fatuus mainly!" A Royal Lodge was established at Berlin, of which the new King consented to be patron; but he never once entered the place; and only his Portrait (a welcomely good one, still to be found there) presided over the mysteries in that Establishment. Harmless

'fire,' but too 'fatuous;' mere flame-circles cut in the air, for infants, we know how!—

With Lippe-Bückeburg there ensued some Correspondence, high enough on his Serenity's side; but it soon languished on the Prince's side; and in private Poetry, within a two years of this Brunswick scene, we find Lippe used proverbially for a type-specimen of Fools.[8] A windy fantastic individual;—overwhelmed in finance-difficulties too! Lippe continued writing; but 'only Secretaries now answered him' from Berlin. A son of his, son and successor, something of a Quixote too, but notable in Artillery-practice and otherwise, will turn-up at a future stage.

Nor is Bielfeld with his Book a thing of much moment to Friedrich or to us. Bielfeld too has a light airy vein of talk; loves Voltaire and the Philosophies in a light way;—knows the arts of Society, especially the art of flattering; and would fain make himself agreeable to the Crown-Prince, being anxious to rise in the world. His Father is a Hamburg Merchant, Hamburg 'Sealing-wax Manufacturer,' not ill-off for money: Son has been at schools, high schools, under tutors, posture-masters; swashes about on those terms, with French esprit in his mouth, and lace-ruffles at his wrists; still under thirty; showy enough, sharp enough; considerably a coxcomb, as is still evident. He did transiently get about Friedrich, as we shall see; and hoped to have sold his heart to good purpose there;—was, by and by, employed in slight functions; not found fit for grave ones. In the course of some years, he got a title of Baron; and sold his heart more advantageously, to some rich Widow or Fräulein; with whom he retired to Saxony, and there lived on an Estate he had purchased, a stranger to Prussia thenceforth.

His Book (Lettres Familières et Autres, all turning on Friedrich), which came out in 1763, at the height of Friedrich's fame, and was much read, is still freely cited by Historians as an Authority. But the reading of a few pages sufficiently intimates that these 'Letters' never can have gone through a terrestrial Post-office; that they are an afterthought, composed from vague memory and imagination, in that fine Saxon retreat;—a sorrowful ghost-like 'Travels of Anacharsis,' instead of living words by an eye-witness! Not to be cited 'freely' at all, but sparingly and under conditions. They abound in small errors, in misdates, mistakes; small fictions even, and impossible pretensions:—foolish mortal, to write down his bit of knowledge in that form! For the man, in spite of his lace-ruffles and gesticulations, has brisk eyesight of a superficial kind: he could have done us this little service (apparently his one mission in the world, for which Nature gave him bed and board here); and he, the lace-ruffles having gone into his soul, has been tempted into misdoing it!—Bielfeld and Bieldfeld's Book, such as they are, appear to be the one conquest Friedrich got of Freemasonry; no other result now traceable to us of that adventure in Korn's Hôtel, crowning event of the Journey to Loo.

[8] "Taciturne, Caton, avec mes bons parents, Aussi fou que la Lippe avec les jeunes gens."
Œuvres, xi. 80 (Discours sur la Fausseté, written 1740).

Seckendorf gets lodged in Grätz.

Feldmarschall Seckendorf, after unheard-of wrestlings with the Turk War, and the Vienna War-Office (Hofkriegsrath), is sitting, for the last three weeks,—where thinks the reader?—in the Fortress of Grätz among the Hills of Styria; a State-Prisoner, not likely to get out soon! Seckendorf led forth, in 1737, "such an Army, for number, spirit and equipment," say the Vienna people, "as never marched against the Turk before;" and it must be owned, his ill success has been unparalleled. The blame was not altogether his; not chiefly his, except for his rash undertaking of the thing, on such terms as there were. But the truth is, that first scene we saw of him,—an Army all gone out trumpeting and drumming into the woods to find its Commander-in-Chief,—was an emblem of the Campaign in general. Excellent Army; but commanded by nobody in particular; commanded by a Hofkriegsrath at Vienna, by a Franz Duke of Tuscany, by Feldmarschall Seckendorf, and by subordinates who were disobedient to him: which accordingly, almost without help of the Turk and his disorderly ferocity, rubbed itself to pieces before long. Roamed about, now hither now thither, with plans laid and then with plans suddenly altered, Captain being Chaos mainly; in swampy countries, by overflowing rivers, in hunger, hot weather, forced marches; till it was marched gradually off its feet; and the clouds of chaotic Turks, who did finally show face, had a cheap pennyworth of

it. Never was such a campaign seen as this of Seckendorf in 1737, said mankind. Except indeed that the present one, Campaign of 1738, in those parts, under a different hand, is still worse; and the Campaign of 1739, under still a different, will be worst of all!—Kaiser Karl and his Austrians do not prosper in this Turk War, as the Russians do,—who indeed have got a General equal to his task: Münnich, a famed master in the art of handling Turks and War-Ministries: real father of Russian Soldiering, say the Russians still.[9]

Campaign 1737, with clouds of chaotic Turks now sabering on the skirts of it, had not yet ended, when Seckendorf was called out of it; on polite pretexts, home to Vienna; and the command given to another. At the gates of Vienna, in the last days of October 1737, an Official Person, waiting for the Feldmarschall, was sorry to inform him, That he, Feldmarschall Seckendorf, was under arrest; arrest in his own house, in the Kohlmarkt (Cabbage-market so-called), a captain and twelve musketeers to watch over him with fixed bayonets there; strictly private, till the Hofkriegsrath had satisfied themselves in a point or two. "Hmph!" snuffled he; with brow blushing slate-colour, I should think, and gray eyes much alight. And ever since, for ten months or so, Seckendorf, sealed-up in the Cabbage-market, has been fencing for life with the Hofkriegsrath; who want satisfaction upon 'eighty-six' different 'points;' and make no end of chicaning to one's clear answers. And the Jesuits preach, too: "A Heretic, born enemy of Christ and his Kaiser; what is the use of questioning!" And the Heathen rage, and all men gnash their teeth, in this uncomfortable manner.

Answering done, there comes no verdict, much less any acquittal; the captain and twelve musketeers, three of them with fixed bayonets in one's very bedroom, continue. One evening, 21st July 1738, glorious news from the seat of War,—not till evening, as the Imperial Majesty was out hunting,—enters Vienna; blowing trumpets; shaking flags: "Grand Victory over the Turks!" so we call some poor skirmish there has been; and Vienna bursting all into three-times-three, the populace get very high. Populace rush to the Kohlmarkt: break the Seckendorf windows; intent to massacre the Seckendorf, had not fresh military come, who were obliged to fire and kill one or two. 'The house captain and his twelve musketeers, of 'themselves, did wonders; Seckendorf and all his domestics 'were in arms:' "Jarni-bleu" for the last time!—This is while the Crown-Prince is at Wesel; sound asleep, most likely; Loo, and the Masonic adventure, perhaps twinkling prophetically in his dreams.

[9] See Mannstein for Münnich's plans with the Turk (methods and devices of steady Discipline in small numbers versus impetuous Ferocity in great); and Berenhorst (Betrachtungen über die Kriegskunst, Leipzig, 1796), a first-rate Authority, for examples and eulogies of them.

At two next morning, an Official Gentleman informs Seckendorf, That he, for his part, must awaken, and go to Grätz. And in one hour more (3 A.M.), the Official Gentleman rolls off with him; drives all day; and delivers his Prisoner at Grätz:—'Not so much as a room ready there; Prisoner had to wait an hour in the carriage,' till some summary preparation were made. Wall-neighbours of the poor Feldmarschall, in his Fortress here, were 'a Gold-Cook (swindling Alchemist), who had 'gone crazy; and an Irish Lieutenant, confined thirty-two years 'for some love-adventure, likewise pretty crazy; their noises 'in the night-time much disturbed the Feldmarschall.'[10] One human thing there still is in his lot, the Feldmarschall's old Gräfinn. True old Dame, she, both in the Kohlmarkt and at Grätz, stands by him, 'imprisoned along with him' if it must be so; ministering, comforting, as only a true Wife can;—and hope has not quite taken wing.

Rough old Feldmarschall; now turned of sixty: never made such a Campaign before, as this of '37 followed by '38! There sits he; and will not trouble us any more during the present Kaiser's lifetime. Friedrich Wilhelm is amazed at these sudden cantings of Fortune's wheel, and grieves honestly as for an old friend: even the Crown-Prince finds Seckendorf punished unjustly; and is almost sorry for him, after all that has come and gone.

The Ear of Jenkins reëmerges.

We must add the following, distilled from the English Newspapers, though it is now almost four months after date:

'London, 1st April 1738. In the English House of Commons, 'much more in the English Public, there has been furious debating for 'a fortnight past: Committee of the whole House, examining witnesses, 'hearing counsel; subject, the Termagant of Spain, and her West-'Indian procedures;—she, by her procedures somewhere, is always cut-

[10] Seckendorfs Leben, ii. 170-277. See Schmettau, pp. 27-59.

'ting-out work for mankind! How English and other strangers, fallen-'in with in those seas, are treated by the Spaniards, readers have heard, 'nay have chanced to see; and it is a fact painfully known to all na-'tions. Fact which England, for one nation, can no longer put-up 'with. Walpole and the Official Persons would fain smooth the matter; 'but the West-India Interest, the City, all Mercantile and Navigation 'Interests are in dead earnest: Committee of the whole House, "Pre-'sided by Alderman Perry," has not ears enough to hear the immensi-'ties of evidence offered; slow Public is gradually kindling to some 'sense of it. This had gone on for two weeks, when—what shall we 'say?—the Ear of Jenkins reëmerged for the second time; and pro-'duced important effects!

'Where Jenkins had been all this while,—steadfastly navigating to 'and fro, steadfastly eating tough junk with a wetting of rum; not 'thinking too much of past labours, yet privately "always keeping his 'lost Ear in cotton" (with a kind of ursine piety, or other dumb feeling), '—no mortal now knows. But to all mortals it is evident he was home 'in London at this time; no doubt a noted member of Wapping society, 'the much-enduring Jenkins. And witnesses, probably not one but 'many, had mentioned him to this Committee, as a case eminently in 'point. Committee, as can still be read in its Rhadamanthine Journals, 'orders: "Die Jovis, 16° Martii 1737-8, That Captain Robert Jenkins 'do attend this House immediately;" and then more specially, "17° 'Martii,"—captious objections having risen in Official quarters, as we 'guess,—"That Captain Robert Jenkins do attend upon Tuesday morn-'ing next."[11] Tuesday next is 21st March,—1st of April 1738 by our 'modern Calendar;—and on that day, not a doubt, Jenkins does at-'tend; narrates that tremendous passage we already heard of, seven 'years ago, in the entrance of the Gulf of Florida; and produces his 'Ear wrapt in cotton:—setting all on flame (except the Official per-'sons) at sight of it.'

Official persons, as their wont is in the pressure of debate, endeavoured to deny, to insinuate in their vile Newspapers, That Jenkins lost his Ear nearer home and not for nothing; as one still reads in the History Books.[12] Sheer calumnies, we now find. Jenkins's account was doubtless abundantly emphatic; but there is no ground to question the substantial truth of him and it. And so, after seven years of unnoticeable burning upon the thick skin of the English Public, the case of Jenkins accidentally burns through, and sets England bellowing; such a smart is there of it,—not to be soothed by Official wet-cloths; but getting worse and worse, for the nineteen months ensuing. And in short—But we will not anticipate!

[11] Commons Journals, xxiii. (in diebus). [12] Tindal (xx. 372), Coxe, &c.

CHAPTER VI.

LAST YEAR OF REINSBERG; JOURNEY TO PREUSSEN.

THE Idyllium of Reinsberg,—of which, except in the way of sketchy suggestion, there can no history be given,—lasted less than four years; and is now coming to an end, unexpectedly soon. A pleasant Arcadian Summer in one's life;—though it has not wanted its occasional discords, flaws of ill weather in the general sunshine. Papa, always in uncertain health of late, is getting heavier of foot and of heart under his heavy burdens; and sometimes falls abstruse enough, liable to bewilderments from bad people and events: not much worth noticing here.[1] But the Crown-Prince has learned to deal with all this; all this is of transient nature; and a bright long future seems to lie ahead at Reinsberg;—brightened especially by the Literary Element; which, in this year of 1739, is brisker than it had ever been. Distinguished Visitors, of a literary turn, look in at Reinsberg; the Voltaire Correspondence is very lively; on Friedrich's part there is copious production, various enterprise, in the form of prose and verse; thoughts even of going to press with some of it: in short, the Literary Interest rises very prominent at Reinsberg in 1739. Biography is apt to forget the Literature there (having her reasons); but must at last take some notice of it, among the phenomena of the year.

To the young Prince himself, 'courting tranquillity,' as his door-lintel intimated,[2] and forbidden to be active except within limits, this of Literature was all along the great light of existence at Reinsberg; the supplement to all other employments or wants of employment there. To Friedrich himself, in those old days, a great and supreme interest; while again, to the modern Biographer of him, it has become dark and vacant; a thing to be shunned, not sought. So that the fact as it stood with Friedrich differs far from any description that can be given of the fact. Alas, we have said already, and the constant truth is, Friedrich's literatures, his distinguished literary visitors and enterprises, which were once brand-new and brilliant, have grown old as a garment, and are a sorrow rather than otherwise to existing mankind! Conscientious readers, who would represent to themselves the vanished scene at Reinsberg, in this point more especially, must make an effort.

[1] See Pöllnitz, ii. 509-515; Friedrich's Letter to Wilhelmina ('Berlin, 20th Jan. 1739:' in Œuvres, xxvii. part 1st, pp. 60-61); &c. &c.
[2] 'Frederico tranquillitatem colenti' (Infrà, p. 280).

1739.

As biographical documents, these Poetries and Proses of the young man give a very pretty testimony of him; but are not of value otherwise. In fact, they promise, if we look well into them, That here is probably a practical faculty and intellect of the highest kind; which again, on the speculative, especially on the poetical side, will never be considerable, nor has even tried to be so. This young soul does not deal in meditation at all, and his tendencies are the reverse of sentimental. Here is no introspection, morbid or other, no pathos or complaint, no melodious informing of the public what dreadful emotions you labour under: here, in rapid prompt form, indicating that it is truth and not fable, are generous aspirations for the world and yourself, generous pride, disdain of the ignoble, of the dark, mendacious;—here, in short, is a swift-handed, valiant, steel-bright kind of soul; very likely for a King's, if other things answer, and not likely for a Poet's. No doubt he could have made something of Literature too; could have written Books, and left some stamp of a veracious, more or less victorious intellect, in that strange province too. But then he must have applied himself to it, as he did to reigning: done in the cursory style, we see what it has come to.

It is certain, Friedrich's reputation suffers, at this day, from his writing. From his not having written nothing, he stands lower with the world. Which seems hard measure;—though perhaps it is the law of the case, after all. 'Nobody 'in these days,' says my poor Friend, 'has the least notion 'of the sinful waste there is in talk, whether by pen or tongue. 'Better probably that King Friedrich had written no Verses; 'nay I know not that David's Psalms did David's Kingship 'any good!' Which may be truer than it seems. Fine aspirations, generous convictions, purposes,—they are thought very fine: but it is good, on various accounts, to keep them rather silent; strictly unvocal, except on call of real business; so dangerous are they for becoming conscious of themselves! Most things do not ripen at all except underground. And it is a sad but sure truth, that every time you speak of a fine purpose, especially if with eloquence and to the admiration of bystanders, there is the less chance of your ever making a fact of it in your poor life.—If Reinsberg, and its vacancy of great employment, was the cause of Friedrich's verse-writing, we will not praise Reinsberg on that head! But the truth is, Friedrich's verses came from him with uncommon fluency; and were not a deep matter, but a shallow one, in any sense. Not much more to him than speaking with a will; than fantasying on the flute in an animated strain. Ever and anon through his life, on small hint from without or on great, there was found a certain leakage of verses, which he was prompt to utter;—and the case at Reinsberg, or afterwards, is not so serious as we might imagine.

Pine's Horace; and the Anti-Macchiavel.

In late months Friedrich had conceived one notable project; which demands a word in this place. Did modern readers ever hear of 'John Pine, the celebrated English Engraver'? John Pine, a man of good scholarship, good skill with his burin, did 'Tapestries of the House of Lords,' and other things of a celebrated nature, famous at home and abroad: but his peculiar feat, which had commended him at Reinsberg, was an Edition of Horace: exquisite old Flaccus brought to perfection, as it were; all done with vignettes, classical borderings, symbolic marginal ornaments, in fine taste and accuracy, the Text itself engraved; all by the exquisite burin of Pine.[3] This Edition had come out last year, famous over the world; and was by and by, as rumour bore, to be followed by a Virgil done in the like exquisite manner.

The Pine Horace, part of the Pine Virgil too, still exist in the libraries of the curious; and are doubtless known to the proper parties, though much forgotten by others of us. To Friedrich, scanning the Pine phenomenon with interest then brand-new, it seemed an admirable tribute to classical genius; and the idea occurred to him, "Is not there, by Heaven's blessing, a living genius, classical like those antique Romans, and worthy of a like tribute?" Friedrich's idea was, That Voltaire being clearly the supreme of Poets, the Henriade, his supreme of Poems, ought to be engraved like Flaccus; text and all, with vignettes, tail-pieces, classical borderings beautifully symbolic and exact; by the exquisite burin of Pine. Which idea the young hero-worshipper, in spite of his finance-difficulties, had resolved to realise; and was even now busy with it, since his return from Loo. "Such beautiful enthusiasm," say some readers; "and in behalf of that particular demigod!" Alas, yes; to Friedrich he was the best demigod then going; and Friedrich never had any doubt about him.

[3] 'London, 1737' (Biographie Universelle, xxxiv. 465).

1739.

For the rest, this heroic idea could not realise itself; and we are happy to have nothing more to do with Pine or the Henriade. Correspondences were entered into with Pine, and some pains taken: Pine's high prices were as nothing; but Pine was busy with his Virgil; probably, in fact, had little stomach for the Henriade; "could not for seven years to come enter upon it:" so that the matter had to die away; and nothing came of it but a small Dissertation, or Introductory Essay, which the Prince had got ready,—which is still to be found printed in Voltaire's Works[4] and in Friedrich's, if any body now cared much to read it. Preuss says it was finished, 'the 10th August 1739;' and that minute fact in Chronology, with the above tale of Hero-worship hanging to it, will suffice my readers and me.

But there is another literary project on hand, which did take effect;—much worthy of mention, this year; the whole world having risen into such a Chorus of Te Deum at sight of it next year. In this year falls, what at any rate was a great event to Friedrich, as literary man, the printing of his first Book,—assiduous writing of it with an eye to print. The Book is that 'celebrated Anti-Macchiavel,' ever-praiseworthy Refutation of Macchiavel's Prince; concerning which there are such immensities of Voltaire Correspondence, now become, like the Book itself, inane to all readers. This was the chosen soul's employment of Friedrich, the flower of life to him, at Reinsberg, through the year 1739. It did not actually get to press till Spring 1740; nor actually come out till Autumn,—by which time a great change had occurred in Friedrich's title and circumstances: but we may as well say here what little is to be said of it for modern readers.

'The Crown-Prince, reading this bad Book of Macchiavel's, years 'ago, had been struck, as all honest souls, especially governors or ap-[4] Œuvres, xiii. 393-402.

'prentices to governing, must be, if they thought of reading such a 'thing, with its badness, its falsity, detestability; and came by degrees, 'obliquely fishing-out Voltaire's opinion as he went along, on the no- 'tion of refuting Macchiavel; and did refute him, the best he could. 'Set down, namely, his own earnest contradiction to such ungrounded 'noxious doctrines; elaborating the same more and more into clear 'logical utterance, till it swelled into a little Volume; which, so excel- 'lent was it, so important to mankind, Voltaire and friends were clear 'for publishing. Published accordingly it was; goes through the press 'next Summer (1740), under Voltaire's anxious superintendence:[5] for 'the Prince has at length consented; and Voltaire hands the Manuscript, 'with mystery yet with hints, to a Dutch Bookseller, one Van Duren 'at the Hague, who is eager enough to print such an article. Voltaire 'himself,—such his magnanimous friendship, especially if one have 'Dutch Lawsuits, or business of one's own, in those parts,—takes charge 'of correcting; lodges himself in the "Old Court" (Prussian Mansion, 'called Vieille Cour, at the Hague, where "Luiscius," figuratively speak- 'ing, may "get an alms" from us); and therefrom corrects, alters; cor- 'responds with the Prince and Van Duren, at a great rate. Keeps cor- 'recting, altering, till Van Duren thinks he is spoiling it for sale;—and 'privately determines to preserve the original Manuscript, and have an 'edition of that, with only such corrections as seem good to Van Duren. 'A treasonous step on this mule of a Bookseller's part, thinks Voltaire; 'but mulishly persisted in by the man. Endless correspondence, to 'right and left, ensues; intolerably wearisome to every reader. And, 'in fine, there came out, in Autumn next,'—the Crown-Prince no longer a Crown-Prince by that time, but shining conspicuous under Higher Title,—'not one Anti-Macchiavel only, but a couple or a trio 'of Anti-Macchiavels;' as printed "at the Hague;" as reprinted "at 'London" or elsewhere; the confused Bibliography of which has now 'fallen very insignificant. First there was the Voltaire text, Authorised 'Edition, "end of September 1740;" then came, in few weeks, the 'Van Duren one; then, probably, a third, combining the two, the vari- 'ations given as foot-notes:—in short, I know not how many editions, 'translations, printings and reprintings; all the world being much 'taken up with such a message from the upper regions, and eager to 'read it in any form.

'As to Friedrich himself, who of course says nothing of the Anti- 'Macchiavel in public, he privately, to Voltaire, disowns all these 'editions; and intends to give a new one of his own, which shall be

[5] Here, gathered from Friedrich's Letters to Voltaire, is the Chronology of the little Enterprise:

1738, March 21, June 17, "Macchiavel a baneful man," thinks Friedrich. "Ought to be refuted by somebody?" thinks he (date not known).

1739, March 22, Friedrich thinks of doing it himself. Has done it, December 4; —"a Book which ought to be printed," say Voltaire and the literary visitors.

1740, April 26, Book given up to Voltaire for printing. Printing finished; Book appears, 'end of September,' when a great change had occurred in Friedrich's title and position.

1739.

'the right article; but never did it, having far other work cut-out for 'him in the months that came. But how zealous the world's humour 'was in that matter, no modern reader can conceive to himself. In 'the frightful Compilation called Helden-Geschichte, which we some-'times cite, there are, excerpted from the then "Bibliothèques" (Nou-'velle Bibliothèque and another; shining Periodicals of the time, now 'gone quite dead), two "reviews" of the Anti-Macchiavel, which fill 'modern readers with amazement: such a Domine dimittas chanted 'over such an article!—These details, in any other than the Biographi-'cal point of view, are now infinitely unimportant.'

Truly, yes! The Crown-Prince's Anti-Macchiavel, final correct edition (in two forms, Voltaire's as corrected, and the Prince's own as written), stands now in clear type;[6] and, after all that jumble of printing and counter-printing, we can any of us read it in a few hours; but, alas, almost none of us with the least interest, or, as it were, with any profit whatever. So different is present tense from past, in all things, especially in things like these! It is sixscore years since the Anti-Macchiavel appeared. The spectacle of one who was himself a King (for the mysterious fact was well known to Van Duren and everybody) stepping forth to say with conviction, That Kingship was not a thing of attorney mendacity, to be done under the patronage of Beelzebub, but of human veracity, to be set about under quite Other patronage; and that, in fact, a King was the "born servant of his People" (domestique Friedrich once calls it), rather than otherwise: this, naturally enough, rose upon the then populations, unused to such language, like the dawn of a new day; and was welcomed with such applauses as are now incredible, after all that has come and gone! Alas, in these sixscore years, it has been found so easy to profess and speak, even with sincerity! The actual Hero-Kings were long used to be silent; and the Sham-Hero kind grow only the more desperate for us, the more they speak and profess!—This Anti-Macchiavel of Friedrich's is a clear distinct Treatise; confutes, or at least heartily contradicts, paragraph by paragraph, the incredible sophistries of Macchiavel. Nay it leaves us, if we sufficiently force our attention, with the comfortable sense that his Royal Highness is speaking with conviction, and honestly from the heart, in the affair: but that is all the conquest we get of it, in these days. Treatise fallen more extinct to existing mankind it would not be easy to name.

[6] Preuss, Œuvres de Frédéric, viii. 61-163.

Perhaps indeed mankind is getting weary of the question altogether. Macchiavel himself one now reads only by compulsion. "What is the use of arguing with anybody that can believe in Macchiavel?" asks mankind, or might well ask; and, except for Editorial purposes, eschews any Anti-Macchiavel; impatient to be rid of bane and antidote both. Truly the world has had a pother with this little Nicolò Macchiavelli and his perverse little Book:—pity almost that a Friedrich Wilhelm, taking his rounds at that point of time, had not had the "refuting" of him; Friedrich Wilhelm's method would have been briefer than Friedrich's! But let us hope the thing is now, practically, about completed. And as to the other question, "Was the Signor Nicolò serious in this perverse little Book; or did he only do it ironically, with a serious inverse purpose?" we will leave that to be decided, any time convenient, by people who are much at leisure in the world!—

The printing of the Anti-Macchiavel was not intrinsically momentous in Friedrich's history; yet it might as well have been dispensed with. He had here drawn a fine program, and needlessly placarded it for the street populations: and afterwards there rose, as could not fail on their part, comparison between program and performance; scornful cry, chiefly from men of weak judgment, "Is this King an Anti-Macchiavel, then? Pfui!" Of which,—though Voltaire's voice, too, was heard in it, in angry moments,—we shall say nothing: the reader, looking for himself, will judge by and by. And herewith enough of the Anti-Macchiavel. Composition of Anti-Macchiavel and speculation of the Pine Henriade lasted, both of them, all through this Year 1739, and farther: from these two items, not to mention any other, readers can figure sufficiently how literary a year it was.

Friedrich in Preussen again; at the Stud of Trakehnen. A tragically great Event coming on.

In July this year the Crown-Prince went with Papa on the Prussian Review-journey.[7] Such attendance on Review-journeys, a mark of his being well with Papa, is now becoming usual; they are agreeable excursions, and cannot but be instructive as well. On this occasion, things went beautifully with him. Out in those grassy Countries, in the bright Summer, once more he had an unusually fine time;—and two very special pleasures befell him. First was, a sight of the Emigrants, our Salzburgers and other, in their flourishing condition, over in Lithuania yonder. Delightful to see how the waste is blossoming up again; busy men, with their industries, their steady pious husbandries, making all things green and fruitful: horse-droves, cattle-herds, waving cornfields;—a very "Schmalzgrube (Butter-pit)" of those Northern parts, as it is since called.[8] The Crown-Prince's own words on this matter we will give; they are in a Letter of his to Voltaire, perhaps already known to some readers;—and we can observe he writes rather copiously from those localities at present, and in a cheerful humour with everybody.

[7] 'Set out, 7th July' (Œuvres, xxvii. part 1st, 67 n.).

27th July 1739.

'Insterburg, 27th July 1739 (Crown-Prince to Voltaire). * * Prussian Lithuania is a Country a hundred and twenty miles long, by from sixty to forty broad;[9] it was ravaged by Pestilence at the beginning of this Century; and they say Three-hundred Thousand people died of disease and famine.' Ravaged by Pestilence and the neglect of King Friedrich I.; till my Father, once his hands were free, made personal survey of it, and took it up, in earnest.

'Since that time,' say twenty years ago, 'there is no expense that the King has been afraid of, in order to succeed in his salutary views. He made, in the first place, regulations full of wisdom; he rebuilt wherever the Pestilence had desolated: thousands of families, from the ends of Europe,' Seventeen Thousand Salzburgers for the last item, 'were conducted hither; the Country repeopled itself; trade began to flourish again;—and now, in these fertile regions, abundance reigns more than it ever did.

'There are above half a million of inhabitants in Lithuania; there are more towns than there ever were, more flocks than formerly, more wealth and more productiveness than in any other part of Germany. And all this that I tell you of is due to the King alone; who not only gave the orders, but superintended the execution of them; it was he that devised the plans, and himself got them carried to fulfilment; and spared neither care nor pains, nor immense expenditures, nor promises nor recompenses, to secure happiness and life to this half million of thinking beings, who owe to him alone that they have possessions and felicity in the world.

'I hope this detail does not weary you. I depend on your humanity

[8] Büsching, Erdbeschreibung, ii. 1049.
[9] 'Miles English,' we always mean, unless &c.

'extending itself to your Lithuanian brethren, as well as to your French, 'English, German, or other,—all the more as, to my great astonish-'ment, I passed through villages where you hear nothing spoken but 'French.—I have found something so heroic, in the generous and la-'borious way in which the King addressed himself to making this 'desert flourish with inhabitants and happy industries and fruits, that 'it seemed to me you would feel the same sentiments in learning the 'circumstances of such a reëstablishment.

'I daily expect news of you from Enghien' (in those Dutch-Lawsuit Countries). * * 'The divine Emilie; * * the Duke' (D'Aremberg, Austrian Soldier, of convivial turn,—remote Welsh-Uncle to a certain little Prince de Ligne, now spinning tops in those parts;[10] not otherwise interesting), 'whom Apollo contends for against Bacchus. * * 'Adieu. Ne m'oubliez pas, mon cher ami.'[11]

This is one pleasant scene, to the Crown-Prince and us, in those grassy localities. And now we have to mention that, about a fortnight later, at Königsberg one day, in reference to a certain Royal Stud or Horse-breeding Establishment in those same Lithuanian regions, there had a still livelier satisfaction happened him; satisfaction of a personal and filial nature. The name of this Royal Stud, inestimable on such ground, is Trakehnen,—lies south of Tilsit, in an upper valley of the Pregel river;—very extensive Horse-Establishment, 'with seven farms under it,' say the Books, and all 'in the most perfect order,' they need hardly add, Friedrich Wilhelm being master of it. Well, the Royal Party was at Königsberg, so far on the road homewards again from those outlying parts, when Friedrich Wilhelm said one day to his Son, quite in a cursory manner, "I give thee that Stud of Trakehnen; thou must go back and look to it;"—which struck Fritz quite dumb at the moment.

For it is worth near upon 2,000*l.* a year (12,000 thalers); a welcome new item in our impoverished budget; and it is an undeniable sign of Papa's good humour with us, which is more precious still. Fritz made his acknowledgments, eloquent with looks, eloquent with voice, on coming to himself; and is, in fact, very proud of his gift, and celebrates it to his Wilhelmina, to Camas and others who have a right to know such a thing. Grand useful gift; and handed over by Papa grandly, in three business words, as if it had been a brace of game: "I give it thee, Fritz!" A thing not to be forgotten. 'At bottom 'Friedrich Wilhelm was not avaricious' (not a miser, only a man grandly abhorring waste, as the poor vulgar cannot do), 'not avaricious,' says Pöllnitz once; 'he made munificent 'gifts, and never thought of them more.' This of Trakehnen, —perhaps there might be a whiff of coming Fate concerned in it withal: "I shall soon be dead, not able to give thee anything, poor Fritz!" To the Prince and us it is very beautiful; a fine effulgence of the inner man of Friedrich Wilhelm. The Prince returned to Trakehnen, on this glad errand; settled the business details there; and, after a few days, went home by a route of his own;—well satisfied with this Prussian-Review journey, as we may imagine.

[10] Born 23d May 1735, this latter little Prince; lasted till 13th Dec. 1814 ("danse, mais il ne marche pas").

[11] Œuvres, xxi. 304, 305.

One sad thing there was, though Friedrich did not yet know how sad, in this Review-journey: the new fit of illness that overtook his Majesty. From Pöllnitz, who was of the party, we have details on that head. In his Majesty's last bad illness, five years ago, when all seemed hopeless, it appears the surgeons had relieved him,—in fact recovered him, bringing off the bad humours in quantity,—by an incision in the foot or leg. In the course of the present fatigues, this old wound broke out again; which of course stood much in the way of his Majesty; and could not be neglected, as probably the causes of it were. A regimental surgeon, Pöllnitz says, was called in; who, in two days, healed the wound,—and declared all to be right again; though in fact, as we may judge, it was dangerously worse than before. 'All well here,' writes Friedrich; 'the King has been out of order, but is now en-'tirely recovered (tout à fait remis).'[12]

Much reviewing and heavy business followed at Königsberg;—gift of Trakehnen, and departure of the Crown-Prince for Trakehnen, winding it up. Directly on the heel of which, his Majesty turned homewards, the Crown-Prince not to meet him till once at Berlin again. Majesty's first stage was at Pillau, where we have been. At Pillau, or next day at Dantzig, Pöllnitz observed a change in his Majesty's humour, which had been quite sunshiny all this journey hitherto. At Dantzig Pöllnitz first noticed it; but at every new stage it grew worse, evil accidents occurring to worsen it; and at Berlin it was worst of all;—and, alas, his poor Majesty never recovered his sunshine in this world again! Here is Pollnitz's account of the journey homewards:

[12] 'Königsberg, 30th July 1739,' to his Wife (Œuvres, xxvi. 6).

'Till now,' till Pillau and Dantzig, 'his Majesty had been in espe-'cially good humour; but in Dantzig his cheerfulness forsook him;—'and it never came back. He arrived about ten at night in that City' (Wednesday 12th August or thereby); 'slept there; and was off again 'next morning at five. He drove only thirty miles this day; stopped 'in Lupow' (coast road through Pommern), 'with Herr von Grumkow' (the late Grumkow's Brother), 'Kammer President in this Pommern 'Province. From Lupow he went to a poor Village near Belgard, 'eighty miles farther;'—last village on the great road, Belgard lying to left a little, on a side road;—'and stayed there overnight.

'At Belgard, next morning, he reviewed the Dragoon Regiment von 'Platen; and was very ill-content with it. And nobody, with the 'least understanding of that business, but must own that never did 'Prussian Regiment manœuvre worse. Conscious themselves how bad 'it was, they lost head, and got into open confusion. The King did 'all that was possible to help them into order again. He withdrew 'thrice over, to give the Officers time to recover themselves; but it was 'all in vain. The King, contrary to wont, restrained himself amazingly, 'and would not show his displeasure in public. He got into his car-'riage, and drove away with the Fürst of Anhalt,' Old Dessauer, 'and 'Von Winterfeld,' Captain in the Giant Regiment, 'who is now Major-'General von Winterfeld;[13] not staying to dine with General von Platen, 'as was always his custom with Commandants whom he had reviewed. 'He bade Prince Wilhelm and the rest of us stay and dine; he himself 'drove away,'—towards the great road again, and some uncertain lodging there.

'We stayed accordingly; and did full justice to the good cheer,'—though poor Platen would certainly look flustered, one may fancy. 'But 'as the Prince was anxious to come up with his Majesty again, and 'knew not where he would meet him, we had to be very swift with the 'business.

'We found the King with Anhalt and Winterfeld, by and by; sit-'ting in a village, in front of a barn, and eating a cold pie there, which the Fürst of Anhalt had chanced to have with him; his Majesty, 'owing to what he had seen on the parade-ground, was in the utmost 'ill-humour (höchst übler Laune). Next day, Saturday, he went a hun-'dred and fifty or two hundred miles; and arrived in Berlin at ten at 'night. Not expected there till the morrow; so that his rooms were 'locked,—her Majesty being over in Monbijou, giving her children a 'Ball;'[14]—and we can fancy what a frame of mind there was!

Nobody, not at first even the Doctors, much heeded this [13] Major-General since 1743, of high fame; fell in fight, 7th Sept. 1757.

[14] Pöllnitz, ii. 534-537.

new fit of illness; which went and came: "changed temper," deeper or less deep gloom of "bad humour," being the main phenomenon to bystanders. But the sad truth was, his Majesty never did recover his sunshine; from Pillau onwards he was slowly entering into the shadows of the total Last Eclipse; and his journeyings and reviewings in this world were all done. Ten months hence, Pöllnitz and others knew better what it had been!—

CHAPTER VII.

LAST YEAR OF REINSBERG: TRANSIT OF BALTIMORE AND OTHER PERSONS AND THINGS.

FRIEDRICH had not been long home again from Trakehnen and Preussen, when the routine of things at Reinsberg was illuminated by Visitors, of brilliant and learned quality; some of whom, a certain Signor Algarotti for one, require passing mention here. Algarotti, who became a permanent friend or satellite, very luminous to the Prince, and was much about him in coming years, first shone out upon the scene at this time,—coming unexpectedly, and from the Eastward as it chanced.

On his own score, Algarotti has become a wearisome literary man to modern readers: one of those half-remembered men; whose books seem to claim a reading, and do not repay it you when given. Treatises, of a serious nature, On the Opera; setting forth, in earnest, the potential "moral uses" of the Opera, and dedicated to Chatham; Neutonianismo per le Donne (Astronomy for Ladies): the mere Titles of such things are fatally sufficient to us; and we cannot, without effort, nor with it, recall the brilliancy of Algarotti and them to his contemporary world.

Algarotti was a rich Venetian Merchant's Son, precisely about the Crown-Prince's age; shone greatly in his studies at Bologna and elsewhere; had written Poesies (Rime); written especially that Newtonianism for the Dames (equal to Fontenelle, said Fame, and orthodox Newtonian withal, not heterodox or Cartesian);—and had shone, respected, at Paris, on the strength of it, for three or four years past: friend of Voltaire in consequence, of Voltaire and his divine Emilie, and a welcome guest at Cirey; friend of the cultivated world generally, which was then labouring, divine Emilie in the van of it, to understand Newton and be orthodox in this department of things. Algarotti did fine Poesies, too, once and again; did Classical Scholarships, and much else: everywhere a clear-headed, methodically distinct, concise kind of man. A high style of breeding about him, too; had powers of pleasing, and used them: a man beautifully lucent in society, gentle yet impregnable there; keeping himself unspotted from the world and its discrepancies,—really with considerable prudence, first and last.

He is somewhat of the Bielfeld type; a Merchant's Son, we observe, like Bielfeld; but a Venetian Merchant's, not a Hamburg's; and also of better natural stuff than Bielfeld. Concentrated himself upon his task with more seriousness, and made a higher thing of it than Bielfeld; though, after all, it was the same task the two had. Alas, our "Swan of Padua" (so they sometimes called him) only sailed, paddling grandly, nowhither,—as the Swan-Goose of the Elbe did, in a less stately manner! One cannot well bear to read his Books. There is no light upon Friedrich to tempt us; better light than Bielfeld's there could have been, and much of it: but he prudently, as well as proudly, forbore such topics. He approaches very near fertility and geniality in his writings, but never reaches it. Dilettantism become serious and strenuous, in those departments—Well, it was beautiful to young Friedrich and the world at that time, though it is not to us!—Young Algarotti, Twenty-seven this year, has been touring about as a celebrity these four years past, on the strength of his fine manners and Newtonianism for the Dames.

It was under escort of Baltimore, 'an English Milord,' recommended from Potsdam itself, that Algarotti came to Reinsberg: the Signor had much to do with English people now and after. Where Baltimore first picked him up, I know not: but they have been to Russia together; Baltimore by twelve years the elder of the two: and now, getting home towards England again, they call at Reinsberg in the fine Autumn weather;—and considerably captivate the Crown-Prince. Baltimore playing chief, in that as in other points. The visit lasted five days;[1] there was copious speech on many things;—discussion about Printing of the Anti-Macchiavel; Algarotti to get it printed in England, Algarotti to get Pine and his Engraved Henriade put under way; neither of which projects took effect;—readers can conceive what a charming five days these were. Here, in the Crown-Prince's own words, are some brief glimmerings which will suffice us:

[1] 20th-25th September 1739 (Œuvres de Frédéric, xiv. p. xiv.).

Reinsberg, 25th Sept. 1739 (Crown-Prince to Papa). * * that 'nothing new has occurred in the Regiment, and we have few sick. Here 'has the English Milord, who was at Potsdam, passed through' (stayed five days, though we call it passing, and suppress the Algarotti, Baltimore being indeed chief). 'He is gone towards Hamburg, to take ship 'for England there. As I heard that my Most All-gracious Father 'wished I should show him courtesy, I have done for him what I could. 'The Prince of Mirow has also been here,'—our old Strelitz friend. Of Baltimore nothing more to Papa. But to another Correspondent, to the good Suhm (who is now at Petersburg, and much in our intimacy, ready to transact loans for us, translate Wolf, or do what is wanted), there is this passage next day:

Reinsberg, 26th September 1739 (To Suhm). 'We have had Milord 'Baltimore here, and the young Algarotti; both of them men who, by 'their accomplishments, cannot but conciliate the esteem and consider-'ation of all who see them. We talked much of you' (Suhm), 'of 'Philosophy, of Science, Art; in short, of all that can be included in 'the taste of cultivated people (honnêtes gens).'[2] And again to another, about two weeks hence:

Reinsberg, 10th October 1739 (To Voltaire). 'We have had Milord 'Baltimore and Algarotti here, who are going back to England. This 'Milord is a very sensible man (homme très-sensé); who possesses a 'great deal of knowledge, and thinks, like us, that sciences can be no 'disparagement to nobility, nor degrade an illustrious rank. I admired 'the genius of this Anglais, as one does a fine face through a crape 'veil. He speaks French very ill, yet one likes to hear him speak it; 'and as for his English, he pronounces it so quick, there is no possi-'bility of following him. He calls a Russian "a mechanical animal." 'He says "Petersburg is the eye of Russia, with which it keeps civilised 'countries in sight; if you took this eye from it, Russia would fall again 'into barbarism, out of which it is just struggling."[3] * * Young Alga-'rotti, whom you know, pleased me beyond measure. He promised 'that he'—But Baltimore, promise or not, is the chief figure at present.

Evidently an original kind of figure to us, cet Anglais. And indeed there is already finished a rhymed Epistle to Baltimore; Epître sur la Liberté (copy goes in that same Letter, for Vol-taire's behoof), which dates itself likewise October 10th; beginning,

[2] Œuvres de Frédéric, xvi. 378. [3] Ib. xxi. 326, 327.

'L'esprit libre, Milord, qui règne en Angleterre,'— which, though it is full of fine sincere sentiments, about human dignity, papal superstition, Newton, Locke, and aspirations for progress of culture in Prussia, no reader could stand at this epoch.

What Baltimore said in answer to the Epître, we do not know; probably not much: it does not appear he ever saw or spoke to Friedrich a second time. Three weeks after, Friedrich writing to Algarotti, has these words: 'I pray you make 'my friendships to Milord Baltimore, whose character and man-'ner of thinking I truly esteem. I hope he has, by this time, 'got my Epître on the English Liberty of Thought.'[4] And so Baltimore passes on, silent in History henceforth,—though Friedrich seems to have remembered him to late times, as a kind of type-figure when England came into his head. For the sake of this small transit over the sun's disk, I have made some inquiry about Baltimore; but found very little;—perhaps enough:

'He was Charles, Sixth Lord Baltimore, it appears; Sixth, and 'last but one. First of the Baltimores, we know, was Secretary Cal-'vert (1618-1624), who colonised Maryland; last of them (1774) was 'the Son of this Charles; something of a fool, to judge by the face of 'him in Portraits, and by some of his doings in the world. He, that 'Seventh Baltimore, printed one or two little Volumes ("now of ex-'treme rarity,"—cannot be too rare); and winded-up by standing an 'ugly Trial at Kingston Assizes (plaintiff an unfortunate-female). After 'which he retired to Naples, and there ended, 1774, the last of these 'Milords.[5]

'He of the Kingston Assizes, we say, was not this Charles; but his 'Son, whom let the reader forget. Charles, age forty at this time, had 'travelled about the Continent a good deal: once, long ago, we ima-'gined we had got a glimpse of him (but it was a guess merely) loung-'ing about Lunéville and Lorraine, along with Lyttelton, in the Con-'gress-of-Soissons time? Not long after that, it is certain enough, he 'got appointed a Gentleman of the Bedchamber to Prince Fred; who 'was a friend of speculative talkers and cultivated people. In which 'situation Charles Sixth Baron Baltimore continued all his days after; 'and might have risen by means of Fred, as he was anxious enough to 'do, had both of them lived; but they both died; Baltimore first, in [4] 29th October 1739, To Algarotti in London (Œuvres, xviii. 5).

[5] Walpole (by Park), Catalogue of Royal and Noble Authors (London, 1806), v. 278.

'1751, a year before Fred. Bubb Doddington, diligent labourer in 'the same Fred vineyard, was much infested by this Baltimore,—who, 'drunk or sober (for he occasionally gets into liquor), is always putting 'out Bubb, and stands too well with our Royal Master, one secretly 'fears! Baltimore's finances, I can guess, were not in too good order; 'mostly an Absentee; Irish Estates not managed in the first style, while 'one is busy in the Fred vineyard! "The best and honestest man in the 'world, with a good deal of jumbled knowledge," Walpole calls him 'once: "but not capable of conducting a party."[6] Oh no;—and died, at any rate, Spring 1751:[7] and we will not mention him farther.

Bielfeld, what he saw at Reinsberg and around.

Directly on the rear of these fine visitors, came, by invitation, a pair of the Korn's-Hôtel people; Masonic friends; one of whom was Bielfeld, whose dainty Installation Speech and ways of procedure had been of promise to the Prince on that occasion. 'Baron von Oberg' was the other:—Hanoverian Baron: the same who went into the Wars, and was a "General von Oberg" twenty years hence? The same or another, it does not much concern us. Nor does the visit much, or at all; except that Bielfeld, being of writing nature, professes to give ocular account of it. Honest transcript of what a human creature actually saw at Reinsberg, and in the Berlin environment at that date, would have had a value to mankind: but Bielfeld has adopted the fictitious form; and pretty much ruined for us any transcript there is. Exaggeration, gesticulation, fantastic uncertainty afflict the reader; and prevent comfortable belief, except where there is other evidence than Bielfeld's.

At Berlin the beautiful straight streets, Linden Avenues (perhaps a better sample than those of our day), were notable to Bielfeld; bridges, statues very fine; grand esplanades, and such military drilling and parading as was never seen. He had dinner-invitations, too, in quantity; likes this one and that (all in prudent asterisks),—likes Truchsess von Waldburg very much, and his strange mode of bachelor housekeeping, and the way he dines and talks among his fellow-creatures, or sits studious among his Military Books and Paper-litters. But all is loose far-off sketching, in the style of Anacharsis the Younger; and makes no solid impression.

[6] Walpole's Letters to Mann (London, 1843), ii. 175: 27th January 1747. See ib. i. 82.
[7] Peerage of Ireland (London, 1768), ii. 172-174.

Getting to Reinsberg, to the Town, to the Schloss, he crosses the esplanade, the moat; sees what we know, beautiful square Mansion among its woods and waters;—and almost nothing that we do not know, except the way the moat-bridge is lighted: 'Bridge furnished,' he says, 'with seven Statues 'representing the seven Planets, each holding in her hand a 'glass lamp in the form of a globe;' which is a pretty object in the night-time. The House is now finished; Knobelsdorf rejoicing in his success; Pesne and others giving the last touch to some ceilings of a sublime nature. On the lintel of the gate is inscribed Frederico Tranquillitatem Colenti (To Friedrich courting Tranquillity). The gardens, walks, hermitages, grottoes, are very spacious, fine: not yet completed,—perhaps will never be. A Temple of Bacchus is just now on hand, somewhere in those labyrinthic woods: 'twelve gigantic Satyrs as caryatides, crowned by an inverted Punch-bowl for dome;' that is the ingenious Knobelsdorf's idea, pleasant to the mind. Knobelsdorf is of austere aspect; austere, yet benevolent and full of honest sagacity; the very picture of sound sense, thinks Bielfeld. M. Jordan is handsome, though of small stature; agreeable expression of face; eye extremely vivid; brown complexion, 'bushy eyebrows as well as beard are black.'[8]

Or did the reader ever hear of 'M. Fredersdorf,' Head Valet at this time? Fredersdorf will become, as it were, Privy-Purse, House-friend, and domestic Factotum, and play a great part in coming years. 'A tall handsome man;' much 'silent sense, civility, dexterity;' something 'magnificently clever in him,' thinks Bielfeld (now, or else twenty years afterwards); whom we can believe.[9] He was a gift from General Schwerin, this Fredersdorf; once a Private in Schwerin's regiment, at Frankfurt-on-Oder,—excellent on the flute, for one quality. Schwerin, who had an eye for men, sent him to Friedrich, in the Cüstrin time; hoping he might suit in fluting and otherwise. Which he conspicuously did. Bielfeld's account, we must candidly say, appears to be an afterthought; but readers can make their profit of it, all the same.

As to the Crown-Prince and Princess, words fail to express their gracious perfections, their affabilities, polite ingenuities:—Bielfeld's words do give us some pleasant shadowy conceivability of the Crown-Princess:

[8] Bielfeld (abridged), i. 45. [9] Ib. p. 49.

'Tall, and perfect in shape; bust such as a sculptor might copy; 'complexion of the finest; features ditto; nose, I confess, smallish and 'pointed, but excellent of that kind; hair of the supremest flaxen, "shin-'ing" like a flood of sunbeams, when the powder is off it. A humane 'ingenuous Princess; little negligences in toilet or the like, if such occur, 'even these set her off, so ingenuous are they. Speaks little; but always 'to the purpose, in a simple, cheerful and wise way. Dances beauti-'fully; heart (her soubrette assures me) is heavenly;—and "perhaps 'no Princess living has a finer set of diamonds."'

Of the Crown-Princess there is some pleasant shadow traced as on cobweb, to this effect. But of the Crown-Prince there is no forming the least conception from what he says:—this is mere cobweb with Nothing elaborately painted on it. Nor do the portraits of the others attract by their verisimilitude. Here is Colonel Keyserling, for instance; the witty Courlander, famous enough in the Friedrich circle; who went on embassy to Cirey, and much else: he 'whirls in with uproar (fracas) like Boreas in the Ballet;' fowling-piece on shoulder, and in his 'dressing-gown' withal, which is still stranger; snatches-off Bielfeld, unknown till that moment, to sit by him while dressing; and there, with much capering, pirouetting, and indeed almost ground-and-lofty tumbling, for accompaniment, 'talks of Horses, Mathematics, Painting, Architecture, Literature, and the Art of War,' while he dresses. This gentleman was once Colonel in Friedrich Wilhelm's Army; is now fairly turned of forty, and has been in troubles: we hope he is not like in the Bielfeld Portrait;—otherwise, how happy that we never had the honour of knowing him! Indeed, the Crown-Prince's Household generally, as Bielfeld paints it in flourishes of panegyric, is but unattractive; barren to the modern onlooker; partly the Painter's blame, we doubt not. He gives details about their mode of dining, taking coffee, doing concert;—and describes once an incidental drinking-bout got-up aforethought by the Prince; which is probably in good part fiction, though not ill done. These fantastic sketchings, rigorously winnowed into the credible and actual, leave no great residue in that kind; but what little they do leave is of favourable and pleasant nature.

Bielfeld made a visit privately to Potsdam, too: saw the Giants drill; made acquaintance with important Captains of theirs (all in asterisks) at Potsdam; with whom he dined, not in a too credible manner, and even danced. Among the asterisks, we easily pick-out Captain Wartensleben (of the Korn's-Hôtel operation), and Winterfeld, a still more important Captain, whom we saw dining on cold pie with his Majesty, at a barn-door in Pommern, not long since. Of the Giants, or their life at Potsdam, Bielfeld's word is not worth hearing,—worth suppressing rather;—his knowledge being so small, and hung forth in so fantastic a way. This transient sight he had of his Majesty in person; this, which is worth something to us,—fact being evidently lodged in it. 'After church-parade,' Autumn Sunday afternoon (day uncertain, Bielfeld's date being fictitious, and even impossible), Majesty drove out to Wusterhausen, 'where the quantities of game surpass all belief;' and Bielfeld had one glimpse of him:

'I saw his Majesty only, as it were, in passing. If I may judge 'by his Portraits, he must have been of a perfect beauty in his young 'time; but it must be confessed there is nothing left of it now. His 'eyes truly are fine; but the glance of them is terrible: his complexion 'is composed of the strongest tints of red, blue, yellow, green,'—not a lovely complexion at all; 'big head; the thick neck sunk between the 'shoulders; figure short and heavy (courte et ramassée).'[10]

'Going out to Wusterhausen,' then, that afternoon, 'October 1739.' How his Majesty is crushed down; quite bulged out of shape in that sad way, by the weight of time and its pressures: his thoughts, too, most likely, of a heavy-laden and abstruse nature! The old Pfalz Controversy has misgone with him; Pfalz, and so much else in the world;—the world in whole, probably enough, near ending to him; the final shadows, sombre, grand and mournful, closing-in upon him!—

Turk War ends; Spanish War begins. A Wedding in Petersburg.

Last news come to Potsdam in these days is, The Kaiser has ended his disastrous Turk War; been obliged to end it; sudden downbreak, and as it were panic terror, having at last come upon his unfortunate Generals in those parts. Duke Franz was passionate to be out of such a thing; Franz, General Neipperg and others; and now, '2d September 1739,' like lodgers leaping from a burning house, they are out of it. The Turk gets Belgrad itself, not to mention wide territories farther east,—Belgrad without shot fired;—nay the Turk was hardly to be kept from hanging the Imperial Messenger (a General Neipperg, Duke Franz's old Tutor, and chief Confidant, whom we shall hear more of elsewhere), whose passport was not quite right on this occasion!—Never was a more disgraceful Peace. But also never had been worse fighting; planless, changeful, powerless, melting into futility at every step:—not to be mended by imprisonments in Grätz, and still harsher treatment of individuals. "Has all success forsaken me, then, since Eugene died?" said the Kaiser; and snatched at this Turk Peace; glad to have it, by mediation of France, and on any terms.

Has not this Kaiser lost his outlying properties at a fearful rate? Naples is gone; Spanish Bourbon sits in our Naples; comparatively little left for us in Italy. And now the very Turk has beaten us small; insolently fillips the Imperial nose of us,—threatening to hang our Neipperg, and the like. Were it not for Anne of Russia, whose big horsewhip falls heavy on this Turk, he might almost get to Vienna again, for anything we could do! A Kaiser worthy to be pitied;—whom Friedrich Wilhelm, we perceive, does honestly pity. A Kaiser much beggared, much disgraced, in late years; who has played a huge life-game so long, diplomatising, warring; and, except the Shadow of Pragmatic Sanction, has nothing to retire upon.

[10] Bielfeld, p. 35.

The Russians protested, with astonishment, against such Turk Peace on the Kaiser's part. But there was no help for it. One ally is gone, the Kaiser has let-go this Western skirt of the Turk; and 'Thamas Kouli Khan' (called also Nadir Shah, famed Oriental slasher and slayer of that time) no longer stands upon the Eastern skirt, but 'has entered India,' it appears: the Russians,—their cash, too, running low,—do themselves make peace, 'about a month after;' restoring Azoph and nearly all their conquests; putting off the ruin of the Turk till a better time.

War is over in the East, then; but another in the West, England against Spain (Spain and France to help), is about beginning. Readers remember how Jenkins's Ear reëmerged, Spring gone a year, in a blazing condition? Here, through Sylvanus Urban himself, are two direct glimpses, a twelvemonth nearer hand, which show us how the matter has been proceeding since:

'London, 19th February 1739. The City Authorities,'—laying or going to lay 'the foundation of the Mansion-House' (Edifice now very black in our time), and doing other things of little moment to us, 'had 'a Masquerade at the Guildhall this night. There was a very splendid 'appearance at the Masquerade; but among the many humorous and 'whimsical characters, what seemed most to engage attention was a 'Spaniard, who called himself "Knight of the Ear;" as Badge of which 'Order he wore on his breast the form of a Star, with its points tinged 'in blood; and on the body of it an Ear painted, and in capital letters 'the word JENKINS encircling it. Across his shoulder there hung, 'instead of ribbon, a large Halter; which he held-up to several persons 'dressed as English Sailors, who seemed in great terror of him, and 'falling on their knees suffered him to rummage their pockets; which 'done, he would insolently dismiss them with strokes of his halter.

'Several of the Sailors had a bloody Ear hanging down from their 'heads; and on their hats were these words, Ear for Ear; on others, 'No Search or no Trade; with the like sentences.'[11] The conflagration evidently going on; not likely to be damped-down again, by ministerial art!—

'London, 19th March 1739.' Grand Debate in Parliament, on the late "Spanish Convention," pretended Bargain of redress lately got from Spain: Approve the Convention, or Not approve? 'A hundred 'Members were in the House of Commons before seven, this morning; 'and four hundred had taken their seat by ten; which is an unheard- 'of thing. Prince of Wales,' Fred in person, 'was in the gallery till 'twelve at night, and had his dinner sent to him. Sir Robert Walpole 'rose: "Sir, the great pains that have been taken to influence all ranks 'and degrees of men in this Nation— * * But give me leave to"'— apply a wet cloth to Honourable Gentlemen. Which he does, really with skill and sense. France and the others are so strong, he urges; England so unprepared; Kaiser at such a pass; "War like to be, about the Palatinate Dispute" (our friend Friedrich Wilhelm's): "Where is England to get allies?"—and hours long of the like sort. A judicious wet cloth; which proved unavailing.

For 'William Pitts' (so they spell the great Chatham that is to be) was eloquent on the other side: "Despairing Merchants," "Voice of England," and so on. And the world was all in an inflamed state. And Mr. Pulteney exclaimed: Palatinate? Allies? "We need no allies; the case of Mr. Jenkins will raise us volunteers everywhere!" And in short,—after eight months more of haggling, and applying wet cloths,—Walpole, in the name of England, has to declare War against Spain;[12] the public humour proving unquenchable on that matter. War; and no Peace to be, "till our undoubted right," to roadway on the oceans of this Planet, become permanently manifest to the Spanish Majesty.

Such the effect of a small Ear, kept about one in cotton, from ursine piety or other feelings. Has not Jenkins's Ear reëmerged, with a vengeance? It has kindled a War; dangerous for kindling other Wars, and setting the whole world on fire,—as will be too evident in the sequel! The Ear of Jenkins is a singular thing. Might have mounted to be a Constellation, like Berenice's Hair, and other small facts become mythical, had the English People been of poetic turn! Enough of it, for the time being.—

[11] Gentleman's Magazine for 1739, p. 103;—our dates, as always, are N.S.
[12] '3d November (23d October) 1739.'

Oct. 1739.

This Summer, Anton Ulrich, at Petersburg, did wed his Serene Mecklenburg Princess, Heiress of all the Russias: 'July 14th, 1739,'—three months before that Drive to Wusterhausen, which we saw lately. Little Anton Ulrich, Cadet of Brunswick; our Friedrich's Brother-in-Law;—a noticeably small man in comparison to such bulk of destiny, thinks Friedrich, though the case is not without example![13]

'Anton Ulrich is now five-and-twenty,' says one of my Notebooks; 'a young gentleman of small stature, shining courage in battle, but 'somewhat shy and bashful; who has had his troubles in Petersburg 'society, till the trial came,—and will have. Here are the stages of 'Anton Ulrich's felicity:

'Winter 1732-3. He was sent-for to Petersburg (his serene Aunt 'the German Kaiserinn, and Kaiser Karl's diplomatists, suggesting it 'there), with the view of his paying court to the young Mecklenburg 'Princess, Heiress of all the Russias, of whom we have often heard. 'February 1733, he arrived on this errand;—not approved of at all by 'the Mecklenburg Princess, by Czarina Anne or anybody there: what 'can be done with such an uncomfortable little creature? They gave 'him a Colonelcy of Cuirassiers: "Drill there, and endure."

'Spring 1737. Much-enduring, diligently drilling, for four years 'past, he went this year to the Turk War under Münnich;—much 'pleased Münnich, at Oczakow and elsewhere; who reports in the War-'Office high things of him. And on the whole,—the serene Vienna 'people now again bestirring themselves, with whom we are in co-'partnery in this Turk business,—little Anton Ulrich is encouraged to 'proceed. Proceeds; formally demands his Mecklenburg Princess; 'and,

'July 14th, 1739, weds her; the happiest little man in all the 'Russias, and with the biggest destiny, if it prosper. Next year, too, 'there came a son and heir; whom they called Iwan, in honour of his 'Russian Great-grandfather. Shall we add the subsequent felicities of 'Anton Ulrich here; or wait till another opportunity?'

Better wait. This is all, and more than all, his Prussian Majesty, rolling out of Wusterhausen that afternoon, ever knew of them, or needed to know!—

CHAPTER VIII.

DEATH OF FRIEDRICH WILHELM.

AT Wusterhausen, this Autumn, there is game as usual, but little or no hunting for the King. He has to sit drearily within doors, for most part; listening to the rustle of falling leaves, to dim Winter coming with its rains and winds. Field-sports are a rumour from without: for him now no joyous sow-baiting, deer-chasing;—that, like other things, is past.

[13] A Letter of his to Suhm; touching on Franz of Lorraine and this Anton Ulrich

In the beginning of November, he came to Berlin; was worse there, and again was better;—strove to do the Carnival, as had been customary; but in a languid, lamed manner. One night he looked in upon an evening-party which General Schulenburg was giving: he returned home, chilled, shivering; could not, all night, be brought to heat again. It was the last evening-party Friedrich Wilhelm ever went to.[1] Lieutenant-General Schulenburg: the same who doomed young Friedrich to death, as President of the Court-Martial; and then wrote the Three Letters about him which we once looked into: illuminates himself in this manner in Berlin society,—Carnival season 1740, weather fiercely cold. Maypole Schulenburg the lean Aunt, Ex-Mistress of George I., over in London,—I think she must now be dead? Or if not dead, why not! Memory, for the tenth time, fails me, of the humanly unmemorable, whom perhaps even flunkies should forget; and I will try it no more. The stalwart Lieutenant-General will reappear on us once, twice at the utmost, and never again. He gave the last evening-party Friedrich Wilhelm ever went to.

Poor Friedrich Wilhelm is in truth very ill; tosses about all day, in and out of bed,—bed and wheeled-chair drearily alternating; suffers much;—and again, in Diplomatic circles, the rumours are rife and sinister. Ever from this chill at Schulenburg's the medicines did him no good, says Pöllnitz: if he rallied, it was the effect of Nature, and only temporary. He does daily, with punctuality, his Official business; perhaps the best two hours he has of the four-and-twenty, for the time hangs heavy on him. His old Generals sit round his bed, talking, smoking, as it was five years ago; his Feekin and his Children much about him, out and in: the heavy-laden, weary hours roll round as they can. In general there is a kind of constant Tabaks-Collegium, old Flans, Camas, Hacke, Pöllnitz, Derschau, and the rest by turns always there; the royal Patient cannot be left alone, without faces he likes: other Generals, estimable in their way, have a physiognomy displeasing to the sick man; and will smart for it if they enter,—"At sight of him every pain grows painfuler!"—the poor King being of poetic temperament, as we often say. Friends are encouraged to smoke, especially to keep-up a stream of talk; if at any time he fall into a doze and they cease talking, the silence will awaken him.

[1] Pöllnitz (ii. 538); who gives no date.

He is worst-off in the night; sleep very bad: and among his sore bodily pains, ennui falls very heavy to a mind so restless. He can paint, he can whittle, chisel: at last they even mount him a table, in his bed, with joiner's tools, mallets, gluepots, where he makes small carpentry,—the talk to go on the while; —often at night is the sound of his mallet audible in the Palace Esplanade; and Berlin townsfolk pause to listen, with many thoughts of a sympathetic or at least inarticulate character: "Hm, Weh, Ihro Majestät: ach Gott, pale Death knocks with impartial foot at the huts of poor men and the Palaces of Kings!"[2] Reverend Herr Roloff, whom they call Provost (Probst, Chief Clergyman) Roloff, a pious honest man and preacher, he, I could guess, has already been giving spiritual counsel now and then; later interviews with Roloff are expressly on record: for it is the King's private thought, ever and anon borne in upon him, that death itself is in this business.

Queen and Children, mostly hoping hitherto, though fearing too, live in much anxiety and agitation. The Crown-Prince is often over from Reinsberg; must not come too often, nor even inquire too much: his affectionate solicitude might be mistaken for solicitude of another kind! It is certain he is in no haste to be King; to quit the haunts of the Muses, and embark on Kingship. Certain, too, he loves his Father; shudders at the thought of losing him. And yet again there will gleams intrude of a contrary thought; which the filial heart disowns, with a kind of horror, "Down, thou impious thought!" —We perceive he manages in general to push the crisis away from him; to believe that real danger is still distant. His demeanour, so far as we can gather from his Letters or other evidence, is amiable, prudent, natural; altogether that of a human Son in those difficult circumstances. Poor Papa is heavy-laden: let us help to bear his burdens;—let us hope the crisis is still far off!—

Once, on a favourable evening, probably about the beginning of April, when he felt as if improving, Friedrich Wilhelm

[2] Pöllnitz, ii. 539.

resolved to dress, and hold Tobacco-Parliament again in a formal manner. Let us look in there, through the eyes of Pöllnitz, who was of it, upon the last Tobacco-Parliament:

'A numerous party; Schwerin, Hacke, Derschau, all the chiefs 'and commandants of the Berlin Garrison are there; the old circle full; 'social human speech once more, and pipes alight; pleasant to the 'King. He does not himself smoke on this occasion; but he is unusually 'lively in talk; much enjoys the returning glimpse of old days; and 'the Tobacco circle was proceeding through its phases, successful be-'yond common. All at once the Crown-Prince steps in; direct from 'Reinsberg:[3] an unexpected pleasure. At sight of whom the Tobacco 'circle, taken on the sudden, simultaneously started up, and made him 'a bow. Rule is, in Tobacco-Parliament you do not rise for anybody; 'and they have risen. Which struck the sick heart in a strange pain-'ful way. "Hm, the Rising Sun?" thinks he; "Rules broken through, 'for the Rising Sun. But I am not dead yet, as you shall know!" ring-'ing for his servants in great wrath; and had himself rolled out, regard-'less of protestations and excuses. "Hither, you Hacke!" said he.

'Hacke followed; but it was only to return on the instant, with the 'King's order, "That you instantly quit the Palace, all of you, and 'don't come back!" Solemn respectful message to his Majesty was of 'no effect, or of less; they had to go, on those terms; and Pöllnitz, 'making for his Majesty's apartment next morning as usual, was 'twitched by a Gensdarme, "No admittance!" And it was days be-'fore the matter would come round again, under earnest protestations 'from the one side, and truculent rebukes from the other.'[4] Figure the Crown-Prince, figure the poor sick Majesty; and what a time in those localities!

With the bright spring weather he seemed to revive; towards the end of April he resolved for Potsdam, everybody thinking him much better, and the outer Public reckoning the crisis of the illness over. He himself knew other. It was on the 27th of the month that he went; he said, "Fare thee well, "then, Berlin; I am to die in Potsdam, then (ich werde in "Potsdam sterben)!" The May-flowers came late; the weather was changeful, ungenial for the sick man: this winter of 1740 had been the coldest on record; it extended itself into the very summer; and brought great distress of every kind;—of which some oral rumour still survives in all countries. Friedrich Wilhelm heard complaints of scarcity among the people; admonitions to open his Corn-granaries (such as he always has in store against that kind of accident); but he still hesitated and refused; unable to look into it himself, and fearing deceptions.

[3] 12th April 1740? (Œuvres, xxvii. part 1st, p. 29); Pöllnitz is dateless.
[4] Pöllnitz (abridged), ii. 540.

27th April 1740.

For the rest, he is struggling between death and life; in general persuaded that the end is fast hastening on. He sends for Chief Preacher Roloff out to Potsdam; has some notable dialogues with Roloff, and with two other Potsdam Clergymen, of which there is record still left us. In these, as in all his demeanour at this supreme time, we see the big rugged block of manhood come out very vividly; strong in his simplicity, in his veracity. Friedrich Wilhelm's wish is to know from Roloff what the chances are for him in the other world,—which is not less certain than Potsdam and the giant grenadiers to Friedrich Wilhelm; and where, he perceives, never half so clearly before, he shall actually peel-off his Kinghood, and stand before God Almighty, no better than a naked beggar. Roloff's prognostics are not so encouraging as the King had hoped. Surely this King "never took or coveted what was not his; kept true to his marriage-vow, in spite of horrible examples everywhere; believed the Bible, honoured the Preachers, went diligently to Church, and tried to do what he understood God's commandments were?" To all which Roloff, a courageous pious man, answers with discreet words and shakings of the head. "Did I behave ill, then; did I ever do injustice?" Roloff mentions Baron Schlubhut the defalcating Amtmann, hanged at Königsberg without even a trial. "He had no trial; but was there any doubt he had justice? A public thief, confessing he had stolen the taxes he was set to gather; insolently offering, as if that were all, to repay the money, and saying, It was not Manier (good manners) to hang a nobleman!" Roloff shakes his head, Too violent, your Majesty, and savouring of the tyrannous. The poor King must repent.

"Well,—is there anything more? Out with it, then; better now than too late!"—Much oppression, forcing men to build in Berlin.—"Oppression? was it not their benefit, as well as Berlin's and the Country's? I had no interest in it other. Derschau, you who managed it?" and his Majesty turned to Derschau. For all the smoking generals and company are still here; nor will his Majesty consent to dismiss them from the presence and be alone with Roloff: "What is there to conceal? They are people of honour, and my friends." Derschau, whose feats in the building way are not unknown even to us, answers with a hard face, It was all right and orderly; nothing out of square in his building operations. To which Roloff shakes his head: "A thing of public notoriety, Herr General."—"I will prove everything before a Court," answers the Herr General with still harder face; Roloff still austerely shaking his head. Hm!—And then there is forgiveness of enemies; your Majesty is bound to forgive all men, or how can you ask to be forgiven? "Well, I will, I do; you Feekin, write to your Brother (unforgiveablest of beings), after I am dead, that I forgave him, died in peace with him."—Better her Majesty should write at once, suggests Roloff.—"No, after I am dead," persists the Son of Nature,—that will be safer![5] An unwedgeable and gnarled big block of manhood and simplicity and sincerity; such as we rarely get sight of among the modern sons of Adam, among the crowned sons nearly never. At parting he said to Roloff, "You (Er, He) do not spare me; it is right. You do your duty like an honest Christian man."[6]

Roloff, I perceive, had several Dialogues with the King; and stayed in Potsdam some days for that object. The above bit of jotting is from the Seckendorf Papers (probably picked up by Seckendorf Junior), and is dated only 'May.' Of the two Potsdam Preachers, one of whom is 'Oesfeld, Chaplain of the Giant Grenadiers,' and the other is 'Cochius, Calvinist Hofprediger,' each published on his own score some Notes of dialogue and circumstance;[7] which are to the same effect, so far as they concern us; and exhibit the same rugged Son of Nature, looking with all his eyesight into the near Eternity, and sinking in a human and not inhuman manner amid the floods of Time. 'Wa, wa, what great God is this, that pulls 'down the strength of the strongest Kings!'—

The poor King's state is very restless, fluctuates from day to day; he is impatient of bed; sleeps very ill; is up whenever

[5] Wrote accordingly, 'not able to finish without many tears:' honest sensible Letter (though indifferently spelt), 'Berlin, 1st June 1740;'—lies now in State-Paper Office: 'Royal Letters, vol. xciv., Prussia, 1689-1777.'

[6] Notata ex ore Roloffi ('found among the Seckendorf Papers,' no date but 'May 1740'), in Förster, ii. 154, 155; in a fragmentary state: completed in Pöllnitz, ii. 545-549.

[7] Cochius the Hofprediger's (Calvinist Court-Chaplain's) Account of his Interviews (first of them 'Friday 27th May 1740, about 9 P.M.'); followed by ditto from Oesfeld (Chaplain of the Giants), who usually accompanied Cochius,—are in Seyfarth, Geschichte Friedrich des Grossen (Leipzig, 1783-1788), i. (Beylage) 24-40. Seyfarth was "Regiments-Auditor" in Halle: his Work, solid though stupid, consists nearly altogether of multifarious Beylagen (Appendices) and Notes; which are creditably accurate, and often curious; and, as usual, have no Index for an unfortunate reader.

26th May 1740.

possible; rolls about in his wheeled chair, and even gets into the air: at one time looking strong, as if there were still months in him, and anon sunk in fainting weakness, as if he had few minutes to live. Friedrich at Reinsberg corresponds very secretly with Dr. Eller; has other friends at Potsdam whose secret news he very anxiously reads. To the last he cannot bring himself to think it serious.[8]

On Thursday 26th of May, an express from Eller, or the Potsdam friends, arrives at Reinsberg: He is to come quickly, if he would see his Father again alive! The step may have danger, too; but Friedrich, a world of feelings urging him, is on the road next morning before the sun. His journey may be fancied; the like of it falls to all men. Arriving at last, turning hastily a corner of the Potsdam Schloss, Friedrich sees some gathering in the distance: it is his Father in his rollwagen (wheeled-chair),—not dying; but out of doors, giving orders about founding a House, or seeing it done. House for one Philips, a crabbed Englishman he has; whose tongue is none of the best, not even to Majesty itself, but whose merits as a Groom, of English and other Horses, are without parallel in those parts. Without parallel, and deserve a House before we die. Let us see it set agoing, this blessed May-day! Of Philips, who survived deep into Friedrich's time, and uttered rough sayings (in mixed intelligible dialect) when put upon in his grooming, or otherwise disturbed, I could obtain no farther account: the man did not care to be put in History (a very small service to a man); cared to have a house with trim fittings, and to do his grooming well, the fortunate Philips.

At sight of his Son, Friedrich Wilhelm threw out his arms; the Son kneeling sank upon his breast, and they embraced with tears. My Father, my Father; My Son, my Son! It was a scene to make all bystanders and even Philips weep.—Probably the emotion hurt the old King; he had to be taken in again straightway, his show of strength suddenly gone, and bed the only place for him. This same Friday he dictated to one of his Ministers (Boden, who was in close attendance) the Instruction for his Funeral; a rude characteristic Piece, which perhaps the English reader knows. Too long and rude for reprinting here.[9] [8] Letter to Eller, 25th May 1740 (Œuvres, xvi. 184).

[9] Copy of it, in Seyfarth (ubi suprà), i. 19-24. Translated in Mauvillon (ii. 432-437); in &c. &c.

He is to be buried in his uniform, the Potsdam Grenadiers his escort; with military decorum, three volleys fired (and take care they be well fired, 'nicht plackeren'), so many cannon salvos;—and no fuss or flaunting ceremony: simplicity and decency is what the tenant of that oak coffin wants, as he always did when owner of wider dominions. The coffin, which he has ready and beside him in the Palace this good while, is a stout piece of carpentry, with leather straps and other improvements; he views it from time to time; solaces his truculent imagination with the look of it: "I shall sleep right well there," he would say. The image he has of his Burial, we perceive, is of perfect visuality, equal to what a Defoe could do in imagining. All is seen, settled to the last minuteness: the coffin is to be borne out by so and so, at such and such a door; this detachment is to fall-in here, that there, in the attitude of 'cover arms' (musket inverted under left arm); and the band is to play, with all its blackamoors, O Haupt voll Blut und Wunden (O Head, all bleeding wounded); a Dirge his Majesty had liked, who knew music, and had a love for it, after his sort. Good Son of Nature: a dumb Poet, as I say always; most dumb, but real; the value of him great, and unknown in these babbling times. It was on this same Friday night that Cochius was first sent for; Cochius, and Oesfeld with him, 'about nine o'clock.'

For the next three days (Saturday to Monday) when his cough and many sufferings would permit him, Friedrich Wilhelm had long private dialogues with his Son; instructing him, as was evident, in the mysteries of State; in what knowledge, as to persons and to things, he reckoned might be usefulest to him. What the lessons were, we know not; the way of taking them had given pleasure to the old man: he was heard to say, perhaps more than once, when the Generals were called in, and the dialogue interrupted for a while: "Am not I happy to have such a Son to leave behind me!" And the grimly sympathetic Generals testified assent; endeavoured to talk a little, could at least smoke, and look friendly; till the King gathered strength for continuing his instructions to his Successor. All else was as if settled with him; this had still remained to do. This once done (finished, Monday night), why not abdicate altogether; and die disengaged, be it in a day or in a month, since that is now the one work left? Friedrich Wilhelm does so purpose.

31st May 1740.

His state, now as all along, was fluctuating, uncertain, restless. He was heard murmuring prayers; he would say sometimes, "Pray for me; Betet, betet." And more than once, in deep tone: "Lord, enter not into judgment with Thy servant, for in Thy sight shall no man living be justified!" The wild Son of Nature, looking into Life and Death, into Judgment and Eternity, finds that these things are very great. This too is a characteristic trait: In a certain German Hymn (Why fret or murmur, then? the title of it), which they often sang to him, or along with him, as he much loved it, are these words, 'Naked I came into the world, and naked shall I go,'—"No," said he, 'always with vivacity,' at this passage; "not quite naked, I shall have my uniform on:" Let us be exact, since we are at it! After which the singing proceeded again. 'The late Graf Alexander von Wartenberg,'—Captain Wartenberg, whom we know, and whose opportunities,—'was wont to relate this.'[10]

Tuesday 31st May, 'about one in the morning,' Cochius was again sent for. He found the King in very pious mood, but in great distress, and afraid he might yet have much pain to suffer. Cochius prayed with him; talked piously. "I can remember nothing," said the King; "I cannot pray, I have forgotten all my prayers."—"Prayer is not in words, but in the thought of the heart," said Cochius; and soothed the heavy-laden man as he could. "Fare you well," said Friedrich Wilhelm, at length; "most likely we shall not meet again in this world." Whereat Cochius burst into tears, and withdrew. About four, the King was again out of bed; wished to see his youngest Boy, who had been ill of measles, but was doing well: "Poor little Ferdinand, adieu, then, my little child!" This is the Father of that fine Louis Ferdinand, who was killed at Jena; concerning whom Berlin, in certain emancipated circles of it, still speaks with regret. He, the Louis Ferdinand, had fine qualities; but went far a-roving, into radicalism, into romantic love, into champagne; and was cut-down on the threshold of Jena, desperately fighting,—perhaps happily for him.

From little Ferdinand's room Friedrich Wilhelm has himself rolled into Queen Sophie's. "Feekin, O my Feekin, thou must rise this day, and help me what thou canst. This day I am going to die; thou wilt be with me this day!" The good [10] Büsching (in 1786), Beyträge, iv. 100.

Wife rises: I know not that it was the first time she had been so called; but it did prove the last. Friedrich Wilhelm has decided, as the first thing he will do, to abdicate; and all the Official persons and companions of the sick-room, Pöllnitz among them, not long after sunrise, are called to see it done. Pöllnitz, huddling-on his clothes, arrived about five: in a corridor he sees the wheeled-chair and poor sick King; steps aside to let him pass: '"It is over (Das ist vollbracht)," said 'the King, looking up to me as he passed: he had on his 'nightcap, and a blue mantle thrown round him.' He was wheeled into his anteroom; there let the company assemble: many of them are already there.'

The royal stables are visible from this room: Friedrich Wilhelm orders the horses to be ridden out: you old Fürst of Anhalt Dessau my oldest friend, you Colonel Hacke faithfulest of Adjutant-Generals, take each of you a horse, the best you can pick out: it is my last gift to you. Dessau, in silence, with dumb-show of thanks, points to a horse, any horse: "You have chosen the very worst," said Friedrich Wilhelm: "Take that other, I will warrant him a good one!" The grim Old Dessauer thanks in silence; speechless grief is on that stern gunpowder face, and he seems even to be struggling with tears. "Nay, nay, my friend," Friedrich Wilhelm said, "this is a debt we have all to pay."

The Official people, Queen, Friedrich, Minister Boden, Minister Podewils, and even Pöllnitz, being now all present, Friedrich Wilhelm makes his Declaration, at considerable length; old General Bredow repeating it aloud,[11] sentence by sentence, the King's own voice being too weak; so that all may hear: "That he abdicates, gives up wholly, in favour of his good Son Friedrich; that foreign Ambassadors are to be informed; that you are all to be true and loyal to my Son as you were to me"—and what else is needful. To which the judicious Podewils makes answer, "That there must first be a written Deed of this high Transaction executed, which shall be straightway set about; the Deed once executed, signed and sealed,—the high Royal will, in all points, takes effect." Alas, before Podewils has done speaking, the King is like falling into a faint; does faint, and is carried to bed: too unlikely any Deed of Abdication will be needed.

[11] Pöllnitz, ii. 561.

31st May 1740.

Ups and downs there still were; sore fluctuating labour, as the poor King struggles to his final rest, this morning. He was at the window again, when the Wacht-parade (Grenadiers on Guard) turned out; he saw them make their evolutions for the last time.[12] After which, new relapse, new fluctuation. It was about eleven o'clock, when Cochius was again sent for. The King lay speechless, seemingly still conscious, in bed; Cochius prays with fervour, in a loud tone, that the dying King may hear and join. "Not so loud!" says the King, rallying a little. He had remembered that it was the season when his servants got their new liveries; they had been ordered to appear this day in full new costume: "O vanity! O vanity!" said Friedrich Wilhelm, at sight of the ornamented plush. "Pray for me, pray for me; my trust is in the Saviour!" he often said. His pains, his weakness are great; the cordage of a most tough heart rending itself piece by piece. At one time, he called for a mirror: that is certain:—rugged wild man, son of Nature to the last. The mirror was brought; what he said at sight of his face is variously reported: "Not so worn out as I thought," is Pöllnitz's account, and the likeliest;—though perhaps he said several things, "ugly face," "as good as dead already;" and continued the inspection for some moments.[13] A grim, strange thing.

"Feel my pulse, Pitsch," said he, noticing the Surgeon of his Giants: "tell me how long this will last."—"Alas, not long," answered Pitsch.—"Say not, alas; but how do you (He) know?"—"The pulse is gone!"—"Impossible," said he, lifting his arm: "how could I move my fingers so, if the pulse were gone?" Pitsch looked mournfully steadfast. "Herr Jesu, to thee I live; Herr Jesu, to thee I die; in life and in death thou art my gain (Du bist mein Gewinn)." These were the last words Friedrich Wilhelm spoke in this world. He again fell into a faint. Eller gave a signal to the Crown-Prince to take the Queen away. Scarcely were they out of the room, when the faint had deepened into death; and Friedrich Wilhelm, at rest from all his labours, slept with the primeval sons of Thor.

No Baresark of them, nor Odin's self, I think, was a bit of truer human stuff;—I confess his value to me, in these sad times, is rare and great. Considering the usual Histrionic, [12] Pauli, viii. 280.

[13] Pöllnitz, ii. 564; Wilhelmina, ii. 321.

Papin's-Digester, Truculent-Charlatan and other species of "Kings," alone attainable for the sunk flunky populations of an Era given up to Mammon and the worship of its own belly, what would not such a population give for a Friedrich Wilhelm, to guide it on the road back from Orcus a little? 'Would give,' I have written; but alas, it ought to have been 'should give.' What they 'would' give is too mournfully plain to me, in spite of ballotboxes: a steady and tremendous truth from the days of Barabbas downwards and upwards!—Tuesday 31st May 1740, between one and two o'clock in the afternoon, Friedrich Wilhelm died; age fifty-two, coming 15th August next. Same day, Friedrich his Son was proclaimed at Berlin; quilted heralds, with sound of trumpet and the like, doing what is customary on such occasions.

On Saturday 4th June, the King's body is laid out in state; all Potsdam at liberty to come and see. He lies there, in his regimentals, in his oaken coffin, on a raised place in the middle of the room; decent mortuary draperies, lamps, garlands, banderols furnishing the room and him: at his feet, on a black-velvet tabouret (stool), are the chivalry emblems, helmet, gauntlets, spurs; and on similar stools, at the right hand and the left, lie his military insignia, hat and sash, sword, guidon, and what else is fit. Around, in silence, sit nine veteran military dignitaries; Buddenbrock, Waldau, Derschau, Einsiedel, and five others whom we omit to name. Silent they sit. A grim earnest sight in the shine of the lamplight, as you pass out of the June sun. Many went, all day; looked once again on the face that was to vanish. Precisely at ten at night, the coffin-lid is screwed down: Twelve Potsdam Captains take the coffin on their shoulders; Four-and-twenty Corporals with wax torches, Four-and-twenty Sergeants with inverted halberts lowered; certain Generals on order, and very many following as volunteers; these perform the actual burial,—carry the body to the Garrison Church, where are clergy waiting, which is but a small step off; see it lodged, oak coffin and all, in a marble coffin in the side vault there, which is known to Tourists.[14] It is the end of the week, and the actual burial is done,—hastened forward for reasons we can guess.

Filial piety by no means intends to defraud a loved Father of the Spartan ceremonial contemplated as obsequies by him: very far from it. Filial piety will conform to that with rigour; only adding what musical and other splendours are possible, to testify his love still more. And so, almost three weeks hence, on the 23d of the month, with the aid of Dresden Artists, of Latin Cantatas, and other pomps (not inexcusable, though somewhat out of keeping), the due Funeral is done, no Corpse but a Wax Effigy present in it;—and in all points, that of the Potsdam Grenadiers not forgotten, there was rigorous conformity to the Instruction left. In all points, even to the extensive funeral dinner, and drinking of the appointed cask of wine, 'the best cask in my cellar.' Adieu, O King.

[14] Pauli, viii. 281.

31st May 1740.

The Potsdam Grenadiers fired their three volleys (not 'plackering,' as I have reason to believe, but well); got their allowance, dinner-liquor, and appointed coin of money: it was the last service required of them in this world. That same night they were dissolved, the whole Four Thousand of them, at a stroke; and ceased to exist as Potsdam Grenadiers. Colonels, Captains, all the Officers known to be of merit, were advanced, at least transferred. Of the common men, a minority, of not inhuman height and of worth otherwise, were formed into a new Regiment on the common terms: the stupid splay-footed eight-feet mass were allowed to stalk off whither they pleased, or vegetate on frugal pensions; Irish Kirkman, and a few others neither knock-kneed nor without head, were appointed heyducs, that is, porters to the King's or other Palaces; and did that duty in what was considered an ornamental manner.

Here are still two things capable of being fished-up from the sea of nugatory matter; and meditated on by readers, till the following Books open.

The last breath of Friedrich Wilhelm having fled, Friedrich hurried to a private room; sat there all in tears; looking back through the gulfs of the Past, upon such a Father now rapt away forever. Sad all, and soft in the moonlight of memory, —the lost Loved One all in the right as we now see, we all in the wrong!—This, it appears, was the Son's fixed opinion. Seven years hence, here is how Friedrich concludes the History of his Father, written with a loyal admiration throughout: 'We have left under silence the domestic chagrins of this great 'Prince: readers must have some indulgence for the faults of 'the Children, in consideration of the virtues of such a Fa-'ther.'[15] All in tears he sits at present, meditating these sad things.

In a little while the Old Dessauer, about to leave for Dessau, ventures in to the Crown-Prince, Crown-Prince no longer; 'embraces his knees;' offers, weeping, his condolence, his congratulation;—hopes withal that his sons and he will be continued in their old posts, and that he, the Old Dessauer, "will have the same authority as in the late reign." Friedrich's eyes, at this last clause, flash-out tearless, strangely Olympian. "In "your posts I have no thought of making change: in your "posts, yes;—and as to authority, I know of none there can "be but what resides in the King that is sovereign!" Which, as it were, struck the breath out of the Old Dessauer; and sent him home with a painful miscellany of feelings, astonishment not wanting among them.

At an after hour, the same night, Friedrich went to Berlin; met by acclamation enough. He slept there, not without tumult of dreams, one may fancy; and on awakening next morning, the first sound he heard was that of the Regiment Glasenap under his windows, swearing fealty to the new King. He sprang out of bed in a tempest of emotion; bustled distractedly to and fro, wildly weeping. Pöllnitz, who came into the anteroom, found him in this state, 'half-dressed, with dishevelled hair, in tears, and as if beside himself.' "These huzzahings only tell me what I have lost!" said the new King.—"He was in great suffering," suggested Pöllnitz; "he is now at rest." "True, he suffered; but he was here with us: and now—!"[16]

[15] Œuvres, i. 174 (Mém. de Brandebourg: finished about 1747).
[16] Ranke (ii. 46, 47), from certain Fragments, still in manuscript, of Pöllnitz's Memoiren.

END OF VOL. III.

18°
19° 20° 21°
22°
23° 24° COURLAND
Memel
Memel
Tilsit
Labiau
Königsberg
Pillau
Fischhausen
Wehlau
Brandenburg
Preussel
Elbing
Danzig
Marienwerder
Thorn
Graudentz
WARSAW
POLAND
Radgin
Cracow
Liege Herstal
Luxemburg
Bitsch
Deutsch Lothringen

CHAP. PAGE

V. AFFAIR OF HERSTAL. 70

How the Herstallers had behaved to Friedrich Wilhelm, p. 72.
Friedrich takes the Rod out of Pickle, 75.
What Voltaire thought of Herstal, 79.

VI. RETURNS BY HANOVER; DOES NOT CALL ON HIS ROYAL UNCLE THERE 83

VII. WITHDRAWS TO REINSBERG, HOPING A PEACEABLE WINTER 89

Wilhelmina's Return-Visit, p. 90.
Unexpected News at Reinsberg, 93.

VIII. THE KAISER'S DEATH 95

IX. RESOLUTION FORMED AT REINSBERG IN CONSEQUENCE 101

Mystery in Berlin, for Seven Weeks, while the Preparations go on; Voltaire visits Friedrich to decipher it, but cannot, p. 104.
View of Friedrich behind the Veil, 108.
Excellency Botta has Audience; then Excellency Dickens, and others: December 6th, the Mystery is out, 112.
Masked Ball, at Berlin, 12th-13th December, 116.

BOOK XII.

FIRST SILESIAN WAR, AWAKENING A GENERAL EUROPEAN ONE, BEGINS. 1740-1741.

I. OF SCHLESIEN, OR SILESIA 118

Historical Epochs of Schlesien;—after the Quads and Marchmen, p. 120.

II. FRIEDRICH MARCHES ON GLOGAU 124

Friedrich at Crossen, and still in his own Territory, 14th-16th Dec.;—steps into Schlesien, p. 125.
What Glogau, and the Government at Breslau, did upon it, 128.
March to Weichau (Saturday 17th, and stay Sunday there); to Milkau (Monday 19th); get to Herrendorf, within sight of Glogau, Dec. 22d, 133.

CHAP. PAGE

III. PROBLEM OF GLOGAU 140

What Berlin is saying; what Friedrich is thinking, p. 143.

Schwerin at Liegnitz; Friedrich hushes-up the Glogau Problem, and starts with his best speed for Breslau, 147.

IV. BRESLAU UNDER SOFT PRESSURE 150

King enters Breslau; stays there, gracious and vigilant, Four Days (Jan. 2d-6th, 1741), p. 153.

V. FRIEDRICH PUSHES FORWARD TOWARDS BRIEG AND NEISSE 156

Friedrich comes across to Ottmachau; sits there, in survey of Neisse, till his Cannon come, p. 159.

VI. NEISSE IS BOMBARDED 163

Browne vanishes in a slight Flash of Fire, p. 168.

VII. AT VERSAILLES, THE MOST CHRISTIAN MAJESTY CHANGES HIS SHIRT, AND BELLEISLE IS SEEN WITH PAPERS 169

Of Belleisle and his Plans, p. 174.

VIII. PHENOMENA IN PETERSBURG 180

IX. FRIEDRICH RETURNS TO SILESIA 188

Skirmish of Baumgarten, 27th February 1741, p. 192.

Aspects of Breslau, 195.

Austria is standing to Arms, 197.

The Young Dessauer captures Glogau (March 9th); the Old Dessauer, by his Camp of Göttin (April 2d), checkmates certain Designing Persons, 202.

Friedrich takes the Field with some Pomp; goes into the Mountains,—but comes fast back, 208.

X. BATTLE OF MOLLWITZ 216

Of Friedrich's Disappearance into Fairyland, in the interim; and of Maupertuis's similar Adventure, p. 233.

XI. THE BURSTING-FORTH OF BEDLAMS: BELLEISLE AND THE BREAKERS OF PRAGMATIC SANCTION 239

Who was to blame for the Austrian-Succession War? p. 242.

CHAP. PAGE

How Belleisle made Visit to Teutschland; and there was no fit Henry the Fowler to welcome him, 244.

Downbreak of Pragmatic Sanction; Manner of the chief Artists in handling their Covenants, 248.

Concerning the Imperial Election (Kaiserwahl) that is to be; Candidates for Kaisership, 255.

Teutschland to be carved into something of Symmetry, should the Belleisle Enterprises succeed, 259.

Belleisle on Visit to Friedrich; sees Friedrich besiege Brieg, with Effect, 261.

XII. SORROWS OF HIS BRITANNIC MAJESTY . . 267

1. Snatch of Parliamentary Eloquence by Mr. Viner (19th April 1741), p. 268.
2. Constitutional Historian on the Phenomenon of Walpole in England, 271.
3. Of the Spanish War, or the Jenkins's-Ear Question, 274.

Succinct History of the Spanish War, which began in 1739; and ended—When did it end? 277.

XIII. SMALL-WAR: FIRST EMERGENCE OF ZIETHEN THE HUSSAR GENERAL INTO NOTICE . . 286

MAPS.

BATTLE OF MOLLWITZ . . . . to face p. 238

FIRST TWO SILESIAN WARS . . at end of Volume.

HISTORY

OF

FREDERICK THE GREAT.

BOOK XI.

FRIEDRICH TAKES THE REINS IN HAND.

June—December 1740.

CHAPTER I.

PHENOMENA OF FRIEDRICH'S ACCESSION.

In Berlin, from Tuesday 31st May 1740, day of the late King's death, till the Thursday following, the post was stopped and the gates closed; no estafette can be dispatched, though Dickens and all the Ambassadors are busy writing. On the Thursday, Regiments, Officers, principal Officials having sworn, and the new King being fairly in the saddle, estafettes and postboys shoot forth at the top of their speed; and Rumour, towards every point of the compass, apprises mankind what immense news there is.[1]

A King's Accession is always a hopeful phenomenon to the public; more especially a young King's, who has been talked of for his talents and aspirings,—for his sufferings, were it nothing more,—and whose Anti-Macchiavel is understood to be in the press. Vaguely everywhere there has a notion gone abroad that this young King will prove considerable. Here at last has a Lover of Philosophy got upon the throne, and great philanthropies and magnanimities are to be expected, think rash editors and idle mankind. Rash editors in England and elsewhere, we observe, are ready to believe that Friedrich has not only disbanded the Potsdam Giants; but means to 'reduce the Prussian Army one half' or so, for ease (temporary ease, which we hope will be lasting) of parties concerned; and to go much upon emancipation, political rose-water, and friendship to humanity, as we now call it.

[1] Dickens (in State-Paper Office), 4th June 1740.

At his first meeting of Council, they say, he put this question, "Could not the Prussian Army be reduced to 45,000?" The excellent young man. To which the Council had answered, "Hardly, your Majesty! The Jülich-and-Berg affair is so ominous hitherto!" These may be secrets, and dubious to people out of doors, thinks a wise editor; but one thing patent to the day was this, surely symbolical enough: On one of his Majesty's first drives to Potsdam or from it, a thousand children,—in round numbers a thousand of them, all with the red string round their necks, and liable to be taken for soldiers, if needed in the regiment of their Canton,—a thousand children met this young King at a turn of his road; and with shrill unison of wail, sang out: "Oh, deliver us from slavery," —from the red threads, your Majesty. Why should poor we be liable to suffer hardship for our Country or otherwise, your Majesty! Can no one else be got to do it? sang out the thousand children. And his Majesty assented on the spot, thinks the rash editor.[2] "Goose, Madam?" exclaimed a philanthropist projector once, whose scheme of sweeping chimneys by pulling a live goose down through them was objected to: "Goose, Madam? You can take two ducks, then, if you are so sorry for the goose!"—Rash editors think there is to be a reign of Astræa Redux in Prussia, by means of this young King; and forget to ask themselves, as the young King must by no means do, How far Astræa may be possible, for Prussia and him?

At home, too, there is prophesying enough, vague hope enough, which for most part goes wide of the mark. This young King, we know, did prove considerable; but not in the way shaped out for him by the public;—it was in far other ways! For no public in the least knows, in such cases: nor does the man himself know, except gradually and if he strive to learn. As to the public,—'Doubtless,' says a friend of mine, 'doubtless it was the Atlantic Ocean that carried Co-'lumbus to America; lucky for the Atlantic, and for Colum-'bus and us: but the Atlantic did not quite vote that way 'from the first; nay its votes, I believe, were very various at 'different stages of the matter!' This is a truth which kings and men, not intending to be drift-logs or waste brine obedient to the Moon, are much called to have in mind withal, from perhaps an early stage of their voyage.

[2] Gentleman's Magazine (London, 1740), x. 318; Newspapers, &c.

Friedrich's actual demeanour in these his first weeks, which is still decipherable if one study well, has in truth a good deal of the brilliant, of the popular-magnanimous; but manifests strong solid quality withal, and a head steadier than might have been expected. For the Berlin world is all in a rather Auroral condition; and Friedrich too is,—the chains suddenly cut loose, and such hopes opened for the young man. He has great things ahead; feels in himself great things, and doubtless exults in the thought of realising them. Magnanimous enough, popular, hopeful enough, with Voltaire and the highest of the world looking on:—but yet he is wise, too; creditably aware that there are limits, that this is a bargain, and the terms of it inexorable. We discern with pleasure the old veracity of character shining through this giddy new element; that all these fine procedures are at least unaffected, to a singular degree true, and the product of nature, on his part; and that, in short, the complete respect for Fact, which used to be a quality of his, and which is among the highest and also rarest in man, has on no side deserted him at present.

A trace of airy exuberance, of natural exultancy, not quite repressible, on the sudden change to freedom and supreme power from what had gone before: perhaps that also might be legible, if in those opaque beadrolls which are called Histories of Friedrich anything human could with certainty be read! He flies much about from place to place; now at Potsdam, now at Berlin, at Charlottenburg, Reinsberg; nothing loath to run whither business calls him, and appear in public: the gazetteer world, as we noticed, which has been hitherto a most mute world, breaks out here and there into a kind of husky jubilation over the great things he is daily doing, and rejoices in the prospect of having a Philosopher King; which function the young man, only twenty-eight gone, cannot but wish to fulfil for the gazetteers and the world. He is a busy man; and walks boldly into his grand enterprise of 'making men happy,' to the admiration of Voltaire and an enlightened public far and near.

Bielfeld speaks of immense concourses of people crowding about Charlottenburg, to congratulate, to solicit, to &c.; tells us how he himself had to lodge almost in outhouses, in that royal village of hope. His emotions at Reinsberg, and everybody's, while Friedrich Wilhelm lay dying, and all stood like greyhounds on the slip; and with what arrow-swiftness they shot away when the great news came: all this he has already described at wearisome length, in his fantastic semi-fabulous way.[3] Friedrich himself seemed moderately glad to see Bielfeld; received his high-flown congratulations with a benevolent yet somewhat composed air; and gave him afterwards, in the course of weeks, an unexpectedly small appointment: To go to Hanover, under Truchsess von Waldburg, and announce our Accession. Which is but a simple, mostly formal service; yet perhaps what Bielfeld is best equal to.

The Britannic Majesty, or at least his Hanover people have been beforehand with this civility; Baron Münchhausen, no doubt by orders given for such contingency, had appeared at Berlin with the due compliment and condolence almost on the first day of the New Reign; first messenger of all on that errand; Britannic Majesty evidently in a conciliatory humour, —having his dangerous Spanish War on hand. Britannic Majesty in person, shortly after, gets across to Hanover; and Friedrich dispatches Truchsess, with Bielfeld adjoined, to return the courtesy.

Friedrich does not neglect these points of good manners; along with which something of substantial may be privately conjoined. For example, if he had in secret his eye on Jülich and Berg, could anything be fitter than to ascertain what the French will think of such an enterprise? What the French; and next to them what the English, that is to say, Hanoverians, who meddle much in affairs of the Reich. For these reasons and others he likewise, probably with more study than in the Bielfeld case, dispatches Colonel Camas to make his compliment at the French Court, and in an expert way take soundings there. Camas, a fat sedate military gentleman, of advanced years, full of observation, experience and sound sense,—'with [3] Bielfeld, i. 68-92; ib. 81.

'one arm, which he makes do the work of two, and nobody 'can notice that the other arm resting in his coat-breast is of 'cork, so expert is he,'—will do in this matter what is feasible; probably not much for the present. He is to call on Voltaire, as he passes, who is in Holland again, at the Hague for some months back; and deliver him 'a little cask of Hungary Wine,' which probably his Majesty had thought exquisite. Of which, and the other insignificant passages between them, we hear more than enough in the writings and correspondences of Voltaire about this time.

In such way Friedrich disposes of his Bielfelds; who are rather numerous about him now and henceforth. Adventurers from all quarters, especially of the literary type, in hopes of being employed, much hovered round Friedrich through his whole reign. But they met a rather strict judge on arriving; it cannot be said they found it such a Goshen as they expected.

Favour, friendly intimacy, it is visible from the first, avails nothing with this young King; beyond and before all things he will have his work done, and looks out exclusively for the man ablest to do it. Hence Bielfeld goes to Hanover, to grin-out euphuisms, and make graceful court-bows to our sublime little Uncle there. On the other hand, Friedrich institutes a new Knighthood, Order of Merit so-called; which indeed is but a small feat, testifying mere hope and exuberance as yet; and may even be made worse than nothing, according to the Knights he shall manage to have. Happily it proved a successful new Order in this last all-essential particular; and, to the end of Friedrich's life, continued to be a great and coveted distinction among the Prussians.

Beyond doubt this is a radiant enough young Majesty; entitled to hope, and to be the cause of hope. Handsome, to begin with; decidedly well-looking, all say, and of graceful presence, though hardly five feet seven, and perhaps stouter of limb than the strict Belvedere standard.[4] Has a fine free expressive face; nothing of austerity in it; not a proud face, or not too proud, yet rapidly flashing on you all manner of high meanings.[5] Such a man, in the bloom of his years; with such a possibility ahead, and Voltaire and mankind waiting applausive!—Let us try to select, and extricate into coherence and visibility out of those Historical dustheaps, a few of the symptomatic phenomena, or physiognomic procedures of Friedrich in his first weeks of Kingship, by way of contribution to some Portraiture of his then inner-man.

[4] Height, it appears, was five feet five inches (Rhenish), which in English measure is five feet seven or a hairsbreadth less. Preuss, twice over, by a mistake unusual with him, gives 'five feet two inches three lines' as the correct cipher (which it is of Napoleon's measure in French feet); then settles on the above dimensions from unexceptionable authority (Preuss, Buch für Jedermann, i. 18; Preuss, Friedrich der Grosse, i. 39 and 419).

Friedrich will make Men happy: Corn-Magazines.

On the day after his Accession, Officers and chief Ministers taking the Oath, Friedrich, to his Officers, "on whom he counts for the same zeal now which he had witnessed as their comrade," recommends mildness of demeanour from the higher to the lower, and that the common soldier be not treated with harshness when not deserved: and to his Ministers he is still more emphatic, in the like or a higher strain. Officially announcing to them, by Letter, that a new Reign has commenced, he uses these words, legible soon after to a glad Berlin public: 'Our grand care will be, To further the Country's wellbeing, 'and to make every one of our subjects (einen jeden unserer 'Unterthanen) contented and happy. Our will is, not that you 'strive to enrich Us by vexation of Our subjects; but rather 'that you aim steadily as well towards the advantage of the 'Country as Our particular interest, forasmuch as We make 'no difference between these two objects,' but consider them one and the same. This is written, and gets into print within the month; and his Majesty, that same day (Wednesday 2d June), when it came to personal reception, and actual taking of the Oath, was pleased to add in words, which also were printed shortly, this comfortable corollary: 'My will hence-'forth is, If it ever chance that my particular interest and the 'general good of my Countries should seem to go against each 'other,—in that case, my will is, That the latter always be pre-'ferred.'[6]

This is a fine dialect for incipient Royalty; and it is brand-new at that time. It excites an admiration in the then populations, which to us, so long used to it and to what commonly comes of it, is not conceivable at once. There can be no doubt the young King does faithfully intend to develop himself in the way of making men happy; but here, as elsewhere, are limits which he will recognise ahead, some of them perhaps nearer than was expected.

[5] Wille's Engraving after Pesne (excellent, both Picture and Engraving) is reckoned the best Likeness in that form.

[6] Dickens, Despatch, 4th June 1740: Preuss, Friedrichs Jugend und Thronbesteigung (Berlin, 1840), p. 325;—quoting from the Berlin Newspapers of 28th June and 2d July 1740.

2d June 1740.

Meanwhile his first acts, in this direction, correspond to these fine words. The year 1740, still grim with cold into the heart of summer, bids fair to have a late poor harvest, and famine threatens to add itself to other hardships there have been. Recognising the actualities of the case, what his poor Father could not, he opens the Public Granaries,—a wise resource they have in Prussian countries against the year of scarcity;—orders grain to be sold out, at reasonable rates, to the suffering poor; and takes the due pains, considerable in some cases, that this be rendered feasible everywhere in his dominions. 'Berlin, 2d June,' is the first date of this important order; fine program to his Ministers, which, we read, is no sooner uttered, than some performance follows. An evident piece of wisdom and humanity; for which doubtless blessings of a very sincere kind rise to him from several millions of his fellow-mortals.

Nay furthermore, as can be dimly gathered, this scarcity continuing, some continuous mode of management was set on foot for the Poor; and there is nominated, with salary, with outline of plan and other requisites, as "Inspector of the Poor," to his own and our surprise, M. Jordan, late Reader to the Crown-Prince, and still much the intimate of his royal Friend. Inspector who seems to do his work very well. And in the November coming this is what we see: 'One thousand poor old women, the destitute of Berlin, set to spin,' at his Majesty's charges; vacant houses, hired for them in certain streets and suburbs, have been new-planked, partitioned, warmed; and spinning is there for any diligent female soul. There a thousand of them sit, under proper officers, proper wages, treatment;—and the hum of their poor spindles, and of their poor inarticulate old hearts, is a comfort, if one chance to think of it.—Of "distressed needlewomen" who cannot sew, nor be taught to do it; who, in private truth, are mutinous maid-servants come at last to the net upshot of their anarchies; of these, or of the like incurable phenomena, I hear nothing in Berlin; and can believe that, under this King, Indigence itself may still have something of a human aspect, not a brutal or diabolic as is commoner in some places.—This is one of Friedrich's first acts, this opening of the Corn-magazines, and arrangements for the Destitute;[7] and of this there can be no criticism. The sound of hungry pots set boiling, on judicious principles; the hum of those old women's spindles in the warm rooms: gods and men are well pleased to hear such sounds; and accept the same as part, real though infinitesimally small, of the sphere-harmonies of this Universe!

Abolition of Legal Torture.

Friedrich makes haste, next, to strike into Law-improvements. It is but the morrow after this of the Corn-magazines, by Kabinets-Ordre (Act of Parliament such as they can have in that Country, where the Three Estates sit all under one Three-cornered Hat, and the debates are kept silent, and only the upshot of them, more or less faithfully, is made public),—by Cabinet Order, 3d June 1740, he abolishes the use of Torture in Criminal Trials.[8] Legal Torture, 'Question,' as they mildly call it, is at an end from this date. Not in any Prussian Court shall a 'question' try for answer again by that savage method. The use of Torture had, I believe, fallen rather obsolete in Prussia; but now the very threat of it shall vanish,—the threat of it, as we may remember, had reached Friedrich himself, at one time. Three or four years ago, it is farther said, a dark murder happened in Berlin: Man killed one night in the open streets; murderer discoverable by no method,—unless he were a certain Candidatus of Divinity to whom some trace of evidence pointed, but who sorrowfully persisted in absolute and total denial. This poor Candidatus had been threatened with the rack; and would most likely have at length got it, had not the real murderer been discovered,—much to the discredit of the rack in Berlin. This Candidatus was only threatened; nor do I know when the last actual instance in Prussia was; but in enlightened France, and most other countries, there was as

[7] Helden-Geschichte, i. 367. Rödenbeck, Tagebuch aus Friedrichs des Grossen Regentenleben (Berlin, 1840), i. 2, 26 (2d June, October, 1740): a meritorious, laborious, though essentially chaotic Book, unexpectedly futile of result to the reader; settles for each Day of Friedrich's Reign, so far as possible, where Friedrich was and what doing; fatally wants all index &c., as usual.

[8] Preuss, Friedrichs Jugend und Thronbesteigung (Berlin, 1840,—a minor Book of Preuss's), p. 340. Rödenbeck, i. 14 ('3d June').

yet no scruple upon it. Barbier, the Diarist at Paris, some time after this, tells us of a gang of thieves there, who were regularly put to the torture; and 'they blabbed too, ils ont jasé,' says Barbier with official jocosity.[9]

Friedrich's Cabinet Order, we need not say, was greeted everywhere, at home and abroad, by three rounds of applause; —in which surely all of us still join; though the per-contra also is becoming visible to some of us, and our enthusiasm grows less complete than formerly. This was Friedrich's first step in Law-Reform, done on his fourth day of Kingship. A long career in that kind lies ahead of him; in reform of Law, civil as well as criminal, his efforts ended with life only. For his love of Justice was really great; and the mendacities and wiggeries, attached to such a necessary of life as Law, found no favour from him at any time.

Will have Philosophers about him, and a real Academy of Sciences.

To neglect the Philosophies, Fine Arts, interests of Human Culture, he is least of all likely. The idea of building up the Academy of Sciences to its pristine height, or far higher, is evidently one of those that have long lain in the Crown-Prince's mind, eager to realise themselves. Immortal Wolf, exiled but safe at Marburg, and refusing to return in Friedrich Wilhelm's time, had lately dedicated a Book to the Crown-Prince; indicating that perhaps, under a new Reign, he might be more persuadable. Friedrich makes haste to persuade; instructs the proper person, Reverend Herr Reinbeck, Head of the Consistorium at Berlin, to write and negotiate. 'All reasonable con-'ditions shall be granted' the immortal Wolf,—and Friedrich adds with his own hand as Postscript: 'I request you (Ihn) to 'use all diligence about Wolf. A man that seeks truth, and 'loves it, must be reckoned precious in any human society; and 'I think you will make a conquest in the realm of truth if you 'persuade Wolf hither again.'[10] This is of date June 6th; not yet a week since Friedrich came to be King. The Reinbeck-Wolf negotiation which ensued can be read in Büsching by the curious.[11] It represents to us a croaky, thrifty, long-headed old Herr Professor, in no haste to quit Marburg except for something better: "obliged to wear woollen shoes and leggings;" "bad at mounting stairs;" and otherwise needing soft treatment. Willing, though with caution, to work at an Academy of Sciences;—but dubious if the French are so admirable as they seem to themselves in such operations. Veteran Wolf, one dimly begins to learn, could himself build a German Academy of Sciences, to some purpose, if encouraged! This latter was probably the stone of stumbling in that direction. Veteran Wolf did not get to be President in the new Academy of Sciences; but was brought back, 'streets all in triumph,' to his old place at Halle; and there, with little other work that was heard of, but we hope in warm shoes and without much mounting of stairs, lived peaceably victorious the rest of his days.

[9] Barbier, Journal Historique du Règne de Louis XV (Paris, 1849), ii. 338 (date 'Dec. 1742'). [10] In Œuvres de Frédéric (xxvii. ii. 185), the Letter given.
[11] Büsching's Beyträge (§ Freyherr von Wolf), i. 63-137.

Friedrich's thoughts are not of a German home-built Academy, but of a French one: and for this he already knows a builder; has silently had him in his eye, these two years past,—Voltaire giving hint, in the Letter we once heard of at Loo. Builder shall be that sublime Maupertuis; scientific lion of Paris, ever since his feat in the Polar regions, and the charming Narrative he gave of it. "What a feat, what a book!" exclaimed the Parisian cultivated circles, male and female, on that occasion; and Maupertuis, with plenty of bluster in him carefully suppressed, assents in a grandly modest way. His Portraits are in the Printshops ever since; one very singular Portrait, just coming out (at which there is some laughing): a coarse-featured, blusterous, rather triumphant-looking man, blusterous, though finely complacent for the nonce; in copious dressing-gown and fur cap; comfortably squeezing the Earth and her meridians flat (as if he had done it), with his left hand; and with the other, and its outstretched finger, asking mankind, "Are not you aware, then?"—"Are not we!" answers Voltaire by and by, with endless waggeries upon him, though at present so reverent. Friedrich, in these same days, writes this Autograph; which who of men or lions could resist?

To Monsieur de Maupertuis, at Paris.

(No date;—dateable, June 1740.)

'My heart and my inclination excited in me, from the moment I 'mounted the throne, the desire of having you here, that you might 22d June 1740.

'put our Berlin Academy into the shape you alone are capable of giving 'it. Come, then, come and insert into this wild crabtree the graft of 'the Sciences, that it may bear fruit. You have shown the Figure of 'the Earth to mankind; show also to a King how sweet it is to pos- 'sess such a man as you.

'Monsieur de Maupertuis,—Votre très-affectionné

'FÉDÉRIC' (sic).[12]

This Letter,—how could Maupertuis prevent some accident in such a case?—got into the Newspapers; glorious for Friedrich, glorious for Maupertuis; and raised matters to a still higher pitch. Maupertuis is on the road, and we shall see him before long.

And Every One shall get to Heaven in his own Way.

Here is another little fact which had immense renown at home and abroad, in those summer months and long afterwards.

June 22d, 1740, the Geistliche Departement (Board of Religion, we may term it) reports that the Roman-Catholic Schools, which have been in use these eight years past, for children of soldiers belonging to that 'Royal Ordinance, 1732, to seducing Protestants into Catholicism;' annexed, or ready for annexing, 'is the specific Report of Fiscal-Ge- 'neral to this effect:'—upon which, what would it please his Majesty to direct us to do?

His Majesty writes on the margin these words, rough and ready, which we give with all their grammatical blotches on them; indicating a mind made-up on one subject, which was much more dubious then, to most other minds, than it now is:

'Die Religionen Müsen (müssen) alle Tollerirt (tolerirt) werden, und 'Mus (muss) der Fiscal nuhr (nur) das Auge darauf haben, das (dass) 'keine der andern abrug Tuhe (Abbruch thue), den (denn) hier mus '(muss) ein jeder nach seiner Fasson Selich (Façon selig) werden.'[13]

Which in English might run as follows:

'All Religions must be tolerated (Tollerated), and the Fiscal must 'have an eye that none of them make unjust encroachment on the 'other; for in this Country every man must get to Heaven in his own 'way.'

Wonderful words; precious to the then leading spirits, and which (the spelling and grammar being mended) flew abroad over all the world; the enlightened Public everywhere answering his Majesty, once more, with its loudest "Bravissimo!" on this occasion. With what enthusiasm of admiring wonder, it is now difficult to fancy, after the lapse of sixscore years! And indeed, in regard to all these worthy acts of Human Improvement which we are now concerned with, account should be held (were it possible) on Friedrich's behalf how extremely original, and bright with the splendour of new gold, they then were: and how extremely they are fallen dim, by general circulation, since that. Account should be held; and yet it is not possible, no human imagination is adequate to it, in the times we are now got into.

[12] Œuvres, xvii. 1. 335. The fantastic "Fédéric," instead of "Frédéric," is, by this time, the common signature to French Letters.

[13] Preuss, Thronbesteigung, p. 333; Rödenbeck, in die.

Free Press, and Newspapers the best Instructors.

Toleration, in Friedrich's spiritual circumstances, was perhaps no great feat to Friedrich: but what the reader hardly expected of him was Freedom of the Press, or an attempt that way! From England, from Holland, Friedrich had heard of Free Press, of Newspapers the best Instructors: it is a fact that he hastens to plant a seed of that kind at Berlin; sets about it 'on the second day of his reign,' so eager is he. Berlin had already some meagre Intelligenz-Blatt (Weekly or Thrice-Weekly Advertiser), perhaps two; but it is a real Newspaper, frondent with genial leafy speculation, and food for the mind, that Friedrich is intent upon: a "Literary-Political Newspaper," or were it even two Newspapers, one French, one German; and he rapidly makes the arrangements for it; dispatches Jordan, on the second day, to seek some fit Frenchman. Arrangements are soon made: a Bookselling Printer, Haude, Bookseller once to the Prince-Royal,—whom we saw once in a domestic flash-of-lightning long ago,[14]—is encouraged to proceed with the improved German article, Mercury or whatever they called it; vapid Formey, a facile pen, but not a forcible, is the Editor sought out by Jordan for the French one. And, in short, No. 1 of Formey shows itself in print within a month;[15] and Haude and he, Haude picking-up some grand Editor in Hamburg, do their best for the instruction of mankind.

In not many months, Formey, a facile and learned but rather vapid gentleman, demitted or was dismissed; and the Journals coalesced into one, or split into two again; and went I know not what road, or roads, in time coming,—none that led to results worth naming. Freedom of the Press, in the case of these Journals, was never violated, nor was any need for violating it. General Freedom of the Press Friedrich did not grant, in any quite Official or steady way; but in practice, under him, it always had a kind of real existence, though a fluctuating, ambiguous one. And we have to note, through Friedrich's whole reign, a marked disinclination to concern himself with Censorship, or the shackling of men's poor tongues and pens; nothing but some officious report that there was offence to Foreign Courts, or the chance of offence, in a poor man's pamphlet, could induce Friedrich to interfere with him or it,—and indeed his interference was generally against his Ministers for having wrong informed him, and in favour of the poor Pamphleteer appealing at the fountain-head.[16] To the end of his life, disgusting Satires against him, Vie Privée by Voltaire, Matinées du Roi de Prusse, and still worse Lies and Nonsenses, were freely sold at Berlin, and even bore to be printed there, Friedrich saying nothing, caring nothing. He has been known to burn pamphlets publicly,—one Pamphlet we shall ourselves see on fire yet;—but it was without the least hatred to them, and for official reasons merely. To the last, he would answer his reporting Ministers, "La presse est libre (Free press, you must consider)!"—grandly reluctant to meddle with the press, or go down upon the dogs barking at his door. Those ill effects of Free Press (first stage of the ill effects) he endured in this manner; but the good effects seem to have fallen below his expectation. Friedrich's enthusiasm for freedom of the press, prompt enough, as we see, never rose to the extreme pitch, and it rather sank than increased as he continued his experiences of men and things. This of Formey and the two Newspapers was the only express attempt he made in that direction; and it proved a rather disappointing one. The two Newspapers went their way thenceforth, Friedrich sometimes making use of them for small purposes, once or twice writing an article himself, of wildly quizzical nature, perhaps to be noticed by us when the time comes; but are otherwise, except for chronological purposes, of the last degree of insignificance to gods or men.

[14] Antè, Book vi. c. 7.

[15] '2d July 1740:' Preuss, Thronbesteigung, p. 330; and Formey, Souvenirs, i. 107, rectified by the exact Herr Preuss.

[16] Anonymous (Laveaux), Vie de Frédéric II, Roi de Prusse (Strasbourg, 1787), iv. 82. A worthless, now nearly forgotten Book; but competent on this point, if on any; Laveaux (a handy fellow, fugitive Ex-Monk with fugitive Ex-Nun attached) having lived much at Berlin, always in the pamphleteering line.

'Freedom of the Press,' says my melancholic Friend, 'is 'a noble thing; and in certain Nations, at certain epochs, pro-'duces glorious effects,—chiefly in the revolutionary line, where 'that has grown indispensable. Freedom of the Press is pos-'sible, where everybody disapproves the least abuse of it; 'where the "Censorship" is, as it were, exercised by all the 'world. When the world (as, even in the freest countries, it 'almost irresistibly tends to become) is no longer in a case to 'exercise that salutary function, and cannot keep-down loud 'unwise speaking, loud unwise persuasion, and rebuke it into 'silence whenever printed, Freedom of the Press will not ans-'wer very long, among sane human creatures: and indeed, 'in Nations not in an exceptional case, it becomes impossible 'amazingly soon!'—

All these are phenomena of Friedrich's first week. Let these suffice as sample, in that first kind. Splendid indications surely; and shot-forth in swift enough succession, flash following flash, upon an attentive world. Betokening, shall we say, what internal sea of splendour, struggling to disclose itself, probably lies in this young King; and how high his hopes go for mankind and himself? Yes, surely;—and introducing, we remark withal, the "New Era," of Philanthropy, Enlightenment and so much else; with French Revolution, and a 'world well suicided' hanging in the rear! Clearly enough, to this young ardent Friedrich, foremost man of his Time, and capable of doing its inarticulate or dumb aspirings, belongs that questionable honour; and a very singular one it would have seemed to Friedrich, had he lived to see what it meant!

Friedrich's rapidity and activity, in the first months of his reign, were wonderful to mankind; as indeed through life he continued to be a most rapid and active King. He flies about; mustering Troops, Ministerial Boards, passing Edicts, inspecting, accepting Homages of Provinces;—decides and does, every day that passes, an amazing number of things. Writes many Letters, too; finds moments even for some verses; and occasionally draws a snatch of melody from his flute.

His Letters are copiously preserved; but, as usual, they are in swift official tone, and tell us almost nothing. To his Sisters he writes assurances; to his friends, his Suhms, Duhans, Voltaires, eager invitations, general or particular, to come to him. 'My state has changed,' is his phrase to Voltaire and other dear intimates; a tone of pensiveness, at first even of sorrow and pathos traceable in it; "Come to me,"—and the tone, in an old dialect, different from Friedrich's, might have meant, "Pray for me." An immense new scene is opened, full of possibilities of good and bad. His hopes being great, his anxieties, the shadow of them, are proportionate. Duhan (his good old Tutor) does arrive, Algarotti arrives, warmly welcomed, both: with Voltaire there are difficulties; but surely he too will, before long, manage to arrive. The good Suhm, who had been Saxon Minister at Petersburg to his sorrow this long while back, got in motion soon enough; but, alas, his lungs were ruined by the Russian climate, and he did not arrive. Something pathetic still in those final Letters of Suhm. Passionately speeding on, like a spent steed struggling homeward; he has to pause at Warsaw, and in a few days dies there,—in a way mournful to Friedrich and us! To Duhan, and Duhan's children afterwards, he was punctually, not too lavishly, attentive; in like manner to Suhm's Nephews, whom the dying man had recommended to him.—We will now glance shortly at a second and contemporaneous phasis of Friedrich's affairs.

Intends to be Practical withal, and every inch a King.

Friedrich is far indeed from thinking to reduce his Army, as the Foreign Editor imagines. On the contrary, he is, with all industry, increasing it. He changed the Potsdam Giants into four regiments of the usual stature; he is busy bargaining with his Brother-in-law of Brunswick, and with other neighbours, for still new regiments;—makes up, within the next few months, Eight Regiments, an increase of, say, 16,000 men. It would appear he means to keep an eye on the practicalities withal; means to have a Fighting-Apparatus of the utmost potentiality, for one thing! Here are other indications.

We saw the Old Dessauer, in a sad hour lately, speaking beside the mark; and with what Olympian glance, suddenly tearless, the new King flashed out upon him, knowing nothing of "authority" that could reside in any Dessauer. Nor was that a solitary experience; the like befell wherever needed. Heinrich of Schwedt, the Ill Margraf, advancing with jocose countenance in the way of old comradeship, in those first days, met unexpected rebuff, and was reduced to gravity on the sudden: "Jetzt bin ich König,—My Cousin, I am now King!" a fact which the Ill Margraf could never get forgotten again. Lieutenant-General Schulenburg, too, the didactic Schulenburg, presuming on old familiarity, and willing to wipe-out the misfortune of having once condemned us to death, which nobody is now upbraiding him with, rushes up from Landsberg, unbidden, to pay his congratulations and condolences, driven by irresistible exuberance of loyalty: to his astonishment, he is reminded (thing certain, manner of the thing not known), That an Officer cannot quit his post without order; that he, at this moment, ought to be in Landsberg![17] Schulenburg has a hard old military face; but here is a young face too, which has grown unexpectedly rigorous. Fancy the blank look of little Schulenburg; the light of him snuffed-out in this manner on a sudden. It is said he had thoughts of resigning, so indignant was he: no doubt he went home to Landsberg gloomily reflective, with the pipeclay of his mind in such a ruinous condition. But there was no serious anger, on Friedrich's part; and he consoled his little Schulenburg soon after, by expediting some promotion he had intended him. "Terribly proud young Majesty this," exclaim the sweet voices. And indeed, if they are to have a Saturnian Kingdom, by appearance it will be on conditions only!

Anticipations there had been, that old unkindnesses against the Crown-Prince, some of which were cruel enough, might be remembered now: and certain people had their just fears, considering what account stood against them; others, vice versâ, their hopes. But neither the fears nor the hopes realised themselves; especially the fears proved altogether groundless. Derschau, who had voted Death in that Cöpenick Court-Martial, upon the Crown-Prince, is continued in his functions, in the light of his King's countenance, as if nothing such had been. Derschau, and all others so concerned; not the least question was made of them, nor of what they had thought or had done or said, on an occasion once so tragically vital to a certain man.

[17] Stenzel, iv. 41; Preuss, Thronbesteigung; &c.

Nor is reward much regulated by past services to the Crown-Prince, or even by sufferings endured for him. "Shocking ingratitude!" exclaim the sweet voices here too,—being of weak judgment, many of them! Poor Katte's Father, a faithful old Soldier, not capable of being more, he does, rather conspicuously, make Feldmarschall, make Reichsgraf; happy, could these honours be a consolation to the old man. The Münchows of Cüstrin,—readers remember their kindness in that sad time; how the young boy went into petticoats again, and came to the Crown-Prince's cell with all manner of furnishings,—the Münchows, father and sons, this young gentleman of the petticoats among them, he took immediate pains to reward by promotion: eldest son was advanced into the General Directorium; two younger sons, to Majorship, to Captaincy, in their respective Regiments; him of the petticoats 'he had already taken altogether to himself,'[18] and of him we shall see a glimpse at Wilhelmina's shortly, as a 'milkbeard (jeune morveux)' in personal attendance on his Majesty. This was a notable exception. And in effect there came good public service, eminent some of it, from these Münchows in their various departments. And it was at length perceived to have been, in the main, because they were of visible faculty for doing work that they had got work to do; and the exceptional case of the Münchows became confirmatory of the rule.

Lieutenant Keith, again, whom we once saw galloping from Wesel to save his life in that bad affair of the Crown-Prince's and his, was nothing like so fortunate. Lieutenant Keith, by speed on that Wesel occasion, and help of Chesterfield's Secretary, got across to England; got into the Portuguese service; and has there been soldiering, very silently, these ten years past,—skin and body safe, though his effigy was cut in four quarters and nailed to the gallows at Wesel;—waiting a time that would come. Time being come, Lieutenant Keith hastened home; appealed to his effigy on the gallows;—and was made a Lieutenant-Colonel merely, with some slight appendages, as that of Stallmeister (Curator of the Stables) and something else; income still straitened, though enough to live upon.[19] Small promotion, in comparison with hope, thought the poor Lieutenant; but had to rest satisfied with it; and struggle to understand that perhaps he was fit for nothing bigger, and that he must exert himself to do this small thing well. Hardness of heart in high places! Friedrich, one is glad to see, had not forgotten the poor fellow, could he have done better with him. Some ten years hence, quite incidentally, there came to Keith, one morning, a fine purse of money from his Majesty, one pretty gift in Keith's experience;—much the topic in Berlin, while a certain solemn English gentleman happened to be passing that way (whom we mean to detain a little by and by), who reports it for us with all the circumstances.[20]

[18] Preuss, i. 66.
[19] Preuss, Friedrich mit seinen Verwandten und Freunden, p. 281.

Lieutenant Spaen too had got into trouble for the Crown-Prince's sake, though we have forgotten him again; had 'admitted Katte to interviews,' or we forget what;—had sat his 'year in Spandau' in consequence; been dismissed the Prussian service, and had taken service with the Dutch. Lieutenant Spaen either did not return at all, or disliked the aspects when he did, and immediately withdrew to Holland again. Which probably was wise of him. At a late period, King Friedrich, then a great King, on one of his Cleve Journeys, fell in with Spaen; who had become a Dutch General of rank, and was of good manners and style of conversation: King Friedrich was charmed to see him; became his guest for the night; conversed delightfully with him, about old Prussian matters and about new; and in the colloquy never once alluded to that interesting passage in his young life and Spaen's.[21] Hard as polished steel! thinks Spaen perhaps; but, if candid, must ask himself withal, Are facts any softer, or the Laws of Kingship to a man that holds it?—Keith silently did his Lieutenant-Colonelcy with the appendages, while life lasted: of the Page Keith, his Brother, who indeed had blabbed upon the Prince, as we remember, and was not entitled to be clamorous, I never heard that there was any notice taken; and figure him to myself as walking with shouldered firelock, a private Fusileer, all his life afterwards, with many reflections on things bygone.[22]

Old friendship, it would seem, is without weight in public appointments here: old friends are somewhat astonished to find this friend of theirs a King every inch! To old comrades, if they were useless, much more if they were worse than useless, how disappointing! 'One wretched Herr' (name suppressed, but known at the time, and talked of, and whispered of), 'who 'had, like several others, hoping to rise that way, been indus- 'trious in encouraging the Crown-Prince's vices as to women, 'was so shocked at the return he now met, that in despair he 'hanged himself in Löbejün' (Löbegun, Magdeburg Country): here is a case for the humane!—[23]

[20] Sir Jonas Hanway, Travels, &c. (London, 1753), ii. 202. Date of the Gift is 1750.

[21] Nicolai, Anekdoten, vi. 178.

[22] These and the other Prussian Keiths are all of Scotch extraction; the Prussians, in natural German fashion, pronounce their name Kah-it (English "Kite" with nothing of the y in it), as may be worth remembering in a more important instance.

Friend Keyserling himself, "Cæsarion" that used to be, can get nothing, though we love him much; being an idle topsy-turvy fellow with revenues of his own. Jordan, with his fine-drawn wit, French logics, Literary Travels, thin exactitude; what can be done for Jordan? Him also his new Majesty loves much; and knows that, without some official living, poor Jordan has no resource. Jordan, after some waiting and survey, is made "Inspector of the Poor;"—busy this Autumn looking out for vacant houses, and arrangements for the thousand spinning women;—continues to be employed in mixed literary services (hunting-up of Formey, for Editor, was one instance), and to be in much real intimacy. That also was perhaps about the real amount of amiable Jordan. To get Jordan a living by planting him in some office which he could not do; to warm Jordan by burning our royal bed for him: that had not entered into the mind of Jordan's royal friend. The Münchows he did promote; the Finks, sons of his tutor Finkenstein: to these and other old comrades, in whom he had discovered fitness, it is no doubt abundantly grateful to him to recognise and employ it. As he notably does, in these and in other instances. But before all things he has decided to remember that he is King; that he must accept the severe laws of that trust, and do it, or not have done anything.

An inverse sign, pointing in the same way, is the passionate search he is making in Foreign Countries for such men as will suit him. In these same months, for example, he bethinks him of two Counts Schmettau, in the Austrian Service, with whom he had made acquaintance in the Rhine Campaign; of a Count von Rothenburg, whom he saw in the French Camp there; and is negotiating to have them if possible. The Schmettaus are Prussian by birth, though in Austrian Service; them he obtains under form of an Order home, with good conditions under it; they came, and proved useful men to him. Rothenburg, a shining kind of figure in Diplomacy as well as Soldiership, was Alsatian German, foreign to Prussia; but him too Friedrich obtained, and made much of, as will be notable by and by. And in fact the soul of all these noble tendencies in Friedrich, which surely are considerable, is even this, That he loves men of merit, and does not love men of none; that he has an endless appetite for men of merit, and feels, consciously and otherwise, that they are the one thing beautiful, the one thing needful to him.

[23] Küster, Characterzüge des &c. von Saldern (Berlin, 1793), p. 63.

This, which is the product of all fine tendencies, is likewise their centre or focus out of which they start again, with some chance of fulfilment;—and we may judge in how many directions Friedrich was willing to expand himself, by the multifarious kinds he was inviting, and negotiating for. Academicians, —and not Maupertuis only, but all manner of mathematical geniuses (Euler whom he got, 's Gravesande, Muschenbroek, whom he failed of); and Literary geniuses innumerable, first and last. Academicians, Musicians, Players, Dancers even; much more Soldiers and Civil-Service men: no man that carries any honest "Can do" about with him but may expect some welcome here. Which continued through Friedrich's reign; and involved him in much petty trouble, not always successful in the lower kinds of it. For his Court was the cynosure of ambitious creatures on the wing, or inclined for taking wing: like a lantern kindled in the darkness of the world;—and many owls impinged upon him; whom he had to dismiss with brevity.

Perhaps it had been better to stand by mere Prussian or German merit, native to the ground? Or rather, undoubtedly it had! In some departments, as in the military, the administrative, diplomatic, Friedrich was himself among the best of judges: but in various others he had mainly (mainly, by no means blindly or solely) to accept noise of reputation as evidence of merit; and in these, if we compute with rigour, his success was intrinsically not considerable. The more honour to him that he never wearied of trying. 'A man that does not care for merit,' says the adage, 'cannot himself have any.' But a King that does not care for merit, what shall we say of such a King!—

Behaviour to his Mother; to his Wife.

One other fine feature, significant of many, let us notice: his affection for his Mother. When his Mother addressed him as "Your Majesty," he answered, as the Books are careful to tell us: "Call me Son; that is the Title of all others most agreeable to me!" Words which, there can be no doubt, came from the heart. Fain would he shoot forth to greatness in filial piety, as otherwise; fain solace himself in doing something kind to his Mother. Generously, lovingly; though again with clear view of the limits. He decrees for her a Title higher than had been customary, as well as more accordant with his feelings; not "Queen Dowager," but "Her Majesty the Queen Mother." He decides to build her a new Palace; 'under the Lindens' it is to be, and of due magnificence: in a month or two, he had even got bits of the foundation dug, and the Houses to be pulled down bought or bargained for;[24]—which enterprise, however, was renounced, no doubt with consent, as the public aspects darkened. Nothing in the way of honour, in the way of real affection heartily felt and demonstrated, was wanting to Queen Sophie in her widowhood. But, on the other hand, of public influence no vestige was allowed, if any was ever claimed; and the good kind Mother lived in her Monbijou, the centre and summit of Berlin society; and restricted herself wisely to private matters. She has her domesticities, family affections, readings, speculations; gives evening parties at Monbijou. One glimpse of her in 1742 we get, that of a perfectly private royal Lady; which though it has little meaning, yet as it is authentic, coming from Büsching's hand, may serve as one little twinkle in that total darkness, and shall be left to the reader and his fancy:

A Count Henkel, a Thüringian gentleman, of high speculation, high pietistic ways, extremely devout, and given even to writing of religion, came to Berlin about some Silesian properties,—a man I should think of lofty melancholic aspect; and, in severe type, somewhat of a lion, on account of his Book called 'Deathbed Scenes, in four Volumes.' Came to Berlin; and on the 15th August 1742, towards evening (as the ever-punctual Büsching looking into Henkel's Papers gives it), 'was pre-'sented to the Queen Mother; who retained him to supper; supper not 'beginning till about ten o'clock. The Queen Mother was extremely [24] Rödenbeck, p. 15 (30th June—23d Aug. 1740); and correct Stenzel (iv. 44).

'gracious to Henkel; but investigated him a good deal, and put a great 'many questions,' not quite easy to answer in that circle, 'as, Why he 'did not play? What he thought of comedies and operas? What 'Preachers he was acquainted with in Berlin? Whether he too was a 'Writer of Books?' (covertly alluding to the Deathbed Scenes, notes Büsching). 'And abundance of other questioning. She also recounted 'many fantastic anecdotes (viel Abenteuerliches) about Count von Zinzen-'dorf' (Founder of Herrnhuth, far-shining spiritual Paladin of that day, whom her Majesty thinks rather a spiritual Quixote); 'and declared 'that they were strictly true.'[25] Upon which, exit Henkel, borne by Büsching, and our light is snuffed out.

This is one momentary glance I have met with of Queen Sophie in her Dowager state. The rest, though there were seventeen years of it in all, is silent to mankind and me; and only her death, and her Son's great grief about it, so great as to be surprising, is mentioned in the Books.

Actual painful sorrow about his Father, much more any new outburst of weeping and lamenting, is not on record, after that first morning. Time does its work; and in such a whirl of occupations, sooner than elsewhere: and the loved Dead lie silent in their mausoleum in our hearts,—serenely sad as Eternity, not in loud sorrow as of Time. Friedrich was pious as a Son, however he might be on other heads. To the last years of his life, as from the first days of his reign, it was evident in what honour he held Friedrich Wilhelm's memory; and the words "my Father," when they turned-up in discourse, had in that fine voice of his a tone which the observers noted. 'To 'his Mother he failed no day, when in Berlin, however busy, 'to make his visit; and he never spoke to her, except hat in 'hand.'

With his own Queen, Friedrich still consorts a good deal, in these first times; is with her at Charlottenburg, Berlin, Potsdam, Reinsberg, for a day or two, as occasion gives; sometimes at Reinsberg for weeks running, in the intervals of war and business: glad to be at rest amid his old pursuits, by the side of a kind innocent being familiar to him. So it lasts for a length of time. But these happy intervals, we can remark, grow rarer: whether the Lady's humour, as they became rarer, might not sink withal, and produce an acceleration in the rate of decline? She was thought to be capable of 'pouting (faire la fachée),' at one period! We are left to our guesses; there is not anywhere the smallest whisper to guide us. Deep silence reigns in all Prussian Books,—To feel or to suspect yourself neglected, and to become more amiable thereupon (in which course alone lies hope), is difficult for any Queen! Enough, we can observe these meetings, within two or three years, have become much rarer; and perhaps about the end of the third or fourth year, they altogether cease; and pass merely into the formal character. In which state they continued fixed, liable to no uncertainty; and were transacted, to the end of Friedrich's life, with inflexible regularity as the annual reviews were. This is a curious section of his life; which there will be other opportunities of noticing. But there is yet no thought of it anywhere, nor for years to come; though fables to the contrary were once current in Books.[26]

[25] Büsching's Beyträge, iv. 27.

No Change in his Father's Methods or Ministries.

In the old mode of Administration, in the Ministries, Government Boards, he made no change. These administrative methods of his wise Father's are admirable to Friedrich, who knows them well; and they continue to be so. These men of his Father's, them also Friedrich knows, and that they were well chosen. In methods or in men, he is inclined to make the minimum of alteration at present. One Finance Hofrath of a projecting turn, named Eckart, who had abused the last weak years of Friedrich Wilhelm, and much afflicted mankind by the favour he was in: this Eckart Friedrich appointed a commission to inquire into; found the public right in regard to Eckart, and dismissed him with ignominy, not with much other punishment. Minister Boden, on the contrary, high in the Finance Department, who had also been much grumbled at, Friedrich found to be a good man: and Friedrich not only retained Boden, but advanced him; and continued to make more and more use of him in time coming. His love of perfection in work done, his care of thrift, seemed almost greater than his late Father's had been,—to the disappointment of many. In the other Departments, Podewils, Thulmeyer and the rest went on as heretofore;—only in general with less to do, the young King doing more himself than had been usual. Valori, 'mon gros Valori (my fat Valori),' French Minister here, whom we shall know better, writes home of the new King of Prussia: 'He begins his government, as by all appearance he 'will carry it on, in a highly satisfactory way: everywhere 'traits of benevolence, sympathy for his subjects, respect shown 'to the memory of the Deceased,'[27]—no change made, where it evidently is not for the better.

[26] Laveaux; &c.

Friedrich's 'Three principal Secretaries of State,' as we should designate them, are very remarkable. Three Clerks he found, or had known of, somewhere in the Public Offices; and now took, under some advanced title, to be specially his own Private Clerks: three vigorous long-headed young fellows, 'Eichel, Schuhmacher, Lautensack' the obscure names of them;[28] out of whom, now and all along henceforth, he got immensities of work in that kind. They lasted all his life; and, of course, grew ever more expert at their function. Close, silent; exact as machinery: ever ready, from the smallest clear hint, marginal pencilmark, almost from a glance of the eye, to clothe the Royal Will in official form, with the due rugged clearness and thrift of words. 'Came punctually at four in the morning in summer, five in winter;' did daily the day's work; and kept their mouths well shut. A very notable Trio of men; serving his Majesty and the Prussian Nation as Principal Secretaries of State, on those cheap terms;—nay almost as Houses of Parliament with Standing Committees and appendages, so many Acts of Parliament admittedly rather wise, being passed daily by his Majesty's help and theirs!—Friedrich paid them rather well; they saw no society; lived wholly to their work, and to their own families. Eichel alone of the three was mentioned at all by mankind, and that obscurely; an 'abstruse, 'reserved, long-headed kind of man;' and 'made a great deal 'of money in the end,' insinuates Büsching,[29] no friend of Friedrich's or his.

In superficial respects, again, Friedrich finds that the Prussian King ought to have a King's Establishment, and maintain a decent splendour among his neighbours,—as is not quite the case at present. In this respect he does make changes. A certain quantity of new Pages, new Goldsticks; some considerable, not too considerable, new-furbishing of the Royal [27] Mémoires des Negociations du Marquis de Valori (à Paris, 1820), i. 20 ('June 13th, 1740'). A valuable Book, which we shall often have to quote: edited in a lamentably ignorant manner.

[28] Rödenbeck, 15th June 1740.

[29] Beyträge, v. 238, &c.

Household,—as it were, a fair coat of new paint, with gilding not profuse,—brought it to the right pitch for this King. About 'a hundred and fifty' new figures of the Page and Goldstick kind, is the reckoning given.[30] So many of these; and there is an increase of 16,000 to one's Army going on: that is the proportion noticeable. In the facts as his Father left them Friedrich persisted all his life; in the semblances or outer vestures he changed, to this extent for the present.—These are the Phenomena of Friedrich's Accession, noted by us.

Readers see there is radiance enough, perhaps slightly in excess, but of intrinsically good quality, in the Aurora of this new Reign. A brilliant valiant young King; much splendour of what we could call a golden or soft nature (visible in those 'New-Era' doings of his, in those strong affections to his Friends); and also, what we like almost better in him, something of a steel-bright or stellar splendour (meaning, clearness of eyesight, intrepidity, severe loyalty to fact),—which is a fine addition to the softer element, and will keep it and its philanthropies and magnanimities well under rule. Such a man is rare in this world; how extremely rare such a man born King! He is swift and he is persistent; sharply discerning, fearless to resolve and perform; carries his great endowments lightly, as if they were not heavy to him. He has known hard misery, been taught by stripes; a light stoicism sits gracefully on him.

"What he will grow to?" Probably to something considerable. Very certainly to something far short of his aspirations; far different from his own hopes; and the world's concerning him. It is not we, it is Father Time that does the controlling and fulfilling of our hopes; and strange work he makes of them and us. For example, has not Friedrich's grand 'New Era,' inaugurated by him in a week, with the leading spirits all adoring, issued since in French Revolution and a 'world well suicided,'—the leading spirits much thrown-out in consequence! New Era has gone to great lengths since Friedrich's time; and the leading spirits do not now adore it, but yawn over it, or worse! Which changes to us the then aspect of Friedrich, and his epoch and his aspirations, a good deal.—On the whole, Friedrich will go his way, Time and the leading spirits going theirs; and, like the rest of us, will grow to what he can. His actual size is not great among the Kingdoms: his outward resources are rather to be called small. The Prussian Dominion at that date is, in extent, about Four-fifths of an England Proper, and perhaps not one-fifth so fertile: subject Population is well under Two Millions and a Half; Revenue not much above One Million Sterling,[31]—very small, were not thrift such a vectigal.

[30] Helden-Geschichte, i. 353.

This young King is magnanimous; not much to be called ambitious, or not in the vulgar sense almost at all,—strange as it may sound to readers. His hopes at this time are many; —and among them, I perceive, there is not wanting secretly, in spite of his experiences, some hope that he himself may be a good deal "happier" than formerly. Nor is there any ascetic humour, on his part, to forbid trial. He is much determined to try. Probably enough, as we guess and gather, his agreeablest anticipations, at this time, were of Reinsberg: How, in the intervals of work well done, he would live there wholly to the Muses; have his chosen spirits round him, his colloquies, his suppers of the gods. Why not? There might be a King of Intellects conceivable withal; protecting, cherishing, practically guiding the chosen Illuminative Souls of this world. A new Charlemagne, the smallest new Charlemagne of Spiritual type, with his Paladins round him; how glorious, how salutary in the dim generations now going!—These too were hopes which proved signally futile. Rigorous Time could not grant these at all;—granted, in his own hard way, other things instead. But, all along, the Life-element, the Epoch, though Friedrich took it kindly and never complained, was ungenial to such a man.

'Somewhat of a rotten Epoch, this into which Friedrich has been 'born, to shape himself and his activities royal and other!' exclaims Smelfungus once: 'In an older earnest Time, when the eternally awful 'meanings of this Universe had not yet sunk into dubieties to any one, 'much less into levities or into mendacities, into huge hypocrisies carefully regulated,—so luminous, vivid and ingenuous a young creature 'had not wanted divine manna in his Pilgrimage through Life. Nor, 'in that case, had he come out of it in so lean a condition. But the 'highest man of us is born brother to his Contemporaries; struggle as [31] The exact statistic cipher is, at Friedrich's Accession: Prussian Territories, 2,275 square miles German (56,875 English); Population, 2,240,000; Annual Revenue, 7,371,707 thalers 7 groschen (1,105,756*l.* without the pence). See Preuss, Buch für Jedermann, i. 49; Stenzel, iii. 692; &c.

'he may, there is no escaping the family likeness. By spasmodic in-'dignant contradiction of them, by stupid compliance with them,—you 'will inversely resemble, if you do not directly; like the starling, you 'can't get out!—Most surely, if there do fall manna from Heaven, in 'the given Generation, and nourish in us reverence and genial noble-'ness day by day, it is blessed and well. Failing that, in regard to our 'poor spiritual interests, there is sure to be one of two results: mockery, 'contempt, disbelief, what we may call short-diet to the length of very 'famine (which was Friedrich's case); or else slow-poison, carefully 'elaborated and provided by way of daily nourishment.

'Unhappy souls, these same! The slow-poison has gone deep into 'them. Instead of manna, this long while back, they have been living 'on mouldy corrupt meats sweetened by sugar-of-lead;—or perhaps, 'like Voltaire, a few individuals prefer hunger, as the cleaner alterna-'tive; and in contemptuous, barren, mocking humour, not yet got the 'length of geniality or indignation, snuff the east-wind by way of spi-'ritual diet. Pilgriming along on such nourishment, the best human 'soul fails to become very ruddy!—Tidings about Heaven are fallen so 'uncertain, but the Earth and her joys are still interesting: "Take to 'the Earth and her joys;—let your soul go out, since it must; let your 'five senses and their appetites be well alive." That is a dreadful '"Sham-Christian Dispensation" to be born under! You wonder at 'the want of heroism in the Eighteenth Century. Wonder rather at 'the degree of heroism it had; wonder how many souls there still are 'to be met with in it of some effective capability, though dieting in 'that way,—nothing else to be had in the shops about. Carterets, 'Belleisles, Friedrichs, Voltaires; Chathams, Franklins, Choiseuls: 'there is an effective stroke of work, a fine fire of heroic pride, in this 'man and the other; not yet extinguished by spiritual famine or slow-'poison; so robust is Nature the mighty Mother!—

'But in general, that sad Gospel, "Souls extinct, Stomachs well 'alive!" is the credible one, not articulately preached, but practically 'believed by the abject generations, and acted on as it never was be-'fore. What immense sensualities there were, is known; and also (as 'some small offset, though that has not yet begun in 1740) what im-'mense quantities of Physical Labour and contrivance were got out of 'mankind, in that Epoch and down to this day. As if, having lost its 'Heaven, it had struck desperately down into the Earth; as if it were 'a beaver-kind, and not a mankind any more. We had once a Barba-'rossa; and a world all grandly true. But from that to Karl VI., and 'his Holy Romish Reich in such a state of "Holiness"—!'—I here cut-short my abstruse Friend.

Readers are impatient to have done with these miscellaneous preludings, and to be once definitely under way, such a Journey lying ahead. Yes, readers; a Journey indeed! And, at this point, permit me to warn you that, where the ground, where Dryasdust and the Destinies, yield anything humanly illustrative of Friedrich and his Work, one will have to linger, and carefully gather it, even as here. Large tracts occur, bestrewn with mere pedantisms, diplomatic cobwebberies, learned marine-stores, and inhuman matter, over which we shall have to skip emptyhanded: this also was among the sad conditions of our Enterprise, that it has to go now too slow and again too fast; not in proportion to natural importance of objects, but to several inferior considerations withal. So busy has perverse Destiny been on it; perverse Destiny, edacious Chance;—and the Dryasdusts, too, and Nightmares, in Prussia as elsewhere, we know how strong they are!

Friedrich's character in old age has doubtless its curious affinities, its disguised identities, with these prognostic features and indications of his youth: and to our readers,—if we do ever get them to the goal, of seeing Friedrich a little with their own eyes and judgments,—there may be pleasant contrasts and comparisons of that kind in store, one day. But the far commoner experience (which also has been my own),—here is Smelfungus's stern account of that:

'My friend, you will be luckier than I, if, after ten years, not to say, 'in a sense, twenty years, thirty years, of reading and rummaging in 'those sad Prussian Books, ancient and new (which often are laudably 'authentic, too, and exact as to details), you can gather any character 'whatever of Friedrich, in any period of his life, or conceive him as a 'Human Entity at all! It is strange, after such thousandfold writing, 'but it is true, his History is considerably unintelligible to mankind at 'this hour; left chaotic, enigmatic, in a good many points,—the mili-'tary part of it alone being brought to clearness, and rendered fairly 'conceivable and credible to those who will study. And as to the Man 'himself, or what his real Physiognomy can have been—!—Well, it 'must be owned few men were of such rapidity of face and aspect; so 'difficult to seize the features of. In his action, too, there was such 'rapidity, such secrecy, suddenness: a man that could not be read, 'even by the candid, except as in flashes of lightning. And then the 'anger of bystanders, *un*candid, who got hurt by him; the hasty ma-'levolences, the stupidities, the opacities: enough, in modern times, 'what is saying much, perhaps no man's motives, intentions, and pro-'cedure have been more belied, misunderstood, misrepresented, during 'his life. Nor, I think, since that, have many men fared worse, by the 'Limner or Biographic class, the favourable to him and the unfavour-'able; or been so smeared on and blotched ot, and reduced to a mere 'blur and dazzlement on crosslights, incoherences, incredibilities, in June-Sept. 1740.

'which nothing, not so much as a human nose, is clearly discernible 'by way of feature!'—Courage, reader, nevertheless; on the above terms let us march according to promise.

CHAPTER II.

THE HOMAGINGS.

YOUNG Friedrich, as his Father had done, considers it unnecessary to be crowned. Old Friedrich, first of the name, and of the King series, we did see crowned, with a pinch of snuff tempering the solemnities. That Coronation once well done suffices all his descendants hitherto. Such an expense of money,—of diluted mendacity too! Such haranguing, gesturing, symbolic fugling, all grown half-false:—avoid lying, even with your eyes, or knees, or the coat upon your back, so far as you easily can!

Nothing of Coronation: but it is thought needful to have the Huldigungen (Homagings) done, the Fealties sworn; and the young Majesty in due course goes about, or gives directions, now here now there, in his various Provinces, getting that accomplished. But even in that, Friedrich is by no means strait-laced or punctilious; does it commonly by Deputy: only in three places, Königsberg, Berlin, Cleve, does he appear in person. Mainly by deputy; and always with the minimum of fuss, and no haranguing that could be avoided. Nowhere are the old Stände (Provincial Parliaments) assembled, now or afterwards: sufficient for this and for every occasion are the "Permanent Committees of the Stände;" nor is much speaking, unessential for dispatch of business, used to these.

'Stände,—of Ritterschaft mainly, of Gentry small and great,—ex-'isted once in all those Countries, as elsewhere,' says one Historian; 'and some of them, in Preussen, for example, used to be rather loud, 'and inclined to turbulence, till the curb, from a judicious bridle-hand, 'would admonish them. But, for a long while past,—especially since 'the Great Elector's time, who got an "Excise Law" passed, or the 'foundations of a good Excise Law laid;[1] and, what with Excise, what 'with Domain-Farms, had a fixed Annual Budget, which he reckoned 'fair to both parties,—they have been dying out for want of work; 'and, under Friedrich Wilhelm, may be said to have gone quite dead. 'What work was left for them? Prussian Budget is fixed, many things 'are fixed: why talk of them farther? The Prussian King, nothing of [1] Preuss, iv. 432; and Thronbesteigung, pp. 379-383.

'a fool like certain others,'—which indeed is the cardinal point, though my Author does not say so,—'is respectfully aware of the facts round 'him; and can listen to the rumours too, so far as he finds good. The 'King sees himself terribly interested to get into the right course in all 'things, and avoid the wrong one! Probably he does, in his way, seek '"wise Advice concerning the arduous matters of the Kingdom;" nay 'I believe he is diligent to have it of the wisest:—who knows if Stände 'would always give it wiser; especially Stände in the haranguing con-'dition?'—Enough, they are not applied to. There is no Freedom in that Country. 'No Freedom to speak of,' continues he: 'but I do a 'little envy them their Fixed Budget, and some other things. What 'pleasure there can be in having your household arrangements tumbled 'into disorder every new Year, by a new-contrived scale of expenses 'for you, I never could ascertain!'—

Friedrich is not the man to awaken Parliamentary sleeping-dogs well settled by his Ancestors. Once or twice, out of Preussen, in Friedrich Wilhelm's time, there was heard some whimper, which sounded like the beginning of a bark. But Friedrich Wilhelm was on the alert for it: Are you coming in with your Nie Pozwalam (your Liberum Veto), then? None of your Polish vagaries here. 'Tout le pays sera ruiné (the whole Country will be ruined),' say you? (Such had been the poor Marshal or Provincial Speaker's Remonstrance on one occasion): 'I don't believe a word of that. But I do be-'lieve the Government by Junkers' (Country Squires) 'and Nie 'Pozwalam will be ruined,'—as it is fully meant to be! 'I 'am establishing the King's Sovereignty like a rock of bronze '(Ich stabilire die Souverainetät wie einen Rocher von Bronze),' some extremely strong kind of rock![2] This was one of Friedrich Wilhelm's marginalia in response to such a thing; and the mutinous whimper died out again. Parliamentary Assemblages are sometimes Collective Wisdoms, but by no means always so. In Magdeburg we remember what trouble Friedrich Wilhelm had with his unreasonable Ritters. Ritters there, in their assembled capacity, had the Reich behind them, and could not be dealt with like Preussen: but Friedrich Wilhelm, by wise slow methods, managed Magdeburg too, and reduced it to silence, or to words necessary for dispatch of business.

In each Province, a Permanent Committee,—chosen, I suppose, by King and Knights assenting; chosen I know not how, but admitted to be wisely chosen,—represents the once

[2] Förster, b. iii. (Urkundenbuch, i. 50); Preuss, iv. 420n. "Nie Pozwalam" (the formula of Liberum Veto) signifies "I Don't Permit!"

Parliament or Stände; and has its potency for doing good service in regard to all Provincial matters, from roads and bridges upwards, and is impotent to do the least harm. Roads and bridges, Church matters, repartition of the Land-dues, Army matters,—in fact they are an effective non-haranguing Parliament, to the King's Deputy in every such Province; well calculated to illuminate and forward his subaltern *Amt*men and him. Nay, we observe it is oftenest in the way of gifts and solacements that the King articulately communicates with these Committees or their Ritterschafts. Projects for draining of Bogs, for improved Highways, for better Husbandry; loans granted them, Loan-Banks established for the Province's behoof:—no need of parliamentary eloquence on such occasions, but of something far different.

It is from this quiescent, or busy but noiseless kind of Stände and Populations that Friedrich has his Huldigung to take;—and the operation, whether done personally or by deputy, must be an abundantly simple one. He, for his part, is fortunate enough to find everywhere the Sovereignty established; "rock of bronze" not the least shaken in his time. He will graciously undertake, by Written Act, which is read before the Stände, King or King's Deputy witnessing there, 'To maintain the privileges' of his Stände and Populations; the Stände answer, on oath, with lifted hand, and express invocation of Heaven, That they will obey him as true subjects: And so,—doubtless with something of dining superadded, but no whisper of it put on record,—the Huldigung will everywhere very quietly transact itself.

The Huldigung itself is nothing to us, even with Friedrich there,—as at Königsberg, Berlin, Cleve, the three exceptional places. To which, nevertheless, let us briefly attend him, for the sake of here and there some direct glimpse we may get of the then Friedrich's actual physiognomy and ways. Other direct view, or the chance of such, is not conceded us out of those sad Prussian Books; which are very full on this of the Huldigung, if silent on so many other points.[3]

Friedrich accepts the Homages, personally, in Three Places.

To Königsberg is his first excursion on this errand. Preussen has perhaps, or may be suspected of having, some remnants of sour humours left in it, and remembrances of Stände with haranguings and even mutinies: there if anywhere the King in person may do good on such an occasion. He left Berlin, July 7th, bound thitherward; here is Note of that first Royal Tour,—specimen of several hundreds such, which he had to do in the course of the next Forty-five years.

[3] Preuss, Thronbesteigung, p. 382.

'Friend Algarotti, charming talker, attended him; who else, official 'and non-official, ask not. The Journey is to be circuitous; to com- 'bine various businesses, and also to have its amusements. They went 'by Cüstrin; glancing at old known Country, which is at its greenest 'in this season. By Cüstrin, across the Neumark, into Pommern; after 'that by an intricate winding route; reviewing regiments, inspecting 'garrisons, now here now there; doing all manner of inspections; talk- 'ing I know not what; oftenest lodging with favoured Generals, if it 'suited. Distance to Königsberg, by the direct road, is about 500 miles; 'by this winding one, it must have been 800: Journey thither took nine 'days in all. Obliquely through Pommern, almost to the coast of the 'Baltic; their ultimatum there a place called Cöslin, where they re- 'viewed with strictness,—omitting Colberg, a small Sea-Fortress not 'far rearward, time being short. Thence into West-Preussen, into 'Polish Territory, and swiftly across that; keeping Dantzig and its 'noises wide enough to the left: one night in Poland; and the next 'they are in Ost-Preussen, place called Liebstadt,—again on home- 'ground, and diligently reviewing there.

'The review at Liebstadt is remarkable in this, That the regiments, 'one regiment especially, not being what was fit, a certain Grenadier- 'Captain got cashiered on the spot; and the old Commandant himself 'was soon after pensioned, and more gently sent his ways. So strict 'is his Majesty. Contrariwise, he found Lieutenant-General von Katte's 'Garrison, at Angerburg, next day, in a very high perfection; and 'Colonel Posadowsky's regiment specially so; with which latter gentle- 'man he lodged that night, and made him farther happy by the Order 'of Merit: Colonel Posadowsky, Garrison of Angerburg, far off in East- 'Preussen, Chevalier of the Order of Merit henceforth, if we ever meet 'him again. To the good old Lieutenant-General von Katte, who no 'doubt dined with them, his Majesty handed, on the same occasion, a 'Patent of Feldmarschall;—intends soon to make him Graf; and did 'it, as readers know. Both Colonel and General attended him thence- 'forth, still by a circuitous route, to Königsberg, to assist in the solem- 'nities there. By Gumbinnen, by Trakehnen,—the Stud of Trakehnen: 'that also his Majesty saw, and made review of; not without emotion, 'we can fancy, as the sleek colts were trotted out on those new terms! 'At Trakehnen, Katte and the Colonel would be his Majesty's guests, 'for the night they stayed. This is their extreme point eastward; 'Königsberg now lies a good way west of them. But at Trakehnen

'they turn; and, Saturday 16th July 1740, after another hundred miles 'or so, along the pleasant valley of the Pregel, get to Königsberg: 'ready to begin business on Monday morning,—on Sunday if neces-'sary.'[4]

On Sunday there did a kind of memorability occur: The Huldigungs-Predigt (Homage Sermon) by a Reverend Herr Quandt, chief Preacher there. Which would not be worth mentioning, except for this circumstance, that his Majesty exceedingly admired Quandt, and thought him a most Demosthenic genius, and the best of all the Germans. Quandt's text was in these words: 'Thine are we, David, and on thy side, thou Son 'of Jesse; Peace, peace be unto thee, and peace be to thine 'helpers; for thy God helpeth thee.'[5] Quandt began, in a sonorous voice, raising his face with respectful enthusiasm to the King, "Thine are we, O Friedrich, and on thy side, thou Son of Friedrich Wilhelm;" and so went on: sermon brief, sonorous, compact, and sticking close to its text. Friedrich stood immovable, gazing on the eloquent Demosthenic Quandt, with admiration heightened by surprise;—wrote of Quandt to Voltaire; and, with sustained enthusiasm, to the Public long afterwards; and to the end of his days was wont to make Quandt an exception, if perhaps almost the only one, from German barbarism, and disharmony of mind and tongue. So that poor Quandt cannot ever since get entirely forgotten, but needs always to be raked up again, for this reason when others have ceased; an almost melancholy adventure for poor Quandt and Another!—

The Huldigung was rather grand; Harangue and Counter-harangue permitted to the due length, and proper festivities following: but the Stände could not manage to get into vocal covenanting or deliberating at all; Friedrich before leaving Berlin had answered their hint or request that way, in these words: 'We are likewise graciously inclined to give to the 'said Stände, before their Homaging, the same assurance which 'they got from our Herr Father's Majesty, who is now with 'God,'—general assurance that their, and everybody's, 'Rights shall be maintained' (as we see they are),—'with which, it is 'hoped (hoffentlich), they will be content, and get to peace upon 'this matter (sich dabei beruhigen werden).'[6] It will be best for them!

[4] From Preuss, Thronbesteigung, pp. 382, 385; Rödenbeck, p. 16; &c.
[5] First Chronicles, xii. 18. [6] Preuss, Thronbesteigung, p. 380.

Friedrich gave away much corn here; that is, opened his Corn-Granaries, on charitable terms, and took all manner of measures, here as in other places, for relief of the scarcity there was. Of the illuminations, never so grand, the reader shall hear nothing. A 'Torch-Procession of the Students' turned out a pretty thing:—Students marching with torches, with fine wind-music, regulated enthusiasm, fine succinct address to his Majesty; and all the world escorting, with its "Live Forever!" Friedrich gave the Students 'a Trink-Gelag (Banquet of Liquors),' how arranged I do not know: and to the Speaker of the Address, a likely young gentleman with Von to his name, he offered an Ensigncy of Foot ('in Camas's Fusileer Regiment,'—Camas now gone to Paris, embassying), which was joyfully accepted. Joyfully accepted;—and it turned out well for all parties; the young gentleman having risen, where merit was the rule of rising, and become Graf and Lieutenant-General, in the course of the next fifty years.[7]

Huldigung and Torch-Procession over, the Royal Party dashed rapidly off, next morning (21st July), homewards by the shortest route; and, in three days more, by Frankfurt-on-Oder (where a glimpse of General Schwerin, a favourite General, was to be had), were safe in Berlin; received with acclamation, nay with 'blessings and even tears' some say, after this pleasant Fortnight's Tour. General Schwerin, it is rumoured, will be made Feldmarschall straightway, the Münchows are getting so promoted as we said; edicts are coming out, much business speeding forward, and the tongues of men keep wagging.

Berlin Huldigung,—and indeed, by Deputy, that of nearly all the other Towns,—was on Tuesday August 2d. At Berlin his Majesty was present in the matter: but, except the gazing multitudes, and hussar regiments, ranked in the Schloss-Platz and streets adjoining, there was little of notable in it; the upholstery arrangements thrifty in the extreme. His Majesty is prone to thrift in this of the Huldigung, as would appear; perhaps regarding the affair as scenic merely. Here, besides this of Berlin, is another instance just occurring. It appears, the Quedlinburg people, shut out from the light of the actual Royal Countenance, cannot do their Homaging by Deputy, without at least a Portrait of the King and of the Queen: How manage? asks the Official Person. "Have a couple of Daubs done in Berlin, three guineas apiece; send them these," answers the King![8]

[7] Preuss, Thronbesteigung, p. 387.

Here in the Berlin Schloss, scene the Large Hall within doors, there is a 'platform raised three steps; and on this, 'by way of a kind of throne, an armchair covered with old 'black velvet;' the whole surmounted by a canopy also of old black velvet: not a sublime piece of upholstery; but reckoned adequate. Friedrich mounted the three steps; stood before the old chair, his Princes standing promiscuously behind it; his Ritters in quantity, in front and to right and left, on the floor. Some Minister of the Interior explains suitably, not at too great length, what they are met for; some junior Official, junior but of quality, responded briefly, for himself and his order, to the effect, "Yea, truly:" the Huldigungs-Urkunde (Deed of Homage) was then read by the proper Clerk, and the Ritters all swore; audibly, with lifted hands. This is the Ritter Huldigung.

His Majesty then steps out to the Balcony, for Oath and Homage of the general Population. General population gave its oath, and 'three great shouts over and above.' "Es lebe der König!" thrice, with all their throats. Upon which a shower of Medals, "Homage-Medals," gold and silver (quantity not mentioned) rained down upon them, in due succession; and were scrambled for, in the usual way. 'His Majesty,' they write, and this is perhaps the one point worth notice, 'his 'Majesty, contrary to custom and to etiquette, remained on the 'Balcony, some time after the ceremony, perhaps a full half-'hour;'—silent there, 'with his look fixed attentively on the 'immeasurable multitude before the Schloss; and seemed sunk 'in deep reflection (Betrachtung):'—an almost awfully eloquent though inarticulate phenomenon to his Majesty, that of those multitudes scrambling and huzzahing there![9]

These, with the Cleve one, are all the Homagings Friedrich was personally present at; the others he did by Deputy, all in one day (2d August); and without fuss. Scenic matters these; in which, except where he can, as in the Königs-

[8] 'On doit faire barbouiller de mauvaises copies à Berlin, la pièce à 20 écus.—Fr.' Preuss, ii. (Urkundenbuch, s. 222).
[9] Preuss, Thronbesteigung, p. 389.

berg case, combine inspections and grave businesses with them, he takes no interest. However, he is now, for the sake chiefly of inspections and other real objects, bent on a Journey to Cleve;—the fellow of that to Königsberg: Königsberg, Preussen, the easternmost outlying wing of his long straggling Dominions; and then Cleve-Jülich, its counterpart on the south-western side,—there also, with such contingencies hanging over Cleve-Jülich, it were proper to make some mustering of the Frontier garrisons and affairs.[10] His Majesty so purposes: and we purpose again to accompany,—not for inspection and mustering, but for an unexpected reason. The grave Journey to Cleve has an appendage, or comic side-piece, hanging to it; more than one appendage; which the reader must not miss!—Before setting out, read these two Fractions, snatched from the Diplomatist Wastebag; looking well, we gain there some momentary view of Friedrich on the business side. Of Friedrich, and also of Another:

Sunday 14th August 1740, Dickens, who has been reporting hitherto in a favourable, though in a languid exoteric manner, not being in any height of favour, England or he,—had express Audience of his Majesty; being summoned out to Potsdam for that end: 'Sunday evening, about 7 P.M.,'—Majesty intending to be off on the Cleve Journey tomorrow. Let us accompany Dickens. Readers may remember, George II. has been at Hanover for some weeks past; Bielfeld diligently grinning euphemisms and courtly graciosities to him; Truchsess hinting, on opportunity, that there are perhaps weighty businesses in the rear; which, however, on the Britannic side, seem loath to start. Britannic Majesty is much at a loss about his Spanish War, so dangerous for kindling France and the whole world upon him. In regard to which Prussia might be so important, for or against.—This, in compressed form, is what Dickens witnesses at Potsdam that Sunday evening from 7 P.M.:

'Audience lasted above an hour: King turned directly upon busi'ness; wishes to have "Categorical Answers" as to Three Points al'ready submitted to his Britannic Majesty's consideration. Clear footing 'indispensable between us. What you want of me? say it, and be 'plain. What I want of you is, These three things:

'1°. Guarantee for Jülich and Berg. All the world knows whose
'these Duchies are. Will his Britannic Majesty guarantee me there?
'And if so, How, and to what lengths, will he proceed about it?

'2°. Settlement about Ost-Friesland. Expectancy of Ost-Friesland,
'soon to fall heirless, which was granted me long since, though Hanover [10] In regard to the Day of Huldigung at Cleve, which happily is not of the least moment to us, Preuss (Thronbesteigung, p. 390) and Helden-Geschichte (i. 423) seem to be in flat contradiction.

14th Aug. 1740.

'makes hagglings, counter-claimings: I must have some Settlement 'about that.

'3°. The like about those perplexities in Mecklenburg. No diffi- 'culty there if we try heartily, nor is there such pressing haste about it.

'These are my three claims on England; and I will try to serve 'England as far in return, if it will tell me how. "Ah, beware of 'throwing yourself into the arms of France!" modestly suggests Dickens. '—"Well, if France will guarantee me those Duchies, and you will 'not do anything?" answers his Majesty with a fine laugh: "England 'I consider my most natural friend and ally; but I must know what 'there is to depend on there. Princes are ruled by their interest; can- 'not follow their feelings. Let me have an explicit answer; say, at 'Wesel, where I am to be on the 24th,"'—ten days hence. Britannic Majesty is at Hanover, and can answer within that time. 'This he 'twice told me, "Wesel, 24th," in the course of our interview. Permit 'me to recommend the matter to your Lordship,'—my Lord Harrington, now attending the Britannic Majesty.

'During the whole audience,' adds Dickens, 'the King was in ex- 'treme good humour; and not only heard with attention all the con- 'siderations I offered, but was not the least offended at any objections 'I made to what he said. It is undoubtedly the best way to behave 'with frankness to him.' These last are Dickens's own words; let them modestly be a memorandum to your Lordship. This King goes himself direct to the point; and straightforwardness, as a primary condition, will profit your Lordship with him.[11]

Most true advice, this;—and would perhaps be followed, were it quite easy! But things are very complicated. And the Britannic Majesty, much plagued with Spanish War and Parliamentary noises in that unquiet Island, is doubtless glad to get away to Hanover for a little; and would fain be on holiday in these fine rural months. Which is not well possible either. Jenkins's Ear, rising at last like a fiery portent, has kindled the London Fog over yonder, in a strange way, and the murky stagnancy is all getting on fire; the English intent, as seldom any Nation was, to give the Spaniards an effectual beating. Which they hope they can,—though unexpected difficulties will occur. And, in the mean while, what a riddle of potentialities for his poor Majesty to read, and pick his way from!—

Bielfeld, in spite of all this, would fain be full of admiration for the Britannic Majesty. Confesses he is below the middle size, in fact a tiny little creature, but then his shape is perfect; leg much to be commended, —which his Majesty knows, standing always with one leg slightly advanced, and the Order of the Garter on it, that mankind may take notice. Here is Bielfeld's description faithfully abridged:

'Big blue eyes, perhaps rather of parboiled character, though proud 'enough; eyes flush with his face or more, rather in relief than on a 'level with it,'—à fleur de tête, after the manner of a fish, if one might say so, and betokening such an intellect behind them! 'Attitude con'strained, leg advanced in that way; his courtiers call it majestic.

[11] Dickens (in State-Paper Office), 17th August 1740.

'Biggish mouth, strictly shut in the crescent or horseshoe form (fermée
'en croissant); curly wig (à nœuds, reminding you of lamb's-wool, 'colour not known); eyebrows, however, you can see are ashy-blond;
'general tint is fundamentally livid; but when in good case, the royal
'skin will take tolerably bright colours (prend d'assez belles couleurs).
'As to the royal mind and understanding, what shall Bielfeld say?
'That his Majesty sometimes makes ingenious and just remarks, and is 'laudably serious at all times, and can majestically hold his tongue,
'and stand with advanced leg, and eyes rather more than flush. Sense
'of his dignity is high, as it ought to be; on great occasions you see 'pride and a kind of joy mantling in the royal countenance. Has been 'known to make explosions, and to be very furious to Prince Fred and 'others, when pricked into:—but, my friend, what mortal is exempt
'from failings? Majesty reads the English Newspapers every morning
'in bed, which are often biting. Majesty has his Walmoden, a Hano'verian Improper-Female, Countess of Yarmouth so-called; quiet,
'autumnal, fair-complexioned, stupid; who is much a comfort to him.
'She keeps out of mischief, political or other; and gives Bielfeld a 'gracious nod now and then.'[12] Harrington is here too;—and Britannic Majesty and he are busy governing the English Nation on these terms. —We return now to the Prussian Majesty.

About six weeks after that of Dickens,—Cleve Journey and much else now ended,—Prätorius the Danish Envoy, whom we slightly knew at Reinsberg once, gives this testimony; writing home to an Excellency at Copenhagen, whose name we need not inquire into:

'To give your Excellency a just idea of the new Government here,
'I must observe that hitherto the King of Prussia does as it were every'thing himself; and that, excepting the Finance Minister von Boden,
'who preaches frugality, and finds for that doctrine uncommon accept'ance, almost greater even than in the former reign, his Majesty allows
'no counselling from any Minister; so that Herr von Podewils, who is 'now the working hand in the department of Foreign Affairs, has no'thing given him to do but to expedite the orders he receives from the 'Cabinet, his advice not being asked upon any matter; and so it is 'with the other Ministers. People thought the loss of Herr von Thul-
'meyer,' veteran Foreign Minister whom we have transiently heard of in the Double-Marriage time, and perhaps have even seen at London or elsewhere,[13] 'would be irreparable; so expert was he, and a living
'archive in that business: however, his post seems to have vanished 'with himself. His salary is divided between Herr von Podewils,' whom the reader will sometimes hear of again, 'Kriegsrath (Councillor of War) von Ilgen,' son of the old gentleman we used to know, 'and 'Hofrath Sellentin who is Rendant of the Legations-Kasse' (Ambassadors' Paymaster, we could guess, Ambassador Body having specialty of cash assigned it, comparable with the specialty of value received from it, in this strict frugal Country),—neither of which two latter names shall the reader be troubled with farther. 'A good many resolutions, 'and responses by the King, I have seen: they combine laconic ex-'pression with an admirable business eye (Geschäftsblick). Unhappily,' —at least for us in the Diplomatic line, for your Excellency and me unhappily,—'there is nobody about the King who possesses his complete 'confidence, or whom we can make use of in regard to the necessary 'introductions and preliminary movements. Hereby it comes that,— 'as certain things can only be handled with cautious foresight and cir-'cumlocution, and in the way of beginning wide,—an Ambassador here 'is more thrown out of his course than in any other Court: and knows 'not, though his object were steadily in sight, what road to strike into 'for getting towards it.'[14]

[12] Bielfeld, i. 158.

[13] Died 4th August (Rödenbeck, p. 20).

CHAPTER III.

FRIEDRICH MAKES AN EXCURSION, NOT OF DIRECT SORT, INTO THE CLEVE COUNTRIES.

KING Friedrich did not quite keep his day at Wesel; indeed this 24th was not the first day, but the last of several, he had appointed to himself for finis to that Journey in the Cleve Countries; Journey rather complex to arrange. He has several businesses ahead in those parts; and, as usual, will group them with good judgment, and thrift of time. Not inspections merely, but amusements, meetings with friends, especially French friends: the question is, how to group them with skill, so that the necessary elements may converge at the right moment, and one shot kill three or four birds. This is Friedrich's fine way, perceptible in all these Journeys. The French friends, flying each on his own track, with his own load of impediments, Voltaire with his Madame for instance, are a difficult element in such problem; and there has been, and is, much scheming and corresponding about it, within the last month especially.

Voltaire is now at Brussels with his Du Châtelet, prosecuting that endless 'lawsuit with the House of Honsbruck,'—which he, and we, are both desirous to have done with. He is at the Hague, too, now and then; printing, about to print, [14] Preuss, Thronbesteigung, p. 377 (2d October 1740).

the Anti-Macchiavel; corresponding, to right and left, quarrelling with Van Duren the Printer; lives, while there, in the Vieille Cour, in the vast dusky rooms with faded gilding, and grand old Bookshelves 'with the biggest spider-webs in Europe.' Brussels is his place for Law-Consultations, general family residence; the Hague and that old spider-web Palace for correcting Proofsheets; doing one's own private studies, which we never quite neglect. Fain would Friedrich see him, fain he Friedrich; but there is a divine Emilie, there is a Maupertuis, there are—In short, never were such difficulties, in the cooking of an egg with water boiling; and much vain correspondence has already been on that subject, as on others equally extinct. Correspondence which is not pleasant reading at this time; the rather as no reader can, without endless searching, even understand it. Correspondence left to us, not in the cosmic, elucidated or legible state; left mainly as the Editorial rubbish-wagons chose to shoot it; like a tumbled quarry, like the ruins of a sacked city;—avoidable by readers who are not forced into it![1] Take the following select bricks as sample, which are of some use; the general Heading is,

King Friedrich to M. de Voltaire (at the Hague, or at Brussels).

'Charlottenburg, 12th June 1740.—* * My dear Voltaire, resist no 'longer the eagerness I have to see you. Do in my favour whatever 'your humanity allows. In the end of August I go to Wesel, and per-'haps farther. Promise that you will come and join me; for I could 'not live happy, nor die tranquil, without having embraced you! Thou-'sand compliments to the Marquise,' divine Emilie. 'I am busy with 'both hands' (Corn-Magazines, Free Press, Abolition of Torture, and much else); 'working at the Army with the one hand, at the People 'and the Fine Arts with the other.'

'Berlin, 5th August 1740.—* * I will write to Madame du Châtelet, 'in compliance with your wish:' mark it, reader. 'To speak to you 'frankly concerning her journey, it is Voltaire, it is you, it is my Friend 'that I desire to see; and the divine Emilie with all her divinity is only 'the Accessory of the Apollo Newtonised.

'I cannot yet say whether I shall travel' (incognito into foreign parts a little) 'or not travel;' there have been rumours, perhaps private wishes; but—* * 'Adieu, dear friend; sublime spirit, first-born of thinking

[1] Herr Preuss's edition (Œuvres de Frédéric, voll. xxi. xxii. xxiii.) has come out since the above was written: it is agreeably exceptional; being, for the first time, correctly printed, and the editor himself having mostly understood it,—though the reader still cannot, on the terms there allowed.

'beings. Love me always sincerely, and be persuaded that none can 'love and esteem you more than I. Vale. FÉDÉRIC.'

'Berlin, 6th August' (which is next day).—'You will have received 'a Letter from me dated yesterday; this is the second I write to you 'from Berlin; I refer you to what was in the other. If it must be '(faut) that Emilie accompany Apollo, I consent; but if I could see 'you alone, that is what I would prefer. I should be too much dazzled; 'I could not stand so much splendour all at once; it would overpower 'me. I should need the veil of Moses to temper the united radiance of 'your two divinities.' * * In short, don't bring her, if you please.

'Remusberg' (poetic for Reinsberg), '8th August 1740.—* * My 'dear Voltaire, I do believe Van Duren costs you more trouble and 'pains than you had with Henri Quatre. In versifying the Life of a 'Hero, you wrote the history of your own thoughts; but in coercing a 'scoundrel you fence with an enemy who is not worthy of you.' To punish him, and cut-short his profits, 'print, then, as you wish' (your own edition of the Anti-Macchiavel, to go along with his, and trip the feet from it). 'Faites rouler la presse; erase, change, correct; do as 'you see best; your judgment about it shall be mine.'—'In eight days I 'leave for'—(where thinks the reader? 'Dantzig' deliberately print all the Editors, careful Preuss among them; overturning the terrestrial azimuths for us, and making day night!)—'for Leipzig, and reckon on 'being at Frankfurt on the 22d. In case you could be there, I expect, 'on my passage, to give you lodging! At Cleve or in Holland, I de-'pend for certain on embracing you.'[2]

Intrinsically the Friedrich correspondence at this time, with Voltaire especially, among many friends now on the wing towards Berlin and sending letters, has,—if you are forced into struggling for some understanding of it, and do get to read parts of it with the eyes of Friedrich and Voltaire,—has a certain amiability; and is nothing like so waste and dreary as it looks in the chaotic or sacked-city condition. Friedrich writes with brevity, oftenest on practicalities (the Anti-Macchiavel, the coming Interview, and the like), evidently no time to spare; writes always with considerable sincerity; with friendliness, much admiration, and an ingenuous vivacity, to M. de Voltaire. Voltaire, at his leisure in Brussels or the Old-Palace and its spiderwebs, writes much more expansively; not with insincerity, he either;—with endless airy graciosities, and ingenious twirls, and touches of flattering unction, which latter, he is aware, must not be laid-on too thick. As thus:

2 Preuss, Œuvres de Frédéric, xx. pp. 5, 19-21; Voltaire, Œuvres, lxxii. 226, &c. (not worth citing, in comparison).

In regard to the Anti-Macchiavel,—Sire, deign to give me your permissions as to the scoundrel of a Van Duren; well worth while, Sire,—'it is a monument for the latest posterity; the only Book worthy of a King for these Fifteen hundred years.'

This is a strongish trowelful, thrown on direct, with adroitness; and even this has a kind of sincerity. Safer, however, to do it in the oblique or reflex way,—by Ambassador Camas, for example:

'I will tell you boldly, Sir' (you M. de Camas), 'I put more value 'on this Book (Anti-Macchiavel) than on the Emperor Julian's Cæsar, 'or on the Maxims of Marcus Aurelius,'—I do indeed, having a kind of property in it withal![3]

In fact, Voltaire too is beautiful, in this part of the Correspondence; but much in a twitter,—the Queen of Sheba, not the sedate Solomon, in prospect of what is coming. He plumes himself a little, we perceive, to his d'Argentals and French Correspondents, on this sublime intercourse he has got into with a Crowned Head, the cynosure of mankind:—Perhaps even you, my best friend, did not quite know me, and what merits I had! Plumes himself a little; but studies to be modest withal; has not much of the peacock, and of the turkey has nothing, to his old friends. All which is very naïve and transparent; natural and even pretty, on the part of M. de Voltaire as the weaker vessel.—For the rest, it is certain Maupertuis is getting under way at Paris towards the Cleve rendezvous. Brussels, too, is so near these Cleve Countries; within two-days good driving:—if only the times and routes would rightly intersect?

Friedrich's intention is by no means for a straight journey towards Cleve: he intends for Baireuth first, then back from Baireuth to Cleve,—making a huge southward elbow on the map, with Baireuth for apex or turning-point:—in this manner he will make the times suit, and have a convergence at Cleve. To Baireuth;—who knows if not farther? All summer there has gone fitfully a rumour, that he wished to see France; perhaps Paris itself incognito? The rumour, which was heard even at Petersburg,[4] is now sunk dead again; but privately, there is no doubt, a glimpse of the sublime French Nation would be welcome to Friedrich. He could never get to Travelling in his young time; missed his Grand Tour altogether, much as he wished it; and he is capable of pranks!—Enough, on Monday morning, 15th August 1740,[5] Friedrich and Suite leave Potsdam, early enough: go, by Leipzig, by the route already known to readers, through Coburg and the Voigtland regions; Wilhelmina has got warning, sits eagerly expecting her Brother in the Hermitage at Baireuth, gladdest of shrill sisters; and full of anxieties how her Brother would now be. The travelling party consisted, besides the King, of seven persons: Prince August Wilhelm, King's next Brother, Heir-apparent if there come no children, now a brisk youth of eighteen; Leopold Prince of Anhalt-Dessau, Old Dessauer's eldest, what we may call the "Young Dessauer;" Colonel von Borck, whom we shall hear of again; Colonel von Stille, already heard of (grave men of fifty, these two); milk-beard Münchow, an Adjutant, youngest of the promoted Münchows; Algarotti, indispensable for talk; and Fredersdorf, the House-Steward and domestic Factotum, once private in Schwerin's Regiment, whom Bielfeld so admired at Reinsberg, foreseeing what he would come to. One of Friedrich's late acts was to give Factotum Fredersdorf an Estate of Land (small enough, I fancy, but with country-house on it) for solace to the leisure of so useful a man,—studious of chemistry too, as I have heard. Seven in all, besides the King.[6] Direct towards Baireuth, incognito, and at the top of their speed. Wednesday 17th, they actually arrive. Poor Wilhelmina, she finds her Brother changed; become a King in fact, and sternly solitary; alone in soul, even as a King must be![7]—

[3] Voltaire, Œuvres, lxxii. 280 (To Camas, 18th October 1740).
[4] Raumer's Beiträge (English Translation, London, 1837), p. 15 (Finch's Despatch, 24th June 1740).

15th Aug. 1740.

'Algarotti, one of the first beaux-esprits of this age,' as Wilhelmina defines him,—Friend Algarotti, the young Venetian gentleman of elegance, in dusky skin, in very white linen and frills, with his fervid black eyes, 'does the expenses of the conversation.' He is full of elegant logic, has speculations on the great world and the little, on Nature, Art, Papistry, Anti-Papistry, and takes up the Opera in an earnest manner, as capable of being a school of virtue and the moral sublime. His respectable Books on the Opera and other topics are now all forgotten, and crave not to be mentioned. To me he is not supremely beautiful, though much the gentleman in manners as in ruffles, and ingeniously logical:—rather yellow to me, in mind as in skin, and with a taint of obsolete Venetian Macassar. But to Friedrich he is thrice-dear; who loves the sharp facetted cut of the man, and does not object to his yellow or Extinct-Macassar qualities of mind. Thanks to that wandering Baltimore for picking-up such a jewel and carrying him Northward! Algarotti himself likes the North: here in our hardy climates,—especially at Berlin, and were his loved Friedrich not a King,—Algarotti could be very happy in the liberty allowed. At London, where there is no King, or none to speak of, and plenty of free Intelligences, Carterets, Lyttletons, young Pitts and the like, he is also well, were it not for the horrid smoke upon one's linen, and the little or no French of those proud Islanders.

[5] Rödenbeck, p. 15, slightly in error: see Dickens's Interview, suprà, p. 37.
[6] Ib. p. 19 (and for Chamberlain Fredersdorf's estate, p. 15).
[7] Wilhelmina, ii. 322, 323.

Wilhelmina seems to like him here; is glad, at any rate, that he does the costs of conversation, better or worse. In the rest is no hope. Stille, Borck are accomplished military gentlemen; but of tacit nature, reflective, practical, rather than discursive, and do not waste themselves by incontinence of tongue. Stille, by his military Commentaries, which are still known to soldiers that read, maintains some lasting remembrance of himself: Borck we shall see engaged in a small bit of business before long. As to Münchow, the jeune morveux of an Adjutant, he, though his manners are well enough, and he wears military plumes in his hat, is still an unfledged young creature, 'bill still yellow,' so to speak;—and marks himself chiefly by a visible hankering after that troublesome creature Marwitz, who is always coquetting. Friedrich's conversation, especially to me Wilhelmina, seems 'guindé, set on stilts,' likewise there are frequent cuts of banter in him; and it is painfully evident he distinguishes my Sister of Anspach and her foolish Husband, whom he has invited over hither in a most eager manner, beyond what a poor Wilhelmina with her old love can pretend to. Patience, my shrill Princess, Beauty of Baireuth and the world; let us hope all will come right again! My shrill Princess,—who has a melodious strength like that of war-fifes, too,—knows how to be patient; and veils many things, though of a highly unhypocritical nature.

These were Three great Days at Baireuth; Wilhelmina is to come soon, and return the visit at Berlin. To wait upon the King, known though incognito, 'the Bishop of Bamberg' came driving over:[8] Schönborn, Austrian Kanzler, or who? His old City we once saw (and plenty of hanged malefactors swinging round it, during that Journey to the Reich);—but the Bishop himself never to our knowledge, Bishop being absent then. I hope it is the same Bishop of Bamberg whom a Friend of Büsching's, touring there about that same time, saw dining in a very extraordinary manner, with mediæval trumpeters, 'with waiters in spurs and buff-belts:'[9] if it is not, I have not the slightest shadow of acquaintance with him,—there have been so many Bishops of Bamberg with whom one wishes to have none! On the third day Friedrich and his company went away, towards Würzburg; and Wilhelmina was left alone with her reflections. 'I had had so much to say to him; I had got no-'thing said at all:' alas, it is ever so. 'The King was so 'changed, grown so much bigger (grandi), you could not have 'known him again;' stands finely erect and at full breadth, every inch a King; his very stature, you would say, increased. —Adieu, my Princess, pearl of Princesses; all readers will expect your return-visit at Berlin, which is to be soon.

Friedrich strikes off to the left, and has a View of Strasburg for Two Days.

Through Würzburg, Frankfurt-on-Mayn, speeds Friedrich; —Wilhelmina and mankind understand that it is homewards and to Cleve; but at Frankfurt, in deepest privacy, there occurs a sudden whirl southward,—up the Rhine-Valley; direct towards Strasburg, for a sight of France in that quarter! So has Friedrich decided,—not quite suddenly, on new Letters here, or new computations about Cleve; but by forethought taken at Baireuth, as rather appears. From Frankfurt to Strasburg, say 150 miles; from Strasburg home, is not much farther than from Frankfurt home: it can be done, then; husht!—

The incognito is to be rigorous: Friedrich becomes Comte Dufour, a Prussian-French gentleman; Prince August Wilhelm is Graf von Schaffgotsch, Algarotti is Graf von Pfuhl, Germans these two; what Leopold, the Young Dessauer, called himself,—still less what the others, or whether the others were there at all, and not shoved on, direct towards Wesel, out of the way as is likelier,—can remain uncertain to readers and me. From Frankfurt, then, on Monday morning 22d August 1740, as I compute, through old known Philipsburg-Campaign country, and the lines of Ettlingen and Stollhofen; there the Royal Party speeds eagerly (weather very bad, as appears): and it is certain they are at Kehl on Tuesday evening; looking across the long Rhine Bridge, Strasburg and its steeples now close at hand.

[8] Helden-Geschichte, i. 419.
[9] Büsching's Beyträge;—Schlosser (History of the Eighteenth Century) also quotes the scene.

This looks to be a romantic fine passage in the History of the young King;—though in truth it is not, and proves but a feeble story either to him or us. Concerning which, however, the reader, especially if he should hear that there exists precise Account of it, Two Accounts indeed, one from the King's own hand, will not fail of a certain craving to become acquainted with details. This craving, foolish rather than wise, we consider it thriftiest to satisfy at once; and shall give the King's Narrative entire, though it is a jingling lean scraggy Piece, partly rhyme, 'in the manner of Bachaumont and La Chapelle;' written at the gallop, a few days hence, and dispatched to Voltaire:—'You,' dear Voltaire, 'wish to know what I have been about, since leaving Berlin; annexed you will find a description of it,' writes Friedrich.[10] Out of Voltaire's and other people's waste-baskets, it has at length been fished-up, patch by patch, and pasted together by victorious modern Editors; and here it is again entire. The other Narrative, which got into the Newspapers soon after, is likewise of authentic nature, —Fassmann, our poor old friend, confirming it, if that were needful,—and is happily in prose.[11] Holding these two Pieces well together, and giving the King's faithfully translated, in a complete state, it will be possible to satisfy foolish cravings, and make this Strasburg Adventure luminous enough.

King Friedrich to Voltaire (from Wesel, 2d September 1740), chiefly in Doggerel, concerning the Run to Strasburg.[12]

'I have just finished a Journey, intermingled with singular adven'tures, sometimes pleasant, sometimes the reverse. You know I had [10] Œuvres, xxii. 25 (Wesel, 2d September 1740).

[11] Given in Helden-Geschichte, i. 420-423;—see likewise Fassmann's Merkwürdigster Regierungs-Antritt (poor old Book on Friedrich's Accession); Preuss (Thronbesteigung, pp. 395-400); &c. &c.

[12] Part of it, incorrect, in Voltaire, Œuvres (scandalous Piece now called Mémoires, once Vie Privée du Roi de Prusse), ii. 24-26; finally, in Preuss, Œuvres de Frédéric, xiv. 156-161, the real and complete affair, as fished-up by victorious Preuss and others.

22d-25th Aug. 1740.

'set-out for Baireuth,'—Bruxelles the beautiful French Editor wrote, which makes Egyptian darkness of the Piece!—'to see a Sister whom 'I love no less than esteem. On the road' (thither or thence; or likeliest, there), 'Algarotti and I consulted the map, to settle our route 'for returning by Wesel. Frankfurt-on-Mayn comes always as a prin-'cipal stage;—Strasburg was no great roundabout: we chose that route 'in preference. The incognito was decided, names pitched upon' (Comte Dufour, and the others); 'story we were to tell: in fine, all was ar-'ranged and concerted to a nicety as well as possible. We fancied we 'should get to Strasburg in three days,' from Baireuth.

'But Heaven, which disposes of all 'things,	Mais le ciel, qui de tout dispose,
'Differently regulated this thing.	Régla différemment la chose.
'With lank-sided coursers,	Avec de coursiers efflanqués,
'Lineal descendants from Rosinante,	En ligne droites issus de Rosinante,
'With ploughmen in the dress of pos-'tillions,	Et des paysans en postillons masqués,
'Blockheads of impertinent nature;	Butors de race impertinente,
'Our carriages sticking fast a hundred 'times in the road,	Notre carrosse en cent lieux accroché,
We went along with gravity at a lei-'surely pace,	Nous allions gravement, d'une allure indolente,
Knocking against the crags.	Gravitant contre les rochers.
The atmosphere in uproar with loud 'thunder,	Les airs émus par le bruyant tonnerre,
'The rain-torrents streaming over the 'Earth	Les torrents d'eau répandus sur la terre,
'Threatened mankind with the Day of 'Judgment' [very bad weather],	Du dernier jour menaçaient les humains;
'And in spite of our impatience	Et malgré notre impatience,
'Four good days are, in penance,	Quatre bons jours en pénitence
'Lost forever in these jumblings.	Sont pour jamais perdus dans les charrains.

'Had all our fatalities been limited to stoppages of speed on the 'journey, we should have taken patience; but, after frightful roads, we 'found lodgings still frightfuler.

'For greedy landlords	Car des hôtes intéressés,
'Seeing us pressed by hunger	De la faim nous voyant pressés,
'Did, in a more than frugal manner,	D'une façon plus que frugale,
'In their infernal hovels,	Dans une chaumière infernale,
'Poisoning instead of feeding,	En nous empoisonnant, nous volaient
'Steal from us our crowns.	nos écus.
'O age different' (in good cheer) 'from 'that of Lucullus!	O siècle différent des temps de Lucullus!

'Frightful roads; short of victual, short of drink: nor was that all. 'We had to undergo a variety of accidents; and certainly our equipage 'must have had a singular air, for in every new place we came to, they 'took us for something different.

'Some took us for Kings,	Les uns nous prenaient pour des rois,
'Some for pickpockets well disguised;	D'autres pour des filous courtois,
'Others for old acquaintances.	D'autres pour gens de connaissance;
'At times the people crowded out,	Parfois le peuple s'attroupait,
'Looked us in the eyes,	Entre les yeux nous regardait
'Like clowns impertinently curious.	En badauds curieux, remplis d'impertinence.

'Our lively Italian' (Algarotti) 'swore;	Notre vif Italien jurait,
'For myself I took patience;	Pour moi je prenais patience,
'The young Count' (my gay younger Brother, eighteen at present) 'quizzed 'and frolicked;	Le jeune Comte folâtrait,
'The big Count' (Heir-apparent of Dessau) 'silently swung his head,	Le grand Comte se dandinait,
'Wishing this fine Journey to France,	Et ce beau voyage de France
'In the bottom of his heart, most chris- 'tianly at the Devil.	Dans le fond de son cœur chrétiennement damnait.

'We failed not, however, to struggle gradually along; at last we 'arrived in that Stronghold, where' (as preface to the War of 1734, known to some of us)—

'Where the garrison, too supple,	Où la garnison, troupe flasque,
'Surrendered so piteously	Se rendit si piteusement
'After the first blurt of explosion	Après la première bourasque
'From the cannon of the French.	Du canon français foudroyant.

'You recognise Kehl in this description. It was in that fine For- 'tress,—where, by the way, the breaches are still lying unrepaired' (Reich being a slow corpus in regard to such things)—'that the Post- 'master, a man of more foresight than we, asked If we had got pass- 'ports?

'No, said I to him; of passports	Non, lui dis-je, des passe-ports
'We never had the whim.	Nous n'eûmes jamais la folie.
'Strong ones I believe it would need	Il en faudrait, je crois, de forts
'To recall, to our side of the limit,	Pour ressusciter à la vie
'Subjects of Pluto King of the Dead:	De chez Pluton le roi des morts;
'But, from the Germanic Empire	Mais de l'empire germanique
'Into the gallant and cynical abode	Au séjour galant et cynique
'Of Messieurs your pretty French- 'men,—	De Messieurs vos jolis Français,
'A jolly and beaming air,	Un air rebondissant et frais,
'Rubicund faces, not ignorant of wine,	Une face rouge et bachique,
'These are the passports which, legible 'if you look on us,	Sont les passe-ports qu'en nos traits
'Our troop produces to you for that 'end.	Vous produit ici notre clique.

'No, Messieurs, said the provident Master of Passports; no salva- 'tion without passport. Seeing then that Necessity had got us in the 'dilemma of either manufacturing passports ourselves or not entering 'Strasburg, we took the former branch of the alternative and manu- 'factured one;—in which feat the Prussian arms, which I had on my 'seal, were marvellously furthersome.'

This is a fact, as the old Newspapers and confirmatory Fassmann more directly apprise us. 'The Landlord' (or Post-master) 'at Kehl, having signified that there was no crossing without Passport,' Friedrich, at first somewhat taken aback, bethought him of his watch-seal with the Royal Arms on it; and soon manufactured the necessary Passport, signeted in due form;—which, however, gave a suspicion to the Innkeeper as to the quality of his Guest. After which, Tuesday evening

23d August, 'they at once got across to Strasburg,' says my Newspaper Friend, 'and put-up at the Sign of the Raven there.' Or in Friedrich's own jingle:

'We arrived at Strasburg; and the Custom-house corsair, with his 'inspectors, seemed content with our evidences.

'These scoundrels spied us,	Ces scélérats nous épiaient,
'With one eye reading our passport,	D'un œil le passe-port lisaient,
'With the other ogling our purse.	De l'autre lorgnaient notre bourse.
'Gold, which was always a resource,	L'or, qui toujours fut de ressource,
'Which brought Jove to the enjoyment	Par lequel Jupin jouissait
'Of Danae whom he caressed;	De Danaé, qu'il caressait;
'Gold, by which Cæsar governed	L'or, par qui César gouvernait
'The world happy under his sway;	Le monde heureux sous son empire;
'Gold, more a divinity than Mars or 'Love;	L'or, plus dieu que Mars et l'Amour,
'Wonder-working Gold introduced us,	Le même or sut nous introduire,
'That evening, within the walls of Stras- 'burg.'[13]	Le soir, dans les murs de Strasbourg.

Sad doggerel; permissible perhaps as a sample of the Friedrich manufacture, surely not otherwise! There remains yet more than half of it; readers see what their foolish craving has brought upon them! Doggerel out of which no clear story, such story as there is, can be had; though, except the exaggeration and contortion, there is nothing of fiction in it. We fly to the Newspaper, happily at least a prose composition, which begins at this point; and shall use the Doggerel henceforth as illustration only or as repetition in the Friedrich-mirror, of a thing otherwise made clear to us:

Having got into Strasburg and the Raven Hotel; Friedrich now on French ground at last, or at least on Half-French, German-French, is intent to make the most of circumstances. The Landlord, with one of Friedrich's servants, is straightway dispatched into the proper coffee-houses to raise a supper-party of Officers; politely asks any likely Officer, "If he will not do a foreign Gentleman" (seemingly of some distinction, signifies Boniface) "the honour to sup with him at The Raven?" "No, by Jupiter!" answer the most, in their various dialects: "who is he that we should sup with him?" Three, struck by the singularity of the thing, undertake; and with these we must be content. Friedrich,—or call him M. le Comte Dufour, with Pfuhl, Schaffgotsch and such escort as we see,—politely apologises on the entrance of these Officers: "Many pardons, gentlemen, and many thanks. Knowing nobody; desirous of acquaintance:—since you are so good, how happy, by a little informality, to have brought brave Officers to keep me company, whom I value beyond other kinds of men!"

[13] Given thus far, with several slight errors, in Voltaire, ii. 24-26;—the remainder, long unknown, had to be fished-up, patch by patch (Preuss, Œuvres de Frédéric, xiv. 159-161).

The Officers found their host a most engaging gentleman: his supper was superb, plenty of wine, 'and one red kind they had never tasted before, and liked extremely;'—of which he sent some bottles to their lodging next day. The conversation turned on military matters, and was enlivened with the due sallies. This foreign Count speaks French wonderfully; a brilliant man, whom the others rather fear: perhaps something more than a Count? The Officers, loath to go, remembered that their two battalions had to parade next morning, that it was time to be in bed: "I will go to your review," said the Stranger Count: the delighted Officers undertake to come and fetch him, they settle with him time and method; how happy!

On the morrow, accordingly, they call and fetch him; he looks at the review; review done, they ask him to supper for this evening: "With pleasure!" and 'walks with them about the Esplanade, to see the guard march by.' Before parting, he takes their names, writes them in his tablets; says, with a smile, "He is too much obliged ever to forget them." This is Wednesday the 24th of August 1740; Field-Marshal Broglio is Commandant in Strasburg, and these obliging Officers are 'of the regiment Piedmont,'—their names on the King's tablets I never heard mentioned by anybody (or never till the King's Doggerel was fished-up again). Field-Marshal Broglio my readers have transiently seen, afar off;—'galloping with only one boot,' some say 'almost in his shirt,' at the Ford of Secchia, in those Italian campaigns, five years ago, the Austrians having stolen across upon him:—he had a furious gallop, with no end of ridicule, on that occasion; is now Commandant here; and we shall have a great deal more to do with him within the next year or two.

'This same day, 24th, while I' (the Newspaper volunteer Reporter or Own Correspondent, seemingly a person of some standing, whose words carry credibility in the tone of them) 'was with Field-Marshal 'Broglio our Governor here, there came two gentlemen to be presented 'to him; "German Cavaliers" they were called; who, I now find, 'must have been the Prince of Prussia and Algarotti. The Field-'Marshal,'—a rather high-stalking white-headed old military gentleman, bordering on seventy, of Piedmontese air and breed, apt to be sudden and make flounderings, but the soul of honour, 'was very polite 'to the two Cavaliers, and kept them to dinner. After dinner there 'came a so-styled "Silesian Nobleman," who likewise was presented 'to the Field-Marshal, and affected not to know the other two: him I 'now find to have been the Prince of Anhalt.'

Of his Majesty's supper with the Officers that Wednesday, we are left to think how brilliant it was: his Majesty, we hear farther, went to the Opera that night,—the Polichinello or whatever the 'Italian Comödie' was;—'and a little girl came to his box with two lottery-tickets fifteen 'pence each, begging the foreign Gentleman for the love of Heaven to 'buy them of her; which he did, tearing them up at once, and giving 'the poor creature four ducats,' equivalent to two guineas, or say in effect even five pounds of the present British currency. The fame of this foreign Count and his party at The Raven is becoming very loud over Strasburg, especially in military circles. Our volunteer Own Correspondent proceeds (whom we mean to contrast with the Royal Doggerel by and by):

'Next morning,' Thursday 25th August, 'as the Marshal with above 'two hundred Officers was out walking on the Esplanade, there came 'a soldier of the Regiment Luxemburg, who, after some stiff fugling 'motions, of the nature of salutation partly, and partly demand for 'privacy, intimated to the Marshal surprising news: That the Stranger 'in The Raven was the King of Prussia in person: he, the soldier, at 'present of the Regiment Luxemburg, had in other days, before he 'deserted, been of the Prussian Crown-Prince's regiment; had conse-'quently seen him in Berlin, Potsdam and elsewhere a thousand times 'and more, and even stood sentry where he was: the fact is beyond 'dispute, your Excellency! said this soldier.'—Whew!

Whereupon a certain Colonel, Marquis de Loigle, with or without a hint from Broglio, makes off for The Raven; introduces himself, as was easy; contrives to get invited to stay dinner, which also was easy. During dinner the foreign Gentleman expressed some wish to see their fortress. Colonel Loigle sends word to Broglio; Broglio dispatches straightway an Officer and fine carriage: "Will the foreign Gentleman do me the honour?" The foreign Gentleman, still struggling for incognito, declines the uppermost seat of honour in the carriage; the two Officers, Loigle and this new one, insist on taking the inferior place. Alas, the incognito is pretty much out. Calling at some coffeehouse or the like on the road, a certain female, 'Madame de Fienne,' named the foreign Gentleman "Sire,"—which so startled him that, though he utterly declined such title, the two Officers saw well how it was.

'After survey of the works, the two attendant Officers had returned 'to the Field-Marshal; and about 4 P.M. the high Stranger made ap-'pearance there. But the thing had now got wind, "King of Prussia 'here incognito!" The place was full of Officers, who came crowding 'about him: he escaped deftly into the Maréchal's own Cabinet; sat 'there, an hour, talking to the Maréchal' (little admiring the Maréchal's talk, as we shall find), 'still insisting on the incognito,'—to which Broglio, put-out in his high paces by this sudden thing, and apt to flounder, as I have heard, was not polite enough to conform altogether. "What shall I do, in this sudden case?" poor Broglio is thinking to himself: "must write to Court; perhaps try to detain—?" Friedrich's chief thought naturally is, One cannot be away out of this too soon. "Sha'n't we go to the Play, then, Monsieur le Maréchal? Play-hour is come!"—Own Correspondent of the Newspaper proceeds:

'The Maréchal then went to the Play, and all his Officers with 'him; thinking their royal prize was close at their heels. Maréchal 'and Officers fairly ahead, coast once clear, their royal prize hastened 'back to The Raven, paid his bill; hastily summoning Schaffgotsch 'and the others within hearing; shot-off like lightning; and was seen 'in Strasburg no more. Algarotti, who was in the box with Broglio, 'heard the news in the house; regretful rumour among the Officers, '"He is gone!" In about a quarter of an hour Algarotti too slipt out; 'and vanished by extra post'—straight towards Wesel; but could not overtake the King (whose road, in the latter part of it, went zigzag, on business as is likely), nor see him again till they met in that Town.[14]

This is the Prose Truth of those Fifty or Eight-and-forty hours in Strasburg, which were so mythic and romantic at that time. Shall we now apply to the Royal Doggerel again, where we left off, and see the other side of the picture? Once settled in The Raven, within Strasburg's walls, the Doggerel continues:

'You fancy well that there was now something to exercise my 'curiosity; and what desire I had to know the French Nation in France 'itself.

'There I saw at length those French,	Là je vis enfin ces Français,
'Of whom you have sung the glories;	Dont vous avez chanté la gloire;
'A people despised by the English,	Peuple méprisé des Anglais,
'Whom their sad rationality fills with 'black bile;	Que leur triste raison remplit de lile noire;
'Those French, whom our Germans	Ces Français, que nos Allemands
'Reckon all to be destitute of sense;	Pensent tous privés de bon sens;
'Those French, whose History consists 'of Love-stories,	Ces Français, dont l'amour pourrait dicter l'histoire,
'I mean the wandering kind of Love, 'not the constant;	Je dis l'amour volage, et non l'amour constant;
'Foolish this People, headlong, high- 'going,	Ce peuple fou, brusque et galant,
'Which sings beyond endurance;	Chansonnier insupportable,
'Lofty in its good fortune, crawling in 'its bad;	Superbe en sa fortune, en son malheur rampant,
'Of an unpitying extent of babble,	D'un bavardage impitoyable,
'To hide the vacancy of its ignorant 'mind.	Pour cacher le creux d'un esprit ignorant,
'Of the Trifling it is a tender lover;	Tendre amant de la bagatelle,
'The Trifling alone takes possession of 'its brain.	Elle entre seule en sa cervelle;
'People flighty, indiscreet, imprudent,	Léger, indiscret, imprudent,
'Turning like the weathercock to every 'wind.	Comme une girouette il revire à tout vent.
'Of the ages of the Cæsars those of the 'Louises are the shadow;	Des siècles des Césars ceux des Louis sont l'ombre;
'Paris is the ghost of Rome, take it how 'you will.	Rome efface Paris en tout sens, en tout point.
'No, of those vile French you are not 'one:	Non, des vils Français vous n'êtes pas du nombre;
'You think; they do not think at all.	Vous pensez, ils ne pensent point.

'Pardon, dear Voltaire, this definition of the French; at worst, it 'is only of those in Strasburg I speak. To scrape acquaintance, I had 'to invite some Officers on our arrival, whom of course I did not know.

'Three of them came at once,	Trois d'eux s'en vinrent à la fois,
'Gayer, more content than Kings;	Plus gais, plus contents que des rois, [14] From Helden-Geschichte (i. 420-424), &c.

22d-25th Aug. 1740.

'Singing with rusty voice,	Chantant d'une voix enrouée,
'In verse, their amorous exploits,	En vers, leurs amoureux exploits,
'Set to a hornpipe.	Ajustés sur une bourrée.

'M. de la Crochardière and M. Malosa' (two names from the tablets, third wanting) 'had just come from a dinner where the wine had 'not been spared.

'Of their hot friendship I saw the flame grow,	De leur chaude amitié je vis croître le flamme,
'The Universe would have taken us for perfect friends:	L'univers nous eût pris pour des amis parfaits;
'But the instant of goodnight blew-out the business;	Mais l'instant des adieux en détruisit la trame,
'Friendship disappeared without regrets,	L'amitié disparut, sans causer des regrets,
'With the games, the wine, the table and the viands.	Avec le jeu, le vin, et la table, et les mets.

'Next day, Monsieur the Gouverneur of the Town and Province, 'Maréchal of France, Chevalier of the Orders of the King, &c. &c., '—Maréchal Duc de Broglio, in fact,' who was surprised at Secchia in the late War,—

'This General always surprised,	Ce général toujours surpris,
'Whom with regret young Louis' (your King)	Qu'à regret le jeune Louis
'Saw without breeches in Italy[15]	Vit sans culottes en Italie,
'Galloping to hide away his life	Courir pour dérober sa vie
'From the Germans, unpolite fighters;—	Aux Germains, guerriers impolis.

'this General wished to investigate your Comte Dufour,—foreign Count, 'who the instant he arrives sets about inviting people to supper that are 'perfect strangers. He took the poor Count for a sharper; and prud- 'ently advised M. de la Crochardière not to be duped by him. It was 'unluckily the good Maréchal that proved to be duped.

'He was born for surprise.	Il était né pour la surprise.
'His white hair, his gray beard,	Ses cheveux blancs, sa barbe grise,
'Formed a reverend exterior.	Formaient un sage extérieur.
'Outsides are often deceptive:	Le dehors est souvent trompeur;
'He that, by the binding, judges	Qui juge par la reliure
'Of a Book and its Author	D'un ouvrage et de son auteur
'May, after a page of reading,	Dans une page de lecture
'Chance to recognise his mistake.	Peut reconnaître son erreur.

'That was my own experience; for of wisdom I could find nothing 'except in his gray hair and decrepit appearance. His first opening 'betrayed him; no great well of wit this Maréchal,

'Who, drunk with his own grandeur,	Qui, de sa grandeur enivré,
'Informs you of his name and his titles,	Décline son nom et ses titres,
'And authority as good as unlimited.	Et son pouvoir à rien borné.
'He cited to me all the records	Il me cita tous les registres
'Where his name is registered,	Où son nom est enregistré;
'Babbled about his immense power,	Bavard de son pouvoir immense,
'About his valour, his talents	De sa valeur, de ces talents
'So salutary to France;—	Si salutaires à la France:
'He forgot that, three years ago[16]	Il oubliait, passé trois ans,
'Men did not praise his prudence.	Qu'on ne louait pas sa prudence.

[15] 'With only one boot,' was the milder rumour; which we adopted (suprà, vol. iii. p. 147), but this sadder one, too, was current; and 'Broglio's breeches,' or the vain aspiration after them, like a vanished ghost of breeches, often enough turn-up in the old Pamphlets.

[16] Six to a nearness,—'15th September 1734,' if your Majesty will be exact.

'Not satisfied with seeing the Maréchal, I saw guard mounted

'By these Frenchmen, burning with 'glory,	A ces Français brûlants de gloire,
'Who, on four sous a day,	Dotés de quatre sous par jour,
'Will make of Kings and of Heroes the 'memory flourish:	Qui des rois, des héros font fleurir la mémoire,
'Slaves crowned by the hands of Vic- 'tory,	Esclaves couronnés des mains de la victoire,
'Unlucky herds whom the Court	Troupeaux malheureux que la cour
'Tinkles hither and thither by the sound 'of fife and drum.	Dirige au seul bruit du tambour.

'That was my fated term. A deserter from our troops got eye on 'me, recognised me and denounced me.

'This wretched gallows-bird got eye on 'me;	Ce malheureux pendard me vit,
'Such is the lot of all earthly things;	C'est le sort de toutes les choses;
'And so of our fine mystery	Ainsi de notre pot aux roses
'The whole secret came to light.'	Tout le secret se découvrit.

Well; we must take this glimpse, such as it is, into the interior of the young man,—fine buoyant, pungent German spirit, road-ways for it very bad, and universal rain-torrents falling, yet with coruscations from a higher quarter;—and you can forget, if need be, the 'Literature' of this young Majesty, as you would a staccato on the flute by him! In after months, on new occasion rising, 'there was no end to his jibings and 'bitter pleasantries on the ridiculous reception Broglio had 'given him at Strasburg,' says Valori,[17]—of which this Doggerel itself offers specimen.

"Probably the weakest Piece I ever translated?" exclaims one, who has translated several such. Nevertheless there is a straggle of pungent sense in it,—like the outskirts of lightning, seen in that dismally wet weather, which the Royal Party had. Its wit is very copious, but slashy, bantery, and proceeds mainly by exaggeration and turning topsy-turvy; a rather barren species of wit. Of humour, in the fine poetic sense, no vestige. But there is surprising veracity,—truthfulness unimpeachable, if you will read well. What promptitude, too;—what funds for conversation, when needed! This scraggy Piece, which is better than the things people often talk to one another, was evidently written as fast as the pen could go.—'It is done, if such a Hand could have done it, in the manner of Bachaumont and La Chapelle,' says Voltaire scornfully, in that scandalous Vie Privée;—of which phrase this is the commentary, if readers need one:

'Some seventy or eighty years before that date, a M. Bachaumont

[17] Mémoires, i. 88.

'and a M. la Chapelle, his intimate, published, in Prose skipping-offs 'into dancings of Verse every now and then, "a charming Relation of 'a certain Voyage or Home Tour' (whence or whither, or correctly when, this Editor forgets),[18] which they had made in partnership. '"Rela- 'tion" capable still of being read, if one were tolerably idle;—it was 'found then to be charming, by all the world; and gave rise to a new 'fashion in writing; which Voltaire often adopts, and is supremely 'good at; and in which Friedrich, who is also fond of it, by no means 'succeeds so well.'

Enough, Friedrich got to Wesel, back to his business, in a day or two; and had done, as we forever have, with the Strasburg Escapade and its Doggerel.

Friedrich finds M. de Maupertuis; not yet M. de Voltaire.

Friedrich got to Wesel on the 29th; found Maupertuis waiting there, according to appointment: an elaborately polite, somewhat sublime scientific gentleman; ready to 'engraft on the Berlin crabtree,' and produce real apples and Academics there, so soon as the King, the proprietor, may have leisure for such a thing. Algarotti has already the honour of some acquaintance with Maupertuis. Maupertuis has been at Brussels, on the road hither; saw Voltaire and even Madame,—which latter was rather a ticklish operation, owing to grudges and tiffs of quarrel that had risen, but it proved successful under the delicate guidance of Voltaire. Voltaire is up to oiling the wheels: 'There you are, Monsieur, like the'—(don't name What, though profane Voltaire does, writing to Maupertuis a month ago)—'Three Kings running after you!' A new Pension to you from France; Russia outbidding France to have you; and then that Letter of Friedrich's, which is in all the Newspapers: 'Three Kings,'—you plainly great man, Trismegistus of the Sciences called Pure! Madame honours you, has always done: one word of apology to the high female mind, it will work wonders;—come now!—[19]

No reader guesses in our time what a shining celestial body the Maupertuis, who is now fallen so dim again, then was to [18] 'First printed in 1665,' say the Bibliographies; 'but known to La Fontaine some time before.' Good!—Bachaumont, practically an important and distinguished person, not literary by trade, or indeed otherwise than by ennui, was he that had given (some fifteen years before) the Nickname Fronde (Bickering of Schoolboys) to the wretched Historical Object which is still so designated in French annals.

[19] Voltaire, Œuvres, lxxii. 217, 216, 230 (Hague, 21st July 1740, and Brussels, 9th Aug. &c.).

mankind. In cultivated French society there is no such lion as M. Maupertuis since he returned from flattening the Earth in the Arctic regions. "The Exact Sciences, what else is there to depend on?" thinks French cultivated society: "and has not Monsieur done a feat in that line?" Monsieur, with fine ex-military manners, has a certain austere gravity, reticent loftiness and polite dogmatism, which confirms that opinion. A studious ex-military man,—was Captain of Dragoons once, but too fond of study,—who is conscious to himself, or who would fain be conscious, that he is, in all points, mathematical, moral and other, the man. A difficult man to live with in society. Comes really near the limit of what we call genius, of originality, poetic greatness in thinking;—but never once can get fairly over said limit, though always struggling dreadfully to do so. Think of it! A fatal kind of man; especially if you have made a lion of him at any time. Of his envies, deep-hidden splenetic discontents and rages, with Voltaire's return for them, there will be enough to say in the ulterior stages. He wears, —at least ten years hence he openly wears, though I hope it is not yet so flagrant,—'a red wig with yellow bottom (crinière jaune);' and as Flattener of the Earth, is, with his own flattish red countenance and impregnable stony eyes, a man formidable to look upon, though intent to be amiable if you do the proper homage. As to the quarrel with Madame take this Note; which may prove illustrative of some things by and by:

Maupertuis is well known at Cirey; such a lion could not fail there. All manner of Bernouillis, Clairauts, high mathematical people, are frequent guests at Cirey: reverenced by Madame,—who indeed has had her own private Professor of Mathematics; one König from Switzerland (recommended by those Bernouillis), diligently teaching her the Pure Sciences this good while back, not without effect; and has only just parted with him, when she left on this Brussels expedition. A bon garçon, Voltaire says; though otherwise, I think, a little noisy on occasion. There has been no end of Madame's kindness to him, nay to his Brother and him,—sons of a Theological Professorial Syriac-Hebrew kind of man at Berne who has too many sons;—and I grieve to report that this heedless König has produced an explosion in Madame's feelings, such as little beseemed him. On the road to Paris, namely, as we drove hitherward to the Honsbruck Lawsuit by way of Paris, in Autumn last, there had fallen out some dispute, about the monads, the vis viva, the infinitely little, between Madame and König; dispute which rose crescendo in disharmonious duet, and 'ended,' testifies M. de Voltaire, 'in a scene très-désagréable.' Madame, with an effort, forgave the thoughtless fellow, who is still rather young, and is without malice. But thoughtless König, strong in his opinion about the infinitely little, appealed to Maupertuis: "Am not I right, Monsieur?" "He is right beyond question!" wrote Maupertuis to Madame; 'somewhat drily,' thinks Voltaire: and the result is, there is considerable rage in one celestial mind ever since against another male one in red wig and yellow bottom; and they are not on speaking terms, for a good many months past. Voltaire has his heart sore ("j'en ai le cœur percé") about it, needs to double-dose Maupertuis with flattery; and in fact has used the utmost diplomacy to effect some varnish of a reconcilement as Maupertuis passed on this occasion. As for König, who had studied in some Dutch university, he went by and by to be Librarian to the Prince of Orange; and we shall not fail to hear of him again,—once more upon the infinitely little.[20]

Voltaire too, in his way, is fond of these mathematical people; eager enough to fish for knowledge, here as in all elements, when he has the chance offered: this is much an interest of his at present. And he does attain sound ideas, outlines of ideas, in this province,—though privately defective in the due transcendency of admiration for it;—was wont to discuss cheerily with König, about vis viva, monads, gravitation and the infinitely little; above all, bows to the ground before the red-wigged Bashaw, Flattener of the Earth, whom for Madame's sake and his own he is anxious to be well with. "Fall on your face nine times, ye esoteric of only Impure Science!"—intimates Maupertuis to mankind. "By all means!" answers M. de Voltaire, doing it with alacrity; with a kind of loyalty, one can perceive, and also with a hypocrisy grounded on love of peace. If that is the nature of the Bashaw, and one's sole mode of fishing knowledge from him, why not? thinks M. de Voltaire. His patience with M. de Maupertuis, first and last, was very great. But we shall find it explode at length, a dozen years hence, in a conspicuous manner!—

'Maupertuis had come to us to Cirey, with Jean Ber-'nouilli,' says Voltaire; 'and thenceforth Maupertuis, who was 'born the most jealous of men, took me for the object of this 'passion, which has always been very dear to him.'[21] Husht, Monsieur!—Here is a poor rheumatic kind of Letter, which illustrates the interim condition, after that varnish of reconcilement at Brussels:

Voltaire to M. de Maupertuis (at Wesel, waiting for the King, or with him rather).

'Brussels, 29th August (1740), 3d year since the world flattened.

'How the Devil, great Philosopher, would you have had me write 'to you at Wesel? I fancied you gone from Wesel, to seek the King [20] From Œuvres de Voltaire, ii. 126, lxxii. (20, 216, 230), lxiii. (229-239), &c. &c.

[21] Vie Privée.

'of Sages on his Journey somewhere. I had understood, too, they 'were so delighted to have you in that fortified lodge (bouge fortifié) 'that you must be taking pleasure there, for he that gives pleasure 'gets it.

'You have already seen the jolly Ambassador of the amiablest Mon-'arch in the world,'—Camas, a fattish man, on his road to Versailles (who called at Brussels here, with fine compliments, and a keg of Hungary Wine, as you may have heard whispered). 'No doubt M. de 'Camas is with you. For my own share, I think it is after you that 'he is running at present. But in truth, at the hour while I say this, 'you are with the King;'—a lucky guess; King did return to Wesel this very day. 'The Philosopher and the Prince perceive already that 'they are made for each other. You and M. Algarotti will say, Facia-'mus hìc tria tabernacula: as to me, I can only make duo tabernacula,' —profane Voltaire!

'Without doubt I would be with you if I were not at Brussels; but 'my heart is with you all the same; and is the subject, all the same, 'of a King who is formed to reign over every thinking and feeling 'being. I do not despair that Madame du Châtelet will find herself 'somewhere on your route: it will be a scene in a fairy tale;—she will 'arrive with a sufficient reason' (as your Leibnitz says) 'and with mo-'nads. She does not love you the less though she now believes the 'universe a plenum, and has renounced the notion of void. Over her 'you have an ascendant which you will never lose. In fine, my dear 'Monsieur, I wish as ardently as she to embrace you the soonest pos-'sible. I recommend myself to your friendship in the Court, worthy 'of you, where you now are.'—Tout à vous, somewhat rheumatic![22]

Always an anxious almost tremulous desire to conciliate this big glaring geometrical bully in red wig. Through the sensitive transparent being of M. de Voltaire, you may see that feeling almost painfully busy in every Letter he writes to the Flattener of the Earth.

CHAPTER IV.

VOLTAIRE'S FIRST INTERVIEW WITH FRIEDRICH.

At Wesel, in the rear of all this travelling and excitement, Friedrich falls unwell; breaks down there into an aguish feverish distemper, which, for several months after, impeded his movements, would he have yielded to it. He has much business on hand, too,—some of it of prickly nature just now;—but is intent as ever on seeing Voltaire, among the first things. Diligently reading in the Voltaire-Friedrich Correspondence

[22] Voltaire, lxxii. 243.

(which is a sad jumble of misdates and opacities, in the common editions),[1] this of the aguish condition frequently turns up; 'Quartan ague,' it seems; occasionally very bad; but Friedrich struggles with it; will not be cheated of any of his purposes by it.

He had a busy fortnight here; busier than we yet imagine. Much employment there naturally is of the usual Inspection sort; which fails in no quarter of his Dominions, but which may be particularly important here, in these disputed Berg-Jülich Countries, when the time of decision falls. How he does his Inspections we know;—and there are still weightier matters afoot here, in a silent way, of which we shall have to speak before long, and all the world will speak. Business enough, parts of it grave and silent, going on, and the much that is public, miscellaneous, small: done, all of it, in a rapid punctual precise manner;—and always, after the crowded day, some passages of Supper with the Sages, to wind-up with on melodious terms. A most alert and miscellaneously busy young King, in spite of the ague.

It was in these Cleve Countries, and now as probably as afterwards, that the light scene recorded in Laveaux's poor History, and in all the Anecdote-Books, transacted itself one day. Substance of the story is true; though the details of it go all at random,—somewhat to this effect:

'Inspecting his Finance Affairs, and questioning the parties interested, Friedrich notices a certain Convent in Cleve, which appears to have, payable from the Forest-dues, considerable revenues bequeathed by the old Dukes, "for masses to be said on their behalf." He goes to look at the place; questions the Monks on this point, who are all drawn-out in two rows, and have broken into Te-Deum at sight of him: "Husht! You still say those Masses, then?" "Certainly, your Majesty!"—"And what good does anybody get of them?" "Your Majesty, those old Sovereigns are to obtain Heavenly mercy by them, to be delivered out of Purgatory by them."—"Purgatory? It is a sore thing for the Forests, all this while! And they are not yet out, those poor souls, after so many hundred years of praying?" Monks have a fatal apprehension, No. "When will they be out, and the thing complete?" Monks cannot say. "Send me a courier whenever it is complete!" sneers the King, and leaves them to their Te-Deum.'[2]

[1] Preuss (the recent latest Editor, and the only well-informed one, as we said) prints with accuracy; but cannot be read at all (in the sense of understood) without other light.

[2] C. Hildebrandt's Modern Edition of the (mostly dubious) Anekdoten und Cha-

Mournful state of the Catholic Religion so-called! How long must these wretched Monks go on doing their lazy thrice-deleterious torpid blasphemy; and a King, not histrionic but real, merely signify that he laughs at them and it? Meseems a heavier whip than that of satire might be in place here, your Majesty? The lighter whip is easier;—Ah yes, undoubtedly! cry many men. But horrible accounts are running up, enough to sink the world at last, while the heavier whip is lazily withheld, and lazy blasphemy, fallen torpid, chronic, and quite unconscious of being blasphemous, insinuates itself into the very heart's-blood of mankind! Patience, however; the heavy whip too is coming,—unless universal death be coming. King Friedrich is not the man to wield such whip. Quite other work is in store for King Friedrich; and Nature will not, by any suggestion of that terrible task, put him out in the one he has. He is nothing of a Luther, of a Cromwell; can look upon fakeers praying by their rotatory calabash, as a ludicrous platitude; and grin delicately as above, with the approval of his wiser contemporaries. Speed to him on his own course!

What answer Friedrich found to his English proposals, —answer due here on the 24th from Captain Dickens,—I do not pointedly learn; but can judge of it by Harrington's reply to that Despatch of Dickens's, which entreated candour and open dealing towards his Prussian Majesty. Harrington is at Herrenhausen, still with the Britannic Majesty there; both of them much at a loss about their Spanish War, and the French and other aspects upon it: "Suppose his Prussian Majesty were to give himself to France against us!" We will hope, not. Harrington's reply is to the effect, 'Hum, drum:—Berg and 'Jülich, say you? Impossible to answer; minds not made-up 'here:—What will his Prussian Majesty do for us?' Not much, I should guess, till something more categorical come from you! His Prussian Majesty is careful not to spoil anything by over-haste; but will wait and try farther to the utmost, Whether England or France is the likelier bargain for him.

Better still, the Prussian Majesty is intent to do something rakterzüge aus dem Leben Friedrichs des Grossen (and a very ignorant and careless Edition it is: 6 voll. 12mo, Halberstadt, 1829), ii. 160; Laveaux (whom we already cited), Vie de Frédéric; &c. &c. Nicolai's Anekdoten alone, which are not included in this Hildebrandt Collection, are of sure authenticity; the rest, occasionally true, and often with a kind of mythic truth in them worth attending to, are otherwise of all degrees of dubiety, down to the palpably false and absurd.

---

3d-11th Sept. 1740.

for himself in that Berg-Jülich matter: we find him silently examining these Wesel localities for a proper "Entrenched Camp," Camp say of 40,000, against a certain contingency that may be looked for. Camp which will much occupy the Gazetteers when they get eye on it. This is one of the concerns he silently attends to, on occasion, while riding about in the Cleve Countries. Then there is another small item of business, important to do well, which is now in silence diligently getting under way at Wesel; which also is of remarkable nature, and will astonish the Gazetteer and Diplomatic circles. This is the affair with the Bishop of Liége, called also the Affair of Herstal, which his Majesty has had privately laid-up in the corner of his mind, as a thing to be done during this Excursion. Of which the reader shall hear anon, to great lengths,—were a certain small preliminary matter, Voltaire's Arrival in these parts, once off our hands.

Friedrich's First Meeting with Voltaire! These other high things were once loud in the Gazetteer and Diplomatic circles, and had no doubt they were the World's History; and now they are sunk wholly to the Nightmares, and all mortals have forgotten them,—and it is such a task as seldom was to resuscitate the least memory of them, on just cause of a Friedrich or the like, so impatient are men of what is putrid and extinct:—and a quite unnoticed thing, Voltaire's First Interview, all readers are on the alert for it, and ready to demand of me impossibilities about it! Patience, readers. You shall see it, without and within, in such light as there was, and form some actual notion of it, if you will coöperate. From the circumambient inanity of Old Newspapers, Historical shot-rubbish, and unintelligible Correspondences, we sift-out the following particulars, of this First Meeting, or actual Osculation of the Stars.

The Newspapers, though their eyes were not yet of the Argus quality now familiar to us, have been intent on Friedrich during this Baireuth-Cleve Journey, especially since that sudden eclipse of him at Strasburg lately; forming now one scheme of route for him, now another; Newspapers, and even private friends, being a good deal uncertain about his movements. Rumour now ran, since his reappearance in the Cleve Countries, that Friedrich meant to have a look at Holland before going home. And that had, in fact, been a notion or intention of Friedrich's. "Holland? We could pass through Brussels on the way, and see Voltaire!" thought he.

In Brussels this was, of course, the rumour of rumours. As Voltaire's Letters, visibly in a twitter, still testify to us. King of Prussia coming! Madame du Châtelet, the 'Princess Tour' (that is, Tour-and-Taxis), all manner of high Dames, are on the tiptoe. Princess Tour hopes she shall lodge this unparalleled Prince in her Palace: "You, Madame?" answers the Du Châtelet, privately, with a toss of her head: "His Majesty, I hope, belongs more to M. de Voltaire and me: he shall lodge here, please Heaven!" Voltaire, I can observe, has sublime hostelry arrangements chalked-out for his Majesty, in case he go to Paris; which he doesn't, as we know. Voltaire is all on the alert, awake to the great contingencies far and near; the Châtelet-Voltaire breakfast-table,—fancy it on those interesting mornings, while the post comes round![3]

Alas, in the first days of September,—Friedrich's Letter is dated 'Wesel, 2d' (and has the Strasburg Doggerel enclosed in it),—the Brussels Postman delivers far other intelligence at one's door; very mortifying to Madame: 'That his Majesty is 'fallen ill at Wesel; has an aguish fever hanging on him, and 'only hopes to come:' Voilà, Madame!—Next Letter, Wesel, Monday 5th Sept., is to the effect: 'Do still much hope to 'come; tomorrow is my trembling day; if that prove to be 'off!'—Out upon it, that proves not to be off; that is on: next Letter, Tuesday Sept. 6th, which comes by express (Courier dashing up with it, say on the Thursday following) is,—alas, Madame!—here it is:

King Friedrich to M. de Voltaire at Brussels.

'Wesel, 6th Sept. 1740.

'My dear Voltaire,—In spite of myself, I have to yield to the 'Quartan Fever, which is more tenacious than a Jansenist; and what-'ever desire I had of going to Antwerp and Brussels, I find myself not 'in a condition to undertake such a journey without risk. I would 'ask of you, then, if the road from Brussels to Cleve would not to you 'seem too long for a meeting; it is the one means of seeing you which 'remains to me. Confess that I am unlucky; for now when I could 'dispose of my person, and nothing hinders me from seeing you, the [3] Voltaire, lxxii. 238-256 (Letters 22d August—22d September 1740).

11th Sept. 1740.

'fever gets its hand into the business, and seems to intend disputing 'me that satisfaction.

'Let us deceive the fever, my dear Voltaire; and let me at least 'have the pleasure of embracing you. Make my best excuses' (polite, rather than sincere) 'to Madame the Marquise, that I cannot have the 'satisfaction of seeing her at Brussels. All that are about me know 'the intention I was in; which certainly nothing but the fever could 'have made me change.

'Sunday next I shall be at a little Place near Cleve,'—Schloss of Moyland, which, and the route to which, this Courier can tell you of; —'where I shall be able to possess you at my ease. If the sight of 'you don't cure me, I will send for a Confessor at once. Adieu; you 'know my sentiments and my heart.'[4]—FÉDÉRIC.

After which the Correspondence suddenly extinguishes itself; ceases for about a fortnight,—in the bad *mis*dated Editions even does worse;—and we are left to thick darkness, to our own poor shifts; Dryasdust being grandly silent on this small interest of ours. What is to be done?

Particulars of First Interview, on severe Scrutiny.

Here, from a painful Predecessor whose Papers I inherit, are some old Documents and Studies on the subject,—sorrowful collection, in fact, of what poor sparks of certainty were to be found hovering in that dark element;—which do at last (so luminous are certainties always, or 'sparks' that will shine steady) coalesce into some feeble general twilight, feeble but indubitable; and even show the sympathetic reader how they were searched out and brought together. We number and label these poor Patches of Evidence on so small a matter; and leave them to the curious:

No. 1. Date of the First Interview. It is certain Voltaire did arrive at the little Schloss of Moyland, Sept. 11th, Sunday night,—which is the 'Sunday' just specified in Friedrich's Letter. Voltaire had at once decided on complying,—what else?—and lost no time in packing himself: King's Courier on Thursday late; Voltaire on the road on Saturday early, or the night before. With Madame's shrill blessing (not the most musical in this vexing case), and plenty of fuss. 'Was wont to travel in considerable style,' I am told; 'the innkeepers calling him "Your Lordship (M. le Comte)."' Arrives, sure enough, Sunday night; old Schloss of Moyland, six miles from Cleve; 'moonlight,' I find,—the Harvest Moon. Visit lasted three days.[5] [4] Preuss, Œuvres de Frédéric, xxii. 27.

[5] Rödenbeck, p. 21; Preuss, &c. &c.

No. 2. Voltaire's Drive thither. Schloss Moyland: How far from Brussels, and by what route? By Louvain, Tillemont, Tongres to Maestricht; then from Maestricht up the Maas (left bank) to Venlo, where cross; through Geldern and Goch to Cleve: between the Maas and Rhine this last portion. Flat damp country; tolerably under tillage; original constituents bog and sand. Distances I guess to be: To Tongres 60 miles and odd; to Maestricht 12 or 15, from Maestricht 75; in all 150 miles English. Two-days driving? There is equinoctial moon, and still above twelve hours of sunlight for 'M. le Comte.'

No. 3. Of the Place Where. Voltaire, who should have known, calls it "petit Château de Meuse;" which is a Castle existing nowhere but in Dreams. Other French Biographers are still more imaginary. The little Schloss of Moyland,—by no means 'Meuse,' nor even Mörs, which Voltaire probably means in saying Château de Meuse,—was, as the least inquiry settles beyond question, the place where Voltaire and Friedrich first met. Friedrich Wilhelm used often to lodge there in his Cleve journeys: he made thither for shelter, in the sickness that overtook him in friend Ginkel's house, coming home from the Rhine Campaign in 1734; lay there for several weeks after quitting Ginkel's. Any other light I can get upon it, is darkness visible. Büsching pointedly informs me,[6] 'It is a Parish' (or patch of country under one priest), 'and Till and it are a Jurisdiction' (pair of patches under one court of justice):—which does not much illuminate the inquiring mind. Small patch, this of Moyland, size not given; 'was bought,' says he, 'in 1695, 'by Friedrich afterwards First King, from the Family of Spaen,'—we once knew a Lieutenant Spaen, of those Dutch regions,—'and was 'named a Royal Mansion ever thereafter.' Who lived in it; what kind of thing was it, is it? Altum silentium, from Büsching and mankind. Belonged to the Spaens, fifty years ago;—some shadow of our poor banished friend the Lieutenant resting on it? Dim enough old Mansion, with 'court' to it, with modicum of equipment; lying there in the moonlight;—did not look sublime to Voltaire on stepping out. So that all our knowledge reduces itself to this one point: of finding Moyland in the Map, with date, with reminiscence to us, hanging by it henceforth! Good.[7]

Mörs,—which is near the Town of Ruhrort, about midway between Wesel and Düsseldorf,—must be some forty miles from Moyland, forty-five from Cleve; southward of both. So that the place, 'à deux lieues de Clèves,' is, even by Voltaire's showing, this Moyland; were there otherwise any doubt upon it. 'Château de Meuse,'—hanging out a prospect of Mörs to us,—is bad usage to readers. Of an intelligent man, not to say a Trismegistus of men, one expects he will know in what town he is, after three-days experience, as here. But he does not always; he hangs-out a mere 'shadow of Mörs by moonlight,' till we [6] Erdbeschreibung, v. 659, 677.

[7] Stieler's Deutschland (excellent Map in 25 Pieces), Piece 12.—Till is a mile or two north-east from Moyland; Moyland about 5 or 6 south-east from Cleve.

11th-14th Sept. 1740.

learn better. Duvernet, his Biographer, even calls it 'Sleus-Meuse;' some wonderful idea of Sluices and a River attached to it, in Duvernet's head![8]

What Voltaire thought of the Interview Twenty Years afterwards.

Of the Interview itself, with general bird's-eye view of the Visit combined (in a very incorrect state), there is direct testimony by Voltaire himself. Voltaire himself, twenty years after, in far other humour, all jarred into angry sarcasm, for causes we shall see by and by,—Voltaire, at the request of friends, writes down, as his Friedrich Reminiscences, that scandalous Vie Privée above spoken of, a most sad Document; and this is the passage referring to 'the little Place in the neighbourhood of Cleve,' where Friedrich now waited for him: errors corrected by our laborious Friend. After quoting something of that Strasburg Doggerel, the whole of which is now too well known to us, Voltaire proceeds:

'From Strasburg he,' King Friedrich, 'went to see his Lower 'German Provinces; he said he would come and see me incognito at 'Brussels. We prepared a fine house for him,'—were ready to prepare such hired house as we had for him, with many apologies for its slight degree of perfection (error first),—'but having fallen ill in the 'little Mansion-Royal of Meuse (Château de Meuse), a couple of leagues 'from Cleve,'—fell ill at Wesel; and there is no Château de Meuse in the world (errors 2d and 3d),—'he wrote to me that he expected I 'would make the advances. I went, accordingly, to present my profound homages. Maupertuis, who already had his views, and was 'possessed with the rage of being President to an Academy, had of his 'own accord,'—no, being invited, and at my suggestion (error 4th),—'presented himself there; and was lodged with Algarotti and Keyserling' (which latter, I suppose, had come from Berlin, not being of the Strasburg party, he) 'in a garret of this Palace.

'At the door of the court, I found, by way of guard, one soldier. 'Privy-Councillor Rambonet, Minister of State'—(very subaltern man; never heard of him except in the Herstal Business, and here)—'was 'walking in the court; blowing in his fingers to keep them warm.' Sunday night 11th September 1740; world all bathed in moonshine; and mortals mostly shrunk into their huts, out of the raw air. 'He' Rambonet 'wore big linen ruffles at his wrists, very dirty' (visibly so in the moonlight? Error 5th extends ad libitum over all the following details); 'a holed hat; an old official periwig,'—ruined into a totally unsymmetric state, as would seem,—'one side of which hung down into 'one of his pockets, and the other scarcely crossed his shoulder. I was 'told, this man was now intrusted with an affair of importance here; 'and that proved true,'—the Herstal Affair.

[8] Duvernet (2d form of him,—that is, Vie de Voltaire par T. J. D. V.), p. 117.

'I was led into his Majesty's apartment. Nothing but four bare 'walls there. By the light of a candle, I perceived, in a closet, a lit-'tle truckle-bed two feet and a half broad, on which lay a little man 'muffled-up in a dressing-gown of coarse blue duffel: this was the 'King, sweating and shivering under a wretched blanket there, in a 'violent fit of fever. I made my reverence, and began the acquaint-'ance by feeling his pulse, as if I had been his chief physician. The 'fit over, he dressed himself, and took his place at table. Algarotti, 'Keyserling, Maupertuis, and the King's Envoy to the States-General' —one Räsfeld (skilled in Herstal matters, I could guess),—'we were 'of this supper, and discussed, naturally in a profound manner, the 'Immortality of the Soul, Liberty, Fate, the Androgynes of Plato' (the Androgynoi, or Men-Women, in Plato's Convivium; by no means the finest symbolic fancy of the divine Plato),—'and other small topics of 'that nature.'[9]

This is Voltaire's account of the Visit,—which included three 'Suppers,' all huddled into one by him here;—and he says nothing more of it; launching off now into new errors, about Herstal, the Anti-Macchiavel, and so forth: new and uglier errors, with much more of mendacity and serious malice in them, than in this harmless half-dozen now put on the score against him.

Of this Supper-Party, I know by face four of the guests: Maupertuis, Voltaire, Algarotti, Keyserling;—Räsfeld, Rambonet can sit as simulacra or mute accompaniment. Voltaire arrived on Sunday evening; stayed till Wednesday. Wednesday morning, 14th of the month, the Party broke up: Voltaire rolling off to left hand, towards Brussels, or the Hague; King to right, on inspection business, and circuitously homewards. Three Suppers there had been, two busy Days intervening; discussions about Fate and the Androgynoi of Plato by no means the one thing done by Voltaire and the rest, on this occasion. We shall find elsewhere, 'he declaimed his Mahomet' (sublime new Tragedy, not yet come out), in the course of these three evenings, to the 'speechless admiration' of his Royal Host, for one; and, in the daytime, that he even drew his pen about the Herstal Business, which is now getting to its crisis, and wrote one of the Manifestos, still discoverable. And we need not doubt, in spite of his now sneering tone, that things ran high and grand here, in this paltry little Schloss of Moyland; and that those three were actually Suppers of the Gods, for the time being.

[9] Voltaire, Œuvres (Piece once called Vie Privée), ii. 26, 27.

'Councillor Rambonet,' with the holed hat and unsymmetric wig, continues Voltaire in the satirical vein, 'had meanwhile mounted a 'hired hack (cheval de louage;' mischievous Voltaire, I have no doubt he went on wheels, probably of his own): 'he rode all night; and next 'morning arrived at the gates of Liége; where he took Act in the 'name of the King his Master, whilst 2,000 men of the Wesel Troops 'laid Liége under contribution. The pretext of this fine Marching of 'Troops,'—not a pretext at all, but the assertion, correct in all points, of just claims long trodden down, and now made good with more spirit than had been expected,—'was certain rights which the King pretended 'to, over a suburb of Liége. He even charged me to work at a Mani-'festo; and I made one, good or bad; not doubting but a King with 'whom I supped, and who called me his friend, must be in the right. 'The affair soon settled itself by means of a million of ducats,'—nothing like the sum, as we shall see,—'which he exacted by weight, to clear 'the costs of the Tour to Strasburg, which, according to his complaint 'in that Poetic Letter' (Doggerel above given), 'were so heavy.'

That is Voltaire's view; grown very corrosive after Twenty Years. He admits, with all the satire: 'I naturally felt my-'self attached to him; for he had wit, graces; and moreover 'he was a King, which always forms a potent seduction, so 'weak is human nature. Usually it is we of the writing sort 'that flatter Kings: but this King praised me from head to foot, 'while the Abbé Desfontaines and other scoundrels (grédins) 'were busy defaming me in Paris at least once a week.'

What Voltaire thought of the Interview at the Time.

But let us take the contemporary account, which also we have at first hand; which is almost pathetic to read; such a contrast between ruddy morning and the storms of the afternoon! Here are Two Letters from Voltaire; fine transparent human Letters, as his generally are: the first of them written directly on getting back to the Hague, and to the feeling of his eclipsed condition.

Voltaire to M. de Maupertuis (with the King).

'The Hague, 18th September 1740.

'I serve you, Monsieur, sooner than I promised; and that is the 'way you ought to be served. I send you the answer of M. Smith,'

—probably some German or Dutch Schmidt, spelt here in English, connected with the Sciences, say with water-carriage, the typographies, or one need not know what;—'you will see where the question stands.

'When we both left Cleve,'—14th of the month, Wednesday last; 18th is Sunday, in this old cobwebby Palace, where I am correcting Anti-Macchiavel,—'and you took to the right,'—King, homewards, got to Ham that evening,—'I could have thought I was at the Last 'Judgment, where the Bon Dieu separates the elect from the damned. 'Divus Fredericus said to you, "Sit down at my right hand in the Para-'dise of Berlin;" and to me, "Depart, thou accursed, into Holland."

'Here I am accordingly in this phlegmatic place of punishment, 'far from the divine fire which animates the Friedrichs, the Mauper-'tuis, the Algarottis. For God's love, do me the charity of some sparks 'in these stagnant waters where I am,'—stiffening, cooling,—'stupe-'fying to death. Instruct me of your pleasures, of your designs. You 'will doubtless see M. de Valori,'—readers know de Valori; his Book has been published; edited, as too usual, by a Human Nightmare, ignorant of his subject and indeed of almost all other things, and liable to mistakes in every page; yet partly readable, if you carry lanterns, and love "mon gros Valori:"—'offer him, I pray you, my respects. 'If I do not write to him, the reason is, I have no news to send: I 'should be as exact as I am devoted, if my correspondence could be 'useful or agreeable to him.

'Won't you have me send you some Books? If I be still in Hol-'land when your orders come, I will obey in a moment. I pray you 'do not forget me to M. de Keyserling,'—Cæsarion whom we once had at Cirey; a headlong dusky little man of wit (library turned topsy-turvy, as Wilhelmina called him), whom we have seen.

'Tell me, I beg, if the enormous monad of Volfius,'—(Wolf, would the reader like to hear about him? If so, he has only to speak!)—'is arguing at Marburg, at Berlin, or at Hall' (Halle, which is a very different place).

'Adieu, Monsieur: you can address your orders to me "At the 'Hague:" they will be forwarded wherever I am; and I shall be, any-'where on earth,—Yours forever (à vous pour jamais).'[10]

Letter Second, of which a fragment may be given, is to one Cideville, a month later; all the more genuine as there was no chance of the King's hearing about this one. Cideville, some kind of literary Advocate at Rouen (who is wearisomely known to the reader of Voltaire's Letters), had done, what is rather an endemical disorder at this time, some Verses for the King of Prussia, which he wished to be presented to his Majesty. The presentation, owing to accidents, did not take place; hear how Voltaire, from his cobweb Palace at the [10] Voltaire, lxxii. 252.

11th-14th Sept. 1740.

Hague, busy with Anti-Macchiavel, Van Duren and many other things,—18th October 1740, on which day we find him writing many Letters,—explains the sad accident:

Voltaire to M. de Cideville (at Rouen).

'At the Hague, King of Prussia's Palace,
'18th October 1740.

* * * 'This is my case, dear Cideville. When you sent me, 'enclosed in your Letter, those Verses (among which there are some of 'charming and inimitable turn) for our Marcus Aurelius of the North, 'I did well design to pay my court to him with them. He was at that 'time to have come to Brussels incognito: we expected him there; but 'the Quartan Fever, which unhappily he still has, deranged all his pro-'jects. He sent me a courier to Brussels,'—mark that point, my Cideville;—'and so I set out to find him in the neighbourhood of Cleve.

'It was there I saw one of the amiablest men in the world, who 'forms the charm of society, who would be everywhere sought after if 'he were not King; a philosopher without austerity; full of sweetness, 'complaisance and obliging ways (agrémens); not remembering that he 'is King when he meets his friends; indeed so completely forgetting it 'that he made me too almost forget it, and I needed an effort of memory 'to recollect that I here saw sitting at the foot of my bed a Sovereign 'who had an Army of 100,000 men. That was the moment to have 'read your amiable Verses to him:'—yes; but then?—'Madame du 'Châtelet, who was to have sent them to me, did not, ne l'a pas fait.' Alas, no, they are still at Brussels, those charming Verses; and I, for a month past, am here in my cobweb Palace! But I swear to you, the instant I return to Brussels, I &c. &c.[11]

Finally, here is what Friedrich thought of it, ten days after parting with Voltaire. We will read this also (though otherwise ahead of us as yet); to be certified on all sides, and sated for the rest of our lives, concerning the Friedrich-Voltaire First Interview.

King Friedrich to M. Jordan (at Berlin).

'Potsdam, 24th September 1740.

'Most respectable Inspector of the poor, the invalids, orphans, 'crazy people and Bedlams,—I have read with mature meditation the 'very profound Jordanic Letter which was waiting here;'—and do accept your learned proposal.

'I have seen that Voltaire whom I was so curious to know; but I 'saw him with the Quartan hanging on me, and my mind as unstrung 'as my body. With men of his kind one ought not to be sick; one [11] Voltaire, lxxii. 282.

'ought even to be specially well, and in better health than common, if 'one could.

'He has the eloquence of Cicero, the mildness of Pliny, the wisdom 'of Agrippa; he combines, in short, what is to be collected of virtues 'and talents from the three greatest men of Antiquity. His intellect is 'at work incessantly; every drop of ink is a trait of wit from his pen. 'He declaimed his Mahomet to us, an admirable Tragedy which he has 'done,'—which the Official people smelling heresies in it ('toleration,' 'horrors of fanaticism,' and the like) will not let him act, as readers too well know:—'he transported us out of ourselves; I could only admire 'and hold my tongue. The Du Châtelet is lucky to have him: for of 'the good things he flings out at random, a person who had no faculty 'but memory might make a brilliant Book. That Minerva has just 'published her Work on Physics: not wholly bad. It was König,'—whom we know, and whose late tempest in a certain teapot,—'that dictated the theme to her: she has adjusted, ornamented here and there 'with some touch picked from Voltaire at her Suppers. The Chapter on 'Space is pitiable; the'—in short, she is still raw in the Pure Sciences, and should have waited. * * *

'Adieu, most learned, most scientific, most profound Jordan,—or 'rather most gallant, most amiable, most jovial Jordan;—I salute thee, 'with assurance of all those old feelings which thou hast the art of in-'spiring in every one that knows thee. Vale.

'I write the moment of my arrival: be obliged to me, friend; for 'I have been working, I am going to work still, like a Turk, or like a 'Jordan.'[10]

This is hastily thrown-off for Friend Jordan, the instant after his Majesty's circuitous return home. Readers cannot yet attend his Majesty there, till they have brought the Affair of Herstal, and other remainders of the Cleve Journey, along with them.

CHAPTER V.

AFFAIR OF HERSTAL.

THIS Rambonet, whom Voltaire found walking in the court of the old Castle of Moyland, is an official gentleman, otherwise unknown to History, who has lately been engaged in a Public Affair; and is now off again about it, 'on a hired hack' or otherwise,—with very good instructions in his head. Affair which, though in itself but small, is now beginning to make great noise in the world, as Friedrich wends homewards out of his Cleve Journey. He has set it fairly alight, Voltaire and he, before quitting Moyland; and now it will go of itself. The Affair of Herstal, or of the Bishop of Liége; Friedrich's first appearance on the stage of politics. Concerning which some very brief notice, if intelligible, will suffice readers of the present day.

[10] Œuvres de Frédéric, xvii. 71.

Heristal, now called Herstal, was once a Castle known to all mankind; King Pipin's Castle, who styled himself "Pipin of Heristal," before he became King of the Franks and begot Charlemagne. It lies on the Maas, in that fruitful Spa Country; left bank of the Maas, a little to the north of Liége; and probably began existence as a grander place than Liége (Lüttich), which was, at first, some Monastery dependent on secular Herstal and its grandeurs:—think only how the race has gone between these two entities; spiritual Liége now a big City, black with the smoke of forges and steam-mills; Herstal an insignificant Village, accidentally talked of for a few weeks in 1740, and no chance ever to be mentioned again by men.

Herstal, in the confused vicissitudes of a thousand years, had passed through various fortunes, and undergone change of owners often enough. Fifty years ago it was in the hands of the Nassau-Orange House; Dutch William, our English Protestant King, who probably scarce knew of his possessing it, was Lord of Herstal till his death. Dutch William had no children to inherit Herstal: he was of kinship to the Prussian House, as readers are aware; and from that circumstance, not without a great deal of discussion, and difficult 'Division of the Orange Heritage,' this Herstal had, at the long last, fallen to Friedrich Wilhelm's share; it and Neuchâtel, and the Cobweb Palace, and some other places and pertinents.

For Dutch William was of kin, we say; Friedrich I. of Prussia, by his Mother the noble Wife of the Great Elector, was full cousin to Dutch William: and the Marriage Contracts were express,—though the High Mightinesses made difficulties, and the collateral Orange branches were abundantly reluctant, when it came to the fulfilling point. For indeed the matter was intricate. Orange itself, for example, what was to be done with the Principality of Orange? Clearly Prussia's; but it lies imbedded deep in the belly of France: that will be a Cæsarean-Operation for you! Had not Neuchâtel happened just then to fall home to France (or in some measure to France) and be heirless, Prussia's Heritage of Orange would have done little for Prussia! Principality of Orange was, by this chance, long since, mainly in the First King's time, got settled :[1] but there needed many years more of good waiting, and of good pushing, on Friedrich Wilhelm's part; and it was not till 1732 that Friedrich Wilhelm got the Dutch Heritages finally brought to the square: Neuchâtel and Valengin, as aforesaid, in lieu of Orange; and now furthermore, the Old Palace at Loo (that Vieille Cour and biggest cobwebs), with pertinents, with Garden of Honslardik; and a string of items, bigger and less, not worth enumerating. Of the items, this Herstal was one;—and truly, so far as this went, Friedrich Wilhelm often thought he had better never have seen it, so much trouble did it bring him.

How the Herstallers had behaved to Friedrich Wilhelm.

The Herstal people, knowing the Prussian recruiting-system and other rigours, were extremely unwilling to come under Friedrich Wilhelm's sway, could they have helped it. They refused fealty, swore they never would swear: nor did they, till the appearance, or indubitable foreshine, of Friedrich Wilhelm's bayonets advancing on them from the East, brought compliance. And always after, spite of such quasi-fealty, they showed a pig-like obstinacy of humour; a certain insignificant, and as it were impertinent, deep-rooted desire to thwart, irritate and contradict the said Friedrich Wilhelm. Especially in any recruiting matter that might arise, knowing that to be the weak side of his Prussian Majesty. All this would have amounted to nothing, had it not been that their neighbour, the Prince Bishop of Liége, who imagined himself to have some obscure claims of sovereignty over Herstal, and thought the present a good opportunity for asserting these, was diligent to aid and abet the Herstal people in such their mutinous acts. Obscure claims; of which this is the summary, should the reader not prefer to skip it:

'The Bishop of Liége's claims on Herstal (which lie wrapt from 'mankind in the extensive jungle of his law-pleadings, like a Bedlam 'happily fallen extinct) seem to me to have grown mainly from two 'facts more or less radical.

[1] Neuchâtel, 3d November 1707, to Friedrich I., natives preferring him to 'Fifteen other Claimants;' Louis XIV. loudly protesting: not till Treaty of Utrecht (14th March 1713, first month of Friedrich Wilhelm's reign) would Louis XIV., on cession of Orange, consent and sanction.

'Fact first. In Kaiser Barbarossa's time, year 1171, Herstal had 'been given in pawn to the Church of Liége, for a loan, by the then 'proprietor, Duke of Lorraine and Brabant. Loan was repaid, I do 'not learn when, and the Pawn given back; to the satisfaction of said 'Duke, or Duke's Heirs; never quite to the satisfaction of the Church, 'which had been in possession, and was loath to quit, after hoping to 'continue. "Give us back Herstal; it ought to be ours!" Unappeas-'able sigh or grumble to this effect is heard thenceforth, at intervals, 'in the Chapter of Liége, and has not ceased in Friedrich's time. But 'as the world, in its loud thoroughfares, seldom or never heard, or could 'hear, such sighing in the Chapter, nothing had come of it,—till—

'Fact second. In Kaiser Karl V.'s time, the Prince Bishop of Liége 'happened to be a Natural Son of old Kaiser Max's;—and had friends 'at headquarters, of a very choice nature. Had, namely, in this sort, 'Kaiser Karl for Nephew or Half-Nephew; and what perhaps was still 'better, as nearer hand, had Karl's Aunt, Maria Queen of Hungary, 'then Governess of the Netherlands, for Half-Sister. Liége, in these 'choice circumstances, and by other good chances that turned up, again 'got temporary clutch or half-clutch of Herstal, for a couple of years '(date 1546-'8, the Prince of Orange, real proprietor, whose Ancestor 'had bought it for money down, being then a minor); once, and per-'haps a second time in like circumstance; but had always to renounce 'it again, when the Prince of Orange came to maturity. And ever 'since, the Chapter of Liége sighs as before, "Herstal is perhaps in a 'sense ours. We had once some kind of right to it!"—sigh inaudible 'in the loud public thoroughfares. That is the Bishop's claim. The 'name of him, if anybody care for it, is "Georg Ludwig, titular Count 'of Berg," now a very old man: Bishop of Liége, he, and has been 'snatching at Herstal again, very eagerly by any skirt or tagrag that 'might happen to fly loose, these eight years past, in a rash and pro-'voking manner;[2]—age eighty-two at present; poor old fool, he had 'better have sat quiet. There lies a rod in pickle for him, during these 'late months; and will be surprisingly laid-on, were the time come!'

"I have Law Authority over Herstal, and power of judging there in the last appeal," said this Bishop:—"You!" thought Friedrich Wilhelm, who was far off, and had little time to waste. —"Any Prussian recruiter that behaves ill, bring him to me!" said the Bishop, who was on the spot. And accordingly it had been done; one notable instance two years ago: a Prussian Lieutenant locked in the Liége jail, on complaint of riotous Herstal; thereupon a Prussian Officer of rank (Colonel Kreutzen, worthy old Malplaquet gentleman) coming as Royal Messenger, not admitted to audience, nay laid hold of by the Liége bailiff instead; and other unheard-of procedures.[3] So that

[2] Délices du Pais de Liége (Liége. 1738); Helden-Geschichte, ii. 57-62.
[3] Helden-Geschichte, ii. 63-73.

Friedrich Wilhelm had nothing but trouble with this petty Herstal, and must have thought his neighbour Bishop a very contentious highflying gentleman, who took great liberties with the Lion's whiskers, when he had the big animal at an advantage.

The episcopal procedures, eight years ago, about the First Homaging of Herstal, had been of similar complexion; nor had other such failed in the interim, though this last outrage exceeded them all. This last began in the end of 1738; and span itself out through 1739, when Friedrich Wilhelm lay in his final sickness, less able to deal with it than formerly. Being a peaceable man, unwilling to awaken conflagrations for a small matter, Friedrich Wilhelm had offered, through Kreutzen on this occasion, to part with Herstal altogether; to sell it, 'for 100,000 thalers,' say 16,000*l.*, to the highflying Bishop, and honestly wash his hands of it. But the highflying Bishop did not consent, gave no definite answer; and so the matter lay,—like an unsettled extremely irritating paltry little matter,—at the time Friedrich Wilhelm died.

The Gazetteers and public knew little about these particulars, or had forgotten them again; but at the Prussian Court they were in lively remembrance. What the young Friedrich's opinion about them had been we gather from this succinct notice of the thing, written seven or eight years afterwards, exact in all points, and still carrying a breath of the old humour in it. 'A miserable Bishop of Liége thought it a proud 'thing to insult the late King. Some subjects of Herstal, which 'belongs to Prussia, had revolted; the Bishop gave them his 'protection. Colonel Kreutzen was sent to Liége, to compose 'the thing by treaty; credentials with him, full power, and all 'in order. Imagine it, the Bishop would not receive him! 'Three days, day after day, he saw this Envoy apply at his 'Palace, and always denied him entrance. These things had 'grown past endurance.'[4] And Friedrich had taken note of Herstal along with him, on this Cleve Journey; privately intending to put Herstal and the highflying Bishop on a suitabler footing, before his return from those countries.

For indeed, on Friedrich's Accession, matters had grown worse, not better. Of course there was Fealty to be sworn; but the Herstal people, abetted by the highflying Bishop, have declined swearing it. Apology for the past, prospect of amendment for the future, there is less than ever. What is the young King to do with this paltry little Hamlet of Herstal? He could, in theory, go into some Reichs-Hofrath, some Reichs-Kammergericht (kind of treble and tenfold English Court-of-Chancery, which has lawsuits 280 years old),—if he were a theoretic German King. He can plead in the Diets, and the Wetzlar Reichs-Kammergericht without end: 'All German Sovereigns 'have power to send their Ambassador thither, who is like a 'mastiff chained in the backyard' (observes Friedrich elsewhere) 'with privilege of barking at the Moon,'—unrestricted privilege of barking at the Moon, if that will avail a practical man, or King's Ambassador. Or perhaps the Bishop of Liége will bethink him, at last, what considerable liberty he is taking with some people's whiskers? Four months are gone; Bishop of Liége has not in the least bethought him: we are in the neighbourhood in person, with note of the thing in our memory.

[4] Preuss, Œuvres (Mém. de Brandebourg), ii. 53.

4th Sept. 1740.

Friedrich takes the Rod out of Pickle.

Accordingly the Rath Rambonet, whom Voltaire found at Moyland that Sunday night, had been over at Liége; went exactly a week before; with this message of very peremptory tenor from his Majesty:

To the Prince Bishop of Liége.

'Wesel, 4th September 1740.

'My Cousin,—Knowing all the assaults (atteintes) made by you up-'on my indisputable rights over my free Barony of Herstal; and how 'the seditious ringleaders there, for several years past, have been coun-'tenanced (bestärket) by you in their detestable acts of disobedience 'against me,—I have commanded my Privy Councillor Rambonet to 'repair to your presence, and in my name to require from you, within 'two days, a distinct and categorical answer to this question: Whether 'you are still minded to assert your pretended sovereignty over Herstal; 'and whether you will protect the rebels at Herstal, in their disorders 'and abominable disobedience?

'In case you refuse, or delay beyond the term, the Answer which I 'hereby of right demand, you will render yourself alone responsible, 'before the world, for the consequences which infallibly will follow. I 'am, with much consideration,—My Cousin,—

'Your very affectionate Cousin,

'FRIEDRICH.'[5]

[5] Helden-Geschichte, ii. 75, 111.

Rambonet had started straightway for Liége, with this missive; and had duly presented it there, I guess on the 7th,—with notice that he would wait forty-eight hours, and then return with what answer or no-answer there might be. Getting no written answer, or distinct verbal one; getting only some vague mumblement as good as none, Rambonet had disappeared from Liége on the 9th; and was home at Moyland when Voltaire arrived that Sunday evening,—just walking about to come to heat again, after reporting progress to the above effect.

Rambonet, I judge, enjoyed only one of those divine Suppers at Moyland; and dashed off again, 'on hired hack' or otherwise, the very next morning; that contingency of No-answer having been the anticipated one, and all things put in perfect readiness for it. Rambonet's new errand was to 'take act,' as Voltaire calls it, 'at the Gates of Liége,'—to deliver at Liége a succinct Manifesto, Pair of Manifestos, both in Print (ready beforehand), and bearing date that same Sunday, 'Wesel, 11th September;'—much calculated to amaze his Reverence at Liége. Succinct good Manifestos, said to be of Friedrich's own writing; the essential of the two is this:

Exposition of the Reasons which have induced his Majesty the King of Prussia to make just Reprisals on the Prince Bishop of Liége.

'His Majesty the King of Prussia, being driven beyond bounds by 'the rude proceedings of the Prince Bishop of Liége, has with regret 'seen himself forced to recur to the Method of Arms, in order to repress 'the violence and affront which the Bishop has attempted to put upon 'him. This resolution has cost his Majesty much pain; the rather as 'he is, by principle and disposition, far remote from whatever could 'have the least relation to rigour and severity.

'But seeing himself compelled by the Bishop of Liége to take new 'methods, he had no other course but to maintain the justice of his 'rights (la justice de ses droits), and demand reparation for the indignity 'done upon his Minister von Kreutzen, as well as for the contempt with 'which the Bishop of Liége has neglected even to answer the Letter of 'the King.

'As too much rigour borders upon cruelty, so too much patience 'resembles weakness. Thus, although the King would willingly have 'sacrificed his interests to the public peace and tranquillity, it was not 'possible to do so in reference to his honour; and that is the chief 'motive which has determined him to this resolution, so contrary to his 'intentions.

11th Sept. 1740.

'In vain has it been attempted, by methods of mildness, to come 'to a friendly agreement: it has been found, on the contrary, that the 'King's moderation only increased the Prince's arrogance; that mild- 'ness of conduct on one side only furnished resources to pride on the 'other; and that, in fine, instead of gaining by soft procedure, one was 'insensibly becoming an object of vexation and disdain.

'There being no means to have justice but in doing it for oneself, 'and the King being Sovereign enough for such a duty,—he intends 'to make the Prince of Liége feel how far he was in the wrong to abuse 'such moderation so unworthily. But in spite of so much unhandsome 'behaviour on the part of this Prince, the King will not be inflexible; 'satisfied with having shown the said Prince that he can punish him, 'and too just to overwhelm him. FRÉDÉRIC.[6]

'Wesel, September 11th, 1740.'

Whether Rambonet insinuated his Paper-Packet into the Palace of Seraing, left it at the Gate of Liége (fixed by nail, if he saw good), or in what manner he 'took act,' I never knew; and indeed Rambonet vanishes from human History at this point: it is certain only that he did his Formality, say two days hence;—and that the Fact foreshadowed by it is likewise in the same hours, hour after hour, getting steadily done.

For the Manifestos printed beforehand, dated Wesel, 11th September, were not the only thing ready at Wesel; waiting, as on the slip, for the contingency of No-answer. Major-General Borck, with the due battalions, squadrons and equipments, was also ready. Major-General Borck, the same who was with us at Baireuth lately, had just returned from that journey, when he got orders to collect 2,000 men, horse and foot, with the due proportion of artillery, from the Prussian Garrisons in these parts; and to be ready for marching with them, the instant the contingency of No-answer arrives,—Sunday 11th, as can be foreseen. Borck knows his route: To Maaseyk, a respectable Town of the Bishop's, the handiest for Wesel; to occupy Maaseyk and the adjoining 'Counties of Lotz and Horn;' and lie there at the Bishop's charge till his Reverence's mind alter.

Borck is ready, to the last pontoon, the last munition-loaf; and no sooner is signal given of the No-answer come, than Borck, that same 'Sunday 11th,' gets under way; marches, steady as clockwork, towards Maaseyk (fifty miles southwest of him, distance now lessening every hour); crosses the Maas, by help of his pontoons; is now in the Bishop's Territory, and enters [6] Helden-Geschichte, ii. 77. Said to be by Friedrich himself (Stenzel, iv. 59).

Maaseyk, evening of 'Wednesday 14th,'—that very day Voltaire and his Majesty had parted, going different ways from Moyland; and probably about the same hour while Rambonet was 'taking act at the Gate of Liége,' by nail-hammer or otherwise. All goes punctual, swift, cog hitting pinion far and near, in this small Herstal Business; and there is no mistake made, and a minimum of time spent.

Borck's management was throughout good: punctual, quietly exact, polite, mildly inflexible. Fain would the Maaseyk Town-Raths have shut their gates on him; desperately conjuring him, "Respite for a few hours, till we send to Liége for instructions!" But it was to no purpose. "Unbolt, ihr Herren; swift, or the petard will have to do it!" Borck publishes his Proclamation, a mild-spoken rigorous Piece; signifies to the Maaseyk Authorities, That he has to exact a Contribution of 20,000 thalers (3,000*l.*) here, Contribution payable in three days; that he furthermore, while he continues in these parts, will need such and such rations, accommodations, allowances, —'fifty louis (say guineas) daily for his own private expenses,' one item;—and, in mild rhadamanthine language, waves aside all remonstrance, refusal or delay, as superfluous considerations: Unless said Contribution and required supplies come in, it will be his painful duty to bring them in.[7]

The highflying Bishop, much astonished, does now eagerly answer his Prussian Majesty, "Was from home, was ill, thought he had answered; is the most ill-used of Bishops;" and other things of a hysteric character.[8] And there came forth, as natural to the situation, multitudinous complainings, manifestoings, applications to the Kaiser, to the French, to the Dutch, of a very shrieky character on the Bishop of Liége's part; sparingly, if at all noticed on Friedrich's: the whole of which we shall consider ourselves free to leave undisturbed in the rubbish-abysses, as henceforth conceivable to the reader. 'Sed 'spem stupende fefellit eventus,' shrieks the poor old Bishop, making moan to the Kaiser: 'ecce enim, præmissâ duntaxat 'unâ Literâ, one Letter,' and little more, 'the said King of 'Borussia has, with about 2,000 horse and foot, and warlike 'engines, in this month of September, entered the Territory of 'Liége;'[9] which is an undeniable truth, but an unavailing.

[7] Helden-Geschichte, i. 427; ii. 113.
[8] Ibid. ii. 85, 86 (date, 16th September).
[9] Ibid. ii. 88.

4th-28th Sept. 1740.

Borck is there, and '2,000 good arguments with him,' as Voltaire defines the phenomenon. Friedrich, except to explain pertinently what my readers already know, does not write or speak farther on the subject; and readers and he may consider the Herstal Affair, thus set agoing under Borck's auspices, as in effect finished; and that his Majesty has left it on a satisfactory footing, and may safely turn his back on it, to wait the sure issue at Berlin before long.

What Voltaire thought of Herstal.

Voltaire told us he himself 'did one Manifesto, good or bad,' on this Herstal business:—where is that Piece, then, what has become of it? Dig well in the realms of Chaos, rectifying stupidities more or less enormous, the Piece itself is still discoverable; and, were pieces by Voltaire much a rarity instead of the reverse, might be resuscitated by a good Editor, and printed in his Works. Lies buried in the lonesome rubbish-mountains of that Helden-Geschichte,—let a Siste Viator, scratched on the surface, mark where.[10] Apparently that is the Piece by Voltaire? Yes, on reading that, it has every internal evidence; distinguishes itself from the surrounding pieces, like a slab of compact polished stone, in a floor rammed together out of ruinous old bricks, broken bottles and mortar-dust;—agrees, too, if you examine by the microscope, with the external indications, which are sure and at last clear, though infinitesimally small; and is beyond doubt Voltaire's, if it were now good for much.

It is not properly a Manifesto, but an anonymous memoir published in the Newspapers, explaining to impartial mankind, in a legible brief manner, what the old and recent History of Herstal, and the Troubles of Herstal, have been, and how chimerical and 'null to the extreme of nullity (nulles de toute nullité)' this poor Bishop's pretensions upon it are. Voltaire expressly piques himself on this Piece;[11] brags also how he settled 'M. de Fénelon' (French Ambassador at the Hague), 'who came to me the day before yesterday,' much out of square upon the Herstal Business, till I pulled him straight. And it is evident (beautifully so, your Majesty) how Voltaire busied himself in the Gazettes and Diplomatic circles, setting Friedrich's case right; Voltaire very loyal to Friedrich and his Liége Cause at that time;—and the contrast between what his contemporary Letters say on the subject, and what his ulterior Pasquil called Vie Privée says, is again great.

[10] Helden-Geschichte, ii. 93-98.

[11] Letter to Friedrich: dateless, dateable 'soon after 17th September;' which the rash dark Editors have by guess misdated 'August;' or, what was safer for them, omitted it altogether. Œuvres de Voltaire (Paris, 1818, 40 voll.) gives the Letter, xxxix. 442 (see also ibid. 453, 463); later Editors, and even Preuss, take the safer course.

The dull stagnant world, shaken awake by this Liége adventure, gives voice variously; and in the Gazetteer and Diplomatic circles it is much criticised, by no means everywhere in the favourable tone at this first blush of the business. "He had written an Anti-Macchiavel," says the Abbé St. Pierre, and even says Voltaire (in the Pasquil, not the contemporary Letters), "and he acts thus!" Truly he does, Monsieur de Voltaire; and all men, with light upon the subject, or even with the reverse upon it, must make their criticisms. For the rest, Borck's '2,000 arguments' are there; which Borck handles well, with polite calm rigour: by degrees the dust will fall, and facts everywhere be seen for what they are.

As to the highflying Bishop, finding that hysterics are but wasted on Friedrich and Borck, and produce no effect with their 2,000 validities, he flies next to the Kaiser, to the Imperial Diet, in shrill-sounding Latin obtestations, of which we already gave a flying snatch: "Your humilissimus and fidelissimus Vassallus, and most obsequient Servant, Georgius Ludovicus; meek, modest, and unspeakably in the right: was ever Member of the Holy Roman Empire so snubbed, and grasped by the windpipe, before? O, help him, great Kaiser, bid the iron gripe loosen itself!"[12] The Kaiser does so, in heavy Latin rescripts, in German Dehortatoriums more than one, of a sulky, imperative, and indeed very lofty tenor; "Let Georgius Ludovicus go, foolish rash young Dilection (Liebden, not Majesty, we ourselves being the only Majesty), and I will judge between you; otherwise—!" said the Kaiser, ponderously shaking his Olympian wig, and lifting his gilt cane, or sceptre of mankind, in an Olympian manner. Here are some touches of his second sublimest Dehortatorium addressed to Friedrich, in a very compressed state:[13]

We Karl the Sixth, Kaiser of (Titles enough), * * * 'Considering 'these, in the Holy Roman Reich, almost unheard-of violent Doings

[12] Helden-Geschichte, ii. 86-116.
[13] Ibid. ii. 127: a first and milder (ibid. 73).

4th-28th Sept. 1740.

'(Thätlichkeiten), which We, in Our Supreme-Judge Office, cannot al-'together justify, nor will endure . . . . . We have the trust that you 'yourself will magnanimously see How evil counsellors have misled 'your Dilection to commence your Reign, not by showing example of 'Obedience to the Laws appointed for all members of the Reich, for 'the weak and for the strong alike, but by such Doings (Thathand-'lungen) as in all quarters must cause a great surprise.

'We give your Dilection to know, therefore, That you must straight-'way withdraw those troops which have broken into the Liége Territory; 'make speedy restitution of all that has been extorted;—especially 'General von Borck to give back at once those 50 louis d'or daily 'drawn by him, to renounce his demand of the 20,000 thalers, to make 'good all damage done, and retire with his whole military force (Militz) 'over the Liége boundaries;—and in brief, that you will, by law or 'arbitration, manage to agree with the Prince Bishop of Liége, who 'wishes it very much. These things We expect from your Dilection, 'as Kurfürst of Brandenburg, within the space of Two Months from 'the Issuing of this; and remain,'—Yours as you shall demean your-'self,—KARL.

'Given at Wien, 4th of October 1740.'—The last Dehortatorium ever signed by Karl VI. In two weeks after he ate too many mush-rooms,—and immense results followed!

Dehortatoriums had their interest, at Berlin and elsewhere, for the Diplomatic circles; but did not produce the least effect on Borck or Friedrich; though Friedrich noted the Kaiser's manner in these things, and thought privately to himself, as was evident to the discerning, "What an amount of wig on that old gentleman!" A notable Kaiser's Ambassador, Herr Botta, who had come with some Accession compliments, in these weeks, was treated slightingly by Friedrich; hardly ad-mitted to Audience; and Friedrich's public reply to the last Dehortatorium had almost something of sarcasm in it: Evil counsellors yourself, Most Dread Kaiser! It is you that are 'misled by counsellors, who might chance to set Germany on 'fire, were others as unwise as they!' Which latter phrase was remarkable to mankind.—There is a long account already run-up between that old gentleman, with his Seckendorfs, Grumkows, with his dull insolencies, wiggeries, and this young gentleman, who has nearly had his heart broken and his Fa-ther's house driven mad by them! Borck remains at his post; rations duly delivered, and fifty louis a day for his own pri-vate expenses; and there is no answer to the Kaiser, or in sharp brief terms (about 'chances of setting Germany on fire'), rather worse than none.

Readers see, as well as Friedrich did, what the upshot of this affair must be;—we will now finish it off, and wash our hands of it, before following his Majesty to Berlin. The poor Bishop had applied, shrieking, to the French for help;—and there came some colloquial passages between Voltaire and Fénelon, if that were a result. He had shrieked in like manner to the Dutch, but without result of any kind traceable in that quarter: nowhere, except from the Kaiser, is so much as a Dehortatorium to be got. Whereupon the once highflying, now vainly shrieking Bishop discerns clearly that there is but one course left,—the course which has lain wide open for some years past, had not his flight gone too high for seeing it. Before three weeks are over, seeing how Dehortatoriums go, he sends his Ambassadors to Berlin, his apologies, proposals:[14] "Would not your Majesty perhaps consent to sell this Herstal, as your Father of glorious memory was pleased to be willing once?"—

Friedrich answers straightway to the effect: "Certainly! Pay me the price it was once already offered for: 100,000 thalers, plus the expenses since incurred. That will be 180,000 thalers, besides what you have spent already on General Borck's days' wages. To which we will add that wretched little fraction of Old Debt, clear as noon, but never paid nor any part of it; 60,000 thalers, due by the See of Liége ever since the Treaty of Utrecht; 60,000, for which we will charge no interest: that will make 240,000 thalers,—36,000*l.*, instead of the old sum you might have had it at. Produce that cash; and take Herstal, and all the dust that has risen out of it, well home with you."[15] The Bishop thankfully complies in all points; negotiation speedily done ('20th Oct.' the final date): Bishop has not, I think, quite so much cash on hand; but will pay all he has, and 4 per centum interest till the whole be liquidated. His Ambassadors 'get gold snuffboxes;' and return mildly glad!

And thus, in some six weeks after Borck's arrival in those parts, Borck's function is well done. The noise of Gazettes [14] Ambassadors arrived 28th September; last Dehortatorium not yet out. Business was completed 20th October (Rödenbeck, in diebus).

[15] Stenzel, iv. 60, who counts in gulden, and is not distinct.

16th Sept. 1740.

and Diplomatic circles lays itself again; and Herstal, famous once for King Pipin, and famous again for King Friedrich, lapses at length into obscurity, which we hope will never end. Hope;—though who can say? Roucoux, quite close upon it, becomes a Battle-ground in some few years; and memorabilities go much at random in this world!

CHAPTER VI.

RETURNS BY HANOVER; DOES NOT CALL ON HIS ROYAL UNCLE THERE.

FRIEDRICH spent ten days on his circuitous journey home; considerable inspection to be done, in Minden, Magdeburg, not to speak of other businesses he had. The old Newspapers are still more intent upon him, now that the Herstal Affair has broken into flame: especially the English Newspapers; who guess that there are passages of courtship going on between great George their King and him. Here is one fact, correct in every point, for the old London Public: 'Letters from 'Hanover say, that the King of Prussia passed within a small 'distance of that City the 16th inst. N. S., on his return to 'Berlin, but did not stop at Herrenhausen;'—about which there has been such hoping and speculating among us lately.[1] A fact which the extinct Editor seems to meditate for a day or two; after which he says (partly in italics), opening his lips the second time, like a Friar Bacon's Head significant to the Public: 'Letters from Hanover tell us that the Interview, 'which it was said his Majesty was to have with the King of 'Prussia, did not take place, for certain private reasons, which 'our Correspondent leaves us to guess at!'

It is well known Friedrich did not love his little Uncle, then or thenceforth; still less his little Uncle him: "What is this Prussia, rising alongside of us, higher and higher, as if it would reach our own sublime level!" thinks the little Uncle to himself. At present there is no quarrel between them; on the contrary, as we have seen, there is a mutual capability of helping one another, which both recognise; but will an interview tend to forward that useful result? Friedrich, in the intervals of an ague, with Herstal just broken out, may have wisely decided, No. "Our sublime little Uncle, of the waxy complexion, with the proudly staring fish-eyes,—no wit in him, not much sense, and a great deal of pride,—stands dreadfully erect, 'plumb and more,' with the Garter-leg advanced, when one goes to see him; and his remarks are not of an entertaining nature. Leave him standing there: to him let Truchsess and Bielfeld suffice, in these hurries, in this ague that is still upon us." Upon which the dull old Newspapers, Owls of Minerva that then were, endeavour to draw inferences. The noticeable fact is, Friedrich did, on this occasion, pass within a mile or two of his royal Uncle, without seeing him; and had not, through life, another opportunity; never saw the sublime little man at all, nor was again so near him.

[1] Daily Post, 22d Sept. 1740; other London Newspapers from July 31st downwards.

I believe Friedrich little knows the thick-coming difficulties of his Britannic Majesty at this juncture; and is too impatient of these laggard procedures on the part of a man with eyes à fleur-de-tête. Modern readers too have forgotten Jenkins's Ear; it is not till after long study and survey that one begins to perceive the anomalous profundities of that phenomenon to the poor English Nation and its poor George II.

The English sent off, last year, a scanty Expedition, 'six ships of the line,' only six, under Vernon, a fiery Admiral, a little given to be fiery in Parliamentary talk withal; and these did proceed to Porto-Bello on the Spanish Main of South America; did hurl-out on Porto-Bello such a fiery destructive deluge, of gunnery and bayonet-work, as quickly reduced the poor place to the verge of ruin, and forced it to surrender with whatever navy, garrison, goods and resources were in it, to the discretion of fiery Vernon,—who does not prove implacable, he or his, to a petitioning enemy. Yes, humble the insolent, but then be merciful to them, say the admiring Gazetteers. 'The actual monster,' how cheering to think, 'who tore-off 'Mr. Jenkins's Ear, was got hold of' (actual monster, or even three or four different monsters who each did it, the 'hold got' being mythical, as readers see), 'and naturally thought he 'would be slit to ribbons; but our people magnanimously par-'doned him, magnanimously flung him aside out of sight;'[2] impossible to shoot a dog in cold blood.

Whereupon Vernon returned home triumphant; and there

[2] Gentleman's Magazine, x. 124, 145 (date of the Event is 3d Dec. N.S. 1739).

burst forth such a jubilation, over the day of small things, as is now astonishing to think of. Had the Termagant's own Thalamus and Treasury been bombarded suddenly one night by redhot balls, Madrid City laid in ashes, or Baby Carlos's Apanage extinguished from Creation, there could hardly have been greater English joy (witness the "Porto-Bellos" they still have, new Towns so-named); so flamy is the murky element growing on that head. And indeed had the cipher of tar-barrels burnt, and of ale-barrels drunk, and the general account of wick and tallow spent in illuminations and in aldermanic exertions on the matter, been accurately taken, one doubts if Porto-Bello sold, without shot fired, to the highest bidder, at its flowriest, would have covered such a sum. For they are a singular Nation, if stirred-up from their stagnancy; and are much in earnest about this Spanish War.

It is said there is now another far grander Expedition on the stocks: military this time as well as naval, intended for the Spanish Main;—but of that, for the present, we will defer speaking. Enough, the Spanish War is a most serious and most furious business to those old English; and, to us, after forced study of it, shines out like far-off conflagration, with a certain lurid significance in the then night of things. Night otherwise fallen dark and somniferous to modern mankind. As Britannic Majesty and his Walpoles have, from the first, been dead against this Spanish War, the problem is all the more ominous, and the dreadful corollaries that may hang by it the more distressing to the royal mind.

For example, there is known, or as good as known, to be virtually some Family Compact, or covenanted Brotherhood of Bourbonism, French and Spanish: political people quake to ask themselves, "How will the French keep out of this War, if it continue any length of time? And in that case, how will Austria, Europe at large? Jenkins's Ear will have kindled the Universe, not the Spanish Main only, and we shall be at a fine pass!" The Britannic Majesty reflects that if France take to fighting him, the first stab given will probably be in the accessiblest quarter and the intensely most sensitive,—our own Electoral Dominions where no Parliament plagues us, our dear native country, Hanover. Extremely interesting to know what Friedrich of Prussia will do in such contingency?

Well, truly it might have been King George's best bargain to close with Friedrich; to guarantee Jülich and Berg, and get Friedrich to stand between the French and Hanover; while George, with an England behind him, in such humour, went wholly into that Spanish Business, the one thing needful to them at present. Truly; but then again, there are considerations: "What is this Friedrich, just come out upon the world? What real fighting power has he, after all that ridiculous drilling and recruiting Friedrich Wilhelm made? Will he be faithful in bargain; is not, perhaps, from of old, his bias always toward France rather? And the Kaiser, what will the Kaiser say to it?" These are questions for a Britannic Majesty! Seldom was seen such an insoluble imbroglio of potentialities; dangerous to touch, dangerous to leave lying; —and his Britannic Majesty's procedures upon it are of a very slow intricate sort; and will grow still more so, year after year, in the new intricacies that are coming, and be a weariness to my readers and me. For observe the simultaneous fact. All this while, Robinson at Vienna is dunning the Imperial Majesty to remember old Marlborough days and the Laws of Nature; and declare for us against France, in case of the worst. What an attempt! Imperial Majesty has no money; Imperial Majesty remembers recent days rather, and his own last quarrel with France (on the Polish-Election score), in which you Sea Powers cruelly stood neuter! One comfort, and pretty much one only, is left to a nearly bankrupt Imperial heart; that France does at any rate ratify Pragmatic Sanction, and instead of enemy to that inestimable Document has become friend,—if only she be well let alone. "Let well alone," says the sad Kaiser, bankrupt of heart as well as purse: "I have saved the Pragmatic, got Fleury to guarantee it; I will hunt wild swine and not shadows any more: ask me not!" And now this Herstal business; the Imperial Dehortatoriums, perhaps of a high nature, that are like to come? More hopeless proposition the Britannic Majesty never made than this to the Kaiser. But he persists in it, orders Robinson to persist; knocks at the Austrian door with one hand, at the Prussian or Anti-Austrian with the other; and gazes, with those proud fish-eyes, into perils and potentialities and a sea of troubles. Wearisome to think of, were not one bound to it! Here, from a singular Constitutional History of England, not yet got into print, are two Excerpts; which I will request the reader to try if he can take along with him, in view of much that is coming:

16th Sept. 1740.

1. A just War.—'This War, which posterity scoffs at as the War 'for Jenkins's Ear, was, if we examine it, a quite indispensable one; 'the dim much-bewildered English, driven into it by their deepest in- 'stincts, were, in a chaotic inarticulate way, right and not wrong in 'taking it as the Commandment of Heaven. For such, in a sense, it 'was; as shall by and by appear. Not perhaps since the grand Refor- 'mation Controversy, under Oliver Cromwell and Elizabeth, had there, 'to this poor English People (who are essentially dumb, *in*articulate, 'from the weight of meaning they have, notwithstanding the palaver 'one hears from them in certain epochs), been a more authentic cause 'of War. And, what was the fatal and yet foolish circumstance, their 'Constitutional Captains, especially their King, would never and could 'never regard it as such; but had to be forced into it by the public 'rage, there being no other method left in the case.

'I say, a most necessary War, though of a most stupid appearance; 'such the fatality of it:—begun, carried on, ended, as if by a People 'in a state of somnambulism! More confused operation never was. A 'solid placid People, heavily asleep—(and snoring much, shall we say, 'and inarticulately grunting and struggling under indigestions, Con- 'stitutional and other? Do but listen to the hum of those extinct 'Pamphlets and Parliamentary Oratories of theirs!),—yet an honestly 'intending People; and keenly alive to any commandment from Hea- 'ven, that could pierce through the thick skin of them into their big 'obstinate heart. Such a commandment, then and there, was that 'monition about Jenkins's Ear. Upon which, so pungent was it to 'them, they started violently out of bed, into painful sleep-walking; 'and went, for twenty years and more, clambering and sprawling about, 'far and wide, on the giddy edge of precipices, over housetops and 'frightful cornices and parapets; in a dim fulfilment of the said Hea- 'ven's command. I reckon that this War, though there were intervals, 'Treaties of Peace more than one, and the War had various names,— 'did not end till 1763. And then, by degrees, the poor English Nation 'found that (at, say, a thousand times the necessary expense, and with 'imminent peril to its poor head, and all the bones of its body) it had 'actually succeeded,—by dreadful exertions in its sleep! This will be 'more apparent by and by; and may be a kind of comfort to the sad 'English reader, drearily surveying such somnambulisms on the part of 'his poor ancestors.'

2. Two Difficulties.—'There are Two grand Difficulties in this 'Farce-Tragedy of a War; of which only one, and that not the worst 'of the Pair, is in the least surmised by the English hitherto. Diffi- 'culty First, which is even worse than the other, and will surprisingly 'attend the English in all their Wars now coming, is: That their fight- 'ing-apparatus, though made of excellent material, cannot fight,—being

'in disorganic condition; one branch of it, especially the "Military" 'one as they are pleased to call it, being as good as totally chaotic, and 'this in a quite habitual manner, this long while back. With the Naval 'branch it is otherwise; which also is habitual there. The English 'almost as if by nature can sail, and fight, in ships; cannot well help 'doing it. Sailors innumerable are bred to them; they are planted in 'the Ocean, opulent stormy Neptune clipping them in all his moods 'forever: and then by nature, being a dumb, much-enduring, much-'reflecting, stout, veracious and valiant kind of People, they shine in 'that way of life, which specially requires such. Without much fore-'thought, they have sailors innumerable, and of the best quality. The 'English have among them also, strange as it may seem to the cursory 'observer, a great gift of organising; witness their Arkwrights and 'others: and this gift they may often, in matters Naval more than else-'where, get the chance of exercising. For a Ship's Crew, or even a 'Fleet, unlike a land Army, is of itself a unity, its fortunes disjoined, 'dependent on its own management; and it falls, moreover, as no land 'Army can, to the undivided guidance of one man,—who (by hypo-'thesis, being English) has now and then, from of old, chanced to be an 'organising man; and who is always much interested to know and prac-'tise what has been well organised. For you are in contact with verities, 'to an unexampled degree, when you get upon the Ocean, with intent 'to sail on it, much more to fight on it;—bottomless destruction raging 'beneath you and on all hands of you, if you neglect, for any reason, 'the methods of keeping it down, and making it float you to your aim!

'The English Navy is in tolerable order at that period. But as to 'the English Army,—we may say it is, in a wrong sense, the wonder 'of the world, and continues so throughout the whole of this History 'and farther! Never before, among the rational sons of Adam, were 'Armies sent out on such terms,—namely without a General, or with 'no General understanding the least of his business. The English have 'a notion that Generalship is not wanted; that War is not an Art, as 'playing Chess is, as finding the Longitude, and doing the Differential 'Calculus are (and a much deeper Art than any of these); that War is 'taught by Nature, as eating is; that courageous soldiers, led on by a 'courageous Wooden Pole with Cocked-hat on it will do very well. 'In the world I have not found opacity of platitude go deeper among 'any People. This is Difficulty First,—not yet suspected by an Eng-'lish People, capable of great opacity on some subjects.

'Difficulty Second is, That their Ministry, whom they had to force 'into this War, perhaps do not go zealously upon it. And perhaps 'even, in the above circumstances, they totally want knowledge how 'to go upon it, were they never so zealous! Difficulty Second might 'be much helped, were it not for Difficulty First. But the administer-'ing of war is a thing also that does not come to a man like eating.— 'This Second Difficulty, suspicion that Walpole and perhaps still higher 'heads want zeal, gives his Britannic Majesty infinite trouble; and'—

—And so, in short, he stands there, with the Garter-leg advanced, looking loftily into a considerable sea of troubles,—that day when Friedrich drove past him, Friday 16th September 1740, and never came so near him again.

The next business for Friedrich was a Visit at Brunswick, to the Affinities and Kindred, in passing; where also was an important little act to be done: Betrothal of the young Prince, August Wilhelm, Heir-Presumptive whom we saw in Strasburg, to a Princess of that House, Louisa Amelia, younger Sister of Friedrich's own Queen. A modest promising arrangement; which turned out well enough,—though the young Prince, Father to the Kings that since are, was not supremely fortunate otherwise.[3] After which, the review at Magdeburg; and home on the 24th, there to 'be busy as a Turk or as a M. Jordan,'—according to what we read long since.

CHAPTER VII.

WITHDRAWS TO REINSBERG, HOPING A PEACEABLE WINTER.

By this Herstal token, which is now blazing abroad, now and for a month to come, it can be judged that the young King of Prussia intends to stand on his own footing, quite peremptorily if need be; and will by no means have himself led about in Imperial harness, as his late Father was. So that a dull Public (Herrenhausen very specially), and Gazetteer Owls of Minerva everywhere, may expect events. All the more indubitably, when that spade-work comes to light in the Wesel Country. It is privately certain (the Gazetteers not yet sure about it, till they see the actual spades going), this new King does fully intend to assert his rights on Berg-Jülich; and will appear there with his iron ramrods, the instant old Kur-Pfalz shall decease, let France and the Kaiser say No to it or say Yes. There are, in fact, at a fit place, 'Büderich in the neighbourhood of Wesel,' certain rampart-works, beginnings as of an Entrenched Camp, going on;—"for Review purposes merely," say the Gazetteers, in italics. Here, it privately is Friedrich's resolution, shall a Prussian Army, of the due strength (could be well nigh 100,000 strong if needful), make its appearance, directly on old Kur-Pfalz's decease, if one live to see such event.[1] France and the Kaiser will probably take good survey of that Büderich phenomenon before meddling.

[3] Betrothal was 20th September 1740; Marriage, 5th January 1742 (Buchholz, i. 207).

To do his work like a King, and shun no peril and no toil in the course of what his work may be, is Friedrich's rule and intention. Nevertheless it is clear he expects to approve himself magnanimous rather in the Peaceable operations than in the Warlike; and his outlooks are, of all places and pursuits, towards Reinsberg and the Fine Arts, for the time being. His Public activity meanwhile they describe as 'prodigious,' though the ague still clings to him; such building, instituting, managing: Opera-House, French Theatre, Palace for his Mother; —day by day, many things to be recorded by Editor Formey, though the rule about them here is silence except on cause.

No doubt the ague is itself privately a point of moment. Such a vexatious paltry little thing, in this bright whirl of Activities, Public and other, which he continues managing in spite of it; impatient to be rid of it. But it will not go: there it reappears always, punctual to its 'fourth day,'—like a snarling street-dog, in the high Ball-room and Work-room. 'He is drinking Pyrmont water;' has himself proposed Quinquina, a remedy just come up, but the Doctors shook their heads; has tried snatches of Reinsberg, too short; he intends soon to be out there for a right spell of country, there to be "happy," and get quit of his ague. The ague went,—and by a remedy which surprised the whole world, as will be seen!

Wilhelmina's Return-Visit.

Monday 17th October, came the Baireuth Visitors; Wilhelmina all in a flutter, and tremor of joy and sorrow, to see her Brother again, her old kindred and the altered scene of things. Poor Lady, she is perceptibly more tremulous than usual; and her Narrative, not in dates only, but in more memorable points, dances about at a sad rate; interior agitations and tremulous shrill feelings shivering her this way and that, and throwing things topsyturvy in one's recollection. Like the magnetic needle, shaky but stedfast (agitée mais constante). Truer nothing can be, points forever to the Pole; but also what obliquities it makes; will shiver aside in mad escapades, if you hold the paltriest bit of old iron near it,—paltriest clack of gossip about this loved Brother of mine! Brother, we will hope, silently continues to be Pole, so that the needle always comes back again; otherwise all would go to wreck. Here, in abridged and partly rectified form, are the phenomena witnessed:

[1] Stenzel, iv. 61.

'We arrived at Berlin the end of October' (Monday 17th, as above said). 'My younger Brothers, followed by the Princes of the Blood 'and by all the Court, received us at the bottom of the stairs. I was 'led to my apartment, where I found the Reigning Queen, my Sisters' (Ulrique, Amelia), 'and the Princesses' (of the Blood, as above, Schwedt and the rest). 'I learned with much chagrin that the King was ill of 'tertian ague' (quartan; but that is no matter). 'He sent me word 'that, being in his fit, he could not see me; but that he depended on 'having that pleasure tomorrow. The Queen Mother, to whom I went 'without delay, was in a dark condition; rooms all hung with their 'lugubrious drapery; everything yet in the depth of mourning for my 'Father. What a scene for me! Nature has her rights; I can say 'with truth, I have almost never in my life been so moved as on this 'occasion.' Interview with Mamma,—we can fancy it,—'was of the 'most touching.' Wilhelmina had been absent eight years. She scarcely knows the young ones again, all so grown;—finds change on change; and that Time, as he always is, has been busy. That night the Supper-Party was exclusively a Family one.

Her Brother's welcome to her on the morrow, though ardent enough, she found deficient in sincerity, deficient in several points; as indeed a Brother up to the neck in business, and just come out of an ague-fit, does not appear to the best advantage. Wilhelmina noticed how ill he looked, so lean and broken-down (maigre et défait) within the last two months; but seems to have taken no account of it farther, in striking her balances with Friedrich. And indeed in her Narrative of this Visit, not, we will hope, in the Visit itself, she must have been in a high state of magnetic deflection,—pretty nearly her maximum of such, discoverable in those famous Memoirs,—such a tumult is there in her statements, all gone to ground-and-lofty tumbling in this place; so discrepant are the still ascertainable facts from this topsyturvy picture of them, sketched by her four years hence (in 1744). The truest of magnetic needles; but so sensitive, if you bring foreign iron near it!

Wilhelmina was loaded with honours by an impartial Berlin Public, that is, Court Public; 'but, all being in mourning, the Court was not 'brilliant. The Queen Mother saw little company, and was sunk in 'sorrow;—had not the least influence in affairs, so jealous was the new 'King of his Authority,—to the Queen Mother's surprise,' says Wilhelmina. For the rest, here is a King 'becoming truly unpopular' (or, we fancy so, in our deflected state, and judging by the rumour of cliques); 'a general discontent reigning in the Country, love of his subjects pretty 'much gone; people speaking of him in no measured terms' (in certain cliques). 'Cares nothing about those who helped him as Prince Royal,' say some; others complain of his avarice' (meaning steady vigilance in outlay) 'as surpassing the late King's; this one complained of his 'violences of temper (emportemens); that one of his suspicions, of his 'distrust, his haughtinesses, his dissimulation' (meaning polite impenetrability when he saw good). Several circumstances, known to Wilhelmina's own experience, compel Wilhelmina's assent on those points. 'I would have spoken to him about them, if my Brother of Prussia' (young August Wilhelm, betrothed the other day) 'and the Queen Reg-'nant had not dissuaded me. Farther on I will give the explanation 'of all this,'—never did it anywhere. 'I beg those who may one day 'read these Memoirs, to suspend their judgment on the character of 'this great Prince till I have developed it.'[2] Oh my Princess, you are true and bright, but you are shrill; and I admire the effect of atmospheric electricity, not to say, of any neighbouring marine-store shop, or miserable bit of broken pan, on one of the finest magnetic needles ever made and set trembling!

Wilhelmina is incapable of deliberate falsehood; and this her impression or reminiscence, with all its exaggeration, is entitled to be heard in evidence so far. From this, and from other sources, readers will assure themselves that discontents were not wanting; that King Friedrich was not amiable to everybody at this time,—which indeed he never grew to be at any other time. He had to be a King; that was the trade he followed, not the quite different one of being amiable all round. Amiability is good, my Princess; but the question rises, "To whom?—for example, to the young gentleman who shot himself in Löbegun?" There are young gentlemen and old sometimes in considerable quantities, to whom, if you were in your duty, as a King of men (or even as a 'King of one man and his affairs,' if that is all your kingdom), you should have been hateful instead of amiable! That is a stern truth; too much forgotten by Wilhelmina and others. Again, what a deadening and killing circumstance is it in the career of amiability, that you are bound not to be communicative of your inner man, but perpetually and strictly the reverse! It may be doubted if a good King can be amiable; certainly he cannot in any but the noblest ages, and then only to a select few. I should guess Friedrich was at no time fairly loved, not by those nearest to him. He was rapid, decisive; of wiry compact nature; had nothing of his Father's amplitudes, simplicities; nothing to sport with and fondle, far from it. Tremulous sensibilities, ardent affections; these we clearly discover in him, in extraordinary vivacity; but he wears them under his polished panoply, and is outwardly a radiant but metallic object to mankind. Let us carry this along with us in studying him; and thank Wilhelmina for giving us hint of it in her oblique way.—Wilhelmina's love for her Brother rose to quite heroic pitch in coming years, and was at its highest when she died. That continuation of her Memoirs in which she is to develop her Brother's character, was never written: it has been sought for in modern times; and a few insignificant pages, with evidence that there is not, and was not, any more, are all that has turned up.[3]

[2] Wilhelmina, ii. 326.

Incapable of falsity prepense, we say; but the known facts, which stand abundantly on record if you care to search them out, are merely as follows: Friedrich, with such sincerity as there might be, did welcome Wilhelmina on the morrow of her arrival; spoke of Reinsberg, and of air and rest, and how pleasant it would be; rolled-off next morning, having at last gathered-up his businesses, and got them well in hand, to Reinsberg accordingly; whither Wilhelmina, with the Queen Regnant and others of agreeable quality, followed in two days; intending a long and pleasant spell of country out there. Which hope was tolerably fulfilled, even for Wilhelmina, though there did come unexpected interruptions, not of Friedrich's bringing.

Unexpected News at Reinsberg.

Friedrich's pursuits and intended conquests, for the present, are of peaceable and even gay nature. French Theatre, Italian Opera-House, these are among the immediate outlooks. Voltaire, skilled in French acting, if anybody ever were, is multifariously negotiating for a Company of that kind,—let him be swift, be successful.[4] An Italian Opera there shall be; the House is still to be built: Captain Knobelsdorf, who built Reinsberg, whom we have known, is to do it. Knobelsdorf has gone to Italy on that errand; 'went by Dresden, carefully 'examining the Opera-House there, and all the famed Opera-'Houses on his road.' Graun, one of the best judges living, is likewise off to Italy, gathering singers. Our Opera too shall be a successful thing, and we hope, a speedy. Such are Friedrich's outlooks at this time.

[3] Pertz, Ueber die Denkwürdigkeiten der Markgräfin von Bayreuth (Paper read In the Akademie der Wissenschaften, Berlin, 25th April 1850).
[4] Letters of Voltaire (passim, in these months).

A miscellaneous pleasant company is here; Truchsess and Bielfeld, home from Hanover, among them; Wilhelmina is here;—Voltaire himself perhaps coming again. Friedrich drinks his Pyrmont waters; works at his public businesses all day, which are now well in hand, and manageable by couriers; at evening he appears in company, and is the astonishment of everybody; brilliant, like a new-risen sun, as if he knew of no illness, knew of no business, but lived for amusement only. 'He intends Private Theatricals withal, and is getting ready Voltaire's Mort de César.'[5] These were pretty days at Reinsberg. This kind of life lasted seven or eight weeks,—in spite of interruptions of subterranean volcanic nature, some of which were surely considerable. Here, in the very first week, coming almost volcanically, is one, which indeed is the sum of them all.

Tuesday forenoon 25th October 1740, Express arrives at Reinsberg; direct from Vienna five days ago; finds Friedrich under eclipse, hidden in the interior, labouring under his ague-fit: question rises, Shall the Express be introduced, or be held back? The news he brings is huge, unexpected, transcendent, and may agitate the sick King. Six or seven heads go wagging on this point,—who by accident are nameable, if readers care: 'Prince August Wilhelm,' lately betrothed; 'Graf Truchsess,' home from Hanover; 'Colonel Graf von Finkenstein,' old Tutor's Son, a familiar from boyhood upwards; 'Baron Pöllnitz,' kind of chief Goldstick now, or Master of the Ceremonies, not too witty, but the cause of wit; 'Jordan, Bielfeld,' known to us; and lastly, 'Fredersdorf,' Major-domo and Factotum, who is grown from Valet to be Purse-Keeper, confidential Manager, and almost friend,—a notable personage in Friedrich's History. They decide, "Better wait!"—

They wait accordingly; and then, after about an hour, the trembling-fit being over, and Fredersdorf having cautiously preluded a little, and prepared the way, the Despatch is delivered, and the King left with his immense piece of news. News that his Imperial Majesty Karl VI. died, after short illness, on Thursday the 20th last. Kaiser dead: House of Hapsburg, and its Five Centuries of tough wrestling, and uneasy Dominancy in this world, ended, gone to the distaff:—the counter-wrestling Ambitions and Cupidities not dead; and nothing but Pragmatic Sanction left between the fallen House and them! Friedrich kept silence; showed no sign how transfixed he was to hear such tidings; which, he foresaw, would have immeasurable consequences in the world.

[5] Preuss, Thronbesteigung, p. 415.

One of the first was, that it cured Friedrich of his ague. It braced him (it, and perhaps 'a little quinquina which he now insisted on') into such a tensity of spirit as drove out his ague like a mere hiccup; quite gone in the course of next week; and we hear no more of that importunate annoyance. He summoned Secretary Eichel, "Be ready in so many minutes hence;" rose from his bed, dressed himself;[6]—and then, by Eichel's help, sent off expresses for Schwerin his chief General, and Podewils his chief Minister. A resolution, which is rising or has risen in the Royal mind, will be ready for communicating to these Two by the time they arrive, on the second day hence. This done, Friedrich, I believe, joined his company in the evening; and was as light and brilliant as if nothing had happened.

CHAPTER VIII.

THE KAISER'S DEATH.

THE Kaiser's death came upon the Public unexpectedly; though not quite so upon observant persons closer at hand. He was not yet fifty-six out; a firm-built man; had been of sound constitution, of active, not intemperate habits: but in the last six years, there had come such torrents of ill-luck rolling down on him, he had suffered immensely, far beyond what the world knew of; and to those near him, and anxious for him, his strength seemed much undermined. Five years ago, in summer 1735, Robinson reported, from a sure hand: 'Nothing can equal the Emperor's agitation under these disasters' (brought upon him by Fleury and the Spaniards, as afterclap to his Polish-Election feat). 'His good Empress is terrified, 'many times, he will die in the course of the night, when 'singly with her he gives a loose to his affliction, confusion

[6] Preuss, Thronbesteigung, p. 416.

'and despair.' Sea-Powers will not help; Fleury and mere ruin will engulf! 'What augments this agitation is his distrust in 'every one of his own Ministers, except perhaps Bartenstein,'[1] — who is not much of a support either, though a gnarled weighty old stick in his way ('Professor at Strasburg once'): not interesting to us here. The rest his Imperial Majesty considers to be of sublimated blockhead type, it appears. Prince Eugene had died lately, and with Eugene all good fortune.

And then, close following, the miseries of that Turk War, crashing down upon a man! They say, Duke Franz, Maria Theresa's Husband, nominal Commander in those Campaigns, with the Seckendorfs and Wallises under him going such a road, was privately eager to have done with the Business, on any terms, lest the Kaiser should die first, and leave it weltering. No wonder the poor Kaiser felt broken, disgusted with the long Shadow-Hunt of Life; and took to practical field-sports rather. An Army that cannot fight, War-Generals good only to be locked in Fortresses, an Exchequer that has no money; after such wagging of the wigs, and such Privy-Councilling and such War-Councilling:—let us hunt wild-swine, and not think of it! That, thank Heaven, we still have; that, and Pragmatic Sanction well engrossed, and generally sworn to by mankind, after much effort!—

The outer Public of that time, and Voltaire among them more deliberately afterwards, spoke of 'mushrooms,' an 'indigestion of mushrooms;' and it is probable there was something of mushrooms concerned in the event. Another subsequent Frenchman, still more irreverent, adds to this of the 'excess of mushrooms,' that the Kaiser made light of it. 'When 'the Doctors told him he had few hours to live, he would not 'believe it; and bantered his Physicians on the sad news. '"Look me in the eyes," said he; "have I the air of one 'dying? When you see my sight growing dim, then let the 'sacraments be administered, whether I order or not."' Doctors insisting, the Kaiser replied: '"Since you are foolish fellows, who know neither the cause nor the state of my disorder, 'I command that, once I am dead, you open my body, to know 'what the matter was; you can then come and let me know!"'[2]

[1] Robinson to Lord Harrington, 5th July 1735 (in State-Paper Office).
[2] Anecdotes Germaniques (Paris, 1769), p. 692.

—in which also there is perhaps a glimmering of distorted truth, though, as Monsieur mistakes even the day ('18th October,' says he, not 20th), one can only accept it as rumour from the outside.

Here, by an extremely sombre domestic Gentleman of great punctuality and great dulness, are the authentic particulars, such as it was good to mention in Vienna circles.[3] An extremely dull Gentleman, but to appearance an authentic; and so little defective in reverence that he delicately expresses some astonishment at Death's audacity this year, in killing so many Crowned Heads. 'This year 1740,' says he, 'though the weather throughout Europe had been extraordinarily fine,' or fine for a cold year, 'had already witnessed several Deaths of Sovereigns: Pope Clement XII., Friedrich Wilhelm of Prussia, 'the Queen Dowager of Spain' (Termagant's old stepmother, not Termagant's self by a great way). 'But that was not 'enough: unfathomable Destiny ventured now on Imperial 'Heads (wagte sich auch an Kaiserkronen): Karl VI., namely, 'and Russia's great Monarchess:'—an audacity to be remarked. Of Russia's great Monarchess (Czarina Anne, with the big cheek) we will say nothing at present; but of Karl VI. only,—abridging much, and studying arrangement.

'Thursday October 13th, returning from Halbthurn, a Hunting 'Seat of his,' over in Hungary some fifty miles, 'to the Palace Favorita 'at Vienna, his Imperial Majesty felt slightly indisposed,'—indigestion of mushrooms or whatever it was: had begun at Halbthurn the night before, we rather understand, and was the occasion of his leaving. 'The Doctors called it cold on the stomach, and thought it of no con-'sequence. In the night of Saturday, it became alarming;' inflammation, thought the Doctors, inflammation of the liver, and used their potent appliances, which only made the danger come and go; 'and on 'the Tuesday, all day, the Doctors did not doubt his Imperial Majesty 'was dying.' ("Look me in the eyes; pack of fools; you will have to dissect me, you will then know:" Any truth in all that? No matter.)

'At noon of that Tuesday he took the Sacrament, the Pope's Nun-'cio administering. His Majesty showed uncommonly great composure 'of soul, and resignation to the Divine Will;' being indeed "certain," —so he expressed it to 'a principal Official Person sunk in grief' (Bartenstein, shall we guess?), who stood by him—"certain of his cause," not afraid in contemplating that dread Judgment now near: "Look at me! A man that is certain of his cause can enter on such [3] (Anonymous) Des &c. Römischen Kaisers Carl VI. Leben und Thaten (Frankfurt und Leipzig, 1741), pp. 220-227.

"a Journey with good courage and a composed mind (mit gutem und "gelassenem Muth)." To the Doctors, dubitating what the disease was, he said, "If Gazelli," my late worthy Doctor, "were still here, "you would soon know; but as it is, you will learn it when you dis-"sect me;"—and once asked to be shown the Cup where his heart would lie after that operation.

'Sacrament being over,' Tuesday afternoon, 'he sent for his Fa-'mily, to bless them each separately. He had a long conversation 'with Grand Duke Franz,' titular of Lorraine, actual of Tuscany, 'who 'had assiduously attended him, and continued to do so, during the 'whole illness. The Grand Duke's Spouse,'—Maria Theresa, the noble-hearted and the overwhelmed; who is now in an interesting state again withal; a little Kaiserkin (Joseph II.) coming in five months; first child, a little girl, is now two years old;—'had been obliged to 'take to bed three days ago; laid up of grief and terror (vor Schmerzen 'und Schrecken), ever since Sunday the 16th. Nor would his Imperial 'Majesty permit her to enter this death-room, on account of her con-'dition, so important to the world; but his Majesty, turning towards 'that side where her apartment was, raised his right hand, and com-'manded her Husband, and the Archduchess her younger Sister, to 'tell his Theresa, That he blessed her herewith, notwithstanding her 'absence.' Poor Kaiser, poor Theresa! 'Most distressing of all was 'the scene with the Kaiserin. The night before, on getting knowledge 'of the sad certainty, she had fainted utterly away (starke Ohnmacht), 'and had to be carried into the Grand Duchess's' (Maria Theresa's) 'room. Being summoned now with her Children, for the last blessing, 'she cried as in despair, "Do not leave me, Your Dilection, do not '(Ach Euer Liebden verlassen mich doch nicht)!"' Poor good souls! 'Her Imperial Majesty would not quit the room again, but remained 'to the last.

'Wednesday 19th, all day, anxiety, mournful suspense;' poor weeping Kaiserin and all the world waiting; the Inevitable visibly struggling on. 'And in the night of that day' (night of 19th-20th Oct. 1740), 'between one and two in the morning, Death snatched away this most 'invaluable Monarch (den preiswürdigsten Monarchen) in the 56th year 'of his life;' and Kaiser Karl VI., and the House of Hapsburg and its Five tough Centuries of good and evil in this world had ended. The poor Kaiserin 'closed the eyes' that could now no more behold her; 'kissed his hands, and was carried out more dead than alive.'[4] [4] Anonymous, ut suprà, pp. 220-227.—Adelung, Pragmatische Staatsgeschichte (Gotha, 1762-1767), ii. 120. Johan Christoph Adelung; the same who did the Dictionary and many other deserving Books; here is the precise Title: 'Pragmatische Staatsgeschichte Europens,' that is, 'Documentary History of Europe, from Kaiser 'Karl's Death, 1740, till Peace of Paris, 1763.' A solid, laborious and meritorious Work, of its kind; extremely extensive (9 voll. 4to, some of which are double and even treble), mostly in the undigested, sometimes in the quite uncooked or raw condition; perhaps about a fifth part of it consists of 'Documents' proper, which are skippable. It cannot help being dull, waste, dreary, but is everywhere intelligible (excellent Indexes too),—and offers an unhappy reader by far the best resource attainable for survey of that sad Period.

A good affectionate Kaiserin, I do believe; honourable, truthful, though unwitty of speech, and converted by Grandpapa in a peculiar manner. For her Kaiser too, after all, I have a kind of love. Of brilliant articulate intellect there is nothing; nor of inarticulate (as in Friedrich Wilhelm's case) anything considerable: in fact his Shadow-Hunting, and Duelling with the Termagant, seemed the reverse of wise. But there was something of a high proud heart in it, too, if we examine; and even the Pragmatic Sanction, though in practice not worth one regiment of iron ramrods, indicates a profoundly fixed determination, partly of loyal nature, such as the gods more or less reward. 'He had been a great builder,' say the Histories; 'was a great musician, fit to lead orchestras, and had com-'posed an Opera,'—poor Kaiser. There came out large traits of him, in Maria Theresa again, under an improved form, which were much admired by the world. He looks, in his Portraits, intensely serious; a handsome man, stoically grave; much the gentleman, much the Kaiser or Supreme Gentleman. As, in life and fact, he was; "something solemn in him, even when he laughs," the people used to say. A man honestly doing his very best with his poor Kaisership, and dying of chagrin by it. 'On opening the body, the liver-region proved to be entirely 'deranged; in the place where the gall-bladder should have 'been, a stone of the size of a pigeon's egg was found grown 'into the liver, and no gall-bladder now there.'

That same morning, with earliest daylight, 'Thursday 20th, six A.M.,' Maria Theresa is proclaimed by her Heralds over Vienna: 'According to Pragmatic Sanction, Inheritress of all 'the' &c. &c.;—Sovereign Archduchess of Austria, Queen of Hungary and Bohemia, for chief items. 'At seven her Majesty 'took the Oath from the Generals and Presidents of Tribunals, '—said, through her tears, "All was to stand on the old footing, 'each in his post,"'—and the other needful words. Couriers shoot forth towards all Countries;—one express courier to Regensburg, and the Enchanted Wiggerics there, to say That a new Kaiser will be needed; Reichs-Vicar or Vicars (Kur-Sachsen and whoever more, for they are sometimes disagreed about it) will have to administer in the interim.

A second courier we saw arrive at Reinsberg; he likewise may be important. The Bavarian Minister, Karl Albert Kur-Baiern's man, shot off his express, like the others; answer is, by return of courier, or even earlier (for a messenger was already on the road), Make protest! "We Kur-Baiern solemnly protest against Pragmatic Sanction, and the assumption of such Titles by the Daughter of the late Kaiser. King of Bohemia, and in good part even of Austria, it is not you, Madam, but of right we; as, by Heaven's help, it is our fixed resolution to make good!" Protest was presented, accordingly, with all the solemnities, without loss of a moment. To which Bartenstein and the Authorities answered "Pooh-pooh," as if it were nothing. It is the first ripple of an immeasurable tide or deluge in that kind, threatening to submerge the new Majesty of Hungary;—as had been foreseen at Reinsberg; though Bartenstein and the Authorities made light of it, answering "Pooh-pooh," or almost "Ha-ha," for the present.

Her Hungarian Majesty's chief Generals, Seckendorf, Wallis, Neipperg, sit in their respective prisonwards at this time (from which she soon liberates them): Kur-Baiern has lodged protest; at Reinsberg there will be an important resolution ready: —and in the Austrian Treasury (which employs 40,000 persons, big and little) there is of cash or available resource, 100,000 florins, that is to say, 10,000*l.* net.[5] And unless Pragmatic sheepskin hold tighter than some persons expect, the affairs of Austria and of this young Archduchess are in a threatening way.

His Britannic Majesty was on the road home, about Helvoetsluys or on the sea for Harwich, that night the Kaiser died; of whose illness he had heard nothing. At London, ten days after, the sudden news struck dismally upon his Majesty and the Political Circles there: "No help, then, from that quarter, in our Spanish War; perhaps far other than help!"—Nay, certain Gazetteers were afraid the grand new Anti-Spanish Expedition itself, which was now, at the long last, after such confusions and delays, lying ready, in great strength, Naval and Military, would be countermanded, — on Pragmatic-Sanction considerations, and the crisis probably imminent.[6] But it was not countermanded; it sailed all the same, 'November 6th' (seventh day after the bad news); and made towards—Shall we tell the reader, what is Officially a dead secret, though by this time well guessed at by the Public, English and also Spanish?—towards Carthagena, to reinforce fiery Vernon, in the tropical latitudes; and overset Spanish America, beginning with that important Town!

[5] Mailath, Geschichte des Oestreichischen Kaiserstaats (Hamburg, 1850), v. 8.
[6] London Newspapers (31st Oct.-6th Nov. 1740).

Commodore Anson, he also, after long fatal delays, is off, several weeks ago;[7] round Cape Horn; hoping (or perhaps already not hoping) to coöperate from the Other Ocean, and be simultaneous with Vernon, — on these loose principles of keeping time! Commodore Anson does, in effect, make a Voyage which is beautiful, and to mankind memorable; but as to keeping tryst with Vernon, the very gods could not do it on those terms!

CHAPTER IX.

RESOLUTION FORMED AT REINSBERG IN CONSEQUENCE.

THURSDAY 27th October, two days after the Expresses went for them, Schwerin and Podewils punctually arrived at Reinsberg. They were carried into the interior privacies, 'to 'long conferences with his Majesty that day, and for the next 'four days; Majesty and they even dining privately together;' grave business of state, none guesses how grave, evidently going on. The resolution Friedrich laid before them, fruit of these two days since the news from Vienna, was probably the most important ever formed in Prussia, or in Europe during that Century: Resolution to make good our Rights on Silesia, by this great opportunity, the best that will ever offer. Resolution which had sprung, I find, and got to sudden fixity in the head of the young King himself; and which met with little save opposition from all the other sons of Adam, at the first blush and for long afterwards. And, indeed, the making of it good (of it, and of the immense results that hung by it) was the main business of this young King's Life henceforth; and cost him Labours like those of Hercules, and was in the highest degree momentous to existing and not yet existing millions of mankind,—to the readers of this History especially.

It is almost touching to reflect how unexpectedly, like a bolt out of the blue, all this had come upon Friedrich; and how it overset his fine program for the winter at Reinsberg, and for his Life generally. Not the Peaceable magnanimities, but the Warlike, are the thing appointed Friedrich this winter, and mainly henceforth. Those 'golden or soft radiances' which we saw in him, admirable to Voltaire and to Friedrich, and to an esurient philanthropic world,—it is not those, it is 'the steel-bright or stellar kind,' that are to become predominant in Friedrich's existence: grim hailstorms, thunders and tornado for an existence to him, instead of the opulent genialities and halcyon weather, anticipated by himself and others! Indisputably enough to us, if not yet to Friedrich, "Reinsberg and Life to the Muses" are done. On a sudden, from the opposite side of the horizon, see, miraculous Opportunity, rushing hitherward, — swift, terrible, clothed with lightning like a courser of the gods: dare you clutch him by the thunder-mane, and fling yourself upon him, and make for the Empyrean by that course rather? Be immediate about it, then; the time is now, or else never!—No fair judge can blame the young man that he laid hold of the flaming Opportunity in this manner, and obeyed the new omen. To seize such an opportunity, and perilously mount upon it, was the part of a young magnanimous King, less sensible to the perils, and more to the other considerations, than one older would have been.

[7] 29th (18th) September 1740.

Schwerin and Podewils were, no doubt, astonished to learn what the Royal purpose was; and could not want for commonplace objections many and strong, had this been the scene for dwelling on them, or dressing them out at eloquent length. But they knew well this was not the scene for doing more than, with eloquent modesty, hint them; that the Resolution, being already taken, would not alter for commonplace; and that the question now lying for honourable members was, How to execute it? It is on this, as I collect, that Schwerin and Podewils in the King's company did, with extreme intensity, consult during those four days; and were, most probably, of considerable use to the King, though some of their modifications adopted by him turned out, not as they had predicted, but as he. On all the Military details and outlines, and on all the Diplomacies of this business, here are two Oracles extremely worth consulting by the young King.

To seize Silesia is easy: a Country open on all but the south side; open especially on our side, where a battalion of foot might force it; the three or four fortresses, of which only two, Glogau and Neisse, can be reckoned strong, are provided with nothing as they ought to be; not above 3,000 fighting men in the whole Province, and these little expecting fight. Silesia can be seized: but the maintaining of it?—We must try to maintain it, thinks Friedrich.

At Reinsberg it is not yet known that Kur-Baiern has protested; but it is well guessed he means to do so, and that France is at his back in some sort. Kur-Baiern, probably Kur-Sachsen, and plenty more, France being secretly at their back. What low condition Austria stands in, all its ready resources run to the lees, is known; and that France, getting lively at present with its Belleisles and adventurous spirits not restrainable by Fleury, is always on the watch to bring Austria lower;—capable, in spite of Pragmatic Sanction, to snatch the golden moment, and spring hunter-like on a moribund Austria, were the hunting-dogs once out and in cry. To Friedrich it seems unlikely the Pragmatic Sanction will be a Law of Nature to mankind, in these circumstances. His opinion is, 'the old political system has expired with the Kaiser.' Here is Europe, burning in one corner of it by Jenkins's Ear, and such a smoulder of combustible material awakening nearer hand: will not Europe, probably, blaze into general War; Pragmatic Sanction going to waste sheepskin, and universal scramble ensuing? In which he who has 100,000 good soldiers, and can handle them, may be an important figure in urging claims, and keeping what he has got hold of!—

Friedrich's mind, as to the fact, is fixed: seize Silesia we will: but as to the manner of doing it, Schwerin and Podewils modify him. Their counsel is: "Do not step out in hostile attitude at the very first, saying, 'These Duchies, Liegnitz, 'Brieg, Wohlau, Jägerndorf, are mine, and I will fight for 'them;' say only, 'Having, as is well known, interests of va-'rious kinds in this Silesia, I venture to take charge of it in 'the perilous times now come, and will keep it safe for the 'real owner.' Silesia seized in this fashion," continue they, "negotiate with the Queen of Hungary; offer her help, large help in men and money, against her other enemies; perhaps she will consent to do us right?"—"She never will consent," is Friedrich's opinion. "But it is worth trying?" urge the Ministers.—"Well," answers Friedrich, "be it in that form; that is the soft-spoken cautious form: any form will do, if the fact be there." That is understood to have been the figure of the deliberation in this conclave at Reinsberg, during the four days.[1] And now it remains only to fix the Military details, to be ready in a minimum of time; and to keep our preparations and intentions in impenetrable darkness from all men, in the interim. Adieu, Messieurs.

And so, on the 1st of November, fifth morning since they came, Schwerin and Podewils, a world of new business silently ahead of them, return to Berlin, intent to begin the same. All the Kings will have to take their resolution on this matter; wisely, or else unwisely. King Friedrich's, let it prove the wisest or not, is notably the rapidest,—complete, and fairly entering upon action, on November 1st. At London the news of the Kaiser's death had arrived the day before; Britannic Majesty and Ministry, thrown much into the dumps by it, much into the vague, are nothing like so prompt with their resolution on it. Somewhat sorrowfully in the vague. In fact, they will go jumbling hither and thither for about three years to come, before making up their minds to a resolution: so intricate is the affair to the English Nation and them! Intricate indeed; and even imaginary,—definable mainly as a bottomless abyss of nightmare dreams to the English Nation and them! Productive of strong somnambulisms, as my friend has it!—

Mystery in Berlin, for Seven Weeks, while the Preparations go on; Voltaire visits Friedrich to decipher it, but cannot.

Podewils and Schwerin gone, King Friedrich, though still very busy in working-hours, returns to his society and its gaieties and brilliancies; apparently with increased appetite after these four days of abstinence. Still busy in his working-hours, as a King must be; couriers coming and going, hundreds of businesses dispatched each day; and in the evening what a relish for society,—Prätorius is quite astonished at it. Music, dancing, play-acting, suppers of the gods, 'not done till four in the morning sometimes,' these are the accounts Prätorius hears at Berlin. 'From all persons who return from [1] Stenzel (from what sources he does not clearly say, no doubt from sources of some authenticity) gives this as summary of it, iv. 61-65.

'Reinsberg,' writes he, 'the unanimous report is, That the 'King works, the whole day through, with an assiduity that 'is unique; and then, in the evening, gives himself to the plea- 'sures of society, with a vivacity of mirth and sprightly humour 'which makes those Evening-Parties charming.'[2] So it had to last, with frequent short journeys on Friedrich's part, and at last with change to Berlin as headquarters, for about seven weeks to come,—till the beginning of December, and the day of action, namely. A notable little Interim in Friedrich's History and that of Europe.

Friedrich's secret, till almost the very end, remained impenetrable; though, by degrees, his movements excited much guessing in the Gazetteer and Diplomatic world everywhere. Military matters do seem to be getting brisk in Prussia; arsenals much astir; troops are seen mustering, marching, plainly to a singular degree. Marching towards the Austrian side, towards Silesia, some note. Yes; but also towards Cleve, certain detachments of troops are marching,—do not men see? And the Entrenchment at Büderich in those parts, that is getting forward withal,—though privately there is not the least prospect of using it, in these altered circumstances. Friedrich already guesses that if he could get Silesia, so invaluable on the one skirt of him, he will probably have to give-up his Berg-Jülich claims on the other; I fancy he is getting ready to do so, should the time come for such alternative. But he labours at Büderich, all the same, and 'improves the roads in that quarter,'—which at least may help to keep an inquisitive public at bay. These are seven busy weeks on Friedrich's part, and on the world's: constant realities of preparation, on the one part, industriously veiled; on the other part, such shadows, guessings, spyings, spectral movements above ground and below; Diplomatic shadows fencing, Gazetteer shadows rumouring;—dreams of a world as if near awakening to something great! 'All Officers on furlough have been ordered to their 'posts,' writes Bielfeld, on those vague terms of his: 'On 'arriving at Berlin, you notice a great agitation in all depart- 'ments of the State. The regiments are ordered to prepare 'their equipages, and to hold themselves in readiness for 'marching. There are magazines being formed at Frankfurt- 'on-Oder and at Crossen,'—handy for Silesia, you would say?

[2] Excerpt, in Preuss, Thronbesteigung, p. 418.

'There are considerable trains of Artillery getting ready, and 'the King has frequent conferences with his Generals.'[3] The authentic fact is: 'By the middle of November, Troops, to the 'extent of 30,000 and more, had got orders to be ready for 'marching in three weeks hence;' their public motions very visible ever since, their actual purpose a mystery to all mortals except Three.

Towards the end of November, it becomes the prevailing guess that the business is immediate, not prospective; that Silesia may be in the wind, not Jülich and Berg. Which infinitely quickens the shadowy rumourings and Diplomatic fencings of mankind. The French have their special Ambassador here; a Marquis de Beauvau, observant military gentleman, who came with the Accession Compliment some time ago, and keeps his eyes well open, but cannot see through millstones. Fleury is intensely desirous to know Friedrich's secret; but would fain keep his own (if he yet have one), and is himself quite tacit and reserved. To Fleury's Marquis de Beauvau Friedrich is very gracious; but in regard to secrets, is for a reciprocal procedure. Could not Voltaire go and try? It is thought Fleury had let fall some hint to that effect, carried by a bird of the air. Sure enough Voltaire does go; is actually on visit to his royal Friend; 'six days with him at Reinsberg;' perhaps near a fortnight in all (20 November—2 December or so), hanging about those Berlin regions, on the survey. Here is an unexpected pleasure to the parties;—but in regard to penetrating of secrets, an unproductive one!

Voltaire's ostensible errand was, To report progress about the Anti-Macchiavel, the Van Duren nonsense; and, at any rate, to settle the Money-accounts on these and other scores; and to discourse Philosophies, for a day or two, with the First of Men. The real errand, it is pretty clear, was as above. Voltaire has always a wistful eye towards political employment, and would fain make himself useful in high quarters. Fleury and he have their touches of direct Correspondence now and then; and obliquely there are always intermediates and channels. Small hint, the slightest twinkle of Fleury's eyelashes, would be duly speeded to Voltaire, and set him going. We shall see him expressly missioned hither, on similar errand, by and by; though with as bad success as at present.

[3] Bielfeld, i. 165 (Berlin, 30th November, is the date he puts to it).

28th Nov. 1740.

Of this his First Visit to Berlin, his Second to Friedrich, Voltaire in the Vie Privée says nothing. But in his Siècle de Louis XV he drops, with proud modesty, a little footnote upon it: 'The Author was with the King of Prussia at that time; 'and can affirm that Cardinal de Fleury was totally astray in 'regard to the Prince he had now to do with.' To which a date slightly wrong is added; the rest being perfectly correct.[4] No other details are to be got anywhere, if they were of importance; the very dates of it in the best Prussian Books are all slightly awry. Here, by accident, are two poor flint-sparks caught from the dust whirlwind, which yield a certain sufficing twilight, when put in their place; and show us both sides of the matter, the smooth side and the seamy:

1. Friedrich to Algarotti, at Berlin. From 'Reinsberg, 21st Nov.,' showing the smooth side.

'My dear Swan of Padua,—Voltaire has arrived; all sparkling with 'new beauties, and far more sociable than at Cleve. He is in very 'good humour; and makes less complaining about his ailments than 'usual. Nothing can be more frivolous than our occupations here:' mere verse-making, dancing, philosophising, then card-playing, dining, flirting; merry as birds on the bough (and Silesia *in*visible, except to oneself and two others).[5]

2. Friedrich to Jordan, at Berlin. 'Ruppin, 28th November.'

* * 'Thy Miser' (Voltaire, now gone to Berlin, of whom Jordan is to send news, as of all things else), 'thy Miser shall drink to the 'lees of his insatiable desire (sic) to enrich himself: he shall have the '3,000 thalers (450*l.*). He was with me six days: that will be at the 'rate of 500 thalers (75*l.*) a day. That is paying dear for one's merry-'andrew (c'est bien payer un fou); never had court-fool such wages 'before.'[6]

Which latter, also at first hand, shows us the seamy side. And here, finally, with date happily appended, is a poetic snatch, in Voltaire's exquisite style, which with the response gives us the medium view:

4 Œuvres (Siècle de Louis XV, c. 6), xxviii. 74.

5 Œuvres de Frédéric, xviii. 25.

6 Ibid. xvii. 72. Particulars of the money-payment (travelling expenses chiefly, rather exorbitant, and this journey added to the list; and no whisper of the considerable Van-Duren moneys, and copyright of Anti-Macchiavel, in abatement,) are in Rödenbeck, i. 27. Exact sum paid is 3,300 thalers; 2,000 a good while ago, 1,300 at this time, which settles the greedy bill.

VOLTAIRE'S ADIEU ('Billet de Congé, 2 December 1740').

'Non, malgré vos vertus, non, malgré vos appas,
'Mon âme n'est point satisfaite ;
'Non, vous n'êtes qu'une coquette,
'Qui subjuguez les cœurs, et ne vous donnez pas.'

FRIEDRICH'S RESPONSE.

'Mon âme sent le prix de vos divins appas ;
'Mais ne présumez point qu'elle soit satisfaite.
'Traître, vous me quittez pour suivre une coquette ;
'Moi je ne vous quitterais pas.'[1]

—Meaning, perhaps, in brief English : V. "Ah, you are but a beautiful coquette ; you charm away our hearts, and do not give your own" (won't tell me your secret at all) ! F. "Treacherous Lothario, it is you that quit me for a coquette" (your divine Emilie ; and won't stay here, and be of my Academy) ; "but however—!"—Friedrich looked hopingly on the French, but could not give his secret except by degrees and with reciprocity. Some days hence he said to Marquis de Beauvau, in the Audience of leave, a word which was remembered.

View of Friedrich behind the Veil.

As to Friedrich himself, since about the middle of November his plans seem to have been definitely shaped out in all points ; Troops so many, when to be on march, and how ; no important detail uncertain since then. November 17th, he jots-down a little Note, which is to go to Vienna, were the due hour come, by a special Ambassador, one Count Gotter, acquainted with the ground there ; and explain to her Hungarian Majesty, what his exact demands are, and what the exact services he will render. Of which important little Paper readers shall hear again. Gotter's demands are at first to be high : Our Four Duchies, due by law so long ; these and even more, considering the important services we propose ; this is to be his first word ;—but, it appears, he is privately prepared to put-up with Two Duchies, if he can have them peaceably : Duchies of Sagan and Glogau, which are not of the Four at all, but which lie nearest us, and are far below the value of the Four, to Austria especially. This intricate point Friedrich has already settled in his mind. And indeed it is notably the habit of this young King to settle matters with himself in good time : and in regard to all manner of points, he will be found, on the day of bargaining about them, to have his own resolution formed and definitely fixed ;—much to his advantage over conflicting parties, who have theirs still flying loose.

[1] Œuvres de Frédéric (xiv. 167); Œuvres de Voltaire ; &c. &c.

Another thing of much concernment is, To secure himself from danger of Russian interference. To this end he dispatches Major Winterfeld to Russia, a man well known to him ;—day of Winterfeld's departure is not given ; day of his arrival in Petersburg is '19th December' just coming. Russia, at present, is rather in a staggering condition ; hopeful for Winterfeld's object. On the 28th of October last, only eight days after the Kaiser, Czarina Anne of Russia, she with the big cheek, once of Courland, had died ; 'audacious Death,' as our poor friend had it, 'venturing upon another Crowned Head' there. Bieren her dear Courlander, once little better than a Horse-groom, now Duke of Courland, Quasi-Husband to the late Big Cheek, and thereby sovereign of Russia, this long while past, is left Official Head in Russia. Poor little Anton Ulrich and his august Spouse, well enough known to us, have indeed produced a Czar Iwan, some months ago, to the joy of mankind : but Czar Iwan is in his cradle ; Father and Mother's function is little other than to rock the cradle of Iwan ; Bieren to be Regent and Autocrat over him and them in the interim. To their chagrin, to that of Feldmarschall Münnich and many others : the upshot of which will be visible before long. Czarina Anne's death had seemed to Friedrich the opportune removal of a dangerous neighbour, known to be in the pay of Austria : here now are new mutually hostile parties springing up ; chance, surely, of a bargain with some of them ? He dispatches Winterfeld on this errand ;—probably the fittest man in Prussia for it. How soon and perfectly Winterfeld succeeded, and what Winterfeld was, and something of what a Russia he found it, we propose to mention by and by.

These, and all points of importance, Friedrich has settled with himself some time ago. What his own private thoughts on the Silesian Adventure are, readers will wish to know, since they can at first hand. Hear Friedrich himself, whose veracity is unquestionable to such as know anything of him :

'This Silesian Project fulfilled all his (the King's) political views,' —summed them all well up into one head. 'It was a means of ac-'quiring reputation ; of increasing the power of the State ; and of ter-'minating what concerned that long-litigated question of the Berg-

'Jülich Succession;'—can be sure of getting that, at lowest; intends to give that up, if necessary.

'Meanwhile, before entirely determining, the King weighed the 'risks there were in undertaking such a War, and the advantages that 'were to be hoped from it. On one side, presented itself the potent 'house of Austria, not likely to want resources with so many vast 'Provinces under it; an Emperor's Daughter attacked, who would 'naturally find allies in the King of England, in the Dutch Republic, 'and so many Princes of the Empire who had signed the Pragmatic 'Sanction.' Russia was,—or had been, and might again be,—in the pay of Vienna. Saxony might have some clippings from Bohemia thrown to it, and so be gained over. Scanty Harvest, 1740, threatened difficulties as to provisioning of troops. 'The risks were great. One 'had to apprehend the vicissitudes of war. A single battle lost might 'be decisive. The King had no allies; and his troops, hitherto with-'out experience, would have to front old Austrian soldiers, grown gray 'in harness, and trained to war by so many campaigns.

'On the other side were hopeful considerations,'—four in number: First, Weak condition of the Austrian Court, Treasury empty, War-Apparatus broken in pieces; inexperienced young Princess to defend a disputed succession, on those terms. Second, There will be allies; France and England always in rivalry, both meddling in these matters, King is sure to get either the one or the other. Third, Silesian War lies handy to us, and is the only kind of Offensive War that does; Country bordering on our frontier, and with the Oder running through it as a sure highroad for everything. Fourth, 'What suddenly turned the balance,' or at least what kept it steady in that posture,—'news of the Czarina's death arrives:' Russia has ceased to count against us; and become a manageable quantity. On, therefore!—

'Add to these reasons,' says the King, with a candour which has not been well treated in the History Books, 'Add to these reasons, an 'Army ready for acting; Funds, Supplies all found' (lying barrelled in the Schloss at Berlin);—'and perhaps the desire of making oneself 'a name,' from which few of mortals able to achieve it are exempt in their young time: 'all this was cause of the War which the King now 'entered upon.'[8]

"Desire to make himself a name; how shocking!" exclaim several Historians. "Candour of confession that he may have had some such desire; how honest!" is what they do not exclaim. As to the justice of his Silesian Claims, or even to his own belief about their justice, Friedrich affords not the least light which can be new to readers here. He speaks, when business requires it, of 'those known rights' of his, and with the air of a man who expects to be believed on his word; but it is cursorily, and in the business way only; and there is not here or elsewhere the least pleading:—a man, you would say, considerably indifferent to our belief on that head; his eye set on the practical merely. "Just Rights? What are rights, never so just, which you cannot make valid? The world is full of such. If you have rights and can assert them into facts, do it; that is worth doing!"—

[8] Œuvres de Frédéric (Histoire de mon Temps), i. 128.

2d Dec. 1740.

We must add two Notes, two small absinthine drops, bitter but wholesome, administered by him to the Old Dessauer, whose gloomy wonder over all this military whirl of Prussian things, and discontent that he, lately the head authority, has never once been spoken to on it, have been great. Guessing, at last, that it was meant for Austria, a Power rather dear to Leopold, he can suppress himself no longer; but breaks out into Cassandra prophesyings, which have piqued the young King, and provoke this return:

1. 'Reinsberg, 24th November 1740.—I have received your Letter, 'and seen with what inquietude you view the approaching march of 'my Troops. I hope you will set your mind at ease on that score; 'and wait with patience what I intend with them and you. I have 'made all my dispositions; and Your Serenity will learn, time enough, 'what my orders are, without disquieting yourself about them, as no-'thing has been forgotten or delayed.'—FRIEDRICH.

Old Dessauer, cut to the bone, perceives he will have to quit that method and never resume it; writes next how painful it is to an old General to see himself neglected, as if good for nothing, while his scholars are allowed to gather laurels. Friedrich's answer is of soothing character:

2. 'Berlin, 2d December 1740.—You may be assured I honour your 'merits and capacity as a young Officer ought to honour an old one, 'who has given the world so many proofs of his talent (Dexterität); 'nor will I neglect Your Serenity on any occasion when you can help 'me by your good counsel and coöperation.' But it is a mere 'bagatelle' this that I am now upon; though, next year, it may become serious.

For the rest, Saxony being a neighbour whose intentions one does not know, I have privately purposed Your Serenity should keep an outlook that way, in my absence. Plenty of employment coming for Your Serenity. 'But as to this present Expedition, I reserve it for myself 'alone; that the world may not think the King of Prussia marches with a Tutor to the Field.'—FRIEDRICH.[9] [9] Orlich, Geschichte der Schlesischen Kriege (Berlin, 1841), i. 38, 39.

And therewith Leopold, eagerly complying, has to rest satisfied; and beware of too much freedom with this young King again.

'Berlin, December 2d,' is the date of that last Note to the Dessauer; date also of Voltaire's Adieu with the Response;—on which same day, 'Friday December 2d,' as I find from the Old Books, his Majesty, quitting the Reinsberg sojourn, 'had 'arrived in Berlin about 2 P.M.; accompanied by Prince Au-'gust Wilhelm' (betrothed at Brunswick lately); 'such a crowd 'on the streets as if they had never seen him before.' He continued at Berlin or in the neighbourhood thenceforth. Busy days these; and Berlin a much whispering City, as Regiment after Regiment marches away. King soon to follow, as is thought,—'who himself sometimes deigns to take the Regiments into highest own eyeshine, höchst-eigenen Augenschein' (that is, to review them), say the reverential Editors. December 6th—But let us follow the strict sequence of Phenomena at Berlin.

Excellency Botta has Audience; then Excellency Dickens, and others: December 6th, the Mystery is out.

Of course her Hungarian Majesty, and her Bartensteins and Ministries, heard enough of those Prussian rumours, interior Military activities, and enigmatic movements; but they seem strangely supine on the matter; indeed, they seem strangely supine on such matters; and lean at ease upon the Sea-Powers, upon Pragmatic Sanction and other Laws of Nature. But at length even they become painfully interested as to Friedrich's intentions; and dispatch an Envoy to sift him a little: an expert Marchese di Botta, Genoese by birth, skilful in the Russian and other intricacies; who was here at Berlin lately, doing the Accession Compliment (rather ill received at that time), and is fit for the job. Perhaps Botta will penetrate him? That is becoming desirable, in spite of the gay Private Theatricals at Reinsberg, and the Berlin Carnival Balls he is so occupied with.

England is not less interested, and the diligent Sir Guy is doing his best; but can make out nothing satisfactory;—much the reverse indeed; and falls into angry black anticipations. 'Nobody here, great or small,' says his Excellency, 'dares 'make any representation to this young Prince against the 6th Dec. 1740.

'measures he is pursuing; though all are sensible of the con-'fusion which must follow. A Prince who had the least regard 'to honour, truth and justice, could not act the part he is 'going to do.' Alas, no, Excellency Dickens! 'But it is plain 'his only view was, to deceive us all, and conceal for a while 'his ambitious and mischievous designs.'[10] "Never was such dissimulation!" exclaims the Diplomatic world everywhere, being angered at it, as if it were a vice on the part of a King about to invade Silesia. Dissimulation, if that mean mendacity, is not the name of the thing; it is the art of wearing a polite cloak of darkness, and the King is little disturbed what name they call it.

Botta did not get to Berlin till December 1st, had no Audience till the 5th;—by which time it is becoming evident to Excellency Dickens, and to everybody, that Silesia is the thing meant. Botta hints as much in that first Audience, December 5th: "Terrible roads, those Silesian ones, your Majesty!" says Botta, as if historically merely, but with a glance of the eye. "Hm," answers his Majesty in the same tone, "the worst that comes of them is a little mud!"—Next day, Dickens had express Audience, 'Berlin, Tuesday 6th:' a smartish, somewhat flurried Colloquy with the King; which, well abridged, may stand as follows:

Dickens. ✿ ✿ "Indivisibility of the Austrian Monarchy, Sire!"—King. "Indivisibility? What do you mean?"—Dickens. "The maintenance of the Pragmatic Sanction."—King. "Do you intend to support it? I hope not; for such is not my intention." (There is for you!) ✿ ✿ ✿

Dickens. "England and Holland will much wonder at the measures your Majesty was taking, at the moment when your Majesty proposed to join with them, and were making friendly proposals!" (Has been a deceitful man, Sir Guy, at least an impenetrable;—but this latter is rather strong on your part!) "What shall I write to England?" ('When I mentioned this,' says Dickens, 'the King grew red in the face,' eyes considerably flashing, I should think.)

King. "You can have no instructions to ask that question! And if you had, I have an answer ready for you. England has no right to inquire into my designs. Your great Sea-Armaments, did I ask you any questions about them? No; I was and am silent on that head; only wishing you good luck, and that you may not get beaten by the Spaniards." (Dickens hastily draws-in his rash horns again; after a pass or two, King's natural colour returns.) ✿ ✿

[10] Despatch, 29th November—3d December 1740: Raumer, p. 58.

King. "Austria as a Power is necessary against the Turks. But in Germany, what need of Austria being so superlative? Why should not, say, Three Electors united be able to oppose her? * * * Monsieur, I find it is your notion in England, as well as theirs in France, to bring other Sovereigns under your tutorage, and lead them about. Understand that I will not be led by either. * * Tush, you are like the Athenians, who, when Philip of Macedon was ready to invade them, spent their time in haranguing!"

Dickens. * * "Berg and Jülich, if we were to guarantee them?"—King. "Hm. Don't so much mind that Rhine Country: difficulties there,—Dutch always jealous of one. But, on the other Frontier, neither England nor Holland could take umbrage,"—points clearly to Silesia, then, your Excellency Dickens?[11]

Alas, yes! Troops and military equipments are, for days past, evidently wending towards Frankfurt, towards Crossen, and even the Newspapers now hint that something is on hand in that quarter. Nay, this same day, Tuesday 6th December, there has come out brief Official Announcement, to all the Foreign Ministers at Berlin, Excellency Dickens among them, 'That his Royal Majesty, our most all-gracious Herr, has taken 'the resolution to advance a Body of Troops into Schlesien,' —rather out of friendly views towards Austria (much business lying between us about Schlesien), not out of hostile views by any means, as all Excellencies shall assure their respective Courts.[12] Announcement which had thrown the Excellency Dickens into such a frame of mind, before he got his Audience today!—

Saturday following, which was December 10th, Marquis de Beauvau had his Audience of leave; intending for Paris shortly: Audience very gracious; covertly hinting, on both sides, more than it said; ending in these words, on the King's side, which have become famous: "Adieu, then, M. le Mar- "quis. I believe I am going to play your game; if the aces "fall to me, we will share (Je vais, je crois, jouer votre jeu: "si les as me viennent, nous partagerons)!"[13]

To Botta, all this while, Friedrich strove to be specially civil; took him out to Charlottenburg, that same Saturday, with the Queen and other guests; but Botta, and all the world, being now certain about Silesia, and that no amount of mud, or other terror on the roads, would be regarded, Botta's thoughts in this [11] Raumer (from State-Paper Office), pp. 63, 64.

[12] Copy of the Paper in Helden-Geschichte, i. 447.
[13] Voltaire, Œuvres (Siècle de Louis XV, c. 6), xxviii. 74.

11th Dec. 1740.

evening party are not of cheerful nature. Next day, Sunday December 11th, he too gets his Audience of leave; and cannot help bursting-out, when the King plainly tells him what is now afoot, and that the Prussian Ambassador has got instructions what to offer upon it at Vienna. "Sire, you are going to ruin "the House of Austria," cried Botta, "and to plunge yourself "into destruction (vous abîmer) at the same time!"—"De- "pends on the Queen," said Friedrich, "to accept the Offers "I have made her." Botta sank silent, seemed to reflect, but gathering himself again, added with an ironical air and tone of voice, "They are fine Troops, those of yours, Sire. Ours "have not the same splendour of appearance; but they have "looked the wolf in the face. Think, I conjure you, what you "are getting into!" Friedrich answered with vivacity, a little nettled at the ironical tone of Botta, and his mixed sympathy and menace: "You find my troops are beautiful; perhaps I "shall convince you they are good too." Yes, Excellency Botta, goodish troops; and very capable 'to look the wolf in the face,'—or perhaps in the tail too, before all end! 'Botta 'urged and entreated that at least there should be some delay 'in executing this project. But the King gave him to under- 'stand that it was now too late, and that the Rubicon was 'passed.'[14]

The secret is now out, therefore; Invasion of Silesia certain and close at hand. 'A day or two before marching,' may have been this very day when Botta got his audience, the King assembled his Chief Generals, all things ready out in the Frankfurt-Crossen region yonder; and spoke to them as follows; briefly and to the point:

"Gentlemen, I am undertaking a War, in which I have no allies "but your valour and your goodwill. My cause is just; my resources "are what we ourselves can do; and the issue lies in Fortune. Re- "member continually the glory which your Ancestors acquired in the "plains of Warsaw, at Fehrbellin, and in the Expedition to Preussen" (across the Frische Haf on ice, that time). "Your lot is in your own "hands: distinctions and rewards wait upon your fine actions which "shall merit them.

"But what need have I to excite you to glory? It is the one thing "you keep before your eyes; the sole object worthy of your labours. "We are going to front troops who, under Prince Eugene, had the "highest reputation. Though Prince Eugene is gone, we shall have [14] Friedrich's own Account (Œuvres, ii. 57).

"to measure our strength against brave soldiers: the greater will be "the honour if we can conquer. Adieu, go forth. I will follow you "straightway, to the rendezvous of glory which awaits us."[15]

Masked Ball, at Berlin, 12th-13th December.

On the evening of Monday 12th, there was, as usual, Masked (or Half-Masked) Ball, at the Palace. As usual; but this time it has become mentionable in World-History. Bielfeld, personally interested, gives us a vivid glance into it;—which, though pretending to be real and contemporaneous, is unfortunately mythical only, and done at a great interval of years (dates, and even slight circumstances of fact, refusing to conform);—which, however, for the truth there is in it, we will give, as better than nothing. Bielfeld's pretended date is, 'Berlin, 15th December;' should have been 14th,—wrong by a day, after one's best effort!

'Berlin, 15th December 1740. As for me, dear Sister, I am like a 'shuttlecock whom the Kings of Prussia and of England hit with their 'rackets, and knock to and fro. The night before last, I was at the 'Palace Evening Party (Assemblée); which is a sort of Ball, where you 'go in domino, but without mask on the face. The Queen was there, 'and all the Court. About eight o'clock the King also made his ap-'pearance. His Majesty, noticing M. de G * *' (that is de Guidiken, or Guy Dickens), 'English Minister, addressed him; led him into the 'embrasure of a window, and talked alone with him for more than an 'hour' (uncertain, probably apocryphal this). 'I threw, from time to 'time, a stolen glance at this dialogue, which appeared to me to be very 'lively. A moment after, being just dancing with Madame the Countess 'de—Three-Asterisks,—I felt myself twitched by the domino; and turn-'ing, was much surprised to see that it was the King; who took me 'aside, and said, "Are your boots oiled (Vos bottes sont-elles graissées, 'Are you ready for a journey)?" I replied, "Sire, they will always 'be so for your Majesty's service."—"Well, then, Truchsess and you 'are for England; the day after tomorrow you go. Speak to M. de 'Podewils!"—This was said like a flash of lightning. His Majesty 'passed into another apartment; and I, I went to finish my minuet 'with the Lady; who had been not less astonished to see me disappear 'from her eyes, in the middle of the dance, than I was at what the 'King said to me.'[16] Next morning, I—

The fact is, next morning, Truchsess and I began preparation for the Court of London,—and we did there, for many months afterwards, strive our best to keep the Britannic Majesty in some kind of tune, amid the prevailing discord of events;—fact interesting to some. And the other fact, interesting to everybody, though Bielfeld has not mentioned it, is, That King Friedrich, the same next morning, punctually 'at the stroke of 9,' rolled away Frankfurt-ward,—into the First Silesian War! Tuesday '13th December, this morning, the 'King, privately quitting the Ball, has gone' (after some little snatch of sleep, we will hope) 'for Frankfurt, to put himself at 'the head of his Troops.'[17] Bellona his companion for long years henceforth, instead of Minerva and the Muses, as he had been anticipating.

[15] Œuvres de Frédéric, ii. 58. [16] Bielfeld, i. 167, 168.

13th Dec. 1740.

Hereby is like to be fulfilled (except that Friedrich himself is perhaps this 'little stone') what Friedrich prophesied to his Voltaire, the day after hearing of the Kaiser's Death: 'I be-'lieve there will, by June next, be more talk of cannon, sol-'diers, trenches, than of actresses, and dancers for the ballet. 'This small Event changes the entire system of Europe. It is 'the little stone which Nebuchadnezzar saw, in his dream, 'loosening itself, and rolling down on the Image made of Four 'Metals, which it shivers to ruin.'[18]

[17] Dickens (in State-Paper Office), 13th December 1740; see also Helden-Geschichte, i. 452; &c. &c.

[18] Friedrich to Voltaire, busy gathering actors at that time, 26th Oct. 1740 (Œuvres de Frédéric, xxii. 49).

BOOK XII.

FIRST SILESIAN WAR, AWAKENING A GENERAL EUROPEAN ONE, BEGINS.

December 1740—May 1741.

CHAPTER I.

OF SCHLESIEN, OR SILESIA.

SCHLESIEN, what we call Silesia, lies in elliptic shape, spread on the top of Europe, partly girt with mountains, like the crown or crest to that part of the Earth;—highest table-land of Germany or of the Cisalpine Countries; and sending rivers into all the seas. The summit or highest level of it is in the south-west; longest diameter is from north-west to south-east. From Crossen, whither Friedrich is now driving, to the Jablunka Pass, which issues upon Hungary, is above 250 miles; the axis, therefore, or longest diameter, of our Ellipse we may call 250 English miles;—its shortest or conjugate diameter, from Friedland in Bohemia (Wallenstein's old Friedland), by Breslau across the Oder to the Polish Frontier, is about 100. The total area of Schlesien is counted to be some 20,000 square miles, nearly the third of England Proper.

Schlesien,—will the reader learn to call it by that name, on occasion? for in these sad Manuscripts of ours the names alternate,—is a fine, fertile, useful and beautiful Country. It leans sloping, as we hinted, to the East and to the North; a long curved buttress of Mountains ("Riesengebirge, Giant Mountains," is their best-known name in foreign countries) holding it up on the South and West sides. This Giant-Mountain Range,—which is a kind of continuation of the Saxon-Bohemian "Metal Mountains (Erzgebirge)" and of the straggling Lausitz Mountains, to westward of these,—shapes itself like a bill-hook (or elliptically, as was said): handle and hook together may be some 200 miles in length. The precipitous side of this is, in general, turned outwards, towards Böhmen, Mähren, Ungarn (Bohemia, Moravia, Hungary, in our dialects); and Schlesien lies inside, irregularly sloping down, towards the Baltic and towards the utmost East. From the Bohemian side of these Mountains there rise Two Rivers: Elbe, tending for the West; Morawa for the South;—Morawa, crossing Moravia, gets into the Donau, and thence into the Black-Sea; while Elbe, after intricate adventures among the mountains, and then prosperously across the plains, is out, with its many ships, into the Atlantic. Two rivers, we say, from the Bohemian or steep side: and again, from the Silesian side, there rise other Two, the Oder and the Weichsel (Vistula); which start pretty near one another in the South-East, and, after wide windings, get both into the Baltic, at a good distance apart.

For the first thirty, or in parts, fifty miles from the Mountains, Silesia slopes somewhat rapidly; and is still to be called a Hill-country, rugged extensive elevations diversifying it: but after that, the slope is gentle, and at length insensible, or noticeable only by the way the waters run. From the central part of it, Schlesien pictures itself to you as a plain; growing ever flatter, ever sandier, as it abuts on the monotonous endless sand-flats of Poland, and the Brandenburg territories; nothing but Boundary Stones with their brass inscriptions marking where the transition is; and only some Fortified Town, not far off, keeping the door of the Country secure in that quarter.

On the other hand, the Mountain part of Schlesien is very picturesque; not of Alpine height anywhere (the Schnee-Koppe itself is under 5,000 feet), so that verdure and forest wood fail almost nowhere among the Mountains; and multiplex industry, besung by rushing torrents and the swift young rivers, nestles itself high up; and from wheat-husbandry, madder and maize husbandry, to damask-weaving, metallurgy, charcoal-burning, tar-distillery, Schlesien has many trades, and has long been expert and busy at them to a high degree. A very pretty Ellipsis, or irregular Oval, on the summit of the European Continent;—"like the palm of a left-hand well stretched-out, with the Riesengebirge for thumb!" said a certain Herr to me, stretching out his arm in that fashion towards the north-west. Palm, well stretched-out, measuring 250 miles; and the cross-way 100. There are still beavers in Schlesien; the Katzbach River has gold grains in it, a kind of Pactolus not now worth working; and in the scraggy lonesome pine-woods, grimy individuals, with kindled mounds of pine-branches and smoke carefully kept down by sods, are sweating-out a substance which they inform you is to be tar.

Historical Epochs of Schlesien;—after the Quads and Marchmen.

Who first lived in Schlesien, or lived long since in it, there is no use in asking, nor in telling if one knew. 'The Quadi and the Lygii,' says Dryasdust, in a groping manner: Quadi and consorts, in the fifth or sixth Century, continues he with more confidence, shifted Rome-ward, following the general track of contemporaneous mankind; weak remnant of Quadi was thereupon overpowered by Slavic populations, and their Country became Polish, which the eastern rim of it still essentially is. That was the end of the Quadi in those parts, says History. But they cannot speak nor appeal for themselves; History has them much at discretion. Rude burial urns, with a handful of ashes in them, have been dug up in different places; these are all the Archives and Histories the Quadi now have. It appears their name signifies Wicked. They are those poor Quadi (Wicked People) who always go along with the Marcomanni (Marchmen), in the beadroll Histories one reads; and I almost guess they must have been of the same stock: "Wickeds and Borderers;" considered, on both sides of the Border, to belong to the Dangerous Classes in those times. Two things are certain: First, quad and its derivatives have, to this day, in the speech of rustic Germans, something of that meaning,—'nefarious,' at least 'injurious,' 'hateful, and to be avoided:' for example, *quad*del, 'a nettle-burn;' *quet*schen, 'to smash' (say, your thumb while hammering); &c. &c. And then a second thing: The Polish equivalent word is Zle (Büsching says Zlezi); hence *Zle*zien, *Schle*sien, meaning merely *Bad*land, *Quad*land, what we might call *Damag*itia, or Country where you get into Trouble. That is the etymology, or what passes for such. As to the History of Schlesien, hitherwards of these burial urns dug up in different places, I notice, as not yet entirely buriable, Three Epochs.

First Epoch; Christianity: A.D. 966. Introduction of Christianity; to the length of founding a Bishoprick that year, so hopeful were the aspects; "Bishoprick of Schmoger" (Sch*mag*ram, dim little Village still discoverable on the Polish frontier, not far from the Town of Namslau); Bishoprick which, after one removal farther inward, got across the Oder, to "Wratislav," which we now call Breslau; and sticks there, as Bishoprick of Breslau, to this day. Year 966: it was in Adalbert, our Prussian Saint and Missionary's younger time. Preaching, by zealous Polacks, must have been going on, while Adalbert, Bright in Nobleness, was studying at Magdeburg, and ripening for high things in the general estimation. This was a new gift from the Polacks, this of Christianity; an infinitely more important one than that nickname of "Zlezien," or "*Dama*gitia," stuck upon the poor Country, had been.

Second Epoch; Get gradually cut loose from Poland: A.D. 1139-1159. Twenty years of great trouble in Poland, which were of lasting benefit to Schlesien. In 1139 the Polack King, a very potent Majesty whom we could name but do not, died; and left his Dominions shared by punctual bequest among his five sons. Punctual bequest did avail: but the eldest Son (who was King, and had Schlesien with much else to his share) began to encroach, to grasp; upon which the others rose upon him, flung him out into exile; redivided; and hoped now they might have quiet. Hoped, but were disappointed; and could come to no sure bargain for the next twenty years,—not till 'the eldest brother,' first author of these strifes, 'died an exile in Holstein,' or was just about dying, and had agreed to take Schlesien for all claims, and be quiet thenceforth.

His, this eldest's, Three Sons did accordingly, in 1159, get Schlesien instead of him; their uncles proving honourable. Schlesien thereby was happy enough to get cut loose from Poland, and to continue loose; steering a course of its own;—parting farther and farther from Poland and its habits and fortunes. These Three Sons, of the late Polish Majesty who died in exile in Holstein, are the "Piast Dukes," much talked of in Silesian Histories: of whose merits I specify this only, That they so soon as possible strove to be German. They were Progenitors of all the "Piast Dukes," Proprietors of Schlesien thenceforth, till the last of them died-out in 1675,—and a certain Erbverbrüderung they had entered into could not take effect at that time. Their merits as Sovereign Dukes seem to have been considerable; a certain piety, wisdom and nobleness of mind not rare among them; and no doubt it was partly their merit, if partly also their good luck, that they took to Germany, and leant thitherward; steering looser and looser from Poland, in their new circumstances. They themselves by degrees became altogether German; their Countries, by silent immigration, introduction of the arts, the composures and sobrieties, became essentially so. On the eastern rim there is still a Polack remnant, its territories very sandy, its condition very bad; remnant which surely ought to cease its Polack jargon, and learn some dialect of intelligible Teutsch, as the first condition of improvement. In all other parts Teutsch reigns; and Schlesien is a green abundant Country; full of metallurgy, damask-weaving, grain-husbandry,—instead of gasconade, gilt anarchy, rags, dirt, and Nie Pozwalam.

A.D. 1327; Get completely cut loose. The Piast Dukes, who soon ceased to be Polish, and hung rather upon Bohemia, and thereby upon Germany, made a great step in that direction, when King Johann, old Ich-Dien whom we ought to recollect, persuaded most of them, all of them but two, 'pretio ac prece,' to become Feudatories (Quasi-Feudatories, but of a sovereign sort) to his Crown of Bohemia. The two who stood out, resisting prayer and price, were the Duke of Jauer and the Duke of Schweidnitz,—lofty-minded gentlemen, perhaps a thought too lofty. But these also Johann's son, little Kaiser Karl IV., 'marrying their heiress,' contrived to bring in;—one fruitful adventure of little Karl's, among the many wasteful he made, in the German Reich. Schlesien is henceforth a bit of the Kingdom of Bohemia; indissolubly hooked to Germany; and its progress in the arts and composures, under wise Piasts with immigrating Germans, we guess to have become doubly rapid.[1]

Third Epoch; Adopt the Reformation: A.D. 1414-1517. Schlesien, hanging to Bohemia in this manner, extensively adopted Huss's doctrines; still more extensively Luther's; and that was a difficult element in its lot, though, I believe, an unspeakably precious one. It cost above a Century of sad tumults, Zisca Wars; nay above Two Centuries, including the sad Thirty-years War;—which miseries, in Bohemia Proper, were sometimes very sad and even horrible. But Schlesien, the outlying Country, did, in all this, suffer less than Bohemia Proper; and did not lose its Evangelical Doctrine in result, as unfortunate Bohemia did, and sink into sluttish 'fanatical torpor, and big Crucifixes of japanned Tin by the wayside,' though in the course of subsequent years, named of Peace, it was near doing so. Here are the steps, or unavailing counter-steps, in that latter direction:

A.D. 1537. Occurred, as we know, the Erbverbrüderung; Duke of Liegnitz, and of other extensive heritages, making Deed of Brotherhood with Kur-Brandenburg;—Deed forbidden, and so far as might be, rubbed-out and annihilated by the then King of Bohemia, subsequently Kaiser Ferdinand I., Karl V.'s Brother. Duke of Liegnitz had to give up his parchments, and become zero in that matter: Kur-Brandenburg entirely refused to do so; kept his parchments, to see if they would not turn to something.

A.D. 1624. Schlesien, especially the then Duke of Liegnitz (great-grandson of the Erbverbrüderung one), and poor Johann George, Duke of Jägerndorf, cadet of the then Kur-Brandenburg, went warmly ahead into the Winter-King project, first fire of the Thirty-years War; sufferings from Papal encroachment, in high quarters, being really extreme. Warmly ahead; and had to smart sharply for it;—poor Johann George with forfeiture of Jägerndorf, with Reiches-Acht (Ban of the Empire), and total ruin; fighting against which he soon died. Act of Ban and Forfeiture was done tyrannously, said most men; and it was persisted in equally so, till men ceased speaking of it;—Jägerndorf Duchy, fruit of the Act, was held by Austria, ever after, in defiance of the Laws of the Reich. Religious Oppression lay heavy on Protestant Schlesien thenceforth; and many lukewarm individualities were brought back to Orthodoxy by that method, successful in the diligent skilled hands of Jesuit Reverend Fathers, with fiscals and soldiers in the rear of them.

[1] Büsching, Erdbeschreibung, viii. 725; Hübner, t. 94.

A.D. 1648. Treaty of Westphalia mended much of this, and set fair limits to Papist encroachment;—had said Treaty been kept: but how could it? By Orthodox Authority, anxious to recover lost souls, or at least to have loyal subjects, it was publicly kept in name; and tacitly, in substance, it was violated more and more. Of the "Blossoming of Silesian Literature," spoken of in Books; of the Poet Opitz, Poets Logau, Hoffmannswaldau, who burst into a kind of Song better or worse at this Period, we will remember nothing; but request the reader to remember it, if he is tunefully given, or thinks it a good symptom of Schlesien.

A.D. 1707. Treaty of Altranstadt: between Kaiser Joseph I. and Karl XII. Swedish Karl, marching through those parts,—out of Poland, in chase of August the Physically Strong, towards Saxony, there to beat him soft,—was waited upon by Silesian Deputations of a lamentable nature; was entreated, for the love of Christ and His Evangel, to "Protect us poor Protestants, and get the Treaty of Westphalia observed on our behalf, and fair-play shown!" Which Karl did; Kaiser Joseph, with such weight of French War lying on him, being much struck with the tone of that dangerous Swede. The Pope rebuked Kaiser Joseph for such compliance in the Silesian matter: "Holy Father," answered this Kaiser (not of distinguished orthodoxy in the House), "I am too glad he did not ask me to become Lutheran; I know not how I should have helped myself!"[2]

These are the Three Epochs;—most things, in respect of this Third or Reformation Epoch, stepping steadily downward hitherto. As to the Fourth Epoch, dating '13th Dec. 1740,' which continues, up to our day and farther, and is the final and crowning Epoch of Silesian History,—read in the following Chapters.

2 Pauli, Allgemeine Preussische Staats-Geschichte (viii. 298-592); Büsching, Erdbeschreibung (viii. 700-739); &c.—Heinrich Wuttke, Friedrichs des Grossen Besitzergreifung von Schlesien (Seizure of Silesia by Friedrich, 2 voll. Leipzig, 1843), I mention only lest ingenuous readers should be tempted by the Title to buy it. Wuttke begins at the Creation of the World; and having, in two heavy volumes, at last struggled down close to the Besitzergreifung or Seizure in question, calls halt; and stands (at ease, we will hope) immovably there for the seventeen years since.

CHAPTER II.

FRIEDRICH MARCHES ON GLOGAU.

At what hour Friedrich ceased dancing on that famous Ball-night of Bielfeld's, and how long he slept after, or whether at all, no Bielfeld even mythically says: but next morning, as is patent to all the world, Tuesday 13th December 1740, at the stroke of nine, he steps into his carriage; and with small escort rolls away towards Frankfurt-on-Oder;[1] out upon an Enterprise which will have results for himself and others.

Two youngish military men, Adjutant-Generals both, were with him, Wartensleben, Borck; both once fellow Captains in the Potsdam Giants, and much in his intimacy ever since. Wartensleben we once saw at Brunswick, on a Masonic occasion; Borck, whom we here see for the first time, is not the Colonel Borck (properly Major-General) who did the Herstal Operation lately; still less is he the venerable old Minister, Marlborough Veteran, and now Field-Marshal Borck, whom Hotham treated with, on a certain occasion. There are numerous Borcks always in the King's service; nor are these three, except by loose cousinry, related to one another. The Borcks all come from Stettin quarter; a brave kindred, and old enough, —"Old as the Devil, Das ist so old als de Borcken und de Diiwel," says the Pomeranian Proverb;—the Adjutant-General, a junior member of the clan, chances to be the notablest of them at this moment. Wartensleben, Borck, and a certain Colonel von der Golz, whom also the King much esteems, these are his company on this drive. For escort, or guard of honour out of Berlin to the next stages, there is a small body of Hussars, Lifeguard and other Cavalry, 'perhaps 500 horse in all.'

They drive rapidly, through the gray winter; reach Frankfurt-on-Oder, sixty miles or more; where no doubt there is military business waiting. They are forward, on the morrow, for dinner, forty miles farther, at a small Town called Crossen, which looks over into Silesia; and is, for the present, headquarters to a Prussian Army, standing ready there and in the environs. Standing ready, or hourly marching in, and rendezvousing; now about 28,000 strong, horse and foot. A Rearguard of Ten or Twelve Thousand will march from Berlin in two days, pause hereabouts, and follow according to circumstances: Prussian Army will then be some 40,000 in all. Schwerin has been Commander, manager and mainspring of the business hitherto: henceforth it is to be the King; but Schwerin under him will still have a Division of his own.

[1] Helden-Geschichte, i. 452; Preuss, Thronbesteigung, p. 456

16th Dec. 1740

Among the Regiments, we notice 'Schulenburg Horse-Grenadiers,'—come along from Landsberg hither, these Horse-Grenadiers, with little Schulenburg at the head of them;—'Dragoon Regiment Bayreuth,' 'Lifeguard Carbineers,' 'Derschau of Foot;' and other Regiments and figures slightly known to us, or that will be better known.[2] Rearguard, just getting under way at Berlin, has for leaders the Prince of Holstein-Beck ("Holstein-Vaisselle," say wags, since the Principality went all to Silver-Plate) and the Hereditary Prince of Anhalt-Dessau, whom we called the Young Dessauer, on the Strasburg Journey lately: Rearguard, we say, is of 12,000; main Army is 28,000; Horse and Foot are in the proportion of about 1 to 3. Artillery 'consists of 20 three-pounders; 4 twelve-pounders; '4 howitzers (Haubitzen); 4 big mortars, calibre fifty-pounds; 'and of Artillerymen 166 in all.'

With this Force the young King has, on his own basis (pretty much in spite of all the world, as we find now and afterwards), determined to invade Silesia, and lay hold of the Property he has long had there;—not computing, for none can compute, the sleeping whirlwinds he may chance to awaken thereby. Thus lightly does a man enter upon Enterprises which prove unexpectedly momentous, and shape the whole remainder of his days for him; crossing the Rubicon as it were in his sleep. In Life, as on Railways at certain points,—whether you know it or not, there is but an inch, this way or that, into what tram you are shunted; but try to get out of it again! "The man is mad, cet homme-là est fol!" said Louis XV. when he heard it.[3]

Friedrich at Crossen, and still in his own Territory, 14th-16th Dec.;—steps into Schlesien.

At all events, the man means to try;—and is here dining at Crossen, noon of Wednesday the 14th; certain important

[2] List in Helden-Geschichte, i. 453.

[3] Raumer, Beyträge (English Translation, called Frederick II. and his Times; from British Museum and State-Paper Office;—a very indistinct poor Book, in comparison with what it might have been), p. 73 (24th Dec. 1740).

persons,—especially two Silesian Gentlemen, deputed from Grünberg, the nearest Silesian Town, who have come across the border on business,—having the honour to dine with him. To whom his manner is lively and affable; lively in mood, as if there lay no load upon his spirits. The business of these two Silesian Gentlemen, a Baron von Hocke one of them, a Baron von Kestlitz the other, was To present, on the part of the Town and Amt of Grünberg, a solemn Protest against this meditated entrance on the Territory of Schlesien; Government itself, from Breslau, ordering them to do so. Protest was duly presented; Friedrich, as his manner is, and continues to be on his march, glances politely into or at the Protest; hands it, in silence, to some page or secretary to deposit in the due pigeon-hole or waste-basket; and invites the two Silesian Gentlemen to dine with him; as, we see, they have the honour to do. "He (Er) lives near Grünberg, then, Mein Herr von Hocke?" "Close to it, Ihro Majestät. My poor mansion, Schloss of Deutsch-Kessel, is some fifteen miles hence; how infinitely at your Majesty's service, should the march prove inevitable, and go that way!"—"Well, perhaps!" I find Friedrich did dine, the second day hence, with one of these Gentlemen; and lodged with the other. Government at Breslau has ordered such Protest, on the part of the Frontier populations and Official persons: and this is all that comes of it.

During these hours, it chanced that the big Bell of Crossen dropped from its steeple,—fulness of time, or entire rottenness of axletree, being at last completed, at this fateful moment. Perhaps an ominous thing? Friedrich, as Cæsar and others have done, cheerfully interprets the omen to his own advantage: "Sign that the High is to be brought low!" says Friedrich. Were the march-routes, wagon-trains, and multifarious adjustments perfect to the last item here at Crossen, he will with much cheerfulness step into Silesia, independent of all Grünberg Protests and fallen Bells.

On the second day he does actually cross; 'the regiments 'marching in, at different points; some reaching as far as '25 miles in.' It is Friday 16th Dec. 1740; there has a game begun which will last long! They went through the Village of Läsgen; that was the first point of Silesian ground ("Circle of Schwiebus," our old friend, is on the left near by); and 'Schwerin's Regiment was the foremost.' Others cross more to the left or right; 'marching through the Village of Lessen,' and other dim Villages and little Towns, round and beyond Grünberg; all regiments and divisions bearing upon Grünberg and the Great Road; but artistically portioned out, —several miles in breadth (for the sake of quarters), and, as is generally the rule, about a day's march in length. This evening nearly the whole Army was on Silesian ground.

Printed 'Patent' or Proclamation, briefly assuring all Silesians, of whatever rank, condition or religion, "That we have come as friends to them, and will protect all persons in their privileges, and molest no peaceable mortal," is posted on Church-doors, and extensively distributed by hand. Soldiers are forbidden, 'under penalty of the rods,' Officers under that of 'cassation with infamy,' to take anything, without first bargaining and paying ready-money for it. On these terms the Silesian villages cheerfully enough accept their new guests, interesting to the rural mind; and though the billeting was rather heavy, 'as many as 24 soldiers to a common Farmer (Gärtner),' no complaints were made. In one Schloss, where the owners had fled, and no human response was to be had by the wayworn soldiery, there did occur some breakages and impatient kickings about; which it grieved his Majesty to hear of, next morning;—in one, not in more.

Official persons, we perceive, study to be absolutely passive. This was the Bürgermeister's course at Grünberg to-night; Grünberg, first Town on the Frontier, sets an example of passivity which cannot be surpassed. Prussian troops being at the Gate of Grünberg, Bürgermeister and adjuncts sitting in a tacit expectant condition in their Townhall, there arrives a Prussian Lieutenant requiring of the Bürgermeister the Key of said Gate. "To deliver such Key? Would to God I durst, "Mein Herr Lieutenant; but how dare I! There is the Key "lying: but to give it—You are not the Queen of Hungary's "Officer, I doubt?"—The Prussian Lieutenant has to put out hand, and take the Key; which he readily does. And on the morrow, in returning it, when the march recommences, there are the same phenomena: Bürgermeister or assistants dare not for the life of them touch that Key: It lay on the table; and may again, in the course of Providence, come to lie!—The Prussian Lieutenant lays it down accordingly, and hurries out, with a grin on his face. There was much small laughter over this transaction; Majesty himself laughing well at it. Higher perfection of passivity no Bürgermeister could show.

The march, as readers understand, is towards Glogau; a strongish Garrison Town, now some 40 miles ahead; the key of Northern Schlesien. Grünberg (where my readers once slept for the night, in the late King's time, though they have forgotten it) is the first and only considerable Town on the hither side of Glogau. On to Glogau, I rather perceive, the Army is in good part provisioned before starting: after Glogau, —we must see. Bread-wagons, Baggage-wagons, Ammunition-and-Artillery wagons, all is in order; Army artistically portioned out. That is the form of march; with Glogau ahead. King, as we said above, dines with his Baron von Hocke, at the Schloss of Deutsch-Kessel, short way beyond Grünberg, this first day: but he by no means loiters there;—cuts across, a dozen miles westward, through a country where his vanguard on its various lines of march ought to be arriving;—and goes to lodge, at the Schloss of Schweinitz, with his other Baron, the Von Kestlitz of Wednesday at Crossen.[4] This is Friday 16th December, his first night on Silesian ground.

What Glogau, and the Government at Breslau, did upon it.

Silesia, in the way of resistance, is not in the least prepared for him. A month ago, there were not above 3,000 Austrian Foot and 600 Horse in the whole Province: neither the military Governor Count Wallis, nor the Imperial Court, nor any Official Person near or far, had the least anticipation of such a Visit. Count Wallis, who commands in Glogau, did in person, nine or ten days ago, as the rumours rose ever higher, run over to Crossen; saw with his eyes the undeniable there; and has been zealously endeavouring ever since, what he could, to take measures. Wallis is now shut in Glogau; his second, the now Acting Governor, General Browne, a still more reflective man, is doing likewise his utmost; but on forlorn terms, and without the least guidance from Court. Browne has, by violent industry, raked together, from Mähren and the neighbouring countries, certain fractions which raise his Force to 7,000 Foot: these he throws, in small parties, into the defensible points; or, in larger, into the Chief Garrisons. New

[4] Helden-Geschichte, i. 459.

16th Dec. 1740.

Cavalry he cannot get; the old 600 Horse he keeps for himself, all the marching Army he has.[5]

Fain would he get possession of Breslau, and throw-in some garrison there; but cannot. Neither he nor Wallis could compass that. Breslau is a City divided against itself, on this matter; full of emotions, of expectations, apprehensions for and against. There is a Supreme Silesian Government (Ober-Amt, 'Head-Office,' kind of Austrian Vice-Royalty) in Breslau; and there is, on Breslau's own score, a Town-Rath; strictly Catholic both these, Vienna the breath of their nostrils. But then also there are forty-four Incorporated Trades; Oppressed-Protestant in majority; to whom Vienna is not breath, but rather the want of it. Lastly, the City calls itself Free; and has crabbed privileges still valid; a "jus præsidii" (or right to be one's own garrison) one of them, and the most inconvenient just now. Breslau is a Reichs-Stadt; in theory, sovereign member of the Reich, and supreme over its own affairs, even as Austria itself:—and the truth is, old Theory and new Fact, resolved not to quarrel, have lapsed into one another's arms in a quite inextricable way, in Breslau as elsewhere! With a Head Government which can get no orders from Vienna, the very Town-Rath has little alacrity, inclines rather to passivity like Grünberg; and a silent population threatens to become vocal if you press upon it.

Breslau, that is to say the Ober-Amt there, has sent courier on courier to Vienna for weeks past: not even an answer;—what can Vienna answer, with Kur-Baiern and others threatening war on it, and only 10,000*l.* in its National Purse? Answer at last is, "Don't bother! Danger is not so near. Why spend money on couriers, and get into such a taking?" General Wallis came to Breslau, after what he had seen at Crossen; and urged strongly, in the name of self-preservation, first law of Nature, to get an Austrian real Garrison introduced; wished much (horrible to think of!) 'the suburbs should be burnt, and better ramparts raised:' but could not succeed in any of these points, nor even mention some of them in a public manner. "You shall have a Protestant for commandant," suggested Wallis; "there is Count von Roth, Sile-sian-Lutheran, an excellent Soldier!"—"Thanks," answered they, "we can defend ourselves; we had rather not have any!" And the Breslau Burghers have, accordingly, set to drill themselves; are bringing out old cannon in quantity; repairing breaches; very strict in sentry-work: "Perfectly able to defend our City,—so far as we see good!"—Tuesday last, December 13th (the very day Friedrich left Berlin), as this matter of the Garrison, long urged by the Ober-Amt, had at last been got agreed to by the Town-Rath, 'on proviso of consulting the Incorporated Trades,' or at least consulting their Guild-Masters, who are usually a silent folk,—the Guild-Masters suddenly became in part vocal; and their Forty-four Guilds unusually so:—and there was tumult in Breslau, in the Salz-Ring (big central Square or marketplace, which they call Ring) such as had not been; idle population, and guild-brethren of suspicious humour, gathering in multitudes into and round the fine old Townhall there; questioning, answering, in louder and louder key; at last bellowing quite in alt; and on the edge of flaming into one knew not what:[6]—till the matter of Austrian Garrison (much more, of burning the suburbs!) had to be dropt; settled in what way we see.

[5] Particulars in Heiden-Geschichte, i. 465; total of Austrian Force seems to be 7,800 horse and foot.

Head Government (Ober-Amt) has, through its Northern-official people, sent Protest, strict order to the Silesian Population to look sour on the Prussians:—and we saw, in consequence, the Two Silesian Gentlemen did dine with Friedrich, and he has returned their visits; and the Mayor of Grünberg would not touch his keys. Head Government is now redacting a 'Patent," or still more solemn Protest of its own; which likewise it will affix in the Salz-Ring here, and present to King Friedrich: and this,—except 'dispatching by boat down the river a great deal of meal to Glogau,' which was an important quiet thing, of Wallis's enforcing,—is pretty much all it can do. No Austrian Garrison can be got in ("Perfectly able to defend ourselves!")—let Government and Wallis or Browne contrive as they may. And as to burning the suburbs, better not whisper of that again. Breslau feels, or would fain feel itself "perfectly able;"—has at any rate no wish to be bombarded; and contains privately a great deal of Protestant humour. Of all which, Friedrich, it is not doubted, has notice more or less distinct; and quickens his march the more.

[6] Helden-Geschichte, i. 469.

16th Dec. 1740.

General Browne is at present in the Southern parts; an able active man and soldier; but with such a force what can he attempt to do? There are three strong places in the Country, Glogau, then Brieg, both on the Oder river; lastly Neisse, on the Neisse river, a branch of the Oder (one of the four Neisse rivers there are in Germany, mostly in Silesia,—not handy to the accurate reader of German Books). Browne is in Neisse; and will start into a strange stare when the flying post reaches him: Prussians actually on march! Debate with them, if debate there is to be, Browne himself must contrive to do; from Breslau, from Vienna, no Government Supreme or Subordinate can yield his 8,000 and him the least help.

Glogau, as we saw, means to defend itself; at least, General Wallis the Commandant does, in spite of the Glogau public; and is, with his whole might, digging, palisading, getting-in meal, salt meat and other provender;—likewise burning suburbs, uncontrollable he, in the small place; and clearing down the outside edifices and shelters, at a diligent rate. Yesterday, 15th December, he burnt-down the 'three Oder-Mills, which 'lie outside, the big suburban Tavern, also the Ziegel-Scheune '(Tile-Manufactory),' and other valuable buildings, careless of public lamentation,—fire catching the Town itself, and needing to be quenched again.[7] Nay, he was clear for burning-down, or blowing-up, the Protestant Church, indispensable sacred edifice which stands outside the walls: "Prussians will make a blockhouse of it!" said Wallis. A chief Protestant, Baron von Something, begged passionately for only twelve hours of respite,—to lay the case before his Prussian Majesty. Respite conceded, he and another chief Protestant had posted off accordingly; and did the next morning (Friday 16th), short way from Crossen, meet his Majesty's carriage; who graciously pulled-up for a few instants, and listened to their story. "Meine Herren, you are the first that ask a favour of me on Silesian ground; it shall be done you!" said the King; and straightway dispatched, in polite style, his written request to Wallis, engaging to make no military use whatever of said Church, 'but to attack by the other side, if attack were necessary.' Thus his Majesty saved the Church of Glogau; which of course was a popular act. Getting to see this Church himself a few days hence, he said, "Why, it must come down at any rate, and be rebuilt; so ugly a thing!"

[7] Helden-Geschichte, i. 472-5.

Wallis is making strenuous preparation; forces the inhabitants, even the upper kinds of them, to labour day and night by relays, in his rampartings, palisadings; is for burning all the adjacent Villages,—and would have done it, had not the peasants themselves turned out in a dangerous state of mind. He has got together about 1,000 men. His powder, they say, is fifty years old; but he has eatable provender from Breslau, and means to hold-out to the utmost. Readers must admit that the Austrian military, Graf von Wallis to begin with,—still more, General Browne, who is a younger man and has now the head charge,—behave well in their present forsaken condition. Wallis (Graf Franz Wenzel this one, not to be confounded with an older Wallis heard of in the late Turk War) is of Scotch descent,—as all these Wallises are; 'came to Austria long generations ago; Reichsgrafs since '1612:'—Browne is of Irish; age now thirty-five, ten years younger than Wallis. Read this Note on the distinguished Browne:

'A German-Irish Gentleman, this General (ultimately Fieldmarshal) 'Graf von Browne; one of those sad exiled Irish Jacobites, or sons of 'Jacobites, who are fighting in foreign armies; able and notable men 'several of them, and this Browne considerably the most so. We shall 'meet him repeatedly within the next eighteen years. Maximilian-'Ulysses Graf von Browne: I said he was born German; Basel his 'birthplace (23d October 1705), Father also a soldier: he must not be 'confounded with a contemporary Cousin of his, who is also "Field-'marshal Browne," but serves in Russia, Governor of Riga for a long 'time in the coming years. This Austrian General, Fieldmarshal 'Browne, will by and by concern us somewhat; and the reader may 'take note of him.

'Who the Irish Brothers Browne, the Fathers of these Marshals 'Browne, were? I have looked in what Irish Peerages and printed 'Records there were, but without the least result. One big dropsical 'Book, of languid quality, called King James's Irish Army-List, has 'multitudes of Brownes and others, in an indistinct form; but the one 'Browne wanted, the one Lacy, almost the one Lally, like the part of 'Hamlet, are omitted. There are so many Irish in the like case with 'these Brownes. A Lacy we once slightly saw or heard of; busy in 'the Polish-Election time,—besieging Dantzig (investing Dantzig, that 'Münnich might besiege it);—that Lacy, "Governor of Riga," whom 'the Russian Browne will succeed, is also Irish: a conspicuous Russian 'man; and will have a Son Lacy, conspicuous among the Austrians.

'Maguires, Ogilvies (of the Irish stock), Lieutenants "Fitzgeral;" very 'many Irish; and there is not the least distinct account to be had of 'any of them.'[8]

Let us attend his Majesty on the next few marches towards Glogau, to see the manner of the thing a little; after which it will behove us to be much more summary, and stick by the main incidents.

March to Weichau (Saturday 17th, and stay Sunday there); to Milkau (Monday 19th); get to Herrendorf, within sight of Glogau, Dec. 22d.

Friedrich's march proceeds with speed and regularity. Strict discipline is maintained; all things paid for, damage carefully avoided: "We come, not as invasive enemies of you or of the Queen of Hungary, but as protective friends of Silesia and of her Majesty's rights there;—her Majesty once allowing us (as it is presumable she will) our own rights in this Province, no man shall meddle with hers, while we continue here." To that effect runs the little "Patent," or initiatory Proclamation, extensively handed out, and posted in public places, as was said above; and the practice is conformable.

To all men, coming with Protests or otherwise, we perceive, the young King is politeness itself; giving clear answer, and promise which will be kept, on the above principle. Nothing angers him except that gentlemen should disbelieve, and run away. That a mansion be found deserted by its owners, is the one evil omen for such mansion. Thus, at the Schloss of Weichau (which is still discoverable on the Map,* across the 'Black Ochel' and the 'White,' muddy streams which saunter eastward towards the Oder there, nothing yet running westward for the Bober, our other limitary river), next night

[8] For Browne see "Anonymous of Hamburg" (so I have had to label a J. F. S. Geschichte des &c.—in fact, History of Seven-Years War, in successive volumes, done chiefly by the scissors; Leipzig and Frankfurt, 1759 et seqq.), i. 123-131 n.: elaborate Note of eight pages there; intimating withal that he, J. F. S., wrote the "Life of Browne," a Book I had in vain sought for; and can now guess to consist of those same elaborate eight pages, plus water and lathering to the due amount. Anonymous "of Hamburg" I call my J. F. S.,—having fished him out of the dust-abysses in that City: a very poor take; yet worth citing sometimes, being authentic, as even the darkest Germans generally are.—For a glimpse of Lacy (the Elder Lacy) see Büsching, Beyträge, vi. 162.—For Wallis (tombstone Note on Wallis) see (among others who are copious in that kind of article, and keep large sacks of it, in admired disorder) Anonymous Seyfarth, Geschichte Friedrichs des Andern (Leipzig, 1784-1788), i. 112 n.; and Anonymous, Leben der &c. Marie Theresie (Leipzig, 1781), 27 n.: laboriously authentic Books both; essentially Dictionaries,—stuffed as into a row of blind sacks.

* At end of this Volume.

after Schweinitz, second night in Silesia, there was no Owner to be met with; and the look of his Majesty grew finster (dark); remembering what had passed yesternight, in like case, at that other Schloss from which the owner with his best portable furniture had vanished. At which Schloss, as above noticed, some disorders were committed by angry parties of the march;—doors burst open (doors standing impudently dumb to the rational proposals made them!), inferior remainders of furniture smashed into firewood, and the like,—no doubt to his Majesty's vexation. Here at Weichau stricter measures were taken: and yet difficulties, risks were not wanting; and the Amtmann (Steward of the place) got pulled about, and once even a stroke or two. Happily the young Herr of Weichau appeared in person on the morrow, hearing his Majesty was still there: "Papa is old; lives at another Schloss; could not wait upon your Majesty; nor, till now, could I have that honour."—"Well; lucky that you have come: stay dinner!" Which the young Count did, and drove home in the evening to reassure Papa; his Majesty continuing there another night, and the risk over.[9]

This day, Sunday 18th, the Army rests; their first Sunday in Silesia, while the young Count pays his devoir: and here in Weichau, as elsewhere, it is in the Church, Catholic nearly always, that the Heretic Army does its devotions, safe from weather at least: such the Royal Order, they say; which is taken note of, by the Heterodox and by the Orthodox. And ever henceforth, this is the example followed; and in all places where there is no Protestant Church and the Catholics have one, the Prussian Army-Chaplain assembles his buff-belted audience in the latter: "No offence, Reverend Fathers, but there are hours for us, and hours for you; and such is the King's Order." There is regular divine-service in this Prussian Army; and even a good deal of inarticulate religion, as one may see on examining.

Country Gentlemen, Town Mayors and other civic Authorities, soon learn that on these terms they are safe with his Majesty; march after march he has interviews with such, to regulate the supplies, the necessities and accidents of the quartering of his Troops. Clear, frank, open to reasonable representation, correct to his promise; in fact, industriously conciliatory and pacificatory: such is Friedrich to all Silesian men. Provincial Authorities, who can get no instructions from Headquarters; Vienna saying nothing, Breslau nothing, and Deputy-Governor Browne being far south in Neisse,—are naturally in difficulties: How shall they act? Best not to act at all, if one can help it; and follow the Mayor of Grünberg's unsurpassable pattern!—

[9] Helden-Geschichte, i. 459.

'These Silesians,' says an Excerpt I have made, 'are still in majority Protestant; especially in this Northern portion of the Province; they have had to suffer much on that and other scores; and are secretly or openly in favour of the Prussians. Official persons, all of the Catholic creed, have leant heavy, not always conscious of doing it, against Protestant rights. The Jesuits, consciously enough, have been and are busy with them; intent to recall a Heretic Population by all methods, fair and unfair. We heard of Charles XII.'s interference, three-and-thirty years ago; and how the Kaiser, hard bested at that time, had to profess repentance and engage for complete amendment. Amendment did, for the moment, accordingly take place. Treaty of Westphalia in all its stipulations, with precautionary improvements, was reënacted as Treaty of Altranstadt; with faithful intention of keeping it too, on Kaiser Joseph's part, who was not a superstitious man: "Holy Father, I was too glad he did not demand my own conversion to the Protestant Heresy, bested as I am,—with Louis Quatorze and Company upon the neck of me!" Some improvement of performance, very marked at first, did ensue upon this Altranstadt Treaty. But the sternly accurate Karl of Sweden soon disappeared from the scene; Kaiser Joseph of Austria soon disappeared; and his Brother, Karl VI., was a much more orthodox person.

'The Austrian Government, and Kaiser Karl's in particular, is not to be called an intentionally unjust one; the contrary, I rather find; but it is, beyond others, ponderous; based broad on such multiplex formalities, old habitudes; and gravitation has a great power over it. In brief, Official human nature, with the best of Kaisers atop, flagitated continually by Jesuit Confessors, does throw its weight on a certain side:—the sad fact is, in a few years the brightness of that Altranstadt improvement began to wax dim; and now, under long Jesuit manipulation, Silesian things are nearly at their old pass; and the patience of men is heavily laden. To see your Chapel made a Soldiers' Barrack, your Protestant School become a Jesuit one,—Men did not then think of revolting under injuries; but the poor Silesian weaver, trudging twenty miles for his Sunday sermon; and perceiving that, unless their Mother could teach the art of reading, his boys, except under soul's peril, would now never learn it: such a Silesian could not want for reflections. Voiceless, hopeless, but heavy; and dwelling secretly, as under nightmare, in a million hearts. Austrian Officiality, wilfully unjust, or not wilfully so, is admitted to be in a 'most heavy-footed condition; can administer nothing well. Good Go'vernment in any kind is not known here: Possibly the Prussian will 'be better; who can say?

'The secret joy of these populations, as Friedrich advances among 'them, becomes more and more a manifest one. Catholic Officials do 'not venture on any definite hope, or definite balance of hope and fear;
'but adopt the Mayor of Grünberg's course, and study to be passive 'and silent. The Jesuit-Priest kind are clear in their minds for Austria;
'but think, Perhaps Prussia itself will not prove very tyrannous? At 'all events, be silent; it is unsafe to stir. We notice generally, it is 'only in the Southern or Mountain regions of Silesia, where the Catho'lics are in majority, that the population is not ardently on the Prussian 'side.' Passive, if they are on the other side; accurately passive at 'lowest, this it is prescribed all prudent men to be.'

On the 18th, while divine-service went on at Weichau, there was at Breslau another phenomenon observable. Provincial Government in Breslau had, at length, after intense study, and across such difficulties as we have no idea of, got its "Patent," or carefully-worded Protestation against Prussia, brought to paper; and does, this day, with considerable solemnity, affix it to the Rathhaus door there, for the perusal of mankind; dispatching a Copy for his Prussian Majesty withal, by two Messengers of dignity. It has needed courage screwed to the sticking-place to venture on such a step, without instruction from Head-quarters; and the utmost powers of the Official mind have been taxed to couch this Document in language politely ambiguous, and yet strong enough;—too strong, some of us now think it. In any case, here it now is; Provincial Government's bolt, so to speak, is shot. The affixing took place under dark weather-symptoms; actual outburst of thunder and rain at the moment, not to speak of the other surer omens. So that, to the common mind at Breslau, it did not seem there would much fruit come of this difficult performance. Breslau is secretly a much-agitated City; and Prussian Hussar Parties, shooting forth to great distances ahead, were, this day for the first time, observed within sight of it.

And on the same Sunday we remark farther, what is still more important: Herr von Gotter, Friedrich's special Envoy to Vienna, has his first interview with the Queen of Hungary, or with Grand-Duke Franz the Queen's Husband and Co-Regent; and presents there, from Friedrich's own hand, written we remember when, brief distinct Note of his Prussian Majesty's actual Proposals and real meaning in regard to this Silesian Affair. Proposals anxiously conciliatory in tone, but the heavy purport of which is known to us: Gotter had been dispatched, time enough, with these Proposals (written above a month ago); but was instructed not to arrive with them, till after the actual entrance into Silesia. And now the response to them is—? As good as nothing; perhaps worse. Let that suffice us at present. Readers, on march for Glogau, would grudge to pause over State-papers, though we shall have to read this of Friedrich's at some freer moment.

Monday 19th, before daybreak, the Army is astir again, simultaneously wending forward; spread over wide areas, like a vast cloud (potential thunder in it) steadily advancing on the winds. Length of the Army, artistically portioned out, may be ten or fifteen miles, breadth already more, and growing more; Schwerin always on the right or western wing, close by the Bober River as yet, through Naumburg and the Towns on that side,—Liegnitz and other important Towns lying ahead for Schwerin, still farther apart from the main Body, were Glogau once settled.

So that the march is in Two Columns; Schwerin, with the westernmost small column, intending towards Liegnitz, and thence ever farther southward, with his right leaning on the high lands which rise more and more into mountains as you advance. Friedrich himself commands the other column, has his left upon the Oder, in a country mounting continually towards the South, but with less irregularity of level, and generally flat as yet. From beginning to end, the entire field of march lies between the Oder and its tributary the Bober; climbing slowly towards the sources of both. Which two rivers, as the reader may observe, form here a rectangular or trapezoidal space, ever widening as we go southward. Both rivers, coming from the Giant Mountains, hasten directly north; but Oder, bulging-out easterly in his sandy course, is obliged to turn fairly westward again; and at Glogau, and a good space farther, flows in that direction;—till once Bober strikes in, almost at right angles, carrying Oder with him, though he is but a branch, straight northward again. Northward, but ever slower, to the swollen Pommern regions, and sluggish exit into the Baltic there.

One of the worst features is the state of the weather. On Sunday, at Breslau, we noticed thunder bursting-out on an important occasion; "ominous," some men thought;—omen, for one thing, that the weather was breaking. At Weichau, that same day, rain began,—the young Herr of Weichau, driving home to Papa from dinner with Majesty, would get his share of it;—and on Monday 19th, there was such a pour of rain as kept most wayfarers, though it could not the Prussian Army, within doors. Rain in plunges, fallen and falling, through that blessed day; making roads into mere rivers of mud. The Prussian hosts marched on, all the same. Headquarters, with the van of the wet Army, that night, were at Milkau;—from which place we have a Note of Friedrich's for Friend Jordan, perhaps producible by and by. His Majesty lodged in some opulent Jesuit Establishment there. And indeed he continued there, not idle, under shelter, for a couple of days. The Jesuits, by their two head men, had welcomed him with their choicest smiles; to whom the King was very gracious, asking the two to dinner as usual, and styling them "Your Reverence." Willing to ingratiate himself with persons of interest in this Country; and likes talk, even with Jesuits of discernment.

On the morrow (20th), came to him, here at Milkau,—probably from some near stage, for the rain was pouring worse than ever,—that Breslau "Patent," or strongish Protestation, by its two Messengers of dignity. The King looked over it 'without visible anger' or change of countenance; 'handed it,' we expressly see, 'to a Page to reposit' in the proper waste-basket;—spoke politely to the two gentlemen; asked each or one of them, "Are you of the Ober-Amt at Breslau, then?"—using the style of Er (He).—"No, your Majesty; we are only of the Land-Stände" (Provincial Parliament, such as it is). 'Upon which' (do you mark!) 'his Majesty became still more 'polite; asked them to dinner, and used the style of Sie.' For their Patent, now lying safe in its waste-basket, he gave them signed receipt; no other answer.

Rain still heavier, rain as of Noah, continued through this Tuesday, and for days afterwards: but the Prussian hosts, hastening towards Glogau, marched still on. This Tuesday's march, for the rearward of the Army, 10,000 foot and 2,000 horse; march of ten hours long, from Weichau to the hamlet 21st-22d Dec. 1740.

Milkau (where his Majesty sits busy and affable),—is thought to be the wettest on record. Waters all out, bridges down, the Country one wild lake of eddying mud. Up to the knee for many miles together; up to the middle for long spaces; sometimes even up to the chin or deeper, where your bridge was washed away. The Prussians marched through it, as if they had been slate or iron. Rank and file, nobody quitted his rank, nobody looked sour in the face; they took the pouring of the skies, and the red seas of terrestrial liquid, as matters that must be; cheered one another with jocosities, with choral snatches (tobacco, I consider, would not burn); and swashed unweariedly forward. Ten hours some of them were out, their march being twenty or twenty-five miles; ten to fifteen was the average distance come. Nor, singular to say, did any loss occur; except of almost one poor Army-Chaplain, and altogether of one poor Soldier's Wife;—sank dangerously both of them, beyond redemption she, taking the wrong side of some bridge-parapet. Poor Soldier's Wife, she is not named to me at all; and has no history save this, and that 'she was of the regiment Bredow.' But I perceive she washed herself away in a World-Transaction; and there was one rough Bredower, who probably sat sad that night on getting to quarters. His Majesty surveyed the damp battalions on the morrow (21st), not without sympathy, not without satisfaction; allowed them a rest-day here at Milkau, to get dry and bright again; and gave them 'fifteen thalers a company,' which is about nine-pence apiece, with some words of praise.[10]

Next day, Thursday 22d, his Majesty and they marched on to Herrendorf; which is only five miles from Glogau, and near enough for Headquarters, in the now humour of the place. Wallis has his messenger at Herrendorf, "Sorry to warn your Majesty, That if there be the least hostility committed, I shall have to resist it to the utmost." Headquarters continue six days at Herrendorf, Army (main body, or left Column, of the Army) cantoned all round, till we consider what to do.

As to the right Column, or Schwerin's Division, that, after a rest-day or two, gathers itself into more complete separation here, tucking-in its eastern skirts; and gets on march again, by its own route. Steadily southward;—and from Liegnitz, and the upland Countries, there will be news of Schwerin and it before long. Rain ending, there ensued a ringing frost;—not favourable for Siege-operations on Glogau:—and Silesia became all of flinty glass, with white peaks to the South-west, whither Schwerin is gone.

[10] Helden-Geschichte, i. 482.

CHAPTER III.

PROBLEM OF GLOGAU.

FRIEDRICH was over from Herrendorf with the first daylight, 'reconnoitring Glogau, and rode up to the very glacis;' scanning it on all sides.[1] Since Wallis is so resolute, here is an intricate little problem for Friedrich, with plenty of corollaries and conditions hanging to it. Shall we besiege Glogau, then? We have no siege-cannon here. Time presses, Breslau and all things in such crisis; and it will take time. By what methods could Glogau be besieged? — Readers can consider what a blind many-threaded coil of things, heaping itself here in wide welters round Glogau, and straggling to the world's end, Friedrich has on hand: probably those six days, of Headquarters at Herrendorf, were the busiest he had yet had.

One thing is evident, there ought to be siege-cannon got straightway; and, still more immediate, the right posts and battering-places should be ready against its coming.—"Let the Young Dessauer with that Rearguard, or Reserve of 10,000, which is now at Crossen, come up and assist here," orders Friedrich; "and let him be swift, for the hours are pregnant!" On farther reflection, perhaps on new rumours from Breslau, Friedrich perceives that there can be no besieging of Glogau at this point of time; that the Reserve, Half of the Reserve, must be left to 'mask' it; to hold it in strict blockade, with starvation daily advancing as an ally to us, and with capture by bombarding possible when we like. That is the ultimate decision;—arrived at through a welter of dubieties, counterpoisings and perilous considerations, which we now take no account of. A most busy week; Friedrich incessantly in motion, now here now there; and a great deal of heavy work got well and rapidly done. The details of which, in these exuberant Manuscripts, would but weary the reader. Choosing of the proper posts and battering-places (post 'on the other side of the River,' 'on this side of it,' 'on the Island in the middle of it'), and obstinate entrenching and preparing of the same in spite of frost; 'wooden bridge built' farther up; with 'regulation of the river-boats, the Polish Ferry,' and much else: all this we omit; and will glance only at one pregnant point, by way of sample:

[1] Feiden-Geschichte, i. 484.

* * 'Most indispensable of all, the King has to provide Subsist-
'ences:—and enters now upon the new plan, which will have to be 'followed henceforth. The Provincial Chief-men (Landes-Ältesten, 'Land's-Eldests, their title) are summoned, from nine or ten Circles
'which are likely to be interested: they appear punctually and in num'bers,—lest contumacy worsen the inevitable. King dines them, to 'start with; as many as "ninety-five covers,"—day not given, but 'probably one of the first in Herrendorf: not Christmas itself, one 'hopes!

'Dinner done, the ninety-five Land's-Eldest are instructed by proper 'parties, What the Infantry's ration is, in meat, in bread, exact to the 'ounce; what the Cavalry's is, and that of the Cavalry's Horse. Ta'bular statement, succinct, correct, clear to the simplest capacity, shows
'what quotities of men on foot, and of men on horseback, or men with 'draught-cattle, will march through their respective Circles; Land's-
'Eldests conclude what amount of meal and butcher's-meat it will be 'indispensable to have in readiness;—what Land's-Eldest can deny the 'fact? These Papers still exist, at least the long-winded Summary of 'them does: and I own the reading of it far less insupportable than 'that of the mountains of Proclamatory, Manifesto and Diplomatic 'matter. Nay it leaves a certain wholesome impression on the mind,
'as of business thoroughly well done; and a matter, capable, if left in
'the chaotic state, of running to all manner of depths and heights,
'compendiously forced to become cosmic in this manner.

'These Land's-Eldest undertake, in a mildly resigned or even hope'ful humour. They will manage as required, in their own Circles;
'will communicate with the Circles farther on; and everywhere the
'due proviants, prestations, furtherances, shall be got together by fair
'apportionment on the Silesian Community, and be punctually ready
'as the Army advances. Book-keeping there is to be, legible record
'of everything; on all hands "quittance" for everything furnished: and
'a time is coming, when such quittance, presented by any Silesian
'man, will be counted money paid by him, and remitted at the next
'tax-day, or otherwise made good. Which promise also was accurately
'kept, the hoped-for time having come. It must be owned the Prus'sian Army understands business; and, with brevity, reduces to a 'minimum its own trouble, and that of other people, non-fighters, who 'have to do with it. Non-fighters, I say; to fighters we hope it will 'give a respectable maximum of trouble when applied to!'[2]

[2] Helden-Geschichte, i. 492-499.

The Gotter Negotiation at Vienna, which we saw begin there that wet Sunday, is now fast ending, as good as ended; without result except of a negative kind. Gotter's Proposals, —would the reader wish to hear these Proposals, which were so intensely interesting at one time? They are fivefold; given with great brevity by Friedrich, by us with still greater:

1°. "Will fling myself heartily into the Austrian scale, and endeavour for the interest of Austria in this Pragmatic matter, with my whole strength against every comer.

2°. "Will make treaty with Vienna, with Russia and the Sea-Powers, to that effect.

3°. "Will help by vote, and with whole amount of interest will endeavour, to have Grand-Duke Franz, the Queen's Husband, chosen Kaiser; and to maintain such choice against all and sundry. Feel myself strong enough to accomplish this result; and may, without exaggeration, venture to say it shall be done.

4°. "To help the Court of Vienna in getting its affairs into good order and fencible condition,—will present to it, on the shortest notice, Two Million Gulden (200,000*l.*) ready-money."—Infinitely welcome this Fourth Proposition; and indeed all the other Three are welcome: but they are saddled with a final condition, which pulls down all again. This, which is studiously worded, politely evasive in phrase, and would fain keep old controversies asleep, though in substance it is so fatally distinct,—we give in the King's own words:

5°. "For such essential services as those to which I bind myself "by the above very onerous conditions, I naturally require a propor- "tionate recompense; some suitable assurance, as indemnity for all the "dangers I risk, and for the part (rôle) I am ready to play: in short, "I require hereby the entire and complete cession of all Silesia, as "reward for my labours and dangers which I take upon myself in this "course now to be entered upon for the preservation and renown of "the House of Austria;"—Silesia all and whole; and we say nothing of our 'rights' to it; politely evasive to her Hungarian Majesty, though in substance we are so fatally distinct.[3]

These were Friedrich's Proposals; written down with his own hand at Reinsberg, five or six weeks ago (November 17th is the date of it); in what mood, and how wrought upon by Schwerin and Podewils, we saw above. Gotter has fulfilled his instructions in regard to this important little Document; and now the effect of it is—?—Gotter can report no good effect whatever. "Be cautious," Friedrich instructs him farther; "modify that Fifth Proposal; I will take less than the whole, 'if attention is paid to my just claims on Schlesien.'" To that effect writes Friedrich once or twice. But it is to no purpose; nor can Gotter, with all his industry, report other than worse and worse. Nay, he reports before long, not refusal only, but refusal with mockery: "How strange that his Prus-" sian Majesty, whose official post in Germany, as Kur-Bran-" denburg and Kaiser's Chamberlain, has been to present ewer " and towel to the House of Austria, should now set-up for " prescribing rules to it!" A piece of wit, which could not but provoke Friedrich; and warn him that negotiation on this matter might as well terminate. Such had been his own thought, from the first; but in compliance with Schwerin and Podewils he was willing to try.

[3] Preuss, Thronbesteigung, p. 451; 'from Olenschlager, Geschichte des Interregni' (Frankfurt, 1746), 'i. 134.'

Better for Maria Theresa, and for all the world how much better, could she have accepted this Fifth Proposition! But how could she,—the high Imperial Lady, keystone of Europe, though by accident with only a few pounds of ready-money at present? Twenty years of bitter fighting, and agony to herself and all the world, were necessary first; a new Fact of Nature having turned-up, a new European Kingdom with real King to it; not recognisable as such, by the young Queen of Hungary or by any other person, till it do its proofs.

What Berlin is saying; what Friedrich is thinking.

What Friedrich's own humour is, what Friedrich's own inner man is saying to him, while all the world so babbles about his Silesian Adventure? Of this too there are, though in diluted state, some glimmerings to be had,—chiefly in the Correspondence with Jordan.

Ingenious Jordan, Inspector of the Poor at Berlin,—his thousand old women at their wheels humming pleasantly in the background of our imaginations, though he says nothing of that,—writes twice a week to his Majesty: pleasant gossipy Letters, with an easy respectfulness not going into sycophancy anywhere; which keep the campaigning King well abreast of the Berlin news and rumours: something like the essence of an Old Newspaper; not without worth in our present Enterprise. One specimen, if we had room!

Jordan to the King (successively from Berlin,—somewhat abridged).

No. 1. 'Berlin, 14th December 1740' (day after his Majesty left). 'Everybody here is on tiptoe for the Event; of which both origin and 'end are a riddle to the most. I am charmed to see a part of your Ma- 'jesty's Dominions in a state of Pyrrhonism; the disease is epidemical 'here at present. Those who, in the style of theologians, consider 'themselves entitled to be certain, maintain That your Majesty is ex- 'pected with religious impatience by the Protestants, and that the Ca- 'tholics hope to see themselves delivered from a multitude of imposts 'which cruelly tear-up the beautiful bosom of their Church. You can- 'not but succeed in your valiant and stoical Enterprise, since both 'religion and worldly interest rank themselves under your flag.

'Wallis,' Austrian Commandant in Glogau, 'they say, has punished 'a Silesian Heretic of enthusiastic turn, as blasphemer, for announcing 'that a new Messiah is just coming. I have a taste for that kind of 'martyrdom. Critical persons consider the present step as directly op- 'posed to certain maxims in the Anti-Macchiavel.

'The word Manifesto'—(your Majesty's little Patent on entering Silesia, which no reader shall be troubled with at present)—'is the 'burden of every conversation. Rumour goes, there is a short Piece 'of the kind to come out today, by way of preface to a large complete 'exposition, which a certain Jurisconsult is now busy with. People 'crowd to the Bookshops for it, as if looking-out for a celestial pheno- 'menon that had been predicted.—This is the beginning of my Gazette; 'can only come out twice a week, owing to the arrangement of the 'Posts. Friday, the day your Majesty crosses into Silesia, I shall 'spend in prayer and devotional exercises: Astronomers pretend that 'Mars will that day enter'—no matter what.

Note, The above Manifesto rumour is correct; Jurisconsult is ponderous Herr Ludwig, Kanzler (Chancellor) of Halle University, monster of law-learning,—who has money also, and had to help once with a House in Berlin for one Nüssler, a son-in-law of his, transiently known to us;—ponderous Ludwig, matchless or difficult to match in learning of this kind, will write ample enough Deductions (which lie in print still, to the extent of tons weight), and explain the Erbverbrüderung and violence done upon it, so that he who runs may read. Postpone him to a calmer time.

No. 2. 'Berlin, Saturday 17th December. Manifesto has appeared,' —can be seen, under thick strata of cobwebs, in many Books;[4] is not worth reading now: Incontestable rights which our House has for ages had on Schlesien, and which doubtless the Hungarian Majesty will recognise; not the slightest injury intended, far indeed from that; and so on!—'people are surprised at its brevity; and, studying it as theologians 'do a passage of Scripture, can make almost nothing of it. Clear as 'crystal, says one; dexterously obscure by design, says another.

[4] In Helden-Geschichte, i. 448, 453 (what Jordan now alludes to); ib. 559-592 ('Deduction' itself, Ludwig in all his strength, some three weeks hence); in Olenschlager (doubtless); in &c. &c.

'Rumour that the Grand-Duke of Lorraine,' Maria Theresa's Husband, 'was at Reinsberg incognito lately,'—Grand-Duke a concerting party, think people looking into the thing with strong spectacles on their nose! 'M. de Beauvau' (French Ambassador Extraordinary, to whom the aces were promised if they came) 'said one thing that surprised me: "What put the King on taking this step, I do not know; 'but perhaps it is not such a bad one." Surprising news that the Elector of Saxony, King of Poland, is fallen into inconsolable remorse for 'changing his religion' (to Papistry, on Papa's hest, many long years ago); 'and that it is not to the Pope, but to the King of Prussia, that 'he opens his heart to steady his staggering orthodoxy.' Very astonishing to Jordan. 'One thing is certain, all Paris rings with your Majesty's 'change of religion' (over to Catholicism, say those astonishing people, first conjurors of the universe)!

No. 3. 'Berlin, 20th December. M. de Beauvau,' French Ambassador, 'is gone. Ended, yesterday, his survey of the Cabinet of Medals; 'charmed with the same: charmed too, as the public is, with the rich 'present he has got from said Cabinet' (coronation medal or medals in gold, I could guess): 'people say the King of France's Medal given to 'our M. de Camas is nothing to it.

'Rumour of alliance between your Majesty and France with Sweden,' —premature rumour. Item, 'Queen of Hungary dead in child-birth;' —ditto with still more emphasis! 'The day before yesterday, in all 'churches, was prayer to Heaven for success to your Majesty's arms; 'interest of the Protestant religion being the one cause of the War, or 'the only one assigned by the reverend gentlemen. At sound of these 'words, the zeal of the people kindles: "Bless God for raising such a 'Defender! Who dared suspect our King's indifference to Protest-'antism?"'

A right clever thing this last (O le beau coup d'état)! exclaims Jordan,—though it is not clever or the contrary, not being dramatically prearranged, as Jordan exults to think. Jordan, though there are dregs of old devotion lying asleep in him, which will start into new activity when stirred again, is for the present a very unbelieving little gentleman, I can perceive.—This is the substance of public rumour at Berlin for one week. Friedrich answers:

'To M. Jordan, at Berlin.

'Quarter at Milkau, towards Glogau, 19th December 1740' (comfortable Jesuit-Establishment at Milkau, Friedrich just got in, out of the rain).—'Seigneur Jordan, thy Letter has given me a deal of pleasure 'in regard to all these talkings thou reportest. Tomorrow' (not tomorrow, nor next day; wet troops need a rest) 'I arrive at our last station this side Glogau, which place I hope to get in a few days. All favours my designs; and I hope to return to Berlin, after executing them gloriously and in a way to be content with. Let the ignorant and the envious talk; it is not they that shall ever serve as loadstar to my designs; not 'they, but Glory' (la Gloire; Fame, depending not on them): 'with the 'love of that I am penetrated more than ever; my troops have their 'hearts big with it, and I answer to thee for success. Adieu, dear Jordan. 'Write me all the ill that the public says of thy Friend, and be per-'suaded that I love and will esteem thee always.'—F.

Jordan to the King.

No. 4. 'Berlin, 24th December. Your Majesty's Letter fills me with 'joy and contentment. The Town declared your Majesty to be already 'in Breslau; founding on some Letter to a Merchant here. Ever since 'they think of your Majesty acting for Protestantism, they make you 'step along with strides of Achilles to the ends of Silesia.—Foreign 'Courts are all rating their Ambassadors here for not finding you out.

'Wolf,' his negotiations concluded at last, 'has entered Halle al-'most like the triumphant Entry to Jerusalem. A concourse of pedants 'escorted him to his house. Lange' (his old enemy, who accused him of Atheism and other things) 'has called to see him, and loaded him 'with civilities, to the astonishment of the old Orthodox.' There let him rest, well buttoned in gaiters, and avoiding to mount stairs. * * 'Madame de Roucoulle has sent me the three objects adjoined, for your 'Majesty's behoof,'—woollen achievements, done by the needle, good against the winter weather for one she nursed. The good old soul. Enough now of Jordan.[5]

Voltaire, who left Berlin 2d or 3d December, seems to have been stopt by overflow of rivers about Cleve, then to have taken boat; and is, about this very time, writing to Friedrich 'from a vessel on the Coasts of Zealand, where I am driven 'mad.' (Intends, privately, for Paris before long, to get his Mahomet acted, if possible.) To Voltaire, here is a Note coming:

King to M. de Voltaire (at Brussels, if once got thither).

'Quarter of Herrendorf in Silesia, 23d December 1740. My dear 'Voltaire,—I have received two of your Letters; but could not answer 'sooner; I am like Charles Twelfth's Chess-King, who was always 'kept on the move. For a fortnight past, we have been continually 'afoot and under way, in such weather as you never saw.

'I am too tired to reply to your charming Verses; and shivering 'too much with cold to taste all the charm of them: but that will come 'round again. Do not ask poetry from a man who is actually doing

[5] Œuvres de Frédéric, xvii. 75-78.

27th Dec. 1740.

'the work of a wagoner, and sometimes even of a wagoner stuck in the 'mud. Would you like to know my way of life? We march from 'seven in the morning till four in the afternoon. I dine then; after- 'wards I work, I receive tiresome visits; with these comes a detail of 'insipid matters of business. 'Tis wrongheaded men, punctiliously 'difficult, who are to be set right; heads too hot which must be re- 'strained, idle fellows that must be urged, impatient men that must be 'rendered docile, plunderers to restrain within the bounds of equity, 'babblers to hear babbling, dumb people to keep in talk: in fine, one 'has to drink with those that like it, to eat with those that are hungry; 'one has to become a Jew with Jews, a Pagan with Pagans.

'Such are my occupations;—which I would willingly make over 'to another, if the Phantom they call Fame (Gloire) did not rise on me 'too often. In truth, it is a great folly, but a folly difficult to cast 'away when once you are smitten by it.' (Phantom of Gloire some- what rampant in those first weeks; let us see whether it will not lay itself again, forevermore, before long!)

'Adieu, my dear Voltaire; may Heaven preserve from misfortune 'the man I should so like to sup with at night, after fighting in the 'morning! The Swan of Padua' (Algarotti, with his big hook-nose and dusky solemnly greedy countenance) 'is going, I think, to Paris, 'to profit by my absence; the Philosopher Geometer' (big Maupertuis, in red wig and yellow frizzles, vainest of human kind) 'is squaring 'curves; poor little Jordan' (with the kindly hazel eyes, and pen that pleasantly gossips to us) 'is doing nothing, or probably something near 'it. Adieu once more, dear Voltaire; do not forget the absent who 'love you.—FÉDÉRIC.'[6]

Schwerin at Liegnitz; Friedrich hushes-up the Glogau Problem, and starts with his best speed for Breslau.

Meanwhile, on the Western road, and along the foot of the snowy peaks over yonder, Schwerin with the small Right column is going prosperously forwards. Two columns always, as the reader recollects,—two parallel military currents, flowing steadily on, shooting out estafettes, or horse-parties, on the right and left; steadily submerging all Silesia as they flow forward. Left column or current is in slight pause at Glogau here; but will directly be abreast again. On Tuesday 27th, Schwerin is within wind of Liegnitz; on Wednesday morning, while the fires are hardly lighted, or the smoke of Liegnitz risen among the Hills, Schwerin has done his feat with the usual deftness: Prussian grenadiers came softly on the sentry, softly as a dream; but with sudden levelling of bayonets, sudden beckoning, "To your Guardhouse!"—and there, turn the key upon his poor company and him. Whereupon the whole Prussian column marches in; tramp tramp, without music, through the streets: in the Market-place they fold themselves into a ranked mass, and explode into wind-harmony and rolling of drums. Liegnitz, mostly in nightcap, looks cautiously out of window: it is a deed done, ihr Herren; Liegnitz ours, better late than never; and after so many years, the King has his own again. Schwerin is sumptuously lodged in the Jesuits' Palace: Liegnitz, essentially a Protestant Town, has many thoughts upon this event, but as yet will be stingy of speaking them.

[6] Œuvres de Frédéric, xxii. 57.

Thus is Liegnitz managed. A pleasant Town, amid pleasant hills on the rocky Katzbach; of which swift stream, and other towns and passes on it, we shall yet hear more. Population, silently industrious in weaving and otherwise, is now above 14,000; was then perhaps about half that number. Patiently inarticulate, by no means bright in speech or sentiment; a much-enduring, steady-going, frugal, pious and very desirable people.

The situation of Breslau, all this while, is very critical. Much bottled emotion in the place; no Austrian Garrison admissible; Authorities dare not again propose such a thing, though Browne is turning every stone for it,—lest the emotion burst bottle, and take fire. I have dim account that Browne has been there, has got 300 Austrian dragoons into the Dom Insel (Cathedral Island; "Not in the City, you perceive!" says General Browne: "no, separated by the Oder, on both sides, from the rest of the City; that stately mass of edifices, and good military post");—and had hoped to get the suburbs burnt, after all. But the bottled emotion was too dangerous. For, underground, there are Anti-Brownes: one especially; a certain busy Deblin, Shoemaker by craft, whom Friedrich speaks of, but gives no name to; this zealous Cordwainer, Deblin, and he is not the only individual of like humour, operates on the guild-brothers and lower populations:[7] things seem to be looking worse and worse for the Authorities, in spite of General Browne and his activities and dragoons.

What the issue will be? Judge if Friedrich wished the Young Dessauer come! Friedrich's Hussar parties (or Schwerin's, instructed by Friedrich) go to look if the Breslau suburbs are burnt. Far from it, if Friedrich knew;—the suburbs merely sit quaking at such a proposal, and wish the Prussians were here. "But there is time ahead of us," said everybody at Breslau; "Glogau will take some sieging!" Browne, in the course of a day or two,—guessing, I almost think, that Glogau was not to be besieged,—ranked his 300 Austrian dragoons, and rode away; sending the Austrian State-Papers, in half a score of wagons, ahead of him. "Archives of Breslau!" cried the general population, at sight of these wagons; and largely turned out, with emotion again like to unbottle itself. "Mere Tax-Ledgers, and records of the Government Offices; come and convince yourselves!" answered the Authorities. And the ten wagons went on; calling at Ohlau and Brieg, for farther lading of the like kind. Which wagons the Prussian light horse chased, but could not catch. On to Mähren went these Archive-wagons; to Brünn, far over the Giant Mountains;—did not come back for a long while, nor to their former Proprietor at all.

[7] Preuss, Thronbesteigung, p. 469; Œuvres de Frédéric, ii. 61.

Tuesday 27th, Leopold the Young Dessauer does finally arrive, with his Reserve, at Glogau: never man more welcome; such a fermentation going on at Breslau,—known to Friedrich, and what it will issue in, if he delay, not known. With dispatch, Leopold is put into his charge; posts all yielded to him; orders given,—blockade to be strictness itself, but no fighting if avoidable; "starvation will soon do it, two months at most," hopes Friedrich, too sanguine as it proved:—and with earliest daylight on the 28th, Friedrich's Army, Friedrich himself in the van as usual, is on march again; at its best speed for Breslau. Read this Note for Jordan:

Friedrich to M. Jordan, at Berlin.

'Herrendorf, 27th Dec. 1740. Sieur Jordan,—I march tomorrow 'for Breslau; and shall be there in four days,'—(three, it happened, there rising, as would seem, new reason for haste). 'You Berliners' (of the 24th last) 'have a spirit of prophecy, which goes beyond me. 'In fine, I go my road; and thou wilt shortly see Silesia ranked in the 'list of our Provinces. Adieu; this is all I have time to tell thee. 'Religion' (Silesian Protestantism, and Breslau's Cordwainer), 'religion 'and our brave soldiers will do the rest.

'Tell Maupertuis I grant those Pensions he proposes for his Academicians; and that I hope to find good subjects for that dignity 'in the Country where I am, withal. Give him my compliments.—'FÉDÉRIC.'

The march was of the swiftest,—swifter even than had been expected;—which, as Silesia is all ringing glass, becomes more achievable than lately. But certain regiments outdid themselves in marching; 'in three marches, near upon seventy miles,' with their baggage jingling in due proximity. Through Gläsersdorf, thence through Parchwitz, Neumarkt, Lissa, places that will be better known to us;—on Saturday, last night of the Year, his Majesty lodged at a Schloss called Pilsnitz, five miles to west of Breslau; and van-ward regiments, a good few, quartered in the Western and Southern suburbs of Breslau itself; suburbs decidedly glad to see them, and escape conflagration. The Town-gates are hermetically shut;—plenty of emotion bottled in the 100,000 hearts within. The sentries on the walls presented arms; nay, it is affirmed, some could not help exclaiming, "Wilkommen, Ihr lieben Herren (Welcome, dear Sirs)!"[8]

Colonel Posadowsky (active Horse Colonel whom we have seen before, who perhaps has been in Breslau before) left orders 'at the Scultet Garden-House,' that all must be ready and the rooms warmed, his Majesty intending to arrive here early on the morrow. Which happened accordingly; Majesty alighting duly at said Garden-House, near by the Schweidnitz Gate,—I fancy almost before break of day.

CHAPTER IV.

BRESLAU UNDER SOFT PRESSURE.

THE issue of this Breslau transaction is known, or could be stated in few words; nor is the manner of it such as would, for Breslau's sake, deserve many. But we are looking into Friedrich, wish to know his manners and aspects: and here, ready to our hand, a Paper turns up, compiled by an exact person with better leisure than ours, minutely detailing every part of the affair. This Paper, after the question, Burn or insert? is to have the lot of appearing here, with what abridgments are possible:

'Sunday 1st January 1741. The King having established himself 'in Herrn Scultet's Garden-House, not far from the Schweidnitz Gate, 'there began a delicate and great operation. The Prussians, in a soft 'cautious manner, in the gray of the morning, push out their sentries

[8] Helden-Geschichte, i. 534.

1st Jan. 1741.

'towards the Three Gates on this side of the Oder; seize any "Excise 'House," or the like, that may be fit for a post; and softly put "twenty 'grenadiers" in it. All this before sunrise. Breslau is rigidly shut; 'Breslau thought always it could stand upon its guard, if attacked;—'is now, in Official quarters, dismally uncertain if it can; general po-'pulation becoming certain that it cannot, and waiting anxious on the 'development of this grand drama.

'About 7 A.M. a Prussian subaltern advancing within cry of the 'Schweidnitz Gate, requests of the Town-guard there, To send him out 'a Town-Officer. Town-Officer appears; is informed, "That Colonels 'Posadowsky and Borck, Commissioners or plenipotentiary Messengers 'from his Prussian Majesty, desire admittance to the Chief Magistrate 'of Breslau, for the purpose of signifying what his Prussian Majesty's 'instructions are." Town-Officer bows, and goes upon his errand. 'Town-Officer is some considerable time before he can return; City 'Authorities being, as we know, various, partly Imperial, partly Civic; 'elderly; and some of them gone to church,—for matins, or to be out of 'the way. However, he does at last return; admits the two Colonels, 'and escorts them honourably, to the Chief Raths-Syndic (Lord-Mayor) 'old Herr von Gutzmar's; where the poor old "President of the Ober-'Amt" (Von Schaffgotsch the name of this latter) is likewise in at-'tendance.

'Prussian Majesty's proposals are of the mildest sort: "Nothing 'demanded of Breslau but the plainly indispensable and indisputable, 'That Prussia be in it what Austria has been. In all else, status quo. 'Strict neutrality to Breslau, respect for its privileges as a Free City 'of the Reich; protection to all its rights and privileges whatsoever. 'Shall be guarded by its own Garrison; no Prussian soldier to enter 'except with side-arms; only 30 guards for the King's person, who will 'visit the City for a few days;—intends to form a Magazine, with guard 'of 1,000 men, but only outside the City: no requisitions; ready-money 'for everything. Chief Syndic Gutzmar and President Schaffgotsch 'shall consider these points."[1] Syndic and President answer, Surely! 'Cannot, however, decide till they have assembled the Town-Rath; 'the two Herren Colonels will please to be guests of Breslau, and lodge 'in the City till then.

'And they lodged, accordingly, in the "Grosse Ring" (called also 'Salz-Ring, big Central Square, where the Rathhaus is); and they 'made and received visits,—visited especially the Chief President's 'Office, the Ober-Amt, and signified there, that his Prussian Majesty's 'expectation was, They would give some account of that rather high 'Proclamation or "Patent" they had published against him the other 'day, amid thunder and lightning here, and what they now thought 'would be expedient upon it? All in grave official terms, but of such 'a purport as was not exhilarating to everybody in those Ober-Amt 'localities.

[1] Helden-Geschichte, i. 537.

'Monday morning 2d January. The Rath is assembled; and con-
'sults,—consults at great length. Rath-House and Syndic Gutzmar,
'in such crisis, would fain have advice from Amt-House or President
'Schaffgotsch; but can get none: considerable coming and going be'tween them: at length, about 3 in the afternoon, the Treaty is got 'drawn-up; is signed by the due Breslau hands, and by the two Prus'sian Colonels,—which latter ride out with it, about 4 of the clock;
'victorious after thirty hours. Straight towards the Scultet Garden
'ride they; Town-guard presenting Arms, at the Schweidnitz Gate;
'nay Town-band breaking-out into music, which is never done but to 'Ambassadors and high people. By thirty hours of steady soft pres'sure, they have brought it thus far.

'Friedrich had waited patiently all Sunday, keeping steady guard
'at the Gates; but on Monday, naturally, the thirty hours began to 'hang heavy: at all events, he perceived that it would be well to facili'tate conclusions a little from without. Breslau stands on the West,
'more strictly speaking, on the South side of the Oder, which makes 'an elbow here, and thus bounds it, or mostly bounds it, on two sides.
'The big drab-coloured River spreads out into Islands, of a confused
'sort, as it passes; which are partly built upon, and constitute suburbs
'of the Town,—stretching over, here and there, into straggles of far'ther suburb beyond the River, where a road with its bridge happens 'to cross for the Eastern parts. The principal of these Islands is the 'Dom Insel,'—known to General Browne and us,—'on which is the 'Cathedral, and the Close with rich Canons and their edifices; Island 'filled with strong high architecture; and a superior military post.

'Friedrich has already as good as possessed himself of the Three 'landward Gates, which look to the south and to the west; the river-
'ward gates, or those on the north and the east, he perceives that it
'were good now also to have; these, and even perhaps something 'more? "Gather all the river-boats, make a bridge of them across 'the Oder; push across 400 men:" this is done on Monday morning,
'under the King's own eye. This done, "March up to that riverward
'Gate, and also to that other, in a mild but dangerous-looking man'ner; hew the beams of said Gate in two; start the big locks; fling 'wide open said Gate and Gates:" this too is done; Town-guard look'ing mournfully on. This done, "March forward swiftly, in two halves, 'without beat of drum,—whitherward you know!"

'Those three hundred Austrian Dragoons, we saw them leave the 'Dom Island, three days ago; there are at present only Six Men, of 'the Bishop's Guard, walking under arms there,—at the end of the 'chief bridge, on the Townward side of their Dom Island. See, Prus'sian caps and muskets, ye six men under arms! The six men clutch
'at their drawbridge, and hastily set about hoisting:—alas, another 'Prussian corps, which has come privately by the eastern (or Country-'ward) Bridge, King himself with it, taps them on the shoulder at this

'instant; mildly constrains the six into their guardhouse: the draw-'bridge falls; 400 Prussian grenadiers take quiet possession of the Dom 'Island: King may return to the Scultet Garden, having quickened 'the lazy hours in this manner. To such of the Canons as he came 'upon, his Majesty was most polite; they most submiss. The six sol-'diers of the drawbridge, having spoken a little loud,—still more a too 'zealous beef-eater of old Schaffgotsch's found here, who had been very 'loud,—were put under arrest; but more for form's sake; and were let 'go, in a day or two.'

Nothing could be gentler on Friedrich's part, and on that of his Two Colonels, than this delicate operation throughout:—and at 4 P.M., after thirty hours of waiting, it is done, and nobody's skin scratched. Old Syndic Gutzmar, and the Town-Rath, urged by perils and a Town Population who are Protestant, have signed the Surrender with goodwill, at least with resignation, and a feeling of relief. The Ober-Amt Officials have likewise had to sign; full of all the silent spleen and despondency which is natural to the situation: spleen which, in the case of old Schaffgotsch, weak with age, becomes passionately audible here and there. He will have to give account of that injurious Proclamation, or Queen's "Patent," to this King that has now come.

King enters Breslau; stays there, gracious and vigilant, Four Days (Jan. 2d-6th, 1741).

In the Royal Entrance which took place next day, note these points. Syndic Gutzmar and the Authorities came out, in grand coaches, at 8 in the morning; had to wait a while; the King, having ridden away to look after his manifold affairs, did not get back till 10. Town Guard and Garrison are all drawn out; Gates all flung open, Prussian sentries withdrawn from them, and from the Excise-houses they had seized: King's Kitchen-and-Proviant Carriages (four mules to each, with bells, with uncommonly rich housings): King's Body-Coach very grand indeed, and grandly escorted, the Thirty Bodyguards riding ahead; but nothing in it, only a most superfine cloak 'lined wholly with ermine' flung upon the seat. Other Coaches, more or less grandly escorted; Head Cup-bearers, Seneschals, Princes, Margraves:—but where is the King? King had ridden away, a second time, with chief Generals, taking survey of the Town Walls, round as far as the Ziegel-Thor (Tile-Gate, extreme south-east, by the river-edge): he has thus made the whole circuit of Breslau;—unwearied in picking-up useful knowledge, 'though it was very cold,' while that Procession of Coaches went on.

At noon, his Majesty, thrifty of time, did enter: on horse back, Schwerin riding with him; behind him miscellaneous chief Officers; Borck and Posadowsky among others; some miscellany of Page-people following. With this natural escort, he rode in; Town-Major (Commandant of Town-guard), with drawn sword going ahead;—King wore his usual Cocked Hat, and practical Blue Cloak, both a little dimmed by service: but his gray horse was admirable; and Four scarlet Footmen, grand as galoon and silver fringe could make them, did the due magnificence in dress. He was very gracious; saluting to this side and to that, where he noticed people of condition in the windows. 'Along Schweidnitz Street, across the Great Ring, down Albrecht Street.' He alighted, to lodge, at the Count-Schlegenberg House; which used to be the Austrian Cardinal von Sinzendorf Primate of Silesia's hired lodging,—Sinzendorf's furniture is put gently aside, on this new occasion. King came on the balcony; and stood there for some minutes, that everybody might see him. The "immense shoutings," Dryasdust assures me, have been exaggerated; and I am warned not to believe the Kriegs-Fama such and such a Number, except after comparing it with him.—That day there was dinner of more than thirty covers, Chief Syndic Gutzmar and other such guests; but as to the viands, says my friend, these, owing to the haste, were nothing to speak of.[2]

Dinner, better and better ordered, King more and more gracious, so it continued all the four days of his Majesty's stay: —on the second day he had to rise suddenly from table, and leave his guests with an apology; something having gone awry, at one of the Gates. Awry there, between the Town Authorities and a General Jeetz of his,—who is on march across the River at this moment (on what errand we shall hear), and a little mistakes the terms. His Majesty puts Jeetz right; and even waits, till he sees his Brigade and him clear across. A junior Schaffgotsch,[3] not the inconsolable Schaffgotsch senior, but his Nephew, was one of the guests this second day; an ecclesiastic, but of witty fashionable type, and I think a very worthless fellow, though of a family important in the Province.

[2] Helden-Geschichte, i. 545-548. [3] Ib. ii. 159.

Dinner falls about noon; does not last above two hours or three, so that there is space for a ride ('to the Dom,' the first afternoon, 'four runners' always), and for much in-door work, before the supper-hour.

As the Austrian Authorities sat silent in their place, and gave no explanation of that "Patent," affixed amid thunder and lightning,—they got orders from his Majesty to go their ways next day; and went. In behalf of old President von Schaffgotsch, a chief of the Silesian Nobility, and man much loved, the Breslau people, and men from every guild and rank of society, made petition That he should be allowed to continue in his Town House here. Which "first request of yours" his Majesty, with much grace, is sorry to be obliged to refuse. The suppressed, and insuppressible, weak indignation of old Schaffgotsch is visible on the occasion; nor, I think, does Friedrich take it ill; only sends him out of the way with it, for the time. The Austrian Ober-Amt vanished bodily from Breslau in this manner; and never returned. Proper "War-Commission (Feld-Kriegs-Commissariat)," with Münchow, one of those skilful Cüstrin Münchows, at the top of it, organised itself instead; which, almost of necessity, became Supreme Government in a City ungoverned otherwise:—and truly there was little regret of the Ober-Amt, in Breslau; and ever less, to a marked extent, as the years went on.

On the 5th of January (fourth and last night here), his Majesty gave a grand Ball. Had hired, or Colonel Posadowsky instead of him had hired, the Assembly Rooms (Redouten-Saal) for the purpose: "Invite all the Nobility high and low;"—expense by estimate is a ducat (half-guinea) each; do it well, and his Majesty will pay. About 6 in the evening, his Majesty in person did us the honour to drive over; opened the Ball with Madam the Countess von Schlegenberg (I should guess, a Dowager Lady), in whose house he lodges. I am not aware that his Majesty danced much farther; but he was very condescending, and spoke and smiled up and down;—till, about 10 P.M., an Officer came in with a Letter. Which Letter his Majesty having read, and seemingly asked a question or two in regard to it, put silently in his pocket, as if it were a finished thing. Nevertheless, after a few minutes, his Majesty was found to have silently withdrawn; and did not return, not even to supper. Perceiving which, all the Prussian official people gradually withdrew; though the dancing and supping continued not the less, to a late hour.[4]

"Open the Austrian Mail-bag (Felleisen); see a little what they are saying over there!" Such order had evidently been given, this night. In consequence of which, people wrote by Dresden, and not the direct way, in future; wishing to avoid that openable Felleisen. Next morning, January 6th, his Majesty had left for Ohlau, — early, I suppose; though there proved to be nothing dangerous ahead there, after all.

CHAPTER V.

FRIEDRICH PUSHES FORWARD TOWARDS BRIEG AND NEISSE.

Ohlau is a pleasant little Town, two marches south-east of Breslau; with the Ohlau River on one side, and the Oder on the other; capable of some defence, were there a garrison. Brieg the important Fortress, still on the Oder, is some fifteen miles beyond Ohlau; after which, bending straight south and quitting Oder, Neisse the still more important may be thirty miles:—from Breslau to Neisse, by this route (which is bow, not string), sixty-five or seventy miles. One of my Topographers yields this Note, if readers care for it:

'Ohlau River, an insignificant drab-coloured stream, rises well south 'of Breslau, about Strehlen; makes, at first, direct eastward towards 'the Oder; and then, when almost close upon it, breaks off to north, 'and saunters along, irregularly parallel to Oder, for twenty miles farther, 'before it can fall fairly in. To this circumstance both Breslau and a 'Town of Ohlau owe their existence; Towns, both of them, "between 'the waters," and otherwise well seated; Ohlau sheltering itself in the 'attempted outfall of its little river; Breslau clustering itself about the 'actual outfall: both very defensible places in the old rude time, and 'good for trade in all times. Both Oder and Ohlau Rivers have split 'and spread themselves into islands and deltas a good deal, at their 'place of meeting; and even have changed their courses, and cut-out 'new channels for themselves, in the sandy country; making a very 'intricate watery network of a site for Breslau: and indeed the Ohlau 'River here, for centuries back, has been compelled into wide meander-'ings, mere filling of rampart-ditches, so that it issues quite obscurely, 'and in an artificial engineered condition, at Breslau.'

Ohlau had been expected to make some defence; General

[4] Helden-Geschichte, i. 557.

7th-12th Jan. 1741.

Browne having thrown 300 men into it, and done what he could for the works. And Ohlau did at first threaten to make some; but thought better of it overnight, and in effect made none; but was got (morning of January 9th) on the common terms, by merely marching up to it in minatory posture. "Prisoners of War, if you make resistance; Free Withdrawal" (Liberty to march away, arms shouldered, and not serve against us for a year), "if you have made none:" this is the common course, where there are Austrian Soldiers at all; the course where none are, and only a few Syndics sit, with their Town-Key laid on the table, a prey to the stronger hand, we have already seen.

From Ohlau, proper Detachment, under General Kleist, is pushed forward to summon Brieg; Jeetz from the other side of the river (whom we saw crossing at Breslau the other day, interrupting his Majesty's dinner) is to coöperate with Kleist in that enterprise,—were the Country once cleared on his, Jeetz's, east side of Oder; especially were Namslau once had, a small Town and Castle over there, which commands the Polish and Hungarian road. Friedrich's hopes are buoyant; Schwerin is swiftly rolling forward to rightward, nothing resisting him; Detachment is gone from Schwerin, over the Hills, to Glatz (the Grafschaft, or County Glatz, an Appendage to Schlesien), under excellent guidance; under guidance, namely, of Colonel Camas, who has just come home from his Parisian Embassy, and got launched among the wintry mountains, on a new operation,—which, however, proves of non-effect for the present.[1]

Indeed, it is observable that southward of Breslau, the dispute, what dispute there can be, properly begins; and that General Browne is there, and shows himself a shining man in this difficult position. It must be owned, no General could have made his small means go farther. Effective garrisons, 1,600 each, put into Brieg and Neisse; works repaired, magazines collected, there and elsewhere; the rest of his poor 7,000 thriftily sprinkled about, in what good posts there are, and 'capable of being got together in six hours:' a superior soldier, this Browne, though with a very bad task; and seems to have inspired everybody with something of his own temper.

[1] Helden-Geschichte, i. 678; Orlich, Geschichte der beiden Schlesischen Kriege, i. 49.

So that there is marching, detaching, miscellaneous difficulty for Friedrich in this quarter, more than had been expected. If the fate of Brieg and Neisse be inevitable, Browne does wonders to delay it.

Of the Prussian marches in these parts, recorded by intricate Dryasdust, there was no point so notable to me as this unrecorded one: the Stone Pillar which, I see, the Kleist Detachment was sure to find, just now, on the march from Ohlau to Brieg; last portion of that march, between the village of Briesen and Brieg. The Oder, flowing on your left hand, is hereabouts agreeably clothed with woods: the country, originally a swamp, has been drained, and given to the plough, in an agreeable manner; and there is an excellent road paved with solid whinstone,—quarried in Strehlen, twenty miles away, among the Hills to the right yonder, as you may guess;—road very visible to the Prussian soldier, though he does not ask where quarried. These beautiful improvements, beautiful humanities,—were done by whom? 'Done in 1584,' say the records, by 'George the Pious;' Duke of Liegnitz, Brieg and Wohlau; 156 years ago. "Pious" his contemporaries called this George;—he was son of the Erbverbrüderung Duke, who is so important to us; he was grandfather's grandfather of the last Duke of all; after whom it was we that should have got these fine Territories; they should all have fallen to the Great Elector, had not the Austrian strong hand provided otherwise. George did these plantations, recoveries to the plough; made this perennial whinstone road across the swamps; upon which, notable to the roughest Prussian (being 'twelve feet high by eight feet square'), rises a Hewn Mass with this Inscription on it,—not of the name or date of George; but of a thought of his, which is not without a pious beauty to me:

Straverunt alii nobis, nos Posteritati;
Omnibus at Christus stravit ad astra viam.

Others have made roads for us; we make them for still others:
Christ made a road to the stars for us all.[2]

I know not how many Brandenburgers of General Kleist's Detachment, or whether any, read this Stone; but they do all rustle past it there, claiming the Heritage of this Pious George; and their mute dim interview with him, in this manner, is a thing slightly more memorable than orders of the day, at this date.

[2] Zöllner, Briefe über Schlesien, i. 175; Hübner, i. t. 101.

It was on the 11th, two days after Ohlau, that General Kleist summoned Brieg; and Brieg answered resolutely, No. There is a garrison of 1,600 here, and a proper magazine: nothing for it but to 'mask' Brieg too; Kleist on this side the River, Jeetz on that,—had Jeetz once done with Namslau, which he has not by any means. Namslau's answer was likewise stiffly in the negative; and Jeetz cannot do Namslau, at least not the Castle, all at once; having no siege-cannon. Seeing such stiffness everywhere, Friedrich writes to Glogau, to the Young Dessauer, "Siege-artillery hither! Swift, by the Oder; you don't need it where you are!"—and wishes it were arrived, for behoof of Neisse and these stiff humours.

Friedrich comes across to Ottmachau; sits there, in survey of Neisse, till his Cannon come.

The Prussians met with serious resistance, for the first time (9th January, same day when Ohlau yielded), at a place called Ottmachau; a considerable little Town and Castle on the Neisse River, not far west of Neisse Town, almost at the very south of Silesia. It lay on the route of Schwerin's Column; long distances ahead of Liegnitz,—say, by straight highway a hundred miles;—during which, to right and to left, there had been nothing but submission hitherto. No resistance was expected here either, for there was not hope in any; only that Browne had been here; industrious to create delay till Neisse were got fully ready. He is, by every means, girding-up the loins of Neisse for a tight defence; has put 1,600 men into it, with proper stores for them, with a resolute skilful Captain at the top of them: assiduous Browne had been at Ottmachau, as the outpost of Neisse, a day or two before; and, they say, had admonished them "Not to yield on any terms, for he would certainly come to their relief." Which doubtless he would have done, had it been in his power; but how, except by miracle, could it be? On the 9th of January, when Schwerin comes up, Browne is again waiting hereabouts. Again in defensive posture, but without force to undertake anything; stands on the Southern Uplands, with Böhmen and Mähren and the Giant Mountains at his back;—stands, so to speak, defensive at his own House-door, in this manner; and will have, after seeing Ottmachau's fate and Neisse's, to duck-in with a slam! At any rate, he had left these Towns in the above firm humour, screwed to the sticking-place; and had then galloped elsewhither to screw and prepare.

And so the Ottmachau Austrians, '260 picked grenadiers' (400 dragoons there also at first were, who, after flourishing about on the outskirts as if for fighting, rode away), fire 'desperat,' says my intricate friend;[3] entirely refusing terms from Schwerin; kill twelve of his people (Major de Rège, distinguished Engineer Major, one of them): so that Schwerin has to bring petards upon them, four cannon upon them; and burst-in their Town Gate, almost their Castle Gate, and pretty much their Castle itself;—wasting three days of his time upon this paltry matter. Upon which they do signify a willingness for "Free Withdrawal." "No, ihr Herren," answers Schwerin; "not now; after such mad explosion. His Majesty will have to settle it." Majesty, who is by this time not far off, comes over to Ottmachau (January 12th); gives words of rebuke, rebuke not very inexorable; and admits them Prisoners of War. 'The officers were sent to Cüstrin, common men to Berlin;' the usual arrangement in such case. Ottmachau Town belongs to the Right Reverend von Sinzendorf, Bishop of Breslau, and Primate; whose especial Palace is in Neisse; though he 'commonly sends his refractory Priests to do their penance in the Schloss at Ottmachau here,'—and, I should say, had better himself make terms, and come out hitherward, under present aspects.

Friedrich continues at Ottmachau; head-quarters there thenceforth, till he see Neisse settled. On the morrow, 13th, he learns that the Siege Artillery is at Grotkau; well forward towards Neisse; half way between Brieg and it. Same day, Colonel Camas returns to him out of Glatz; five of his men lost; and reports That Browne has had the roads torn up, that Glatz is mere ice and obstruction, and that nothing can be made of it at this season. Good news alternating with not so good.

The truth is, Friedrich has got no Strong Place in Schlesien; all strengths make unexpected defence; paltry little [3] Helden-Geschichte, i. 672-677; Orlich, i. 50.

Namslau itself cannot be quite taken, Castle cannot, till Jeetz gets his siege-artillery,—which does not come along so fast as that to Neisse does. Here is an Excerpt from my Dryasdust, exact though abridged, concerning Jeetz:

'January 24th, 1741. Prussians, masters of the Town for a couple 'of weeks back, have got into the Church at Namslau, into the Cloister; 'are preparing plank floors for batteries, cutting loop-holes; diligent 'as possible,—siege-guns now at last just coming. The Castle fires 'fiercely on them, makes furious sallies, steals six of our oxen,—makes 'insolent gestures from the walls; at least one soldier does, this day. '"Sir, may I give that fellow a shot?" asks the Prussian sentry. "Do, 'then," answers his Major: "too insolent that one!" And the sentry 'explodes on him; brings him plunging down, head foremost (herunter 'pürzelte); the too insolent mortal, silent enough thenceforth.'[1]—Jeetz did get his cannon, though not till now, this very day I think; and then, in a couple of days more, Jeetz finished-off Namslau ('officers to Cüstrin, common men to Berlin'); and thereupon blockades the Eastern side of Brieg, joining hands with Kleist on the Western: whereby Brieg, like Glogau, is completely masked,—till the season mend.

Friedrich, now that his artillery is come, expects no difficulty with Neisse. A 'paltry hamlet (bicoque)' he playfully calls it; and, except this, Silesia is now his. Neisse got (which would be the desirable thing), or put under 'mask' as Glogau is, and as Brieg is being, Austria possesses not an inch of land within these borders. Here are some Epistolary snatches; still in the light style, not to say the flimsy and uplifted; but worth giving, so transparent are they; offhand, like words we had heard his Majesty speak, in his high mood:

King to M. Jordan, at Berlin (Two successive Letters).

1°. 'Ottmachau, 14th Jan. 1741' (second day after our arrival there). 'My dear Monsieur Jordan, my sweet Monsieur Jordan, my quiet Mon-'sieur Jordan, my good, my benign, my pacific, my humanest Monsieur 'Jordan,—I announce to Thy Serenity the conquest of Silesia; I warn 'thee of the bombardment of Neisse' (just getting ready), 'and I prepare 'thee for still more important projects; and instruct thee of the happi-'est successes that the womb of Fortune ever bore.

'This ought to suffice thee. Be my Cicero as to the justice of my 'cause, and I will be thy Cæsar as to the execution. Adieu: thou 'knowest whether I am not, with the most cordial regard, thy faithful 'friend,—F.'

2°. 'Ottmachau, 17th January 1741. I have the honour to inform

[1] Helden-Geschichte, i. 703.

'your Humanity that we are christianly preparing to bombard Neisse; 'and that if the place will not surrender of good will, needs must that 'it be beaten to powder (nécessité sera de l'abîmer). For the rest, our 'affairs go the best in the world; and soon thou wilt hear nothing more 'of us. For in ten days it will all be over; and I shall have the plea-'sure of seeing you and hearing you, in about a fortnight.

'I have seen neither my Brother' (August Wilhelm, not long ago at Strasburg with us, and betrothed since then) 'nor Keyserling: I left 'them at Breslau, not to expose them to the dangers of war. They 'perhaps will be a little angry; but what can I do?—The rather as, on 'this occasion, one cannot share in the glory, unless one is a mortar!

'Adieu, M. le Conseiller' (Poor's-Rath, so-styled). 'Go and amuse 'yourself with Horace, study Pausanias, and be gay over Anacreon. 'As to me, who for amusement have nothing but merlons, fascines and 'gabions,[5] I pray God to grant me soon a pleasanter and peacefuler 'occupation, and you health, satisfaction and whatever your heart de-'sires.—F.'[6]

King Friedrich to M. le Comte Algarotti (gone on a journey).

'Ottmachau, 17th January 1741' (same day as the above to Jordan). 'I have begun to settle the Figure of Prussia: the outline will not be 'altogether regular; for the whole of Silesia is taken, except one miser-'able hamlet (bicoque), which perhaps I shall have to keep blockaded 'till next spring.

'Up to this time, the whole conquest has cost only Twenty Men, 'and Two Officers, one of whom is the poor De Rège, whom you have 'seen at Berlin,'—De Rège, Engineer Major, killed here at Ottmachau, 'in Schwerin's late tussle.

'You are greatly wanting to me here. So soon as you have talked 'that business over, write to me about it.' (What is the business? Whither is the dusky Swan of Padua gone?) 'In all these three hun-'dred miles I have found no human creature comparable to the Swan 'of Padua. I would willingly give ten cubic leagues of ground for a 'genius similar to yours. But I perceive I was about entreating you 'to return fast, and join me again,—while you are not yet arrived 'where your errand was. Make haste to arrive, then; to execute your 'commission, and fly back to me. I wish you had a Fortunatus Hat; 'it is the only thing defective in your outfit.

'Adieu, dear Swan of Padua: think, I pray you, sometimes of those 'who are getting themselves cut in slices' (échiner, chined) 'for the 'sake of glory here, and above all do not forget your friends who think 'a thousand times of you.—FÉDÉRIC.'[7]

The object of the dear Swan's journey, or even the where-

[5] Merlons are mounds of earth placed behind the solid or blind parts of the parapet (that is, between the embrasures) of a Fortification; fascines are bundles of brushwood for filling-up a ditch; gabions, baskets filled with earth, to be ranged in defence till you get trenches dug.

[6] Œuvres de Frédéric, xvii. 84. [7] Ib. xviii. 28.

abouts of it, cannot be discovered without difficulty; and is not much worth discovering. 'Gone to Turin,' we at last make out, 'with secret commissions:'[8] desirable to sound the Sardinian Majesty a little, who is Doorkeeper of the Alps, between France and Austria, and opens to the best bidder? No great things of a meaning in this mission, we can guess, or Algarotti had not gone upon it,—though he is handy, at least, for keeping it unnoticed by the Gazetteer species. Nor was the Swan successful, it would seem; the more the pity for our Swan! However, he comes back safe; attends Friedrich in Silesia; and in the course of next month readers will see him, if any reader wished it.

CHAPTER VI.

NEISSE IS BOMBARDED.

NEISSE, which Friedrich calls a paltry hamlet (bicoque) is a pleasant strongly-fortified Town, then of perhaps 6 or 8,000 inhabitants, now of double that number; stands on the right or south bank of the Neisse,—at this day, on both banks. Pleasant broad streets, high strong houses, mostly of stone. Pleasantly encircled by green Hills, northward buttresses of the Giant Mountains; itself standing low and level, on rich ground much inclined to be swampy. A lesser river, Biele, or Bielau, coming from the South, flows leisurely enough into the Neisse,—filling all the Fortress ditches, by the road. Orchard-growth and meadow-growth are lordly (herrlich); a land rich in fruit, and flowing with milk and honey. Much given to weaving, brewing, stocking-making; and, moreover, trades greatly in these articles, and above all in Wine. Yearly on St. Agnes Day, '21st January, if not a Sunday,' there is a Wine-fair here; Hungarian, of every quality from Tokay downward, is gathered here for distribution into Germany and all the Western Countries. While you drink your Tokay, know that it comes through Neisse. St. Agnes Day falls but unhandily this year; and I think the Fair will, as they say, ausbleiben, or not be held.

Neisse is a Nest of Priests (Pfaffen-Nest), says Friedrich once; which came in this way. About 600 years ago, an ill-conditioned Heir-Apparent of the Liegnitz Sovereign to whom it then belonged, quarrelled with his Father, quarrelled slightly with the Universe; and, after moping about for some time, went into the Church. Having Neisse for an apanage already his own, he gave it to the Bishop of Breslau; whose, in spite of the old Father's protestings, it continued, and continues. Bishops of Breslau are made very grand by it; Bishops of Breslau have had their own difficulties here. Thus once (in our Perkin-Warbeck time, A.D. 1497), a Duke of Oppeln, sitting in some Official Conclave or meeting of magnates here,—zealous for country privilege, and feeling himself insufferably put upon,—started up, openly defiant of Official men; glaring wrathfully into Duke Casimir of Teschen (Bohemian-Austrian Captain of Silesia), and into the Bishop of Breslau himself; nay at last, flashed out his sword upon those sublime dignitaries. For which, by and by, he had to lay his head on the block, in the great square here; and died penitent, we hope.

[8] Denina, La Prusse Littéraire (Berlin, 1790), i. 198. A poor vague Book; only worth consulting in case of extremity.

This place, my Dryasdust informs me, had many accidents by floodage and by fire; was seized and re-seized in the Thirty-Years War especially, at a great rate: Saxon Arnheim, Austrian Holk, Swedish Torstenson; no end to the battering and burning poor Neisse had, to the big ransoms 'in new Reichsthalers and 300 casks of wine.' But it always rebuilt itself, and began business again. How happy when it could get under some effectual Protector, of the Liegnitz line, of the Austrian-Bohemian line, and this or the other battering, just suffered, was to be the last for some time!—Here again is a battering coming on it; the first of a series that are now imminent.

The reader is requested to look at Neisse; for besides the Tokay wine, there will things arrive there.—Neisse River, let us again mention, is one of Four bearing that name, and all belonging to the Oder:—could not they be labelled, then, or numbered, in some way? This Neisse, which we could call Neisse the First (and which careful readers may as well make acquaintance with on their Map, where too they will find Neisse the Second, 'the Wüthende or Roaring Neisse,' and two others which concern us less), rises in the 'Western Snow-Mountains (Schneegebirge),' South-Western or Glatz district of the Giant Mountains; drains Glatz County and grows big there; washes the Town of Glatz; then eastward by Ottmachau, by Neisse Town; whence turning rather abruptly north or north-east, it gets into the Oder not far south of Brieg.

Neisse as a Place of Arms, the chief Fortress of Silesia and the nearest to Austria, is extremely desirable for Friedrich; but there is no hope of it without some kind of Siege; and Friedrich determines to try in that way. From Ottmachau, accordingly, and from the other sides, the Siege-Artillery being now at hand, due force gathers itself round Neisse, Schwerin taking charge; and for above a week there is demonstrating and posting, summoning and parleying; and then, for three days, with pauses intervening, there is extremely furious bombardment, red-hot at times: "Will you yield, then?"—with steady negative from Neisse. Friedrich's quarter is at Ottmachau, twelve miles off; from which he can ride over, to see and superintend. The fury of his bombardment, which naturally grieved him, testifies the intensity of his wish. But it was to no purpose. The Commandant, Colonel von Roth (the same who was proposed for Breslau lately, a wise head and a stout, famed in defences) had 'poured water on his ramparts,' after well repairing them,—made his ramparts all ice and glass;—and done much else. Would the reader care to look for a moment? Here, from our waste Paper-masses, is abundance, requiring only to be abridged:

'January 1741: Monday 9th—Wednesday 11th. Monday 9th, 'day when that sputter at Ottmachau began,—Prussian light-troops 'appeared transiently on the heights about Neisse, for the first time. 'Directly on sight of whom, Commandant Roth assembled the Bur-'ghers of the place; took a new Oath of Fidelity from one and all; 'admonished them to do their utmost, as they should see him do. 'The able-bodied and likeliest of them (say about 400) he has had 'arranged into Militia Companies, with what drill there could be in 'the interim; and since his coming, has employed every moment in 'making ready. Wednesday 11th, he locks all the Gates, and stands 'strictly on his guard. The inhabitants are mostly Catholic; with 'sumptuous Bishops of Breslau, with Kreuzherren (imaginary Teutsch 'or other Ritters with some reality of money), with Jesuit Dignitaries, 'Church and Quasi-Church Officialities, resident among them: popu-'lation, high and low, is inclined by creed to the Queen of Hungary. 'Commandant Roth has only 1,200 regular soldiers; at the outside '1,600 men under arms: but he has gunpowder, he has meal; experi-'ence also and courage; and hopes these may suffice him for a time. 'One of the most determined Commandants; expert in the defence of 'strong places. A born Silesian (not Saxon, as some think),—and is 'of the Augsburg Confession; but that circumstance is not important 'here, though at Breslau Browne thought it was.

'Thursday 12th. The Prussians, in regular force, appear on the 'Kaninchen Berg (Cony Hill, so-called from its rabbits), south of the 'River, evidently taking post there. Roth fires a signal shot; the 'Southern Suburbs of Neisse, as preappointed, go up in flame; crackle 'high and far; in a lamentable manner (erbärmlich), through the grim 'winter air.' This is the day Friedrich came over to Ottmachau, and settled the sputter there.

'Next day, and next again, the same phenomena at Neisse; the 'Prussians edging ever nearer, building their batteries, preparing to 'open their cannonade. Whereupon Roth burns the remaining Sub-'urbs, with lamentable crackle; on all sides now are mere ashes. 'Bishop's Mill, Franciscan Cloister, Bishop's Pleasure-garden, with its 'summer-houses; Bishop's Hospital, and several Churches: Roth can 'spare none of these things, with the Prussians nestling there. Surely 'the Bishop himself, respectable Cardinal Graf von Sinzendorf, had 'better get out of these localities while time yet is?' "Saturday 14th," that was the day Friedrich, at Ottmachau, wrote as above to Jordan (Letter No. 1), while the Neisse Suburbs crackled lamentably, twelve miles off, 'Schwerin gets order to break-up, in person, from Ottma-'chau tomorrow, and begin actual business on the Kaninchen Hill 'yonder.

'Sunday 15th. Schwerin does; marches across the River; takes 'post on the south side of Neisse: notable to the Sunday rustics. No-'thing but burnt villages and black walls for Schwerin, in that Cony-'Hill quarter, and all round; and Roth salutes him with one twenty-'four pounder, which did no hurt. And so the cannonade begins, 'Sunday 15th; and intermittently, on both sides of the River, con-'tinues, always bursting-out again at intervals, till Wednesday; a mere 'preliminary cannonade on Schwerin's part; making noise, doing 'little hurt: intended more to terrify, but without effect that way on 'Roth or the Townsfolk. The poor Bishop did, on the second day of 'it, come out, and make application to Schwerin; was kindly con-'ducted to his Majesty, who happened to be over there; was kept to 'dinner; and easily had leave to retire to Freywalde, a Country-House 'he has, in the safe distance.[1] There let him be quiet, well out of these 'confused batterings and burnings of property.

'His Majesty's headquarter is at Ottmachau, but in two hours he 'can be here any day; and looks into everything; sorry that the can-'nonade does not yet answer. And remnants of suburbs are still crack-'ling into name; high Country-Houses of Kreuzherren, of Jesuits; a 'fanatic people seemingly all set against us. "If Neisse will not yield 'of good-will, needs is it must be beaten to powder," wrote his Ma-'jesty to Jordan in these circumstances, as we read above. Roth is

[1] Helden-Geschichte, i. 683.

'sorry to observe, the Prussians have still one good Bishop's-mansion, 'in a place called the Karlau (Karl-Meadow), with the Bishop's win- 'ter fuel all ready stacked there; but strives to take order about the 'same.

'Wednesday 18th. This day two provocations happened. First, in 'the morning by his Majesty's order, Colonel Borck (the same we saw 'at Herstal) had gone with a Trumpeter towards Roth; intending to 'inform Roth how mild the terms would be, how terrible the penalty 'of not accepting them. But Roth or Roth's people singularly disre- 'gard Borck and his Parley Trumpet; answer its blasts by musketry; 'fire upon it, nay again fire worse when it advances a step farther; on 'these terms Borck and Trumpet had to return. Which much angered 'his Majesty at Ottmachau that evening; as was natural. Same even- 'ing, our fine quarters in the Karlau crackled up in flame, the Bishop's 'winter firewood all along with it: this was provocation second. Roth 'had taken order with the Karlau; and got a resolute Butcher to do 'the feat, under pretext of bringing us beef. It is piercing cold; only 'blackened walls for us now in the Karlau or elsewhere. His Ma- 'jesty, naturally much angered, orders for the morrow a dose of bomb- 'shells and red-hot balls. Plant a few mortars on the North side too, 'orders his Majesty. . . . . .

'Thursday 19th. Accordingly, by 8 of the clock, cannon batteries 'reawaken with a mighty noise, and red-hot balls are noticeable; and 'at 10 the actual bombarding bursts out, terrible to hear and see;— 'first shell falling in Haubitz the Clothier's shop, but being happily 'got under. Roth has his City Militia companies, organised with water- 'hoses for quenching of the red-hot balls; in which they became ex- 'pert. So that though the fire caught many houses, they always put 'it out. Late in the night, hearing no word from Roth, the Prussians 'went to bed.

'Friday 20th. Still no word; on which, about 4 P.M., the Prussian 'batteries awaken again: volcanic torrent of red-hot shot and shells, 'for seven hours; still no word from Roth. About 11 at night his 'Majesty again sends a Drum (Parley Trumpet or whatever it is) to 'the Gate; formally summons Roth; asks him, "If he has well con- 'sidered what this can lead to? Especially what he, Roth, meant by 'firing on our first Trumpet on Wednesday last?" Roth answered, '"That as to the Trumpet, he had not heard of it before. On the 'other hand, that this mode of sieging by red-hot balls seems a little 'unusual; for the rest, that he has himself no order or intention but 'that of resisting to the last." Some say the Drum hereupon by order 'talked of "pounding Neisse into powder, mere child's-play hitherto;" 'to which Roth answered only by respectful dumb-show.

'Saturday 21st—Monday 23d. Midnight of Friday—Saturday, on 'this answer coming, the fire-volcanoes open again;—nine hours long; 'shells, and red-hot material, in terrible abundance. Which hit mostly 'the Churches, Jesuits' Seminariums and Collegiums; but produced no 'change in Roth. From 9 A.M. the batteries are silent. Silent still, 'next morning: Divine Service may proceed, if it like. But at 4 of 'the afternoon, the batteries awaken worse than ever; from seven to 'nine bombs going at once. Universal rage, of noise and horrid glare, 'making night hideous, till 10 of the clock; Roth continuing inflexi- 'ble. This is the last night of the Siege.'

Friedrich perceived that Roth would not yield; that the utter smashing-down of Neisse might more concern Friedrich than Roth;—that, in fine, it would be better to desist till the weather altered. Next day, 'Monday 23d, between noon and 1 o'clock,' the Prussians drew back;—converted the siege into a blockade. Neisse to be masked, like Brieg and Glogau (Brieg only half done yet, Jeetz without cannon till tomorrow, 24th, and little Namslau still gesticulating): 'The only thing one 'could try upon it was bombardment. A Nest of Priests '(Pfaffen-Nest); not many troops in it: but it cannot well be 'forced at present. If spring were here, it will cost a fort- 'night's work.'[2]

A noisy business; 'King's high person much exposed: a 'bombardier and then a sergeant were killed close by him, 'though in all he lost only five men.'[3]

Browne vanishes in a slight Flash of Fire.

Browne all this while has hung on the Mountain-side, witnessing these things; sending stores towards Glatz south-westward, and 'ruining the ways' behind them; waiting what would become of Neisse. Neisse done, Schwerin is upon him; Browne makes off South-eastward, across the Mountains, for Moravia and home; Schwerin following hard. At a little place called Grätz,[4] on the Moravian border, Browne faced round, tried to defend the Bridge of the Oppa, sharply though without effect; and there came (January 25th) a hot sputter between them for a few minutes:—after which Browne vanished into the interior, and we hear, in these parts, comparatively little more of him during this War. Friend and foe must admit that he has neglected nothing; and fairly made the best of a bad business here. He is but an interim General, too; his Successor just coming; and the Vienna Board of War is frequently troublesome,—to whose windy speculations Browne replies with sagacious scepticism, and here and there a touch of veiled sarcasm, which was not likely to conciliate in high places. Had her Hungarian Majesty been able to retain Browne in his post, instead of poor Neipperg who was sent instead, there might have been a considerably different account to give of the sequel. But Neipperg was Tutor (War-Tutor) to the Grand-Duke; Browne is still of young standing (age only thirty-five), with a touch of veiled sarcasm; and things must go their course.

[2] Friedrich to the Old Dessauer: Fraction of Letter (Ottmachau, 16th-21st January 1741) cited by Orlich, i. 51;—from the Dessau Archives, where Herr Orlich has industriously been. To all but strictly military people these pieces of Letters are the valuable feature of Orlich's Book; and a general reader laments that it does not all consist of such, properly elucidated and labelled into accessibility.

[3] Helden-Geschichte, i. 680-690.

[4] The name, in old Slavic speech, signifies Town; and there are many *Grätzes: Königin*grätz (Queen's, which for brevity is now generally called *Königs*grätz, in Bohemia); Grätz in Styria; *Windisch*grätz (Wendish-town); &c.

In Schlesien, Schwerin is now to command in chief; the King going off to Berlin for a little, naturally with plenty of errand there. The Prussian Troops go into Winter-quarters; spread themselves wide; beset the good points, especially the Passes of the Hills, — from Jägerndorf, eastward to the Jablunka leading towards Hungary;—nay they can, and before long do, spread into the Moravian Territories, on the other side; and levy contributions, the Queen proving unreasonable.

It was Monday 23d, when the Siege of Neisse was abandoned: on Wednesday, Friedrich himself turns homeward; looks into Schweidnitz, looks into Liegnitz; and arrives at Berlin as the week ends,—much acclamation greeting him from the multitude. Except those Three masked Fortresses, capable of no defence to speak of, were Winter over, Silesia is now all Friedrich's,—has fallen wholly to him in the space of about Seven Weeks. The seizure has been easy; but the retaining of it, perhaps he himself begins to see more clearly, will have difficulties! From this point, the talk about gloire nearly ceases in his Correspondence. In those seven weeks he has, with gloire or otherwise, cut-out for himself such a life of labour as no man of his Century had.

CHAPTER VII.

AT VERSAILLES, THE MOST CHRISTIAN MAJESTY CHANGES HIS SHIRT, AND BELLEISLE IS SEEN WITH PAPERS.

WHILE Friedrich was so busy in Silesia, the world was not asleep around him; the world never is, though it often seems to be, round a man and what action he does in it. That Sunday morning, First Day of the Year 1741, in those same hours while Friedrich, with energy, with caution, was edging himself into Breslau, there went on in the Court of Versailles an interior Phenomenon; of which, having by chance got access to it face to face, we propose to make the reader participant before going farther.

Readers are languidly aware that phenomena do go on round their Friedrich; that their busy Friedrich, with his few Voltaires and renowned persons, are not the only population of their Century, by any means. Everybody is aware of that fact; yet, in practice, almost everybody is as good as not aware; and the World all round one's Hero is a darkness, a dormant vacancy. How strange when, as here, some Waste-paper spill (so to speak) turns up, which you can kindle; and, by the brief flame of it, bid a reader look with his own eyes!—From Herr Doctor Büsching, who did the Geography and about a Hundred other Books, — a man of great worth, almost of genius, could he have elaborated his Hundred Books into Ten (or distilled, into flasks of aquavitæ, what otherwise lies tumbling as tanks of mash and wort, now run very sour and malodorous);—it is from Herr Büsching that we gain the following rough Piece, illuminative if one can kindle it:

The Titular-Herr Baron Anton von Geusau, a gentleman of good parts, scholastic by profession, and of Protestant creed, was accompanying as Travelling Tutor, in those years, a young Graf von Reuss. Graf von Reuss is one of those indistinct Counts Reuss, who always call themselves "Henry;" and, being now at the eightieth and farther, with uncountable collateral Henrys intertwisted, are become in effect anonymous, or of nomenclature inscrutable to mankind. Nor is the young one otherwise of the least interest to us;—except that Herr Anton, the Travelling Tutor, punctually kept a Journal of everything. Which Journal, long afterwards, came into the hands of Büsching, also a punctual man; and was by him abridged, and set forth in print in his Beyträge. Offering at present a singular daguerreotype glimpse of the then actual world, wherever Graf von Reuss and his Geusau happened to be. Nine-tenths of it, even in Büsching's Abridgment, are now fallen useless and wearisome; but to one studying the days that then were, even the effete commonplace of it occasionally becomes alive again. And how interesting to catch, here and there, a Historical Figure on these conditions; Historical Figure's very self, in his workday attitude; eating his victuals; writing, receiving letters, talking to his fellow-creatures; unaware that Posterity, miraculously, through some chink of the Travelling Tutor's producing, has got its eye upon him!

'Sunday 1st January 1741, Geusau and his young Gentleman leave 'Paris, at 5 in the morning, and drive out to Versailles; intending to 'see the ceremonies of Newyear's day there. Very wet weather it had 'been, all Wednesday, and for days before;[1] but on this Sunday, New-'year's morning, all is ice and glass; and they slid about painfully by 'lamplight,—with unroughened horses, and on the Hilly or Meudon 'road, having chosen that as fittest, the waters being out;—not ar-'riving at Court till 9. Nor finding very much to comfort them, ex-'cept on the side of curiosity, when there. Ushers, Introducteurs, 'Cabinet Secretaries, were indeed assiduous to oblige; and the King's 'Levee will be: but if you follow it to the Chapel Royal to witness 'high mass, you must kneel at elevation of the host; and this, as re-'formed Christians, Reuss and his Tutor cannot undertake to do. 'They accept a dinner-invitation (12 the hour) from some good Sa-'maritan of Quality; and, for sights, will content themselves with the 'King's Levee itself, and generally with what the King's Antechamber 'and the Œil-de-Bœuf can exhibit to them. The Most Christian King's 'Levee' (Lever, literally here his Getting out of Bed) 'is a daily mira-'cle of these localities, only grander on Newyear's day; and it is to 'the following effect:

'Till Majesty please to awaken, you saunter in the Salle des Am-'bassadeurs; whole crowds jostling one another there; gossiping to-'gether in a diligent, insipid manner;' gossip all reported; snatches of which have acquired a certain flavour by long keeping;—which the reader shall imagine. 'Meanwhile you keep your eye on the Grate of 'the Inner Court, which as yet is only ajar, Majesty inaccessible as 'yet. Behold, at last, Grate opens itself wide; sign that Majesty is 'out of bed; that the privileged of mankind may approach, and see 'the miracles.' Geusau continues, abridged by Büsching and us:

'The whole Assemblage passed now into the King's Anteroom; had 'to wait there about half an hour more, before the King's bedroom was 'opened. But then at last, lo you,—there is the King, visible to Geu-'sau and everybody, "washing his hands." Which effected itself in 'this way: "The King was seated; a gentleman-in-waiting knelt before 'him, and held the Ewer, a square vessel silver-gilt, firm upon the 'King's breast; and another gentleman-in-waiting poured water on the 'King's hands." Merely an official washing, we perceive; the real, it 'is to be hoped, had, in a much more effectual way, been going on 'during the half-hour just elapsed. After washing, the King rose for 'an instant; had his dressing-gown, a grand yellow silky article with 'silver flowerings, pulled off, and flung round his loins; upon which 'he sat down again, and,'—observe it, ye privileged of mankind,—

[1] See in Barbier (ii. 283 et sqq.) what terrible Noah-like weather it had been; big houses, long in soak, tumbling down at last into the Seine; châsse of St. Geneviève brought out (two days ago), December 30th, to try it by miracle; &c. &c.

'the Change of Shirt took place! "They put the clean shirt down 'over his head," says Anton, "and plucked-up the dirty one from 'within, so that of the naked skin you saw little or nothing."' Here is a miracle worth getting out of bed to look at!

'His Majesty now quitted chair and dressing-gown; stood up be-'fore the fire; and, after getting-on the rest of his clothing, which, on 'account of Czarina Anne's death' (readers remember that), 'was ot 'violet or mourning colour, he had the powder-mantle thrown round 'him, and sat down at the Toilette to have his hair frizzled. The Toi-'lette, a table with white cover shoved into the middle of the room, 'had on it a mirror, a powder-knife, and'—no mortal cares what. 'The 'King,' what all mortals note, as they do the heavenly omens, 'is 'somewhat talky; speaks sometimes with the Dutch Ambassador, 'sometimes with the Pope's Nuncio, who seems a jocose kind of gen-'tleman; sometimes with different French Lords, and at last with the 'Cardinal Fleury also,—to whom, however, he does not look par-'ticularly gracious,'—not particularly this time. These are the omens; happy who can read them!—'Majesty then did his morning-prayer, 'assisted only by the common Almoners-in-waiting (Cardinal took no 'hand, much less any other); Majesty knelt before his bed, and finished 'the business "in less than six seconds." After which mankind can 'ebb out to the Anteroom again; pay their devoir to the Queen's Ma-'jesty, which all do; or wait for the Transit to Morning Chapel, and see 'Mesdames of France and the others flitting past in their sedans.

'Queen's Majesty was already altogether dressed,' says Geusau, almost as if with some disappointment; 'all in black; a most affable courte-'ous Majesty; stands conversing with the Russian Ambassador, with 'the Dutch ditto, with the Ladies about her, and at last, "in a friendly 'and merry tone," with old Cardinal Fleury. Her Ladies, when the 'Queen spoke with them, showed no constraint at all; leant loosely 'with their arms on the fire-screens, and took things easy. Mesdames 'of France'—Geusau saw Mesdames. Poor little souls, they are the Loque, the Cochon (Rag, Pig, so Papa would call them, dear Papa), who become tragically visible again in the Revolution time:—all blooming young children as yet (Queen's Majesty some Thirty-seven gone), and little dreaming what lies fifty years ahead! King Louis's career of extraneous gallantries, which ended in the Parc-aux-Cerfs, is now just beginning: think of that too; and of her Majesty's fine behaviour under it; so affable, so patient, silent, now and always!—'In a little while, their Majesties go along the Great Gallery to Chapel;' whither the Protestant mind cannot with comfort accompany.[2]

This is the daily miracle done at Versailles to the believing multitude; only that on Newyear's-day, and certain supreme occasions, the shirt is handed by a Prince of the Blood, and the towel for drying the royal hands by a ditto, with other improvements; and the thing comes out in its highest power of effulgence,—especially if you could see high mass withal. In the Antechamber and Œil-de-Bœuf, Geusau, among hundreds of phenomena fallen dead to us, saw the Four following, which have still some life:

[2] Büsching, Beyträge, ii. 59-78.

1°. Many Knights of the Holy Ghost (Chevaliers du Saint Esprit) are about; magnificently piebald people, indistinct to us, and fallen dead to us: but there, among the company, do not we indisputably see, 'in full Cardinal's costume,' Fleury the ancient Prime Minister talking to her Majesty? Blandly smiling; soft as milk, yet with a flavour of alcoholic wit in him here and there. That is a man worth looking at, had they painted him at all. Red hat, red stockings; a serenely definite old gentleman, with something of prudent wisdom, and a touch of imperceptible jocosity at times; mildly inexpugnable in manner: this King, whose Tutor he was twenty years ago, still looks to him as his father; Fleury is the real King of France at present. His age is eighty-seven gone; the King's is thirty (seven years younger than his Queen): and the Cardinal has red stockings and red hat; veritably there, successively in both Antechambers, seen by Geusau, January 1st, 1741: that is all I know.

2°. The Prince de Clermont, a Prince of the Blood, 'handed the shirt,' teste Geusau. Some other Prince, notable to Geusau, and to us nameless, had the honour of the 'towel:' but this Prince de Clermont, a dissolute fellow of wasted parts, kind of Priest, kind of Soldier too, is seen visibly handing the shirt there;—whom the reader and I, if we cared about it, shall again see, getting beaten by Prince Ferdinand, at Crefeld, within twenty years hence. These are points first and second, slightly noticeable, slightly if at all.

Of the actual transit to high mass, transit very visible in the Great Gallery or Œil-de-Bœuf, why should a human being now say anything? Queen, poor Stanislaus's Daughter, and her Ladies, in their sublime sedans, one flood of jewels, sail first; next sails King Louis, shirt warm on his back, with 'Thirty-four Chevaliers of the Holy Ghost' escorting; next 'the Dauphin' (Boy of eleven, Louis XVI.'s Father), and 'Mesdames of France, with'—but even Geusau stops short. Protestants cannot enter that Chapel, without peril of idolatry; wherefore Geusau and Pupil kept strolling in the general Œil-de-Bœuf,—and 'the Dutch Ambassador approved of it,' he for one. And here now is another point, slightly noticeable:

3°. High mass over, his Majesty sails back from Chapel, in the same magnificently piebald manner; and vanishes into the interior; leaving his Knights of the Holy Ghost, and other Courtier multitude, to simmer about, and ebb away as they found good. Geusau and his young Reuss had now the honour of being introduced to various people; among others 'to the Prince de Soubise.' Prince de Soubise: frivolous, insignificant being; of whom I have no portrait that is not nearly blank, and content to be so;—though Herr von Geusau would have one, with features and costume to it, when he heard of the Beating at Rossbach, long after! Prince de Soubise is pretty much a blank to everybody;—and no sooner are we loose of him, than (what every reader will do well to note)

4°. Our Herren Travellers are introduced to a real Notability: Monseigneur, soon to be Maréchal, the Comte de Belleisle; whom my readers and I are to be much concerned with, in time coming. 'A tall lean 'man (langer hagerer Mann), without much air of quality,' thinks Geusau; but with much swift intellect and energy, and a distinguished character, whatever Geusau might think. 'Comte de Belleisle was very 'civil; but apologised, in a courtly and kind way, for the hurry he was 'in; regretting the impossibility of doing the honours to the Comte de 'Reuss in this Country,—his, Belleisle's, Journey into Germany, which 'was close at hand, overwhelming him with occupations and engage-'ments at present. And indeed, even while he spoke to us,' says Geusau, 'all manner of Papers were put into his hand.'[3]

"Journey to Germany, Papers put into his hand:" there is perhaps no Human Figure in the world, this Sunday (except the one Figure now in those same moments over at Breslau, gently pressing upon the locked Gates there), who is so momentous for our Silesian Operations; and indeed he will kindle all Europe into delirium; and produce mere thunder and lightning, for seven years to come,—with almost no result in it, except Silesia! A tall lean man; there stands he, age now fifty-six, just about setting-out on such errand. Whom one is thankful to have seen for a moment, even in that slight manner.

Of Belleisle and his Plans.

Charles Louis Auguste Fouquet, Comte de Belleisle, is Grandson of that Intendant Fouquet, sumptuous Financier, whom Louis XIV. at last threw out, and locked into the Fortress of Pignerol, amid the Savoy Alps, there to meditate for life, which lasted thirty years longer. It was never understood that the sumptuous Fouquet had altogether stolen public moneys, nor indeed rightly what he had done to merit Pignerol; and always, though fallen somehow into such dire disfavour, he was pitied and respected by a good portion of the public. "Has angered Colbert," said the public; "dangerous rivalry to Colbert; that is what has brought Pignerol upon him."

Out of Pignerol that Fouquet never came; but his Family

[3] Büsching, ii. 79: see Barbier, ii. 282, 287.

bloomed-up into light again; had its adventures, sometimes its troubles, in the Regency time, but was always in a rising way:—and here, in this tall lean man getting papers put into his hand, it has risen very high indeed. Going as Ambassador Extraordinary to the Germanic Diet, "To assist good neighbours, as a neighbour and Most Christian Majesty should, in choosing their new Kaiser to the best advantage:" that is the official colour his mission is to have. Surely a proud mission;—and Belleisle intends to execute it in a way that will surprise the Germanic Diet and mankind. Privately, Belleisle intends that he, by his own industries, shall himself choose the right Kaiser, such Kaiser as will suit the Most Christian Majesty and him; he intends to make a new French thing of Germany in general; and carries in his head plans of an amazing nature! He and a Brother he has, called the Chevalier de Belleisle, who is also a distinguished man, and seconds M. le Comte with eloquent fire and zeal in all things, are grandsons of that old Fouquet, and the most shining men in France at present. France little dreams how much better it perhaps were, had they also been kept safe in Pignerol!—

The Count, lean and growing old, is not healthy; is ever and anon tormented, and laid-up for weeks, with rheumatisms, gouts and ailments: but otherwise he is still a swift ardent elastic spirit; with grand schemes, with fiery notions and convictions, which captivate and hurry-off men's minds more than eloquence could, so intensely true are they to the Count himself;—and then his Brother the Chevalier is always there to put them into the due language and logic, where needed.[4] A magnanimous high-flown spirit; thought to be of supreme skill both in War and in Diplomacy; fit for many things; and is still full of ambition to distinguish himself, and tell the world at all moments, "Me voilà; World, I too am here!"—His plans, just now, which are dim even to himself, except on the hither skirt of them, stretch out immeasurable, and lie piled up high as the skies. The hither skirt of them, which will suffice the reader at present, is:

That your Grand-Duke Franz, Maria Theresa's Husband, shall in no wise, as the world and Duke Franz expect, be the Kaiser chosen. Not he, but another who will suit France better: "Kur-Sachsen perhaps, the so-called King of Poland? Or say it were Karl Albert Kur-Baiern, the hereditary friend and dependant of France? We are not tied to a man: only, at any and at all rates, not Grand-Duke Franz." This is the grand, essential and indispensable point, alpha and omega of points; very clear this one to Belleisle,—and towards this the first steps, if as yet only the first, are also clear to him. Namely that 'the 27th of February next,'—which is the time set by Kur-Mainz and the native Officials for the actual meeting of their Reichstag to begin Election Business, will be too early a time; and must be got postponed.[5] Postponed; which will be possible, perhaps for long; one knows not for how long: that is a first step definitely clear to Belleisle. Towards which, as preliminary to it and to all the others in a dimmer state, there is a second thing clear, and has even been officially settled (all but the day): That, in the meanwhile, and surely the sooner the better, he, Belleisle, Most Christian Majesty's Ambassador Extraordinary to the Reichstag coming,—do, in his most dazzling and persuasive manner, make a Tour among German Courts. Let us visit, in our highest and yet in our softest splendour, the accessible German Courts, especially the likely or well-disposed: Mainz, Köln, Trier, these, the three called Spiritual, lie on our very route; then Pfalz, Baiern, Sachsen:—we will tour diligently up and down; try whether, by optic machinery and art-magic of the mind, one cannot bring them round.

[4] Voltaire, xxviii. 74; xxix. 392; &c.

In all these preliminary steps and points, and even in that alpha and omega of excluding Grand-Duke Franz, and getting a Kaiser of his own, Belleisle succeeded. With painful results to himself and to millions of his fellow-creatures, to readers of this History, among others. And became in consequence the most famous of mankind; and filled the whole world with rumour of Belleisle, in those years.—A man of such intrinsic distinction as Belleisle, whom Friedrich afterwards deliberately called a great Captain, and the only Frenchman with a genius for war; and who, for some time, played in Europe at large a part like that of Warwick the Kingmaker: how has he fallen into such oblivion? Many of my readers never heard of him

[5] Adelung, ii. 185 ("27th February—1st March 1741, at Frankfurt-on-Mayn," appointed by Kur-Mainz 'Arch-Chancellor of the Reich,' under date November 3d, 1740):—ib. 236 ("Delay for a month or two," suggests Kur-Pfalz, on January 12th, seconded by others in the French interest);—upon which the appointment, after some arguing, collapsed into the vague, and there ensued delay enough; actual Election not till January 24th, 1742.

before; nor, in writing or otherwise, is there symptom that any living memory now harbours him, or has the least approach to an image of him! 'For the times are babbly,' says Goethe, 'And 'then again the times are dumb:

'Denn geschwätzig sind die Zeiten,
'Und sie sind auch wieder stumm.'

Alas, if a man sow only chaff, in never so sublime a manner, with the whole Earth and the long-eared populations looking on, and chorally singing approval, rendering night hideous, —it will avail him nothing. And that, to a lamentable extent, was Belleisle's case. His scheme of action was in most felicitously just accordance with the national sense of France, but by no means so with the Laws of Nature and of Fact; his aim, grandiose, patriotic, what you will, was unluckily false and not true. How could 'the times' continue talking of him? They found they had already talked too much. Not to say that the French Revolution has since come; and has blown all that into the air, miles aloft,—where even the solid part of it, which must be recovered one day, much more the gaseous, which we trust is forever irrecoverable, now wanders and whirls; and many things are abolished, for the present, of more value than Belleisle!—

For my own share, being, as it were, forced accidentally to look at him again, I find in Belleisle a really notable man; far superior to the vulgar of noted men, in his time or ours. Sad destiny for such a man! But when the general Life-element becomes so unspeakably phantasmal as under Louis XV., it is difficult for any man to be real; to be other than a play-actor, more or less eminent and artistically dressed. Sad enough, surely, when the truth of your relation to the Universe, and the tragically earnest meaning of your Life, is quite lied out of you, by a world sunk in lies; and you can, with effort, attain to nothing but to be a more or less splendid lie along with it! Your very existence all become a vesture, a hypocrisy and hearsay; nothing left of you but this sad faculty of sowing chaff in the fashionable manner! After Friedrich and Voltaire, in both of whom, under the given circumstances, one finds a perennial reality, more or less,—Belleisle is next; none fails to escape the mournful common lot by a nearer miss than Belleisle.

Beyond doubt, there are in this man the biggest projects any French head has carried, since Louis XIV. with his sublime periwig first took to striking the stars. How the indolent Louis XV. and the pacific Fleury have been got into this sublimely adventurous mood? By Belleisle chiefly, men say;—and by King Louis's first Mistresses, blown upon by Belleisle; poor Louis having now, at length, left his poor Queen to her reflections, and taken into that sad line, in which by degrees he carried it so far. There are three of them, it seems;—the first female souls that could ever manage to kindle, into flame or into smoke, in this or any other kind, that poor torpid male soul: those Mailly Sisters, three in number (I am shocked to hear), successive, nay in part simultaneous! They are proud women, especially the two younger; with ambition in them, with a bravura magnanimity, of the theatrical or operatic kind; of whom Louis is very fond. "To raise France to its place, your Majesty; the top of the Universe, namely!" "Well; if it could be done,—and quite without trouble?" thinks Louis. Bravura magnanimity, blown upon by Belleisle, prevails among these high Improper-Females, and generally in the Younger Circles of the Court; so that poor old Fleury has had no choice but to obey it or retire. And so Belleisle stalks across the Œil-de-Bœuf in that important manner, visibly to Geusau; and is the shining object in Paris, and much the topic there at present.

A few weeks hence, he is farther,—a little out of the common turn, but not beyond his military merits or capabilities,—made Maréchal de France;[6] by way of giving him a new splendour in the German Political World, and assisting in his operations there, which depend much upon the laws of vision. French epigrams circulate in consequence, and there are witty criticisms; to which Belleisle, such a dusky world of Possibility lying ahead, is grandly indifferent. Maréchal de France;—and Geusau hears (what is a fact) that there are to be 'thirty young French Lords in his suite;' his very "Livery," or mere plush retinue, 'to consist of 110 persons;' such an outfit for magnificence as was never seen before. And in this equipment, 'early in March' (exact day not given), magnificence of outside corresponding to grandiosity of faculty and idea, Belleisle, we shall find, does practically set-off towards Germany;—like a kind of French Belus, or God of the Sun; capable to dazzle weak German Courts, by optical machinery, and to set much rotten thatch on fire!—

[6] Fastes de Louis XV, i. 356 (12th February 1741).

'There are curious daguerreotype glimpses of old Paris to be found 'in that Notebook of Geusau's,' says another Excerpt; 'which come 'strangely home to us, like reality at first-hand;—and a rather unex- 'pected Paris it is, to most readers; many things then alive there, 'which are now deep underground. Much Jansenist Theology afloat; 'grand French Ladies piously eager to convert a young Protestant 'Nobleman like Reuss; sublime Dorcases, who do not rouge, or dress 'high, but eschew the evil world, and are thrifty for the Poor's sake, 'redeeming the time. There is a Cardinal de Polignac, venerable sage 'and ex-political person, of astonishing erudition, collector of Antiques '(with whom we dined); there is the Chevalier Ramsay, theological 'Scotch Jacobite, late Tutor of the young Turenne. So many shining 'persons, now fallen indistinct again. And then, besides gossip, which 'is of mild quality and in fair proportion,—what talk, casuistic and 'other, about the Moral Duties, the still feasible Pieties, the Constitu- 'tion Unigenitus! All this alive, resonant at dinner-tables of Conser- 'vative stamp; the Miracles of Abbé Pâris much a topic there:—and 'not a whisper of Infidel Philosophies; the very name of Voltaire not 'once mentioned in the Reuss section of Parisian things.

'There is rumour now and then of a "Comte de Rothenbourg," 'conspicuous in the Parisian circles; a shining military man, but seem- 'ingly in want of employment; who has lost in gambling, within the 'last four years, upwards of 50,000*l.* (1,300,000 livres, the exact cipher 'given). This is the Graf von Rothenburg whom Friedrich made ac- 'quaintance with, in the Rhine Campaign six years ago, and has ever 'since had in his eye;—whom, in a few weeks hence, Friedrich beckons 'over to him into the Prussian States: "Hither, and you shall have 'work!" Which Rothenburg accepts; with manifold advantage to 'both parties:—one of Friedrich's most distinguished friends for the 'rest of his life.

'Of Cardinal Polignac there is much said, and several dinners with 'him are transacted, dialogue partly given: a pious wise old gentleman 'really, in his kind (age now eighty-four); looking mildly forth upon a 'world just about to overset itself and go topsyturvy, as he sees it will. 'His Anti-Lucretius was once such a Poem!—but we mention him 'here because his fine Cabinet of Antiques came to Berlin on his death, 'Friedrich purchasing; and one often hears of it (if one cared to hear) 'from the Prussian Dryasdust in subsequent years.[7]

'Of Friedrich's unexpected Invasion of Silesia there are also talk-

7 Came to Charlottenburg August 1742 (old Polignac had died November last, ten months after those Geusau times): cost of the Polignac Cabinet was 40,000 thalers (6,000*l.*) say some, 90,000 livres (under 4,000*l.*) say others; cheap at either price;—and, by chance, came opportunely, 'a fire having just burnt-down the Academy Edi- fice,' and destroyed much ware of that kind. Rödenbeck, i. 73; Seyfarth (Anonymous), Geschichte Friedrichs des Andern, i. 236.

'ings and surmisings, but in a mild indifferent tone, and much in the 'vague. And in the best-informed circles it is thought Belleisle will 'manage to have Grand-Duke Franz, the Queen of Hungary's Husband, 'chosen Kaiser, and, in some mild good way, put an end to all that;' —which is far indeed from Belleisle's intention!

CHAPTER VIII.

PHENOMENA IN PETERSBURG.

I KNOW not whether Major Winterfeld, who was sent to Petersburg in December last, had got back to Berlin in February, now while Friedrich is there: but for certain the good news of him had, That he had been completely successful, and was coming speedily, to resume his soldier duties in right time. As Winterfeld is an important man (nearly buried into darkness in the dull Prussian Books), let us pause for a moment on this Negotiation of his;—and on the mad Russian vicissitudes which preceded and followed, so far as they concern us. Russia, a big demi-savage neighbour next door, with such caprices, such humours and interests, is always an important, rather delicate object to Friedrich; and Fortune's mad wheel is plunging and canting in a strange headlong way there, of late. Czarina Anne, we know, is dead; the Autocrat of All the Russias following the Kaiser of the Romans within eight days. Iwan, her little Nephew, still in swaddling-clothes, is now Autocrat of All the Russias if he knew it, poor little red-coloured creature; and Anton Ulrich and his Mecklenburg Russian Princess—But let us take up the matter where our Notebooks left it, in Friedrich Wilhelm's time:

'Czarina Anne with the big cheek,' continues that Notebook,[1] 'was 'extremely delighted to see little Iwan; but enjoyed him only two 'months; being herself in dying circumstances. She appointed little 'Iwan her Successor, his Mother and Father to be Guardians over him; 'but one Bieren (who writes himself Biron, and "Duke of Courland," 'being Czarina's Quasi-Husband these many years) to be Guardian, as 'it were, over both them and him. Such had been the truculent in-'satiable Bieren's demand on his Czarina. "You are running on your 'destruction," said she, with tears; but complied, as she had been wont.

'Czarina Anne died 28th October 1740; leaving a Czar in his cradle; 'little Czar Iwan of two months, with Mother and Father to preside 'over him, and to be themselves presided over by Bieren, in this man-

[1] Suprà, vol. iii. p. 285.

'ner.[2] This was the first great change for Anton Ulrich; but others 'greater are coming. Little Anton, readers know, is Friedrich's Brother-in-law, much patronised by Austria; Anton's spouse is the Half-'Russian Princess Catherine of Mecklenburg (now wholly Russian, and 'called Princess Anne), whom Friedrich at one time thought of applying for, in his distress about a Wife. These two, will they side with 'Prussia, will they side with Austria? It was hardly worth inquiry, 'had not Fortune's wheel made suddenly a great cant, and pitched 'them to the top, for the time being.

'Bieren lasted only twenty days. He was very high and arbitrary 'upon everybody; Anne and Anton Ulrich suffering naturally most 'from him. They took counsel with Feldmarschall Münnich on the 'matter; who, after study, declared it a remediable case. Friday 18th 'November, Münnich had, by invitation, to dine with Duke Bieren; 'Münnich went accordingly that day, and dined; Duke looking a little 'flurried, they say: and the same evening, dinner being quite over, 'and midnight come, Münnich had his measures all taken, soldiers 'ready, warrant in hand;—and arrested Bieren in his bed; mere Siberia, 'before sunrise, looming upon Bieren. Never was such a change as 'this from 18th day to 19th with a supreme Bieren. Our friend Mann-'stein, excellent punctual Aide-de-Camp of Münnich, was the executor 'of the feat; and has left punctual record of it, as he does of every-'thing,—what Bieren said, and what Madam Bieren, who was a little 'obstreperous on the occasion.[3] What side Anton Ulrich and Spouse 'will take in a quarrel between Prussia and Austria, is now well worth 'asking.

'Anton Ulrich and Wife Anne, that is to say, "Regent Anne" and '"Generalissimo Anton Ulrich," now ruled, with Münnich for right-'hand man; and these were high times for Anton Ulrich, Generalis-'simo and Czar's-Father; who indeed was modest, and did not often 'interfere in words, though grieved at the foolish ways his Wife had. 'An indolent flabby kind of creature, she, unfit for an Autocrat; sat 'in her private apartments, all in a huddle of undress; had foolish no-'tions,—especially had soubrettes who led her about by the ear. And 'then there was a "Princess Elizabeth," Cousin-german of Regent 'Anne,—daughter, that is to say, last child there now was, of Peter 'the Great and his little brown Catherine:—who should have been 'better seen to. Harmless foolish Princess, not without cunning; young, 'plump, and following merely her flirtations and her orthodox devotions; 'very orthodox and soft, but capable of becoming dangerous, as a centre 'of the disaffected. As "Czarina Elizabeth" before long, and ultim-'ately as "infâme Catin du Nord," she—' But let us not anticipate!

It was in this posture of affairs, about a month after it had begun, that Winterfeld arrived in Petersburg; and addressed

[2] Mannstein, pp. 264-267 (28th October, by Russian or Old Style, is '17th;' we translate, in this and other cases, Russian or English, into New Style, unless the contrary is indicated).

[3] Mannstein, p. 268.

himself to Münnich, on the Prussian errand. Winterfeld was Münnich's Son-in-law (properly stepson-in-law, having married Münnich's stepdaughter, a Fräulein von Malzahn, of good Prussian kin); was acquainted with the latitudes and longitudes here, and well equipped for the operation in hand. To Madam Münnich, once Madam Malzahn, his Mother-in-law, he carried a diamond ring of 1,200*l.*, "small testimony of his Prussian Majesty's regard to so high a Prussian Lady;" to Münnich's Son and Madam's a present of 3,000*l.* on the like score: and the wheels being oiled in this way, and the steam so strong (son Winterfeld an ardent man, father Münnich the like, supreme in Russia, and the thing itself a salutary thing), the diplomatic speed obtained was great. Winterfeld had arrived in Petersburg December 19th: Treaty of Alliance to the effect, "Firm friends and good neighbours, we Two, Majesties of Prussia and of All the Russias; will help each the other, if attacked, with 12,000 men,"—was signed on the 27th: whole Transaction, so important to Friedrich, complete in eight days. Austrian Botta, directly on the heel of those unsatisfactory Dialogues about Silesian roads, about troops that were pretty, but had never looked the wolf in the face,—had rushed off, full speed, for Petersburg, in hopes of running athwart such a Treaty as Winterfeld's, and getting one for Austria instead. But he arrived too late; and perhaps could have done nothing had he been in time. Botta tried his utmost for years afterwards, above ground and below, to obstruct and reverse this thing; but it was to no purpose, and even to less; and only, in result, brought Botta himself into flagrant diplomatic trouble and scandal; which made noise enough in the then Gazetteer world, and was the finale of Botta's Russian efforts,[4] though not worth mentioning now. The Russian Notebook continues:

'Münnich, supreme in Russia since Bieren's removal, had wise 'counsels for the Regent Anne and her Husband; though perhaps, 'being a high old military gentleman, he might be somewhat abrupt 'in his ways. And there were domestic Ostermanns, foreign Bottas, 'La Chétardies, and dangerous Intriguers and Opposition figures, to 'improve any grudge that might arise. Sure enough, in March 1741, 'Feldmarschall Münnich was forbid the Court (some Ostermann suc-'ceeding him there): "Ever true to your two Highnesses, though no 'longer needed;"—and withdrew, in a lofty friendly strain; his Son

[4] Adelung, iii. II. 289; Mannstein, p. 375 ('Lapuschin Plot,' of Botta's raising; found out 'August 1743;'—Botta put in arrest, &c.).

'continuing at Court, though Papa had withdrawn. Supreme Münnich 'had lasted about four months; Supreme Bieren hardly three weeks; '—and Siberia is still agape.

'Münnich being gone to his own Town-Mansion, and Regent Anne 'sitting in hers in a huddle of undress; little accessible to her long-'headed melancholic Ostermann, and too accessible to her Livonian 'maid; with poor little Anton Ulrich pouting and remonstrating, but 'unable to help,—this state of matters, with such intrigues undermin-'ing it, could not last forever. And had not Princess Elizabeth been 'of indolent luxurious nature, intent upon her prayers and flirtations, 'it would have ended sooner even than it did. Princess Elizabeth had 'a Surgeon called L'Estoc; a Marquis de la Chétardie, a highflown 'French Excellency (who used to be at Berlin, to our young Friedrich's 'delight), was her—What shall I say? La Chétardie himself had no 'scruple to say it! These two plotted for her; these were ready,—'could she have been got ready; which was not so easy. Regent Anne 'had her suspicions; but the Princess was so indolent, so good: at 'last, when directly taxed with such a thing, the Princess burst into 'ingenuous weeping; quite disarmed Regent Anne's suspicions;—but 'found she had now better take L'Estoc's advice, and proceed at once. 'Which she did.

'And so, on the morrow morning, 5th December 1741, by aid of 'the Preobrazinsky Regiment, and the motions usual on such occasions, '—in fact by merely pulling out the props from an undermined state 'of matters,—she reduced said state gently to ruin, ready for carting 'to Siberia, like its foregoers; and was hereby Czarina of All the Rus-'sias, prosperously enough for the rest of her life. Twenty years or 'rather more. An indolent, orthodox, plump creature, disinclined to 'cruelty; "not an ounce of nun's flesh in her composition," said the wits. 'She maintained the Friedrich Treaty, indignant at Botta and his plots; 'was well with Friedrich, or might have been kept so by management, 'for there was no cause of quarrel, but the reverse, between the Coun-'tries,—could Friedrich have held his witty tongue, when eavesdroppers 'were by. But he could not always; though he tried. And sarcastic 'quizzing (especially if it be truth too), on certain female topics, what 'Improper-Female, Czarina of All the Russias, could stand it? The 'history is but a distressing one, a disgusting one, in human affairs. 'Elizabeth was orthodox, too, and Friedrich not, "the horrid man!" 'The fact is,—fact dismally indubitable, though it is huddled into dis-'creet dimness, and all details of it (as to what Friedrich's witticisms 'were, and the like) are refused us in the Prussian Books,—indigna-'tion, owing to such dismal cause, became fixed hate on the Czarina's 'part, and there followed terrible results at last: a Czarina risen to the 'cannibal pitch upon a man, in his extreme need;—"infâme Catin du 'Nord," thinks the man! Friedrich's wit cost him dear; him, and half 'a million others still dearer, twenty years hence.'—Till which time we will gladly leave the Czarina and it.

Major von Winterfeld had been in Russia before this; and had wooed his fair Malzahn there. He is the same Winterfeld whom we once saw dining by the wayside with the late Friedrich Wilhelm, on that last Review-Journey his Majesty made. A Captain in the Potsdam Giants at that time; always in great favour with the late King; and in still greater with the present, —who finds in him, we can dimly discover, and pretty much in him alone, a soul somewhat like his own; the one real "peer" he had about him. A man of little education; bred in camps; yet of a proud natural eminency, and rugged nobleness of genius and mind. Let readers mark this fiery hero-spirit, lying buried in those dull Books, like lightning among clay. Here is another anecdote of his Russian business:

'Winterfeld had gone, in Friedrich Wilhelm's time, with a party 'of Prussian drill-sergeants for Petersburg' (year not given); 'and duly 'delivered them there. He naturally saw much of Feldmarschall Mün- 'nich, naturally saw the Step-daughter of the Feldmarschall, a shining 'beauty in Petersburg; Winterfeld himself a man of shining gifts, and 'character; and one of the handsomest tall men in the world. Mutual 'love between the Fräulein and him was the rapid result. But how to 'obtain marriage? Winterfeld cannot marry, without leave had of his 'superiors: you, fair Malzahn, are Hof-Dame of Princess Elizabeth, 'all your fortune the jewels you wear; and it is too possible she will 'not let you go!

'They agreed to be patient, to be silent; to watch warily till Win- 'terfeld got home to Prussia, till the Fräulein Malzahn could also con- 'trive to get home. Winterfeld once home, and the King's consent 'had, the Fräulein applied to Princess Elizabeth for leave of absence: '"A few months, to see my friends in Deutschland, your Highness!" 'Princess Elizabeth looked hard at her; answered evasively this and 'that. At last, being often importuned, she answered plainly, "I al- 'most feel convinced thou wilt never come back!" Protestations from 'the Fräulein were not wanting:—"Well then," said Elizabeth, "if 'thou art so sure of it, leave me thy jewels in pledge. Why not?" 'The poor Fräulein could not say why; had to leave her jewels, which 'were her whole fine fortune, "worth 100,000 roubles" (20,000*l.*); and 'is now the brave Wife of Winterfeld;—but could never, by direct en- 'treaty or circuitous interest and negotiation, get back the least item 'of her jewels. Elizabeth, as Princess and as Czarina, was alike deaf 'on that subject. Now or henceforth that proved an impossible private 'enterprise for Winterfeld, though he had so easily succeeded in the 'public one.'[5]

The new Czarina was not unmerciful. Münnich and Company were tried for life; were condemned to die, and did appear on the scaffold (29th January 1742), ready for that extreme penalty; but were there, on the sudden, pardoned or half-pardoned by a merciful new Czarina, and sent to Siberia and outer darkness. Whither Bieren had preceded them. To outer darkness also, though a milder destiny had been intended them at first, went Anton Ulrich and his Household. Towards native Germany at first; they had got as far as Riga on the way to Germany, but were detained there, for a long while (owing to suspicions, to Botta Plots, or I know not what), till finally they were recalled into Russian exile. Strict enough exile, seclusion about Archangel and elsewhere; in convents, in obscure uncomfortable places:—little Iwan, after vicissitudes, even went underground; grew to manhood, and got killed (partly by accident, not quite by murder), some twenty-three years hence, in his dungeon in the Fortress of Schlüsselburg, below the level of the Ladoga waters there. Unluckier Household, which once seemed the luckiest of the world, was never known. Canted suddenly, in this way, from the very top of Fortune's wheel to the very bottom; never to rise more;—and did not even die, at least not all die, for thirty or forty years after.[6]

[5] Retzow, Charakteristik des siebenjährigen Krieges (Berlin, 1802), i. 45 n.

This is the Chétardie-L'Estoc conspiracy, of 5th December 1741; the pitching-up of Princess Elizabeth, and the pitching-down of Anton Ulrich and his Münnichs, who had before pitched Bieren down. After which, matters remained more stationary at Petersburg: Czarina Elizabeth, fat indolent soul, floated with a certain native buoyancy, with something of bulky steadiness, in the turbid plunge of things, and did not sink. On the contrary, her reign, so-called, was prosperous, though stupid; her big dark Countries, kindled already into growth, went on growing rather. And, for certain, she herself went on growing, in orthodox devotions of spiritual type (and in strangely heterodox ditto of non-spiritual!); in indolent mansuetudes (fell rages, if you cut on the raws at all); in perpetual incongruity; and, alas, at last, in brandy-and-water,—till, as "infâme Catin du Nord," she became terribly important to some persons!

[6] Anton Ulrich, not till 15th May 1775 (two Daughters of his went, after this, to 'Horstens, a poor Country-House in Jutland,' whither Catherine II. had manumitted them, with pension;—she had wished Anton Ulrich to go home, many years before; but he would not, from shame).—Iwan had perished 5th August 1764 (Catherine II. blamed for his death, but without cause); Iwan's Mother, Princess Anne, (mercifully) 18th March 1746. See Russian Histories, Tooke, Castéra, &c.,—none of which, except Mannstein, is good for much, or to be trusted without scrutiny.

At her accession, and for two years following, Czarina Elizabeth, in spite of real disinclination that way, had a War on her hands: the Swedish War (August 1741—August 1743), which, after long threatening on the Swedish side, had broken-out into unwelcome actuality, in Anton Ulrich's time; and which could not, with all the Czarina's industry, be got rid of or stayed off; Sweden being bent upon the thing, reason or no reason. War not to be spoken of, except on compulsion, in the most voluminous History! It was the unwisest of wars, we should say, and in practice probably the contemptiblest; if there were not one other Swedish War coming, which vies with it in these particulars, of which we shall be obliged to speak, more or less, at a future stage. Of this present Russian-Swedish war, having happily almost nothing to do with it, we can, except in the way of transient chronology, refrain altogether from speaking or thinking.

Poor Sweden, since it shot Karl XII. in the trenches at Fredericshall, could not get a King again; and is very anarchic under its Phantasm King and free National Palaver,—Senate with subaltern Houses;—which generally has French gold in its pocket, and noise instead of wisdom in its head. Scandalous to think of or behold. The French, desirous to keep Russia in play during these high Belleisle adventures now on foot, had, after much egging, bribing, flattering, persuaded vain Sweden into this War with Russia. "At Narva they were 80,000, we 8,000; and what became of them!" cry the Swedes always. Yes, my friends, but you had a Captain at Narva; you had not yet shot your Captain when you did Narva! 'Faction of Hats,' 'Faction of Caps' (that is, *night*caps, as being somnolent and disinclined to France and War): seldom did a once-valiant far-shining Nation sink to such depths, since they shot their Captain, and said to Anarchy, "Thou art Captaincy, we see, and the Divine thing!" Of the Wars and businesses of such a set of mortals let us shun speaking, where possible.

Mannstein gives impartial account, pleasantly clear and compact, to such as may be curious about this Swedish-Russian War; and, in the didactic point of view, it is not without value. To us the interesting circumstance is, that it does not interfere with our Silesian operations at all; and may be figured as a mere accompaniment of rumbling discord, or vacant far-off noise, going on in those Northern parts,—to which therefore we hope to be strangers in time coming. Here are some dates, which the reader may take with him, should they chance to illustrate anything:

'August 4th, 1741. The Swedes declare War: "Will recover their 'lost portions of Finland, will," &c. &c. They had long been medi- 'tating it; they had Turk negotiations going on, diligent emissaries to 'the Turk (a certain Major Sinclair for one, whom the Russians way- 'laid and assassinated to get sight of his Papers), during the late Turk- 'Russian War; but could conclude nothing while that was in activity; 'concluded only after that was done,—striking the iron when grown cold. 'A chief point in their Manifesto was the assassination of this Sinclair; 'scandal and atrocity, of which there is no doubt now the Russians 'were guilty. Various pretexts for the War:—prime movers to it, prac- 'tically, were the French, intent on keeping Russia employed while 'their Belleisle German adventure went on, and who had even bar- 'gained with third-parties to get-up a War there, as we shall see.

'September 3d, 1741. At Wilmanstrand,—key of Wyborg, their 'frontier stronghold in Finland, which was under Siege,—the Swedes '(about 5,000 of them, for they had nothing to live upon, and lay scat- 'tered about in fractions) made fight, or skirmish, against a Russian 'attacking party: Swedes, rather victorious on their hill-top, rushed 'down; and totally lost their bit of victory, their Wilmanstrand, their 'Wyborg, and even the War itself;—for this was, in literal truth, the 'only fighting done by them in the entire course of it, which lasted 'near two years more. The rest of it was retreat, capitulation, loss on 'loss without stroke struck; till they had lost all Finland, and were 'like to lose Sweden itself,—Dalecarlian mutiny bursting out ("Ye 'traitors, misgovernors, worthy of death!"), with invasive Danes to rear 'of it;—and had to call-in the very Russians to save them from worse. 'Czarina Elizabeth at the time of her accession, six months after Wil- 'manstrand, had made truce, was eager to make peace: "By no means!" 'answered Sweden, taking arms again, or rather taking legs again; and 'rushing ruin-ward, at the old rate, still without stroke.

'June 28th, 1743. They did halt; made Peace of Abo (Truce and 'Preliminaries signed there, that day: Peace itself, August 17th); 'Czarina magnanimously restoring most of their Finland (thinking to 'herself, "Not done enough for me yet; cook it a little yet!");—and 'settling who their next King was to be, among other friendly things. 'And in November following, Keith, in his Russian galleys, with some '10,000 Russians on board, arrived in Stockholm; protective against 'Danes and mutinous Dalecarles: stayed there till June of next year '1744.'[7] Is not this a War!

On the Russian side, General Keith, under Fieldmarshal Lacy as chief in command (the same Keith whom we saw at 7 Adelung, ii. 445. Mannstein, pp. 297 (Wilmanstrand Affair, himself present)—365 (Peace)—373 (Keith's return with his galleys). Comte de Hordt (present also, on Oczakow under Münnich, some time ago), had a great deal of the work and management; which was of a highly miscellaneous kind, commanding fleets of gunboats, and much else; and readers of Mannstein can still judge,—much more could King Friedrich, earnestly watching the affair itself as it went on,—whether Keith did not do it in a solid and quietly eminent and valiant manner. Sagacious, skilful, imperturbable, without fear and without noise; a man quietly ever ready. He had quelled, once, walking direct into the heart of it, a ferocious Russian mutiny, or uproar from below, which would have ruined everything in few minutes more.[8] He suffered, with excellent silence, now and afterwards, much ill-usage from above withal;—till Friedrich himself, in the third year hence, was lucky enough to get him as General. Friedrich's Sister Ulrique, the marriage of Princess Ulrique,—that also, as it chanced, had something to do with this Peace of Abo. But we anticipate too far.

CHAPTER IX.

FRIEDRICH RETURNS TO SILESIA.

FRIEDRICH stayed only three weeks at home; moving about, from Berlin to Potsdam, to Reinsberg and back: all the gay world is in Berlin, at this Carnival time; but Friedrich has more to do with business, of a manifold and over-earnest nature, than with Carnival gaieties. French Valori is here, "my fat Valori," who is beginning to be rather a favourite of Friedrich's: with Excellency Valori, and with the other Foreign Excellencies, there was diplomatic passaging in these weeks; and we gather from Valori, in the inverse way (Valori fallen sulky), that it was not ill done on Friedrich's part. He had some private consultation with the Old Dessauer, too; 'probably on military points,' thinks Valori. At least there was noticed more of the drill-sergeant than before, in his handling of the Army, when he returned to Silesia, continues the sulky one. 'Troops and generals did not know him again,'—so excessively strict was he grown, on the sudden. And truly 'he 'got into details which were beneath, not only a Prince who the Swedish side, and subsequently a Soldier of Friedrich's), Mémoires (Berlin, 1789), i. 18-88. The murder of Sinclair (done by 'four Russian subalterns, two miles from Naumburg in Silesia, 17th June 1739, about 7 P.M.') is amply detailed from Documents, in a late Book: Weber, Aus Vier Jahrhunderten (Leipzig, 1858), i. 274-279.

---

[8] Mannstein, p. 130 (no date, April—May 1742).

19th Feb. 1741.

'has great views, but even a simple Captain of Infantry,'—according to my (Valori's) military notions and experiences![1]—

The truth is, Friedrich begins to see, more clearly than he did with Gloire dazzling him, that his position is an exceedingly grave one, full of risk, in the then mood and condition of the world; that he, in the whole world, has no sure friend but his Army; and that in regard to it he cannot be too vigilant! The world is ominous to this youngest of the Kings more than to another. Sounds as of general Political Earthquake grumble audibly to him from the deeps: all Europe likely, in any event, to get to loggerheads on this Austrian Pragmatic matter; the Nations all watching him, to see what he will make of it:—fugleman he to the European Nations, just about bursting-up on such an adventure. It may be a glorious position, or a not glorious; but, for certain, it is a dangerous one, and awfully solitary!—

Fuglemen the world and its Nations always have, when simultaneously bent anywhither, wisely or unwisely; and it is natural that the most adventurous spirit take that post. Friedrich has not sought the post; but following his own objects, has got it; and will be ignominiously lost, and trampled to annihilation under the hoofs of the world, if he do not mind! To keep well ahead;—to be rapid as possible; that were good:—to step aside were still better! And Friedrich we find is very anxious for that; 'would be content with the Duchy of Glogau, and join Austria;' but there is not the least chance that way. His Special Envoy to Vienna, Gotter, and along with him Borck the regular Minister, are come home; all negotiation hopeless at Vienna; and nothing but indignant war-preparation going on there, with the most animated diligence, and more success than had seemed possible. That is the law of Friedrich's Silesian Adventure: "Forward, therefore, on these terms; others there are not: waste no words!" Friedrich recognises to himself what the law is; pushes stiffly forward, with a fine silence on all that is not practical, really with a fine steadiness of hope, and audacity against discouragements. Of his anxieties, which could not well be wanting, but which it is royal to keep strictly under lock and key, of these there is no hint to Jordan or to anybody; and only through accidental chinks, on close scrutiny, can we discover that they exist.

[1] Valori, i. 99.

Symptom of despondency, of misgiving or repenting about his Enterprise, there is none anywhere, Friedrich's fine gifts of silence (which go deeper than the lips) are noticeable here, as always; and highly they availed Friedrich in leading his life, though now inconvenient to Biographers writing of the same!—

It was not on matters of drill, as Valori supposes, that Friedrich had been consulting with the Old Dessauer: this time it was on another matter. Friedrich has two next Neighbours greatly interested, none more so, in the Pragmatic Question: Kur-Sachsen, Polish King, a foolish greedy creature, who is extremely uncertain about his course in it (and indeed always continued so, now against Friedrich, now for him, and again against); and Kur-Hanover, our little George of England, whose course is certain as that of the very stars, and direct against Friedrich at this time, as indeed, at all times not exceptional, it is apt to be. Both these Potentates must be attended to, in one's absence; method to be gentle but effectual; the Old Dessauer to do it:—and this is what these consultings had turned upon; and in a month or two, readers, and an astonished Gazetteer world, will see what comes of them.

It was February 19th when Friedrich left Berlin; the 21st he spends at Glogau, inspecting the Blockade there, and not ill content with the measures taken: "Press that Wallis all you can," enjoins he: "Hunger seems to be slow about it! Summon him again, were your new Artillery come up; threaten with bombardment; but spare the Town, if possible. Artillery is coming: let us have done here, and soon!" Next day he arrives, not at Breslau as some had expected, but at Schweidnitz sidewards; a strong little Town, at least an elaborately fortified, of which we shall hear much in time coming. It lies a day's ride west of Breslau; and will be quieter for business than a big gazing Capital would be,—were Breslau even one's own city; which it is not, though perhaps tending to be. Breslau is in transition circumstances at present; a little uncertain whose it is, under its Münchows and new managers: Breslau he did not visit at all on this occasion. To Schweidnitz certain new regiments had been ordered, there to be disposed of in reinforcing: there, 'in the Count Hoberg's Mansion,' he principally lodges for six weeks to come; shooting-out on continual excursions; but always returning to Schweidnitz, as the centre, again.

Algarotti, home from Turin (not much of a success there, but always melodious for talk), had travelled with him; Algarotti, and not long after, Jordan and Maupertuis, bear him company, that the vacant moments too be beautiful. We can fancy he has a very busy, very anxious, but not an unpleasant time. He goes rapidly about, visiting his posts,—chiefly about the Neisse Valley; Neisse being the prime object, were the weather once come for siege-work. He is in many Towns (specified in Rödenbeck and the Books, but which may be anonymous here); doubtless on many Steeples and Hill-tops; questioning intelligent natives, diligently using his own eyes: intent to make personal acquaintance with this new Country,—where, little as he yet dreams of it, the deadly struggles of his Life lie waiting him, and which he will know to great perfection before all is done!

Neisse lies deep enough in Prussian environment; like Brieg, like Glogau, strictly blockaded; our posts thereabouts, among the Mountains, thought to be impregnable. Nevertheless, what new thing is this? Here are swarms of loose Hussar-Pandour people, wild Austrian Irregulars, who come pouring out of Glatz Country; disturbing the Prussian posts towards that quarter; and do not let us want for Small War (Kleine Krieg) so-called. General Browne, it appears, is got back to Glatz at this early season, he and a General Lentulus busy there; and these are the compliments they send! A very troublesome set of fellows, infesting one's purlieus in winged predatory fashion; swooping down like a cloud of vulturous harpies on the sudden; fierce enough, if the chance favour; then to wing again, if it do not. Communication, especially reconnoitring, is not safe in their neighbourhood. Prussian Infantry, even in small parties, generally beats them; Prussian Horse not, but is oftener beaten,—not drilled for this rabble and their ways. In pitched fight they are not dangerous, rather are despicable to the disciplined man; but can, on occasion, do a great deal of mischief.

Thus, it was not long after Friedrich's coming into these parts, when he learnt with sorrow that a Body of '500 Horse and 500 Foot' (or say it were only 300 of each kind, which is the fact[2]) had eluded our posts in the Mountains, and actually got into Neisse. 'The Foot will be of little consequence,' writes Friedrich; 'but the Horse, which will disturb our communications, are a considerable mischief.' This was on the 5th of March. And about a week before, on the 27th of February, there had well nigh a far graver thing befallen,—namely the capture of Friedrich himself, and the sudden end of all these operations.

[2] Orlich, i. 79; Œuvres de Frédéric, ii. 68.

Skirmish of Baumgarten, 27th February 1741.

In most of the Anecdote-Books there used to figure, and still does, insisting on some belief from simple persons, a wonderful Story in very vague condition: How once 'in the Silesian Wars,' the King, in those Upper Neisse regions, in the Wartha district between Glatz and Neisse, was, one day, within an inch of being taken,—clouds of Hussars suddenly rising round him, as he rode reconnoitring, with next to no escort, only an adjutant or so in attendance. How he shot away, keeping well in the shade; and ere long whisked into a Convent or Abbey, the beautiful Abbey of Kamenz in those parts; and found Tobias Stusche, excellent Abbot of the place, to whom he candidly disclosed his situation. How the excellent Tobias thereupon instantly ordered the bells to be rung for a mass extraordinary, Monks not knowing why; and, after bells, made his appearance in high costume, much to the wonder of his Monks, with a second Abbot, also in high costume, but of shortish stature, whom they never saw before or after. Which two Abbots, or at least Tobias, proceeded to do the so-called divine office there and then; letting loose the big chant especially, and the growl of organs, in a singularly expressive manner. How the Pandours arrived in clouds meanwhile; entered, in searching parties, more or less reverent of the mass; searched high and low; but found nothing, and were obliged to take Tobias's blessing at last, and go their ways. How the Second Abbot thereupon swore eternal friendship with Tobias, in the private apartments; and rode off as —as a rescued Majesty, determined to be more cautious in Pandour Countries for the future![3]—Which story, as to the body of it, is all myth; though, as is oftenest the case, there lies in it some soul of fact too. The History-Books, which had not much heeded the little fact, would have nothing to do with this account of it. Nevertheless the people stuck to their Myth; so that Dryasdust (in punishment for his sinful blindness to the human and divine significance of facts) was driven to investigate the business; and did at last victoriously bring it home to the small occurrence now called Skirmish of Baumgarten, which had nearly become so great in the History of the World, —to the following effect.

[3] Hildebrandt, Anekdoten, i. 1-7. Pandour proper is a foot-soldier (tall rawboned ill-washed biped, in copious Turk breeches, rather barish in the top parts of him; carries a very long musket, and has several pistols and butcher's-knives stuck in his girdle): specifically a footman; but readers will permit me to use him withal, as here, in the generic sense.

There are Two Valleys with roads that lead from that Southwest quarter of Silesia towards Glatz, each with a little Town at the end of it, looking up into it: Wartha the name of the one; Silberberg that of the other. Through the Wartha Valley, which is southernmost, young Neisse River comes rushing down,—the blue mountains thereabouts very pretty, on a clear spring day, says my touring friend. Both at Wartha, and at Silberberg the little Town which looks into the mouth of the northernmost Valley, the Prussians have a post. Old Derschau, Malplaquet Derschau, with headquarters at Frankenstein, some seven or eight miles nearer Schweidnitz, has not failed in that precaution. Friedrich wished to visit Silberberg and Wartha; set out accordingly, 27th February, with small escort, carelessly as usual: the Pandour people had wind of it; knew his habits on such occasions; and, gliding through other roadless valleys, under an adventurous Captain, had determined to whirl him off. And they were in fact not far from succeeding, had not a mistake happened.

Silberberg, and Wartha the southernmost, which stands upon the Neisse River (rushing out there into the plainer country), are each about seven or eight miles from Frankenstein, the Headquarters; and there are relays of posts, capable of supporting one another, all the way from Frankenstein to each. Friedrich rode to Silberberg first; examined the post, found it right; then rode across to Wartha, seven or eight miles southward; examined Wartha likewise; after which, he sat down to dinner in that little Town, with an Officer or two for company,—having, I suppose, found all right in both the posts. In the way hither, he had made some change in the relay arrangements, which at first involved some diminution of his own escort, and then some marching about and redistributing: so that, externally, it seemed as if the Principal Relay-party were now marching on Baumgarten, an intermediate Village,—at least so the Pandour Captain understands the movements going on; and crouches into the due thickets in consequence, not doubting but the King himself is for Baumgarten, and will be at hand presently. Principal relay-party, a squadron of Schulenburg's Dragoons, with a stupid Major over them, is not quite got into Baumgarten, when 'with horrible cries, the Pandour Captain with about 500 Horse,' plunges out of cover, direct upon the throat of it: and Friedrich, at Wartha, is but just begun dining when tumult of distant musketry breaks in upon him. With Friedrich himself, at this time, as I count, there might be 150 Horse; in Wartha post itself are at least 'forty hussars and fifty foot.' By no means 'nothing but a single adjutant,' as the Myth bears.

The stupid Major ought to have beaten this rabble, though above two to one of him. But he could not, though he tried considerably; on the contrary, he was himself beaten; obliged to make off, leaving 'ten dragoons killed, sixteen prisoners, one standard and two kettle-drums:'—victory and all this plunder, ye Pandour gentry; but evidently no King. The Pandour gentry, on the instant, made off too, alarm being abroad; got into some side-valley, with their prisoners and drum-and-standard honours, and vanished from view of mankind.

Friedrich had started from dinner; got his escort under way, with the forty hussars and the fifty foot, and what small force was attainable; and hurried towards the scene. He did see, by the road, another strongish party of Pandours; dashed them across the Neisse River out of sight;—but, getting to Baumgarten, found the field silent, and ten dead men upon it. "I always told you those Schulenburg Dragoons were good for nothing!" writes he to the Old Dessauer; but gradually withal, on comparing notes, finds what a danger he had run, and how rash and foolish he had been. "An étourderie (foolish trick)," he calls it, writing to Jordan; "a black eye;" and will avoid the like. Vienna got its two kettle-drums and flag; extremely glad to see them; and even sang Te-Deum upon them, to general edification.[4] This is the naked primordial substance out of which the above Myth grew to its present luxuriance in the popular imagination. Place, the little Village of Baumgarten; day 27th February 1741. Of Tobias Stusche or the Convent of Kamenz, not one authentic word on this occasion. Tobias did get promotions, favours in coming years: a worthy Abbot, deserving promotion on general grounds; and master of a Convent very picturesque, but twelve miles from the present scene of action.

[4] Orlich, i. 62-64.

Aspects of Breslau.

Friedrich avoided visiting Breslau, probably for the reasons above given; though there are important interests of his there, especially his chief Magazine; and issues of moment are silently working forward. Here are contemporary Excerpts (in abridged form), which are authentic, and of significance to a lively reader:

'Breslau, Middle of January 1741. The Prussian Envoy, Herr 'von Gotter, had appeared here, returning from Vienna; Gotter, and 'then Borck, who made no secret in Breslau society, That not the 'slightest hope of a peaceable result existed, as society might have 'flattered itself; but that war and battle would have to decide this 'matter. A Saxon Ambassador was also here, waiting some time; 'message thought to be insignificant:—probably some vague admoni-'tory stuff again from Kur-Sachsen (Polish King, son of August the 'Strong, a very insignificant man), who acts as Reichs-Vicarius in those 'Northern parts.' For the reader is to know, there are Reichs-Vicars more than one (nay more than two on this occasion, with considerable jarring going on about them); and I could say much about their dignities, limits, duties,[5]—if indeed there were any duties, except dramatic ones! But the Reich itself, and Vicarship along with it, are fallen into a nearly imaginary condition; and the Regensburg Diet (not Princes now, but mere Delegates of Princes, mostly Bombazine People), which, 'ever since 1663,' has sat continual, instead of now and then, is become an Enchanted Wiggery, strange to look upon, under those earnest stars. 'As King Friedrich did not call at Breslau,' after those Neisse bom-'bardments, but rolled past, straight homewards, the three Excellen-'cies all departed,—Borck and Gotter to Berlin, the Saxon home again 'with his insignificant message.

'January 19th. Schwerin too was here in the course of the winter, 'to see how the magazines and other war-preparations were going on: 'Breslau outwardly and inwardly is whirling with business, and offers 'phenomena. For instance, it is known that the Army-Chest, heaps 'of silver and gold in it, lies in the Scultet Garden-House, where the 'King lodged; and that only one sentry walks there, and that in the 'guardhouse itself, which is some way off, there are only thirty men. January 19th, about 9 of the clock,[6] alarm rises, That 2,000 Diebs-

[5] Adelung, ii. 143, &c.; Köhler, Reichs-Historie, pp. 585-589.
[6] Helden-Geschichte, i. 700.

'Gesindel (Collective Thief-rabble of Breslau and dependencies) are close 'by; intending a stroke upon said Garden-House and Army-Chest! 'Perhaps this rumour sprang of its own accord;—or perhaps not quite? 'It had been very rife; and ran high; not without remonstrances in 'Town-Hall, and the like, which we can imagine. Issue was, The 'Officer on post at Scultet's loaded his treasure in carts; conveyed it, 'that same night, to the interior of the City, in fact to the Oberamts-'Haus (Government-House that was);—which doubtless was a step 'in the right direction. For now the Two Feld-Kriegs-Commissariat 'Gentlemen (one of whom is the expert Münchow, son of our old Cüs-'trin friend), supreme Prussian Authorities here, do likewise shift out 'of their inns; and take old Schaffgotsch's apartments in the same 'Oberamts-Haus; mutely symbolling that perhaps they are likely to 'become a kind of Government. And the reader can conceive how, 'in such an element, the function of governing would of itself fall more 'and more into their hands. They were consummately polite, discreet, 'friendly towards all people; and did in effect manage their business, 'tax-gatherings in money and in kind, with a perfection and precision 'which made the evil a minimum.

'February 17th. * * This day also, there arrived at Breslau, by 'boat up the Oder, ten heavy cannon, three mortars, and ammunition 'of powder, bomb-shells, balls, as much as loaded fifty wagons; the 'whole of which were, in like manner, forwarded to Ohlau. This day, 'as on other days before and after. Great Magazines forming here; 'the Military chiefly at Ohlau; at Breslau the Provender part,—and 'this latter under noteworthy circumstances. In the Dom-Island, namely; 'which is definable (in a case of such necessity) as being "outside the 'walls." Especially as the Reverend Fathers have mostly glided into 'corners, and left the place vacant. In the Dom-Island, it certainly 'is; and such a stock,—all bought for money down, and spurred for-'ward while the roads were under frost,—"such a stock as was not 'thought to be in all Silesia," says exaggerative wonder. The vacant 'edifices in the Dom-Island are filled to the neck with meal and corn; 'the Prussian brigade now quartering there ("without the walls," in a 'sense) to guard the same. And in the Bishop's Garden' (poor Sinzen-dorf, far enough away and in no want of it just now) 'are mere hay-'mows, bigger than houses: who can object,—in a case of necessity? 'No man, unless he politically meddle, is meddled with; politically 'meddling, you are at once picked up; as one or two are,—clapped 'into gentle arrest, or, like old Schaffgotsch, and even Sinzendorf be-'fore long, requested to leave the Country till it get settled. Rigour 'there is, but not intentional injustice on Münchow's part, and there 'is a studious avoidance of harsh manner.

'February—March. Considerable recruiting in Schlesien: six hun-'dred recruits have enlisted in Breslau alone. Also his Prussian Majesty 'has sent a supply of Protestant Preachers, ordained for the occasion, 'to minister where needed;—which is piously acknowledged as a god-

'send in various parts of Silesia. Twelve came first, all Berliners; 'soon afterwards, others from different parts, till, in the end, there 'were about Sixty in all. Rigorous, punctilious avoidance of offence 'to the Catholic minorities, or of whatever least thing Silesian Law 'does not permit, is enjoined upon them; "to preach in barns or 'town-halls, where by Law you have no Church." Their salary is 'about 30*l.* a year; they are all put under supervision of the Chaplain 'of Margraf Karl's Regiment' (a judicious Chaplain, I have no doubt, and fit to be a Bishop); and so far as appears, mere benefit is got of them by Schlesien as well as by Friedrich, in this function. Friedrich is careful to keep the balance level between Catholic and Protestant; but it has hung at such an angle, for a long while past! In general, we observe the Catholic Dignitaries, and the zealous or fanatic of that creed, especially the Jesuits, are apt to be against him: as for the non-fanatic, they expect better government, secular advantage; these latter weigh doubtfully, and with less weight whichever way. In the general population, who are Protestant, he recognises friends;—and has sent them Sixty Preachers, which by Law was their due long since. Here follow two little traits, comic or tragi-comic, with which we can conclude:

'Detached Jesuit parties, here and there, seem to have mischief in 'hand in a small way, encouraging deserters and the like;—and we 'keep an eye on them. No discontent elsewhere, at least none audible; 'on the contrary, much enlisting on the part of the Silesian youth, 'with other good symptoms. But in the Dom, there is, singular to 'say, a Goblin found walking, one night;—advancing, not with airs 'from Heaven, upon the Prussian sentry there! The Prussian sentry 'handles arms; pokes determinedly into the Goblin, and finding him 'solid, ever more determinedly, till the Goblin shrieked "Jesus Maria!" 'and was hauled to the Guardhouse for investigation.' A weak Goblin; doubtless of the valet kind; worth only a little whipping; but testifies what the spirit is.

'Another time, two deserter Frenchmen getting hanged' (such the law in aggravated cases), 'certain polite Jesuits, who had by permission 'been praying and extreme-unctioning about them, came to thank the 'Colonel after all was over. Colonel, a grave practical man, needs no '"thanks;" would, however, "advise your Reverences to teach your 'people that perjury is not permissible, that an oath sworn ought to 'be kept;" and in fine "would advise you Holy Fathers hereabouts, 'and others, to have a care lest you get into"—And twitching his reins, 'rode away without saying into what."[7]

Austria is standing to Arms.

Schwerin has been doing his best in this interim; collecting magazines with double diligence while the roads are hard, taking-up the Key-positions far and wide, from the Jablunka round to the Frontier Valleys of Glatz again. He was through Jablunka, at one time; on into Mähren, as far as Olmütz; levying contributions, emitting patents: but as to intimidating her Hungarian Majesty, if that was the intention, or changing her mind at all, that is not the issue got. Austria has still strength, and Pragmatic Sanction and the Laws of Nature have! Very fixed is her Hungarian Majesty's determination, to part with no inch of Territory, but to drive the intrusive Prussians home well punished.

[7] Helden-Geschichte, i. 723.

How she has got the funds is, to this day, a mystery;—unless George and Walpole, from their Secret-Service Moneys, have smuggled her somewhat? For the Parliament is not sitting, and there will be such jargonings, such delays: a preliminary 100,000*l.*, say by degrees 200,000*l.*,—we should not miss it, and in her Majesty's hands it would go far! Hints in the English Dryasdust we have; but nothing definite; and we are left to our guesses.[8] A romantic story, first set current by Voltaire, has gone the round of the world, and still appears in all Histories: How in England there was a Subscription set on foot for her Hungarian Majesty; outcome of the enthusiasm of English Ladies of quality,—old Sarah Duchess of Marlborough putting down her name for 40,000*l.*, or indeed putting down the ready sum itself; magnanimous veteran that she was. Voltaire says, omitting date and circumstance, but speaking as if it were indubitable, and a thing you could see with eyes: 'The Duchess of Marlborough, widow of him who had 'fought for Karl VI.' (and with such signal returns of gratitude from the said Karl VI.), 'assembled the principal Ladies of 'London; who engaged to furnish 100,000*l.* among them; 'the Duchess herself putting down' (en deposa, tabling in corpore) '40,000*l.* of it. The Queen of Hungary had the greatness 'of soul to refuse this money;—needing only, as she intimated, 'what the Nation in Parliament assembled might please to 'offer her.'[9]

One is sorry to run athwart such a piece of mutual magnanimity; but the fact is, on considering a little and asking evidence, it turns out to be mythical. One Dilworth, an innocent English soul (from whom our grandfathers used to learn

[8] Tindal (xx. 497) says expressly 200,000*l.*, but gives no date or other particular.
[9] Voltaire, Œuvres (Siècle de Louis XV, c. 6), xxviii. 79.

Arithmetic, I think), writing on the spot some years after Voltaire, has this useful passage: 'It is the great failing of a 'strong imagination to catch greedily at wonders. Voltaire 'was misinformed; and would perhaps learn, by a second 'inquiry, a truth less splendid and amusing. A Contribution 'was, by News-writers upon their own authority, fruitlessly pro-'posed. It ended in nothing: the Parliament voted a supply;' —that did it, Mr. Dilworth; supplies enough, and many of them! "Fruitlessly, by News-writers on their own authority;" that is the sad fact.[10]

It is certain, little George, who considers Pragmatic Sanction as the Keystone of Nature in a manner, has been venturing far deeper than purse for that adorable object, and indeed has been diving, secretly, in muddier waters than we expected, to a dangerous extent, on behalf of it, at this very time. In the first days of March, Friedrich has heard from his Minister at Petersburg of a detestable Project,[11]—project for "Partitioning the Prussian Kingdom," no less; for fairly cutting into Friedrich, and paring him down to the safe pitch, as an enemy to Pragmatic and mankind. They say, a Treaty, Draught of a Treaty, for that express object, is now ready; and lies at Petersburg, only waiting signature. Here is a Project! Contracting parties (Russian signature still wanting) are: Kur-Sachsen; her Hungarian Majesty; King George; and that Regent Anne (Mrs. Anton Ulrich, so to speak), who sits in a huddle of undress,—impatient of Political objects, but sensible to the charms of handsome men. To the charms of Count Lynar, especially; the handsomest of Danish noblemen (more an ancient Roman than a Dane), whom the Polish Majesty, calculating cause and effect, had dispatched to her, with that view, in the dead of winter lately. To whom she has given ear;—dismissing her Münnich, as we saw above;—and is ready for signing, or perhaps has signed![12] Friedrich's astonishment, on hearing of this "detestable Project," was great. However, he takes his measures on it;—right lucky that he has the Old Dessauer, and machinery for acting on Kur-Sachsen and the Britannic Majesty. "Get your machinery in gear!" is naturally his first order. And the Old Dessauer does it, with effect: of which by and by.

[10] The Life and Heroick Actions of Frederick III. (sic, a common blunder), by W. H. Dilworth, M. A. (London, 1758), p. 25. A poor little Book, one of many coming out on that subject just then (for a reason we shall see on getting thither); which contains, of available now, the above sentence and no more. Indeed its brethren, one of them by Samuel Johnson (imprimis, the imprisoned giant), do not even contain that, and have gone wholly to zero.—Neither little Dilworth nor big Voltaire give the least shadow of specific date; but both evidently mean Spring 1742 (not 1741).

[11] Orlich, i. 83 (scrap of Note to Old Dessauer; no date allowed us; 'early in March').

[12] Œuvres de Frédéric, ii. 68.

Never did I hear, before or since, of such a plunge into the muddy unfathomable, on the part of little George, who was an honourable creature, and dubitative to excess: and truly this rash plunge might have cost him dear, had not he directly scrambled out again. Or did Friedrich exaggerate to himself his Uncle's real share in the matter? I always guess, there had been more of loose talk, of hypothesis and fond hope, in regard to George's share, than of determinate fact or procedure on his own part. The transaction, having had to be dropped on the sudden, remains somewhat dark; but, in substance, it is not doubtful;[13] and Parliament itself took afterwards to poking into it, though with little effect. Kur-Sachsen's objects in the adventure were of the earth, earthy; but on George's part it was pure adoration of Pragmatic Sanction, anxiety for the Keystone of Nature, and lest Chaos come again. In comparison with such transcendent divings, what is a little Secret-Service money!—

The Count Lynar of this adventure, who had well nigh done such a feat in Diplomacy, may turn-up transiently again. A conspicuous, more or less ridiculous person of those times. Büsching (our Geographical friend) had gone with him, as Excellency's Chaplain, in this Russian Journey; which is a memorable one to Büsching; and still presents vividly, through his Book, those haggard Baltic Coasts in mid-winter, to readers who have business there. Such a journey for grimness of outlook, upon pine-tufts and frozen sand; for cold (the Count's very tobacco-pipe freezing in his mouth), for hardship, for bad lodging, and extremity of dirt in the unfreezable kinds, as seldom was. They met, one day on the road, a Lord Hyndford, English Ambassador just returning from Petersburg, with his fourgons and vehicles, and arrangements for sleep and victual, in an enviably luxurious condition,—whom we shall meet, to our cost. They saw, in the body, old Fieldmarshal Lacy, and dined with him, at Riga; who advised brandy schnapps; a recipe rejected by Büsching. And other memorabilia, which by accident hang about this Lynar.[14]—All through Regent Anne's time he continued a dangerous object to Friedrich; and it was a relief when Elizabeth Catin became Autocrat, instead of Deshabille Anne and her Lynar. Adieu to him, for fifteen years or more.

[13] Tindal, xx. 497. [14] Büsching, Beyträge, vi. 132-164.

Of Friedrich's military operations, of his magazines, posts, diligent plannings and gallopings about, in those weeks; of all this the reader can form some notion by looking on the map and remembering what has gone before: but that subterranean growling which attended him, prophetic of Earthquake, that universal breaking-forth of Bedlams, now fallen so extinct, no reader can imagine. Bedlams totally extinct to everybody; but which were then very real, and raged wide as the world, high as the stars, to a hideous degree among the then sons of men;—unimaginable now by any mortal.

And, alas, this is one of the grand difficulties for my readers and me; Friedrich's Life-element having fallen into such a dismal condition. Most dismal, dark, ugly, that Austrian-Succession Business, and its world-wide battlings, throttlings and intriguings: not Dismal Swamp, under a coverlid of London Fog, could be uglier! A Section of "History" so-called, which human nature shrinks from; of which the extant generation already knows nothing, and is impatient of hearing anything! Truly, Oblivion is very due to such an Epoch: and from me far be it to awaken, beyond need, its sordid Bedlams, happily extinct. But without Life-element, no Life can be intelligible; and till Friedrich and one or two others are extricated from it, Dismal Swamp cannot be quite filled in. Courage, reader!—Our Constitutional Historian makes this farther reflection:

'English moneys, desperate Russian intrigues, Treaties made and 'Treaties broken—If instead of Pragmatic Sanction with eleven Poten- 'tates guaranteeing, Maria Theresa had at this time had 200,000 soldiers 'and a full treasury (as Prince Eugene used to advise the late Kaiser), 'how different might it have been with her, and with the whole world 'that fell upon one another's throats in her quarrel! Some eight years 'of the most disastrous War; and except the falling of Silesia to its new 'place, no result gained by it. War at any rate inevitable, you object? 'English-Spanish War having been obliged to kindle itself; French 'sure to fall in, on the Spanish side; sure to fall upon Hanover, so 'soon as beaten at sea, and thus to involve all Europe? Well, it is 'too likely. But, even in that case, the poor English would have gone 'upon their necessary Spanish War, by the direct road and with their 'eyes open, instead of somnambulating and stumbling over the chimney- 'tops; and the settlement might have come far sooner, and far cheaper 'to mankind.—Nay, we are to admit that the new place for Silesia 'was, likewise, the place appointed it by just Heaven; and Friedrich's 'too was a necessary War. Heaven makes use of Shadow-hunting 'Kaisers too; and its ways in this mad world are through the great 'Deep.'

The Young Dessauer captures Glogau (March 9th); the Old Dessauer, by his Camp of Göttin (April 2d), checkmates certain Designing Persons.

Money somewhere her Hungarian Majesty has got; that is one thing evident. She has an actual Army on foot, 'drawn out of Italy,' or whence she could; formidable Army, says rumour, and getting well equipped;—and here are the Pandour Precursors of it, coming down like storm-clouds through the Glatz valleys;—nearly finishing the War for her at a stroke, the other day, had accident favoured;—and have thrown reinforcement of 600 into Neisse. Friedrich is not insensible to these things; and amid such alarms from far and from near, is becoming eager to have, at least, Glogau in his hand. Glogau, he is of opinion, could now, and should, straightway be done.

Glogau is not a strong place; after all the repairing, it could stand little siege, were we careless of hurting it. But Wallis is obstinate; refuses Free Withdrawal; will hold out to the uttermost, though his meal is running low. He pretends there is relief coming; relief just at hand; and once, in midnight time, 'lets-off a rocket and fires six guns,' alarming Prince Leopold as if relief were just in the neighbourhood. A tough industrious military man; stiff to his purpose, and not without shift.

Friedrich thinks the place might be had by assault: "Open trenches; set your batteries going, which need not injure the Town; need only alarm Wallis, and terrify it; then, under cover of this noise and feint of cannonading, storm with vigour." Leopold, the Young Dessauer, is cautious; wants petards if he must storm, wants two new battalions if he must open trenches;—he gets these requisites, and is still cunctatory. Friedrich has himself got the notion, "from clear intelligence," true or not, that relief to Glogau is actually on way; and under such imminences, Russian and other, in so ticklish a state of the world, he becomes more and more impatient that this thing were done. In the first week of March, still hurrying about on inspection-business, he writes, from four or five different places ('Mollwitz near Brieg' is one of them, a Village we shall soon know better), Note after Note to Leopold; who still makes difficulties, and is not yet perfect to the last finish in his preparations. "Preparations!" answers Friedrich impatiently (date Mollwitz, 5th March, the third or fourth impatient Note he has sent); and adds, just while quitting Mollwitz for Ohlau, this Postscript in his own hand:

9th March 1741.

P.S. 'I am sorry you have not understood me! They have, in 'Böhmen, a regular enterprise on hand for the rescue of Glogau. I 'have Infantry enough to meet them; but Cavalry is quite wanting. 'You must therefore, without delay, begin the siege. Let us finish 'there, I pray you!'[15]

And next day, Monday 6th, to cut the matter short, he dispatches his General-Adjutant Goltz in person (the distance is above seventy miles), with this Note wholly in autograph, which nothing vocal on Leopold's part will answer:

'Ohlau, 6th March. As I am certainly informed that the Enemy 'will make some attempt, I hereby with all distinctness command, 'That, so soon as the petards are come' (which they are), 'you attack 'Glogau. And you must make your Arrangement (Disposition) for 'more than one attack; so that if one fail, the other shall certainly 'succeed. I hope you will put-off no longer;—otherwise the blame 'of all the mischief that might arise out of longer delay must lie on 'you alone.'[16]

Goltz arrived with this emphatic Piece, Tuesday Evening, after his course of seventy miles: this did at last rouse our cautious Young Dessauer; and so there is next obtainable, on much compression, the following authentic Excerpt:

'Glogau, 8th March 1741. His Durchlaucht the Prince Leopold 'summoned all the Generals at noon; and informed them That, this 'very night, Glogau must be won. He gave them their Instructions in 'writing: where each was to post himself; with what detachments; 'how to proceed. There are to be Three Attacks: one up stream, 'coming on with the River to its right; one down stream, River to its 'left; and a third from the landward side, perpendicular to the other 'two. The very captains that shall go foremost are specified; at what 'hour each is to leave quarters, so that all be ready simultaneously, 'waiting in the posts assigned;—against what points to advance out 'of these, and storm Rampart and Wall. Places, times, particulars, 'everything is fixed with mathematical exactitude: "Be steady, be 'correct, especially be silent; and so far as Law of Nature will permit, 'be simultaneous! When the big steeple of Glogau peals Midnight, [15] Orlich, i. 70. [16] Ibid. i. 71.

'—Forward, with the first stroke; with the second, much more with 'the twelfth stroke, be one and all of you, in the utmost silence, ad- 'vancing! And, under pain of death, two things: Not one shot till 'you are in; No plundering when you are."—In this manner is the 'silent three-sided avalanche to be let go. Whereupon,' says my Dryas-dust, 'the Generals retired; and had, for one item, their fire-arms 'all cleaned and new-loaded.'[17]

Without plans of Glogau, and more detail and study than the reader would consent to, there can no Narrative be given. Glogau has Ramparts, due Ring-fence, palisaded and repaired by Wallis; inside of this is an old Town-Wall, which will need petards: there are about 1,000 men under Wallis, and altogether on the works, not to count a mortar or two, fifty-eight big guns. The reader must conceive a poor Town under blockade, in the wintry night-time, with its tough Count Wallis; ill-off for the necessaries of life; Town shrouded in darkness, and creeping quietly to its bed. This on the one hand: and on the other hand, Prussian battalions marching up, at 10 o'clock or later, with the utmost softness of step; 'taking post behind the ordinary field-watches;' and at length, all standing ranked, in the invisible dark; silent, like machinery, like a sleeping avalanche: Husht!—No sentry from the walls dreams of such a thing. "Twelve!" sings out the steeple of Glogau; and in grim whisper the word is, "Vorwärts!" and the three-winged avalanche is in motion.

They reach their glacises, their ditches, covered ways, correct as mathematics; tear-out chevaux-de-frise, hew-down palisades, in the given number of minutes: Swift, ye Regiment's-carpenters; smite your best! Four cannon-shot do now boom-out upon them; which go high over their heads, little dreaming how close at hand they are. The glacis is thirty feet high, of stiff slope, and slippery with frost: no matter, the avalanche, led on by Leopold in person, by Margraf Karl the King's Cousin, by Adjutant Goltz and the chief personages, rushes up with strange impetus; hews-down a second palisade; surges in;—Wallis's sentries extinct, or driven to their main guards. There is a singular fire in the besieging party. For example, Four Grenadiers,—I think of this First Column, which succeeded sooner, certainly of the Regiment Glasenapp,—four grenadiers, owing to slippery or other accidents, in climbing the glacis, had fallen a few steps behind the general body; and on getting to the top, took the wrong course, and rushed along rightward instead of leftward. Rightward, the first thing they come upon is a mass of Austrians still ranked in arms; Fifty-two men, as it turned out, with their Captain over them. Slight stutter ensues on the part of the Four Grenadiers; but they give one another the hint, and dash forward: "Prisoners?" ask they sternly, as if all Prussia had been at their rear. The Fifty-two, in the darkness, in the danger and alarm, answer "Yes." —"Pile arms, then!" Three of the grenadiers stand to see that done; the fourth runs off for force, and happily gets back with it before the comedy had become tragic for his comrades. 'I must make acquaintance with these four men,' writes Friedrich, on hearing of it; and he did reward them by present, by promotion to sergeantcy (to ensigncy one of them), or what else they were fit for. Grenadiers of Glasenapp: these are the men Friedrich heard swearing-in under his window, one memorable morning when he burst into tears! At half-past Twelve, the Ramparts, on all sides, are ours.

[17] Helden-Geschichte, i. 823; ii. 165.

9th March 1741.

The Gates of the Town, under axe and petard, can make little resistance, to Leopold's Column or the other two. A hole is soon cut in the Town-Gate, where Leopold is; and gallant Wallis, who had rallied behind it, with his Artillery-General and what they could get together, fires through the opening, kills four men; but is then (by order, and not till then) fired upon, and obliged to draw back, with his Artillery-General mortally hurt. Inside he attempts another rally, some 200 with him; and here and there perhaps a house-window tries to give shot; but it is to no purpose, not the least stand can be made. Poor Wallis is rapidly swept back, into the Market-place, into the Main Guardhouse; and there piles arms: "Glogau yours, Ihr Herren, and we prisoners of War!" The steeple had not yet quite struck One. Here has been a good hour's-work!

Glogau, as in a dream, or half-awake, and timidly peeping from behind window-curtains, finds that it is a Town taken. Glogau easily consoles itself, I hear, or even is generally glad; Prussian discipline being so perfect, and ingress now free for the necessaries of life. There was no plundering; not the least insult: no townsman was hurt; not even in houses where soldiers had tried firing from windows. The Prussian Battalions rendezvous in the Market-place, and go peaceably about their patrolling, and other business; and meddle with nothing else. They lost, in killed, ten men; had of killed and wounded, forty-eight; the Austrians rather more.[18] Wallis was to have been set free on parole; but was not,—in retaliation for some severity of General Browne's in the interim (picking-up of two Silesian Noblemen, suspected of Prussian tendency, and locking them in Brünn over the Hills),—and had to go to Berlin, till that was repaired. To the wounded Artillery-General there was every tenderness shown, but he died in few days. The other Prisoners were marched to the Cüstrin-Stettin quarter; 'and many of them took Prussian service.'

And this is the Scalade of Glogau: a shining feat of those days; which had great rumour in the Gazettes, and over all the then feverish Nations, though it has now fallen dim again, as feats do. Its importance at that time, its utility to Friedrich's affairs, was undeniable; and it filled Friedrich with the highest satisfaction, and with admiration to overflowing. Done 9th March 1741; in one hour, the very earliest of the day.

Goltz posted back to Schweidnitz with the news; got thither about 5 P.M.; and was received, naturally, with open arms. Friedrich in person marched out, next morning, to make Feude-joie and Te-Deum-ing;—there was Royal Letter to Leopold, which flamed through all the Newspapers, and can still be read in innumerable Books; Letter omissible in this place. We remark only how punctual the King is, to reward in money as well as praise, and not the high only, but the low that had deserved: to Prince Leopold he presents 2,000*l.*; to each private soldier who had been of the storm, say half-a-guinea,—doubling and quadrupling, in the special cases, to as high as twenty guineas, of our present money. To the old Gazetteers, and their readers everywhere, this of Glogau is a very effulgent business; bursting out on them, like sudden Bude-light, in the uncertain stagnancy and expectancy of mankind. Friedrich himself writes of it to the Old Dessauer:

'The more I think of the Glogau business, the more important I 'find it. Prince Leopold has achieved the prettiest military stroke '(die schönste Action) that has been done in this Century. From my 'heart I congratulate you on having such a Son. In boldness of re-[18] Orlich, i. 75, 78; Heiden-Geschichte, i. 829; irreconcilable otherwise, in some slight points.

'solution, in plan, in execution, it is alike admirable; and quite gives 'a turn to my affairs.'[19]

And indeed, it is a perfect example of Prussian discipline, and military quality in all kinds; such as it would be difficult to match elsewhere. Most potently correct; coming out everywhere with the completeness and exactitude of mathematics; and has in it such a fund of martial fire, not only ready to blaze out (which can be exampled elsewhere), but capable of bottling itself in, and of lying silently ready. Which is much rarer; and very essential in soldiering! Due a little to the Old Dessauer, may we not say, as well as to the Young? Friedrich Wilhelm is fallen silent; but his heavy labours, and military and other drillings to Prussian mankind, still speak with an audible voice.

About three weeks after this of Glogau, Leopold the Old Dessauer, over in Brandenburg, does another thing which is important to Friedrich, and of great rumour in the world. Steps out, namely, with a force of 36,000 men, horse, foot and artillery, completely equipped in all points; and takes Camp, at this early season, at a place called Göttin, not far from Magdeburg, handy at once for Saxony and for Hanover; and continues there encamped,—"merely for review purposes." Readers can figure what an astonishment it was to Kur-Sachsen and British George; and how it struck the wind out of their Russian Partition-Dream, and awoke them to a sense of the awful fact!—Capable of being slit in pieces, and themselves partitioned, at a day's warning, as it were! It was on April 2d, that Leopold, with the first division of the 36,000, planted his flag near Göttin. No doubt it was the "detestable Project" that had brought him out, at so early a season for tent-life, and nobody could then guess why. He steadily paraded here, all summer; keeping his 36,000 well in drill, since there was nothing else needed of him.

The Camp at Göttin flamed greatly abroad through the timorous imaginations of mankind, that Year; and in the Newspapers are many details of it. And, besides the important general fact, there is still one little point worth special mention: namely, that old Fieldmarshal Katte (Father of poor Lieutenant Katte whom we knew) was of it; and perhaps even got his death by it: 'Chief Commander of the Cavalry here,' such honour had he; but died at his post, in a couple of months, 'at Rekahn, May 31st;'[20] poor old gentleman, perhaps unequal to the hardships of field-life at so early a season of the year.

[19] Date, 13th March 1741 (Orlich, i. 77).

Friedrich takes the Field, with some Pomp; goes into the Mountains,—but comes fast back.

At Glogau there was Homaging, on the very morrow after the storm: on the second day, the superfluous regiments marched off; no want of vigorous activity to settle matters on their new footing there. General Kalkstein (Friedrich's old Tutor, whom readers have forgotten again) is to be Commandant of Glogau; an office of honour, which can be done by deputy except in cases of real stress. The place is to be thoroughly new-fortified,—which important point they commit to Engineer Wallrave, a strong-headed, heavy-built Dutch Officer, long since acquired to the service, on account of his excellence in that line; who did, now and afterwards, a great deal of excellent engineering for Friedrich; but for himself (being of deep stomach withal, and of life too dissolute) made a tragic thing of it ultimately. As will be seen, if we have leisure.

In seven or eight days, Prince Leopold having wound-up his Glogau affairs, and completed the new preliminaries there, joins the King at Schweidnitz. In the highest favour, as was natural. Kalkstein is to take a main hand in the Siege of Neisse; for which operation it is hoped there will soon be weather, if not favourable yet supportable. What of the force was superfluous at Glogau had at once marched off, as we observed; and is now getting re-distributed where needful. There is much shifting about; strengthening of posts, giving-up of posts: the whole of which readers shall imagine for themselves,—except only two points that are worth remembering: First, that Kalkstein with about 12,000 takes post at Grotkau, some twenty-five miles north of Neisse, ready to move on, and open trenches, when required: and second, that Holstein-Beck gets posted at Frankenstein (chief place of that Baumgarten skirmish), say thirty-five miles west-by-north of Neisse; and has some 8 or 10,000 Horse and Foot thereabouts, spread up and down,—who will be much wanted, and not procurable, on an occasion that is coming.

[20] Militair-Lexikon, ii. 254.

Friedrich has given-up the Jablunka Pass; called-in the Jablunka and remoter posts; anxious to concentrate, before the Enemy get nigh. That is the King's notion; and surely a reasonable one; the area of the Prussian Army, as I guess it from the Maps, being above 2,000 square miles, beginning at Breslau only, and leaving out Glogau. Schwerin thinks differently, but without good basis. Both are agreed, "The Austrian Army cannot take the field till the forage come," till the new grass spring, which its cavalry find convenient. That is the fair supposition; but in that both are mistaken, and Schwerin the more dangerously of the two. — Meanwhile the Pandour swarms are observably getting rifer, and of stormier quality; and they seem to harbour farther to the East than formerly, and not to come all out of Glatz. Which perhaps are symptomatic circumstances? The worst effect of these preliminary Pandour clouds is, Your scout-service cannot live among them; they hinder reconnoitring, and keep the Enemy veiled from you. Of that sore mischief Friedrich had, first and last, ample experience at their hands! This is but the first instalment of Pandours to Friedrich; and the mere foretaste of what they can do in the veiling way.

Behind the Mountains, in this manner, all is inane darkness to Friedrich and Schwerin. They know only that Neipperg is rendezvousing at Olmütz; and judge that he will still spend many weeks upon it; the real facts being: That Neipperg, —'who arrived in Olmütz on the 10th of March,' the very day while Glogau was homaging,—has been, he and those above him and those under him, driving preparations forward at a furious rate. That Neipperg held,—I think at Steinberg his hithermost post, some twenty miles hither of Olmütz,—a Council of War, 'all the Generals and even Lentulus from Glatz, present at it,' day not given; where the unanimous decision was, "March straightway; save Neisse, since Glogau is gone!" —and in fine, That on the 26th, Neipperg took the road accordingly, 'in spite of furious snow blowing in his face;' and is ever since (30,000 strong, says rumour, but perhaps 10,000 of them mere Pandours) unweariedly climbing the Mountains, laboriously jingling forward with his heavy guns and ammunition-wagons; 'contending with the steep snowy icy roads;'— intent upon saving Neisse. This is the fact; profoundly unknown to Friedrich and Schwerin; who will be much surprised, when it becomes patent to them at the wrong time.

Schweidnitz, 27th March. This day Friedrich, with considerable apparatus, pomp and processional cymballing, greatly the reverse of his ulterior use and wont in such cases, quitted Schweidnitz and his Algarottis; solemnly opening Campaign in this manner; and drove off for Ottmachau, having work there for tomorrow.

The Siege of Neisse is now to proceed forthwith; trenches to be opened April 4th. Friedrich is still of opinion, that his posts lie too wide apart; that especially Schwerin, who is spread among the Hills in Jägerndorf Country, ought to come down, and take closer order for covering the siege.[21] Schwerin answers, That if the King will spare him a reinforcement of eight squadrons and nine battalions (say 1,200 Horse, 9,000 Foot), he will maintain himself where he is, and no Enemy shall get across the Mountains at all. That is Schwerin's notion; who surely is something of a judge. Friedrich assents; will himself conduct the reinforcement to Schwerin, and survey matters, with his own eyes, up yonder. Friedrich marches from Ottmachau, accordingly, 29th March;—Kalkstein, Holstein-Beck, and others are to be rendezvoused before Neisse, in the interim; trenches ready for opening on the sixth day hence; —and in this manner, climbs these mountains, and sees Jägerndorf Country for the first time.

Beautiful blue world of Hills, ridge piled on ridge behind that Neisse region; fruitful valleys lapped in them, with grim stone Castles and busy little Towns disclosing themselves as we advance: that is Jägerndorf Country,—which Uncle George of Anspach, hundreds of years ago, purchased with his own money; which we have now come to lay hold of as his Heir! Friedrich, I believe, thinks little of all this, and does not remember Uncle George at all. But such are the facts; and the Country, regarded or not, is very blue and beautiful, with the Spring sun shining on it; or with the sudden Spring storms gathering wildly on the peaks, as if for permanent investiture, but vanishing again straightway, leaving only a powdering of snow.

[21] Œuvres de Frédéric, ii. 70.

2d-10th April 1741.

He met Schwerin at Neustadt, half way to Jägerndorf; whither they proceeded next day. "What news have you of the Enemy?" was Friedrich's first question. Schwerin has no news whatever; only that the Enemy is far off, hanging in long thin straggle from Olmütz westward. "I have a spy out," said Schwerin; "but he has not returned yet,"—nor ever will, he might have added. If diligent readers will now take to their Map,* and attend day by day, an invincible Predecessor has compelled what next follows into human intelligibility, and into the Diary Form, for their behoof;—readers of an idler turn can skip: but this confused hurry-skurry of marches issues in something which all will have to attend to.

'Jägerndorf, 2d April 1741. This is the day when the Old Des-
'sauer makes appearance with the first brigades of his Camp at Göttin.
'Friedrich is satisfied with what he has seen of Jägerndorf matters;
'and intends returning towards Neisse, there to commence on the 4th.
'He is giving his final orders, and on the point of setting off, when—
'Seven Austrian Deserters, "Dragoons of Lichtenstein," come in;
'and report, That Neipperg's Army is within a few miles! And scarcely
'had they done answering and explaining, when sounds rise of musketry
'and cannon, from our outposts on that side; intimating that here is 'Neipperg's Army itself. Seldom in his life was Friedrich in an uglier 'situation. In Jägerndorf, an open Town, are only some three or four 'thousand men, "with three fieldpieces, and as much powder as will 'charge them forty times." Happily these proved only the Pandour 'outskirts of Neipperg's Army, scouring about to reconnoitre, and not 'difficult to beat; the real body of it is ascertained to be at Freudenthal,
'fifteen miles to westward, southwestward; making towards Neisse,
'it is guessed, by the other or western road, which is the nearer to
'Glatz and to the Austrian force there.

'Had Neipperg known what was in Jägerndorf—! But he does 'not know. He marches on, next morning, at his usual slow rate;
'wide clouds of Pandours accompanying and preceding him; skirmish-
'ing-in upon all places' (upon Jägerndorf, for instance, though fifteen miles wide of their road), 'to ascertain if Prussians are there. One can 'judge whether Friedrich and Schwerin were thankful when the huge 'alarm produced nothing! "The mountain," as Friedrich says, "gave 'birth to a mouse;"—nay it was a "mouse" of essential vital use to 'Friedrich and Schwerin; a warning, That they must instantly collect 'themselves, men and goods; and begone one and all out of these 'parts, double-quick towards Neisse. Not now with the hope of be'sieging Neisse,—far from that;—but of getting their wide-scattered 'posts together thereabouts, and escaping destruction in detail!

'April 4th, Headquarters Neustadt. By violent exertion, with the

* Map at p. 238.

'sacrifice only of some remote little storehouses, all is rendezvoused at 'Jägerndorf, within two days; and this day they march; King and van-'guard reaching Neustadt, some twenty-five miles forward, some twenty 'still from Neisse. At Neustadt, the posts that had stood in that neigh-'bourhood are all assembled, and march with the King tomorrow. Of 'Neipperg, except by transitory contact with his Pandour clouds, they 'have seen nothing: his road is pretty much parallel to theirs, and 'some fifteen miles leftward, Glatzward; goes through Zuckmantel, 'Ziegenhals, straight upon Neisse.[22] Neipperg's men are wearied with the 'long climb out of Mähren; and he struggles towards Neisse as the first 'object;—holding upon Glatz and Lentulus with his left. Numerous 'orders have been speeded from the King's quarters, at Jägerndorf, and 'here at Neustadt; order especially to Holstein-Beck at Frankenstein, 'and to Kalkstein at Grotkau, How they are to unite, first with one 'another; and then to cross Neisse River, and unite with the King,— 'to which end there is already a Bridge laid for them, or about to be 'laid in good time.

'April 5th, Headquarters Steinau. Steinau is a little Town twenty 'miles east of Neisse, on the road to Kosel' (strongish place, on the Oder, some forty miles farther east): 'here Friedrich, with the main 'body, take their quarters; rearguard being still at Neustadt. Tem-'porary Bridge there is, ready or all but ready, at Sorgau' (twelve miles to north of us, on our left): 'by this Kalkstein, with his 10,000, 'comes punctually across; while other brigades from the Kosel side 'are also punctual in getting in; which is a great comfort: but of 'Holstein-Beck there is no vestige, nor did there ever appear any. 'Holstein, "whom none of the repeated orders sent him could reach," 'says Friedrich, "remained comfortably in his quarters; and looked 'at the Enemy rushing past him to right and left, without troubling 'his head with them."[23] The too easy-minded Holstein! Austrian 'Deserters inform us, That General Neipperg arrived today with his 'Army in Neisse; and has there been joined by Lentulus with the Glatz 'force, chiefly cavalry, a good many thousands. We may be attacked, 'then, this very night, if they are diligent? Friedrich marks-out ground 'and plan in such case, and how and where each is to rank himself. 'There came nothing of attack; but the poor little Village of Steinau, 'with so many troops in it and baggage-drivers stumbling about, takes 'fire; burns to ashes; "and we had great difficulty in saving the 'artillery and powder through the narrow streets, with the houses all 'burning on each hand."' Fancy it,—and the poor shrieking inhabit-ants; gone to silence long since with their shrieks, not the least whisper left of them. 'The Prussians bivouack on the field, each in the place 'that has been marked out. Night extremely cold.'

[22] Zuckmantel, 'Twitch-Cloak,' occurs more than once as a Town's name in those regions: name which, says my Dryasdust without smile visible, it got from robberies done on travellers, "twitchings of your cloak," with stand-and-deliver, as you cross those wild mountain spaces. (Zeiller, Beschreibung des Königreichs Boheim, Frank-furt, 1650;—a rather worthless old Book, like the rest of Zeiller's in that kind.)

[23] Œuvres de Frédéric, ii. 70.

In this poor Steinau was a Schloss, which also went up in fire; disclosing certain mysteries of an almost mythical nature to the German Public. It was the Schloss of a Gräfin von Callenberg; a dreadful old Dowager of Medea-Messalina type, who 'always wore pistols about her;' pistols, and latterly, with more and more constancy, a brandy-bottle;—who has been much on the tongues of men for a generation back. Herr Nüssler (readers recollect shifty Nüssler) knew her, in the way of business, at one time; with pity, it also with horror. Some weeks ago, she was, by the Austrian Commandant at Neisse, summoned out of this Schloss, as in correspondence with Prussian Officers: peasants breaking-in, tied her with ropes to the bed where she was; put bed and her into a farm-cart, and in that scandalous manner delivered her at Neisse to the Commandant; by which adventure, and its rages and unspeakabilities, the poor old Callenberg is since dead. And now the very Schloss is dead; and there is finis to a human dust-vortex, such as is sometimes noisy for a time. Perhaps Nüssler may again pass that way, if we wait.[24]

'April 6th, Headquarters Friedland. To Friedland on the 6th;—'and do not, as expected, get away next morning. Friedland is ten 'miles down the Neisse, which makes a bend of near ninety degrees 'opposite Steinau; and runs thence straight north for the Oder, which 'it reaches some dozen miles or more above Brieg. Both Steinau and 'Friedland are a good distance from the River; Friedland, the nearer 'of the two, with Sorgau Bridge direct west of it, is perhaps eight 'miles from that important structure. There, being now tolerably 'rendezvoused, and in strength for action, Friedrich purposes to cross 'Neisse River tomorrow; hoping perhaps to meet Holstein-Beck, and 'incorporate him; anxious, at any rate, to get between the Austrians 'and Ohlau, where his heavy Artillery, his Ammunition, not to men-'tion other indispensables, are lying. The peculiarity of Neipperg at 'this time is, that the ground he occupies bears no proportion to the 'ground he commands. His regular Horse are supposed to be the 'best in the world; and of the Pandour kind, who live, horse and man, 'mainly upon nothing (which means upon theft), his supplies are un-'limited. He sits like a volcanic reservoir, therefore, not like a com-'mon fire of such and such intensity and power to burn;—casts the 'ashes of him, on all sides, to many miles distance.

'Friday 7th April, Friedland (still Headquarters). Unluckily, on 'trying, there is no passage to be had at Sorgau. The Officer on charge 'there still holds the Bridge, but has been obliged to break away the 'farther end of it; "Lentulus and Dragoons, several thousands strong" '(such is the report), having taken post there. Friedrich commands 'that the Bridge be reinstated; fieldpieces to defend it; Prince Leopold 'to cross, and clear the ways. All Friday, Friedrich waiting at Fried-'land, was spent in these details. Leopold in due force started for 'Sorgau, himself with Cavalry in the van; Leopold did storm across, [24] Büsching, Beyträge, ii. 273 et sqq.

'and go charging and fencing, some space, on the other side; but, see'ing that it was in truth Lentulus, and Dragoons without limit, had to 'send report accordingly; and then to wind himself to this side again,
'on new order from the King. What is to be done, then? Here is 'no crossing. Friedrich decides to go down the River; he himself to 'Löwen, perhaps near twenty miles farther down, but where there is 'a Bridge and Highway leading over; Prince Leopold, with the heavier
'divisions and baggages, to Michelau, some miles nearer, and there to 'build his Pontoons and cross. Which was effected, with success.
'And so,

'Saturday 8th April, With great punctuality, the King and Leopold
'met at Michelau, both well across the Neisse. Here on Pontoons,
'Leopold had got across about noon; and precisely as he was finishing,
'the King's Column, which had crossed at Löwen, and come up the 'left bank again, arrived. The King, much content with Leopold's
'behaviour, nominates him General of Infantry, a stage higher in pro'motion, there and then. Brieg Blockade is, as natural, given up; the 'Blockading Body joining with the King, this morning, while he passed 'that way. From Holstein-Beck not the least whisper,—nor to him,
'if we knew it.

'Neipperg has quitted Neisse; but walks invisible within clouds of 'Pandours; nothing but guessing as to Neipperg's motions. Rightly
'swift, and awake to his business, Neipperg might have done, might 'still do, a stroke upon us here. But he takes it easy; marches hardly
'five miles a-day, since he quitted Neisse again. From Michelau,
'Friedrich for his part turns southwestward, in quest of Holstein and
'other interests; marches towards Grotkau, not intending much farther
'that night. Thick snow blowing in their faces, nothing to be seen
'ahead, the Prussian column tramps along.[25] In Leipe, a little Hamlet
'sidewards of the road, short way from Grotkau, our Hussar Vanguard
'had found Austrian Hussars; captured forty, and from them learned 'that the Austrian Army is in Grotkau; that they took Grotkau half 'an hour before, and are there! A poor Lieutenant Mitschepfal (whom 'I think Friedrich used to know in Reinsberg) lay in Grotkau, "with 'some sixty recruits and deserters," says Friedrich,—and with several 'hundreds of camp-labourers (intended for the trenches, which will not 'now be opened):—Mitschepfal made a stout defence; but, after three 'hours of it, had to give-in: and there is nothing now for us at Grot-
'kau. "Halt," therefore! Neipperg is evidently pushing towards 'Ohlau, towards Breslau, though in a leisurely way; there it will be-
'hove us to get the start of him, if humanly possible: To the right 'about, therefore, without delay! The Prussians repass Leipe (much 'to the wonder of its simple people); get along, some seven miles
'farther, on the road for Ohlau; and quarter, that night, in what handy
'villages there are; the King's Corps in two Villages, which he calls
'"Pogrel and Alsen,"'—which are to be found still on the Map as 'Pogarell and Alzenau,' on the road from Löwen towards Ohlau.

[25] Œuvres de Frédéric, ii. 156.

This is the end of that March into the Mountains, with Neisse Siege hanging triumphant ahead. These are the King's quarters, this wintry Spring night, Saturday 8th April 1741; and it is to be guessed there is more of care than of sleep provided for him there. Seldom, in his life, was Friedrich in a more critical position; and he well knows it, none better. And could have his remorses upon it,—were these of the least use in present circumstances. Here are two Letters which he wrote that night; veiling, we perceive, a very grim world of thoughts; betokening, however, a mind made up. Jordan, Prince August Wilhelm Heir-Apparent, and other fine individuals who shone in the Schweidnitz circle lately, are in Breslau, safe sheltered against this bad juncture; Maupertuis was not so lucky as to go with them.

The King to Prince August Wilhelm (in Breslau).

'Pogarell, 8th April 1741.

'My dearest Brother,—The Enemy has just got into Silesia; We 'are not more than a mile (quart de mille) from them. Tomorrow must 'decide our fortune.

'If I die, do not forget a Brother who has always loved you very 'tenderly. I recommend to you my most dear Mother, my Domestics, 'and my First Battalion' (Lifeguard of Foot, men picked from his own old Ruppin Regiment and from the disbanded Giants, star of all the 'Battalions).[26] 'Eichel and Schuhmacher' (Two of the Three Clerks) 'are informed of all my testamentary wishes. Remember me always, 'you; but console yourself for my death: the glory of the Prussian 'Arms, and the honour of the House have set me in action, and will 'guide me to my last moment. You are my sole Heir: I recommend 'to you, in dying, those whom I have the most loved during my life: 'Keyserling, Jordan, Wartensleben; Hacke, who is a very honest man; 'Fredersdorf' (Factotum), 'and Eichel, in whom you may place entire 'confidence. I bequeath 8,000 crowns (1,200*l.*), which I have with 'me, to my Domestics; but all that I have elsewhere depends on you. 'To each of my Brothers and Sisters make a present in my name; a 'thousand affectionate regards (amitiés et compliments) to my Sister of 'Baireuth. You know what I think on their score; and you know 'better than I could tell you, the tenderness and all the sentiments of 'most inviolable friendship with which I am, dearest Brother,

'Your faithful Brother and Servant till death,

'FÉDÉRIC.'[27]

[26] See Preuss, i. 144, iv. 309; Nicolai, Beschreibung von Berlin, iii. 1252.

[27] Œuvres de Frédéric, xxvi. 85; List of Friedrich's Testamentary arrangements in Note there,—Six in all, at different times, besides this.

The King to M. Jordan (in Breslau).

'Pogarell, 8th April 1741.

'My dear Jordan,—We are going to fight tomorrow. Thou know-'est the chances of war; the life of Kings not more regarded than that 'of private people. I know not what will happen to me.

'If my destiny is finished, remember a friend, who loves thee al-'ways tenderly: if Heaven prolong my days, I will write to thee after 'tomorrow, and thou wilt hear of our victory. Adieu, dear friend; I 'shall love thee till death.—FÉDÉRIC.'[28]

The King, we incidentally discover somewhere, 'had no sleep that night;' none, 'nor the next night either,'—such a crisis coming, still not come.

CHAPTER X.

BATTLE OF MOLLWITZ.

'TOMORROW,' Sunday, did not prove the Day of Fight, after all. Being a day of wild drifting snow, so that you could not see twenty paces, there was nothing for it but to sit quiet. The King makes all his dispositions; sketches out punctually, to the last item, where each is to station himself, how the Army is to advance in Four Columns, ready for Neipperg wherever he may be,—towards Ohlau at any rate, whither it is not doubted Neipperg is bent. These snowy six-and-thirty hours at Pogarell were probably, since the Cüstrin time, the most anxious of Friedrich's life.

Neipperg, for his part, struggles forward a few miles, this Sunday April 9th; the Prussians rest under shelter in the wild weather. Neipperg's headquarters, this night, are a small Village or Hamlet, called Mollwitz: there and in the adjacent Hamlets, chiefly in Laugwitz and Grüningen, his Army lodges itself:—he is now fairly got between us and Ohlau,—if, in the blowing drift, we knew it, or he knew it. But, in this confusion of the elements, neither party knows of the other: Neipperg has appointed that tomorrow, Monday 10th, shall be a rest-day:—appointment which could by no means be kept, as it turned out!

Friedrich had dispatched messengers to Ohlau, that the force there should join him; messengers are all captured. The like message had already gone to Brieg, some days before, and the Blockading Body, a good few thousands strong, quitted Brieg, as we saw, and effected their junction with him. All day, this Sunday 9th, it still snows and blows; you cannot see a yard before you. No hope now of Holstein-Beck. Not the least news from any quarter; Ohlau uncertain, too likely the wrong way: What is to be done? We are cut-off from our Magazines, have only provision for one other day. 'Had this weather lasted,' says an Austrian reporter of these things, 'his Majesty would have passed his time very ill.'[1]

[28] Œuvres de Frédéric, xvii. 98.

10th April 1741.

Of the Battle of Mollwitz, as indeed of all Friedrich's Battles, there are ample accounts new and old, of perfect authenticity and scientific exactitude; so that in regard to military points the due clearness is, on study, completely attainable. But as to personal or human details, we are driven back upon a miscellany of sources; most of which, indeed all of which except Nicolai, when he sparingly gives us anything, are of questionable nature; and, without intending to be dishonest, do run out into the mythical, and require to be used with caution. The latest and notablest of these, in regard to Mollwitz, is the pamphlet of a Dr. Fuchs; from which, in spite of its amazing quality, we expect to glean a serviceable item here and there.[2] It is definable as probably the most chaotic Pamphlet ever written; and in many places, by dint of uncorrected printing, bad grammar, bad spelling, bad sense, and in short, of intrinsic darkness in so vivacious a humour, it has become abstruse as Sanscrit; and really is a sharp test of what knowledge you otherwise have of the subject. Might perhaps be used in that way, by the Examining Military Boards, in Prussia and elsewhere, if no other use lie in it? Fuchs's own contributions, mere ignorance, folly and credulity, are not worth interpreting: but he has printed, and in the same abstruse form, one or two curious Parish Manuscripts, particularly a "History" of this War, privately jotted down by the then Schoolmaster of Moll-

[1] Feldzüge der Preussen (the complete Title is, Sammlung ungedruckter Nachrichten so die Geschichte der Feldzüge der Preussen von 1740 bis 1779 erläutern, or in English words, Collection of unprinted Narratives which elucidate the Prussian Campaigns from 1740 to 1779: 5 voll. Dresden, 1782-5), i. 33. Excellent Narratives, modest, brief, effective (from Private Diaries and the like; many of them given also in Seyfarth); well worth perusal by the studious military man, and creditably characteristic of the Prussian writers of them and actors in them.

[2] Jubelschrift zur Feier (Centenary) der Schlacht bei Mollwitz, 10 April 1741 von Dr. Medicinæ Fuchs (Brieg, 10th April 1841).

witz, a good simple accurate old fellow-creature; through whose eyes it is here and there worth while to look. In regard to Fuchs himself, a late Tourist says:

'This "Centenary-Celebration Pamphlet" (Celebration itself, so 'obtuse was the Country, did not take effect) was by a zealous, noisy 'but not wise, old Medical Gentleman of these parts, called Dr. Fuchs '(Fox); who had set his heart on raising, by subscription, a proper 'National Monument on the Field of Mollwitz, and so closing his old 'career. Subscriptions did not take, in that April 1841, nor in the 'following months or twelvemonths: the zealous Doctor, therefore, 'indignantly drew his own purse; got a big Obelisk of Granite hewn 'ready, with suitable Inscription on it; carted his big Obelisk from the 'quarries of Strehlen; assembled the Country round it, on Mollwitz 'Field; and passionately discoursed and pleaded, That at least the 'Country should bring block-and-tackle, with proper framework, and 'set up this Obelisk on the Pedestal he had there built for it. The 'Country listened cheerfully (for the old Doctor was a popular man, 'clever though flighty); but the Country was again obtuse in the way 'of active furtherance, and would not even bring block-and-tackle. The 'old Doctor had to answer, "Well, then!" and go on his way on 'more serious errands. The cattle have much undermined, and rubbed 'down, his poor Pedestal, which is of rubble-work; his Obelisk still 'lies mournfully horizontal, uninjured;—and really ought to be set up, 'by some parish-rate, or effort of the community otherwise.'[3]

From the old Mollwitz Schoolmaster we distil the following:

'Mollwitz, Sunday 9th April. Country, for two days back, was in 'new alarm by the Austrian Garrison of Brieg now left at liberty, who 'sallied out upon the Villages about, and plundered black-cattle, sheep, 'grain, and whatever they could come at. But this day (Sunday) in 'Mollwitz the whole Austrian Army was upon us. First, there went '300 Hussars through the Village to Grüningen, who quartered them-'selves there; and rushed hither and thither into houses, robbing and 'plundering. From one they took his best horses, from another they 'took linen, clothes, and other furnitures and victual. General Neu-'burg' (Neipperg) 'halted here at Mollwitz, with the whole Army; 'before the Village, in mind to quarter. And quarter was settled, so 'that a Bauer' (Plough-Farmer) 'got four to five companies to lodge, 'and a Gärtner' (Spade-Farmer) 'two or three hundred cavalry. The 'houses were full of Officers, the Gärte' (Garths) 'and the Fields full 'of horsemen and baggage; and all round, you saw nothing but fires 'burning; the Zäune' (wooden railings) 'were instantly torn down for 'firewood; the hay, straw, barley and haver, were eaten away, and 'brought to nothing; and everything from the barns was carried out.

[3] Tourist's Note (Brieg, 1858).

10th April 1741.

'And, as the whole Army could not lodge itself with us, 1,100 Infantry 'quartered at Laugwitz; Bärzdorf got 400 Cavalry; and this day, no-'body knew what would come of it.'[4]

Monday morning, the Prussians are up betimes; King Friedrich, as above noted, had not, or had hardly at all, slept during those two nights, such his anxieties. This morning, all is calm, sleeked out into spotless white; Pogarell and the world are wrapt as in a winding-sheet, near two feet of snow on the ground. Air hard and crisp; a hot sun possible about noon season. 'By daybreak' we are all astir, rendezvousing, ranking,—into Four Columns; ready to advance in that fashion for battle, or for deploying into battle, wherever the Enemy turn up. The orders were all given overnight, two nights ago; were all understood, too, and known to be rhadamanthine; and, down to the lowest pioneer, no man is uncertain what to do. If we but knew where the Enemy is; on which side of us; what doing, what intending?

Scouts, General-Adjutants are out on the quest; to no purpose hitherto. One young General-Adjutant, Saldern, whose name we shall know again, has ridden northward, has pulled bridle some way north of Pogarell; hangs, gazing diligently through his spyglass, there;—can see nothing but a Plain of silent snow, with sparse bearding of bushes (nothing like a hedge in these countries), and here and there a tree, the miserable skeleton of a poplar:—when happily, owing to an Austrian Dragoon—Be pleased to accept (in abridged form) the poor old Schoolmaster's account of a small thing:

'Austrian Dragoon of the regiment Althan, native of Kriesewitz 'in this neighbourhood, who was billeted in Christopher Schönwitz's, 'had been much in want of a clean shirt, and other interior outfit; and 'had, last night, imperatively dispatched the man Schölzke, a farm-'servant of the said Christopher's, off to his, the Dragoon's, Father in 'Kriesewitz, to procure such shirt or outfit, and to return early with 'the same; under penalty of—Schölzke and his master dare not think 'under what penalty. Schölzke, floundering homewards with the out-'fit from Kriesewitz, flounders at this moment into Saldern's sphere of 'vision: "Whence, whither?" asks Saldern: "Dost thou know where 'the Austrians are?" "Recht gut: in Mollwitz, whither I am going!" 'Saldern takes him to the King,—and that was the first clear light 'his Majesty had on the matter.'[5] That or something equivalent, indisputably was; Saldern and 'a Peasant,' the account of it in all the Books.

[4] Extract in Fuchs, p. 6. [5] Fuchs, pp. 6, 7.

The King says to this Peasant, "Thou shalt ride with me today!" And Schölzke, Ploschke others call him,—heavyfooted rational biped knowing the ground there practically, every yard of it,—did, as appears, attend the King all morning; and do service, that was recognisable long years afterwards. 'For always,' say the Books, 'when the 'King held review here, Ploschke failed not to make appearance on 'the field of Pogarell, and get recognition and a gift from his Majesty.'

At break of day the ranking and arranging began. Pogarell clock is near striking ten, when the last squadron or battalion quits Pogarell; and the Four Columns, punctiliously correct, are all under way. Two on each side of Ohlau Highway; steadily advancing, with pioneers ahead to clear any obstacle there may be. Few obstacles; here and there a little ditch (where Ploschke's advice may be good, under the sleek of the snow), no fences, smooth wide Plain, nothing you would even call a knoll in it for many miles ahead and around. Mollwitz is some seven miles north from Pogarell; intermediate lie dusty fractions of Villages more than one; two miles or more from Mollwitz we come to Pampitz on our left, the next considerable, if any of them can be counted considerable.

'All these Dorfs, and indeed most German ones,' says my Tourist, 'are made on one type; an agglomerate of dusty farmyards, with their 'stalls and barns; all the farmyards huddled together in two rows; a 'broad negligent road between, seldom mended, never swept except 'by the elements. Generally there is nothing to be seen, on each hand, 'but thatched roofs, dead clay walls and rude wooden gates; some-'times a poor public-house, with probable beer in it; never any shop, 'nowhere any patch of swept pavement, or trim gathering-place for 'natives of a social gossipy turn: the road lies sleepy, littery, good 'only for utilitarian purposes. In the middle of the Village stands 'Church and Churchyard, with probably some gnarled trees around it: 'Church often larger than you expected; the Churchyard, always fenced 'with high stone-and-mortar wall, is usually the principal military post 'of the place. Mollwitz, at the present day, has something of white-'wash here and there; one of the farmer people, or more, wearing a 'civilised prosperous look. The belfry offers you a pleasant view: the 'roofs and steeples of Brieg, pleasantly visible to eastward; villages 'dotted about, Laugwitz, Bärzdorf, Hermsdorf, clear to your inquiring: 'and to westward, and to southward, tops of Hill-country in the dis-'tance. Westward, twenty miles off, are pleasant Hills; and among 'them, if you look well, shadowy Town-spires, which you are assured 'are Strehlen, a place also of interest in Friedrich's History.—Your 'belfry itself, in Mollwitz, is old, but not unsound; and the big iron 'clock grunts heavily at your ear, or perhaps bursts out in a too deafen-

'ing manner, while you study the topographies. Pampitz, too, seems 'prosperous, in its littery way; the Church is bigger and newer,'—owing to an accident we shall hear of soon;—'Country all about seems 'farmed with some industry, but with shallow ploughing; liable to 'drought. It is very sandy in quality; shorn of umbrage; painfully 'naked to an English eye.' That is the big champaign, coated with two feet of snow, where a great Action is now to go forward.

Neipperg, all this while, is much at his ease on this white resting-day. He is just sitting down to dinner at the Dorf-schulze's (Village Provost, or miniature Mayor of Mollwitz), a composed man; when—rockets or projectiles, and successive anxious sputterings from the steeple-tops of Brieg, are hastily reported: what can it mean? Means little perhaps;—Neipperg sends out a Hussar party to ascertain, and composedly sets himself to dine. In a little while his Hussar party will come galloping back, faster than it went; faster and fewer;—and there will be news for Neipperg during dinner! Better have had one idle fellow, one of your 20,000, on the Belfry-top here looking out, though it was a rest-day?—

The truth is, the Prussian advance goes on with punctilious exactitude, by no means rapidly. Colonel Count von Rothenburg,—the same whom we lately heard of in Paris as a miracle of gambling,—he now here, in a new capacity, is warily leading the Vanguard of Dragoons; warily, with the Four Columns well to rear of him: the Austrian Hussar party came upon Rothenburg, not two miles from Mollwitz; and suddenly drew bridle.* Them Rothenburg tumbles to the right-about, and chases;—finds, on advancing, the Austrian Army totally unaware. It is thought, had Rothenburg dashed forward, and sent word to the rearward to dash forward at their swiftest, the Austrian Army might have been cut in pieces here, and never have got together to try battle at all. But Rothenburg had no orders; nay, had orders Not to get into fighting;—nor had Friedrich himself, in this his first Battle, learned that feline or leonine promptitude of spring which he subsequently manifested. Far from it! Indeed this punctilious deliberation, and slow exactitude as on the review-ground, is wonderful and noteworthy at the first start of Friedrich;—the faithful apprentice-hand still rigorous to the rules of the old shop. Ten years hence, twenty years hence, had Friedrich found Neipperg in this condition, Neipperg's account had been soon settled!—Rothenburg drove back the Hussars, all manner of successive Hussar parties, and kept steadily ahead of the main battle, as he had been bidden.

* Plan at p. 238.

Pampitz Village being now passed, and in rear of them to left, the Prussian Columns halt for some instants; burst into field-music; take to deploying themselves into line. There is solemn wheeling, shooting-out to right and left, done with spotless precision: once in line, — in two lines, 'each three men deep,' lines many yards apart, — they will advance on Mollwitz; still solemnly, field-music guiding, and banners spread. Which will be a work of time. That the King's frugal field-dinner was shot away, from its camp-table near Pampitz (as Fuchs has heard), is evidently mythical; and even impossible, the Austrians having yet no cannon within miles of him; and being intent on dining comfortably themselves, not on firing at other people's dinners.

Fancy Neipperg's state of mind, busy beginning dinner in the little Schulze's, or Town-Provost's house, when the Hussars dashed-in at full gallop, shouting "Der Feind, The Enemy! All in march there; vanguard this side of Pampitz; killed forty of us!" — Quick, your Plan of Battle, then? Whitherward; How; What? answer or perish! Neipperg was infinitely struck; dropt knife and fork: "Send for Römer, General of the Horse!" Römer did the indispensable: a swift man, not apt to lose head. Römer's battle-plan, I should hope, is already made; or it will fare ill with Neipperg and him. But beat, ye drummers; gallop, ye aides-de-camp as for life! The first thing is to get our Force together; and it lies scattered about in Three other Villages besides Mollwitz, miles apart. Neipperg's trumpets clangour, his aides-de-camp gallop: he has his left wing formed, and the other parts in a state of rapid genesis, Horse and Foot pouring-in from Laugwitz, Bärzdorf, Grüningen, before the Prussians have quite done deploying themselves, and got well within shot of him. Römer, by birth a Saxon gentleman, by all accounts a superior soldier and excellent General of Horse, commands this Austrian left wing; General Göldlein,[6] a Swiss veteran of good parts, presiding over the Infantry in that quarter. Neipperg himself, were he once complete, will command the right wing.

Neipperg is to be in two lines, as the Prussians are, with [6] (Anonymous) Maria Theresa (already cited), p. 8 n.

10th April 1741.

horse on each wing, which is orthodox military order. His length of front, I should guess, must have been something better than two English miles: a sluggish Brook, called of Laugwitz, from the Village of that name which lies some way across, is on his right hand; sluggish, boggy; stagnating towards the Oder in those parts: — improved farming has, in our time, mostly dried the strip of bog, and made it into coarse meadow, which is rather a relief amid the dry sandy element. Neipperg's right is covered by that. His left rests on the Hamlet of Grüningen, a mile-and-half northeast of Mollwitz;—meant to have rested on Hermsdorf nearly east, but the Prussians have already taken that up. The sun coming more and more round to west of south (for it is now past noon) shines right in Neipperg's face, and is against him: how the wind is, nobody mentions, — probably there was no wind. His regular Cavalry, 8,600, outnumbers twice or more that of the Prussians, not to mention their quality; and he has fewer Infantry, somewhat in proportion;—the entire force on each side is scarcely above 20,000, the Prussians slightly in majority by count. In field-pieces Neipperg is greatly outnumbered; the Prussians having about threescore, he only eighteen.[7] And now here are the Prussians, close upon our left wing, not yet in contact with the right,—which in fact is not yet got into existence;—thank Heaven they have not come before our left got into existence, as our right (if you knew it) has not yet quite finished doing!—

The Prussians, though so ready for deploying, have had their own difficulties and delays. Between the boggy Brook of Laugwitz on their left, and the Village of Hermsdorf, two miles distant, on which their right wing is to lean, there proves not to be room enough;[8] and then, owing to mistake of Schulenburg (our old pipe-clay friend, who commands the right wing of Horse here, and is not up in time), there is too much room. Not room enough for all the Infantry, we say: the last Three Battalions of the front line therefore, the three on the outmost right, wheel round, and stand athwart; en potence (as soldiers say), or at right angles to the first line; hanging to it like a kind of lid in that part,—between Schulenburg and them,—had Schulenburg come up. Thus are the three battalions got rid of at least; 'they cap the First Prussian line rectangularly, like a lid,' says my Authority,—lid which does not reach to the Second Line by a good way. This accidental arrangement had material effects on the right wing. Unfortunate Schulenburg did at last come up:—had he miscalculated the distances, then? Once on the ground, he will find he does not reach to Hermsdorf after all, and that there is now too much room! What his degree of fault was I know not; Friedrich has long been dissatisfied with these dragoons of Schulenburg; "good for nothing, I always told you" (at that Skirmish of Baumgarten): and now here is the General himself fallen blundering! —In respect of Horse, the Austrians are more than two to one; to make out our deficiency, the King, imitating something he had read about Gustavus Adolphus, intercalates the Horse-Squadrons, on each wing, with two Battalions of Grenadiers, and so lengthens them;—'a manœuvre not likely to be again imitated,' he admits.

[7] Kausler, Atlas der merkwürdigsten Schlachten, p. 232.
[8] Œuvres de Frédéric, ii. 73.

All these movements and arrangements are effected above a mile from Mollwitz, no enemy yet visible. Once effected, we advance again with music sounding, sixty pieces of artillery well in front,—steady, steady!—across the floor of snow which is soon beaten smooth enough, the stage, this day, of a great adventure. And now there is the Enemy's left wing, Römer and his Horse; their right wing wider away, and not yet, by a good space, within cannon-range of us. It is towards Two of the afternoon; Schulenburg now on his ground, laments that he will not reach to Hermsdorf;—but it may be dangerous now to attempt repairing that error? At Two of the clock, being now fairly within distance, we salute Römer and the Austrian left, with all our sixty cannon; and the sound of drums and clarionets is drowned in universal artillery thunder. Incessant, for they take (by order) to "swift-shooting," which is almost of the swiftness of musketry in our Prussian practice; and from sixty cannon, going at that rate, we may fancy some effect. The Austrian Horse of the left wing do not like it; all the less as the Austrians, rather short of artillery, have nothing yet to reply with.

No Cavalry can stand long there, getting shivered in that way; in such a noise, were there nothing more. "Are we to stand here like milestones, then, and be all shot without a stroke struck?" "Steady!" answers Römer. But nothing can keep them steady: "To be shot like dogs (wie Hünde)! For God's sake (Um Gottes Willen), lead us forward, then, to have a stroke at them!"—in tones ever more plangent, plaintively indignant; growing ungovernable. And Römer can get no orders; Neipperg is on the extreme right, many things still to settle there; and here is the cannon-thunder going, and soon their very musketry will open. And—and there is Schulenburg, for one thing, stretching himself out eastwards (rightwards) to get hold of Hermsdorf; thinking this an opportunity for the manœuvre. "Forward!" cries Römer; and his Thirty Squadrons, like bottled whirlwind now at last let loose, dash upon Schulenburg's poor Ten (five of them of Schulenburg's own regiment),—who are turned sideways too, trotting towards Hermsdorf, at the wrong moment,—and dash them into wild ruin. That must have been a charge! That was the beginning of hours of chaos, seemingly irretrievable, in that Prussian right wing.

For the Prussian Horse fly wildly; and it is in vain to rally. The King is among them; has come in hot haste, conjuring and commanding: poor Schulenburg addresses his own regiment, "Oh shame, shame! shall it be told, then?" rallies his own regiment, and some others; charges fiercely in with them again; gets a sabre-slash across the face,—does not mind the sabre-slash, small bandaging will do;—gets a bullet through the head (or through the heart, it is not said which);[9] and falls down dead; his regiment going to the winds again, and his care of it and of other things concluding in this honourable manner. Nothing can rally that right wing; or the more you rally, the worse it fares: they are clearly no match for Römer, these Prussian Horse. They fly along the front of their own First Line of Infantry, they fly between the Two Lines; Römer chasing,—till the fire of the Infantry (intolerable to our enemies, and hitting some even of our fugitive friends) repels him. For the notable point in all this was the conduct of the Infantry; and how it stood in these wild vortexes of ruin; impregnable, immovable, as if every man of it were stone; and steadily poured-out deluges of fire,—'five Prussian shots for two Austrian:'—such is perfect discipline against imperfect; and the iron ramrod against the wooden.

The intolerable fire repels Römer, when he trenches on the Infantry: however, he captures nine of the Prussian sixty guns; has scattered their Horse to the winds; and charges again and again, hoping to break the Infantry too,—till a bullet kills him, the gallant Römer; and some other has to charge and try. It was thought, had Göldlein with his Austrian Infantry advanced to support Römer at this juncture, the Battle had been gained. Five times, before Römer fell and after, the Austrians charged here; tried the Second Line too; tried once to take Prince Leopold in rear there. But Prince Leopold faced round, gave intolerable fire; on one face as on the other, he, or the Prussian Infantry anywhere, is not to be broken. 'Prince Friedrich,' one of the Margraves of Schwedt, King's Cousin, whom we did not know before, fell in these wild rallyings and wrestlings; 'by a cannon-ball, at the King's hand,' not said otherwise where. He had come as Volunteer, few weeks ago, out of Holland, where he was a rising General: he has met his fate here,—and Margraf Karl, his Brother, who also gets wounded, will be a mournful man tonight.

[9] Helden-Geschichte, i. 899.

The Prussian Horse, this right wing of it, is a ruined body; boiling in wild disorder, flooding rapidly away to rearward,—which is the safest direction to retreat upon. They 'sweep away the King's person with them,' say some cautious people; others say, what is the fact, that Schwerin entreated, and as it were commanded, the King to go; the Battle being, to all appearance, irretrievable. Go he did, with small escort, and on a long ride,—to Oppeln, a Prussian post, thirty-five miles rearward, where there is a Bridge over the Oder and a safe country beyond. So much is indubitable; and that he dispatched an Aide-de-Camp to gallop into Brandenburg, and tell the Old Dessauer, "Bestir yourself! Here all seems lost!"—and vanished from the Field, doubtless in very desperate humour. Upon which the extraneous world has babbled a good deal, "Cowardice! Wanted courage: Haha!" in its usual foolish way; not worth answer from him or from us. Friedrich's demeanour, in that disaster of his right wing, was furious despair rather; and neither Schulenburg nor Margraf Friedrich, nor any of the captains, killed or left living, was supposed to have sinned by "cowardice" in a visible degree!—

Indisputable it is, though there is deep mystery upon it, the King vanishes from Mollwitz Field at this point for sixteen hours, into the regions of Myth, "into Fairyland," as would once have been said; but reappears unharmed in tomorrow's daylight: at which time, not sooner, readers shall hear what little is to be said of this obscure and much-disfigured small affair. For the present we hasten back to Mollwitz,—where the murderous thunder rages unabated all this while; the very noise of it alarming mankind for thirty miles round. At Breslau, which is thirty good miles off, horrible dull grumble was heard from the southern quarter ('still better, if you put a staff in the ground, and set your ear to it'); and from the steeple-tops, there was dim cloudland of powder-smoke discernible in the horizon there. 'At Liegnitz,' which is twice the distance, 'the earth sensibly shook,'[10]—at least the air did, and the nerves of men.

'Had Göldlein but advanced with his Foot, in support of gallant Römer!' say the Austrian Books. But Göldlein did not advance; nor is it certain he would have found advantage in so doing: Göldlein, where he stands, has difficulty enough to hold his own. For the notable circumstance, miraculous to military men, still is, How the Prussian Foot (men who had never been in fire, but whom Friedrich Wilhelm had drilled for twenty years) stand their ground, in this distraction of the Horse. Not even the Two outlying Grenadier Battalions will give way: those poor intercalated Grenadiers, when their Horse fled on the right and on the left, they stand there, like a fixed stone-dam in that wild whirlpool of ruin. They fix bayonets, 'bring their two field-pieces to flank' (Winterfeld was Captain there), and, from small arms and big, deliver such a fire as was very unexpected. Nothing to be made of Winterfeld and them. They invincibly hurl back charge after charge; and, with dogged steadiness, manœuvre themselves into the general Line again; or into contact with the Three superfluous Battalions, arranged en potence, whom we heard of. Those Three, ranked athwart in this right wing ('like a lid,' between First Line and second), maintained themselves in like impregnable fashion,—Winterfeld commanding;—and proved unexpectedly, thinks Friedrich, the saving of the whole. For they also stood their ground immovable, like rocks; steadily spouting fire-torrents. Five successive charges storm upon them, fruitless: "Steady, meine Kinder; fix bayonets, handle ramrods! There is the Horse-deluge thundering in upon you; reserve your fire, till you see the whites of their eyes, and get the word; then give it them, and again give it them : see whether any man or any horse can stand it !"

[10] Helden-Geschichte; and Jordan's Letter, infrà.

Neipperg, soon after Römer fell, had ordered Göldlein forward : Göldlein with his Infantry did advance, gallantly enough ; but to no purpose. Göldlein was soon shot dead ; and his Infantry had to fall back again, ineffectual or worse. Iron ramrods against wooden ; five shots to two : what is there but falling back ? Neipperg sent fresh Horse from his right wing, with Berlichingen, a new famed General of Horse ; Neipperg is furiously bent to improve his advantage, to break those Prussians, who are mere musketeers left bare, and thinks that will settle the account : but it could in no wise be done. The Austrian Horse, after their fifth trial, renounce charging ; fairly refuse to charge any more ; and withdraw dispirited out of ball-range, or in search of things not impracticable. The Hussar part of them did something of plunder to rearward ;—and, besides poor Maupertuis's adventure (of which by and by), and an attempt on the Prussian baggage and knapsacks, which proved to be 'too well guarded,'—'burnt the Church of Pampitz,' as some small consolation. The Prussians had stript their knapsacks, and left them in Pampitz : the Austrians, it was noticed, stript theirs in the Field ; built walls of them, and fired behind the same, in a kneeling, more or less protected posture,—which did not avail them much.

In fact, the Austrian Infantry too, all Austrians, hour after hour, are getting wearier of it : neither Infantry nor Cavalry can stand being riddled by swift shot in that manner. In spite of their knapsack walls, various regiments have shrunk out of ball-range ; and several cannot, by any persuasion, be got to come into it again. Others, who do reluctantly advance, —see what a figure they make ; man after man edging away as he can, so that the regiment 'stands forty to eighty men deep, with lanes through it every two or three yards ;' permeable everywhere to Cavalry, if we had them ; and turning nothing to the Enemy but colour-sergeants and bare poles of a regiment ! And Römer is dead, and Göldlein of the Infantry is dead. And on their right wing, skirted by that marshy Brook of Laugwitz,—Austrian right wing had been weakened by detachments, when Berlichingen rode off to succeed Römer, —the Austrians are suffering : Posadowsky's Horse (among whom is Rothenburg, once vanguard), strengthened by remnants who have rallied here, are at last prospering, after reverses. And the Prussian fire of small arms, at such rate, has lasted now for five hours. The Austrian Army, becoming instead of a web a mere series of flying tatters, forming into stripes or lanes in the way we see, appears to have had about enough.

These symptoms are not hidden from Schwerin. His own ammunition, too, he knows is running scarce, and fighters here and there are searching the slain for cartridges :—Schwerin closes his ranks, trims and tightens himself a little ; breaks forth into universal field-music, and with banners spread, starts in mass wholly, "Forwards!" Forwards towards these Austrians and the setting sun.

An intelligent Austrian Officer, writing next week from Neisse,[11] confesses he never saw anything more beautiful. 'I 'can well say, I never in my life saw anything more beautiful. 'They marched with the greatest steadiness, arrow-straight, 'and their front like a line (schnurgleich), as if they had been 'upon parade. The glitter of their clear arms shone strangely 'in the setting sun, and the fire from them went on no other-'wise than a continued peal of thunder.' Grand picture indeed ; but not to be enjoyed as a Work of Art, for it is coming upon us ! 'The spirits of our Army sank altogether,' continues he ; 'the Foot plainly giving way, Horse refusing to come for-'ward, all things wavering towards dissolution :'—so that Neipperg, to avoid worse, gives the word to go ;—and they roll off at double-quick time, through Mollwitz, over Laugwitz Bridge and Brook, towards Grotkau by what routes they can. The sun is just sunk ; a quarter to eight, says the intelligent Austrian Officer,—while the Austrian Army, much to its amazement, tumbles forth in this bad fashion.

They had lost nine of their own cannon, and all of those Prussian nine which they once had, except one : eight cannon minus, in all. Prisoners of them were few, and none of much mark : two Fieldmarshals, Römer and Göldlein, lie among the dead ; four more of that rank are wounded. Four standards too are gone ; certain kettledrums and the like trophies, not in great number. Lieutenant-General Browne was of these retreating Austrians ; a little fact worth noting : of his actions this day, or of his thoughts (which latter surely must have been considerable), no hint anywhere. The Austrians were not much chased; though they might have been,—fresh Cavalry (two Ohlau regiments, drawn hither by the sound[12]) having hung about to rear of them, for some time past; unable to get into the Fight, or to do any good till now. Schwerin, they say, though he had two wounds, was for pursuing vigorously: but Leopold of Anhalt over-persuaded him; urged the darkness, the uncertainty. Berlichingen, with their own Horse, still partly covered their rear; and the Prussians, Ohlauers included, were but weak in that branch of the service. Pursuit lasted little more than two miles, and was never hot. The loss of men, on both sides, was not far from equal, and rather in favour of the Austrian side:—Austrians counted in killed, wounded and missing, 4,410 men; Prussians 4,613;[13]—but the Prussians bivouacked on the ground, or quartered in these Villages, with victory to crown them, and the thought that their hard day's-work had been well done. Besides Margraf Friedrich, Volunteer from Holland, there lay among the slain Colonel Count von Finckenstein (Old Tutor's Son), King's friend from boyhood, and much loved. He was of the six whom we saw consulting at the door at Reinsberg, during a certain ague-fit; and he now rests silent here, while the matter has only come thus far.

[11] Feldzüge der Preussen (above cited), i. 38.

Such was Mollwitz, the first Battle for Silesia; which had to cost many Battles first and last. Silesia will be gained, we can expect, by fighting of this kind in an honest cause. But here is something already gained, which is considerable, and about which there is no doubt. A new Military Power, it would appear, has come upon the scene; the Gazetteer-and-Diplomatic world will have to make itself familiar with a name not much heard of hitherto among the Nations. "A Nation which can fight," think the Gazetteers; "fight almost as the very Swedes did; and is led on by its King too,—who may prove, in his way, a very Charles XII., or small Macedonia's Madman, for aught one knows?" In which latter branch of their prognostic the Gazetteers were much out.—

The Fame of this Battle, which is now so sunk out of memory, was great in Europe; and struck, like a huge war-gong, [12] Interesting correct account of their movements and adventures this day and some previous days, in Nicolai, Anekdoten, ii. 142-148.

[13] Orlich, i. 108; Kausler, p. 235, correct; Helden-Geschichte, i. 895, incorrect.

with long resonance, through the general ear. M. de Voltaire had run across to Lille in those Spring days: there is a good Troop of Players in Lille; a Niece, Madame Denis, wife of some Military Commissariat Denis, important in those parts, can lodge the divine Emilie and me;—and one could at last see Mahomet, after five years of struggling, get upon the boards, if not yet in Paris by a great way, yet in Lille, which is something. Mahomet is getting upon the boards on those terms; and has proceeded, not amiss, through an Act or two, when a Note from the King of Prussia was handed to Voltaire, announcing the victory of Mollwitz. Which delightful Note Voltaire stopt the performance till he read to the Audience: "Bravissimo!" answered the Audience. "You will see," said M. de Voltaire to the friends about him, "this Piece at Mollwitz will make mine succeed:" which proved to be the fact.[14] For the French are Anti-Austrian; and smell great things in the wind. "That man is mad, your Most Christian Majesty?" "Not quite; or at any rate not mad only!" think Louis and his Belleisles now.

Dimly poring in those old Books, and squeezing one's way into face-to-face view of the extinct Time, we begin to notice what a clangorous rumour was in Mollwitz to the then generation of mankind;—betokening many things; universal European War, as the first thing. Which duly came to pass; as did, at a slower rate, the ulterior thing, not yet so apparent, that indeed a new hour had struck on the Time Horologe, that a new Epoch had risen. Yes, my friends. New Charles XII. or not, here truly has a new Man and King come upon the scene: capable perhaps of doing something? Slumberous Europe, rotting amid its blind pedantries, its lazy hypocrisies, conscious and unconscious: this man is capable of shaking it a little out of its stupid refuges of lies, and ignominious wrappages and bed-clothes, which will be its grave-clothes otherwise; and of intimating to it, afar off, that there is still a Veracity in Things, and a Mendacity in Sham-Things, and that the difference of the two is infinitely more considerable than was supposed.

This Mollwitz is a most deliberate, regulated, ponderously impressive (gravitätisch) Feat of Arms, as the reader sees; done all by Regulation methods, with orthodox exactitude; in a slow, weighty, almost pedantic, but highly irrefragable manner. It is the triumph of Prussian Discipline; of military orthodoxy well put in practice: the honest outcome of good natural stuff in those Brandenburgers, and of the supreme virtues of Drill. Neipperg and his Austrians had much despised Prussian soldiering: "Keep our soup hot," cried they, on running out this day to rank themselves; "hot a little, till we drive these fellows to the Devil!" That was their opinion, about noon this day: but that is an opinion they have renounced for all remaining days and years.—It is a Victory due properly to Friedrich Wilhelm and the Old Dessauer, who are far away from it. Friedrich Wilhelm, though dead, fights here, and the others only do his bidding on this occasion. His Son, as yet, adds nothing of his own; though he will ever henceforth begin largely adding,—right careful withal to lose nothing, for the Friedrich Wilhelm contribution is invaluable, and the basis of everything:—but it is curious to see in what contrast this first Battle of Friedrich's is with his latter and last ones.

[14] Voltaire (Œuvres (Vie Privée), ii. 74.

Considering the Battle of Mollwitz, and then, in contrast, the intricate Pragmatic Sanction, and what their consequences were and their antecedents, it is curious once more! This, then, is what the Pragmatic Sanction has come to? Twenty years of world-wide diplomacy, cunningly-devised spider-threads overnetting all the world, have issued here. Your Congresses of Cambray, of Soissons, your Grumkow-Seckendorf Macchiavelisms, all these might as well have lain in their bed. Real Pragmatic Sanction would have been, A well-trained Army and your Treasury full. Your Treasury is empty (nothing in it but those foolish 200,000 English guineas, and the passionate cry for more): and your Army is not trained as this Prussian one; cannot keep its ground against this one. Of all those long-headed Potentates, simple Friedrich Wilhelm, son of Nature, who had the honesty to do what Nature taught him, has come out gainer. You all laughed at him as a fool: do you begin to see now who was wise, who fool? He has an Army that 'advances on you with glittering musketry, steady as on 'the parade-ground, and pours out fire like one continuous 'thunder-peal;' so that, strange as it seems, you find there will actually be nothing for you but—taking to your heels, shall we say?—rolling off with dispatch, as second-best! These things are of singular omen. Here stands one that will avenge Friedrich Wilhelm,—if Friedrich Wilhelm were not already sufficiently avenged by the mere verdict of facts, which is palpably coming out, as Time peels the wiggeries away from them more and more. Mollwitz and such places are full of veracity; and no head is so thick as to resist conviction in that kind.

Of Friedrich's Disappearance into Fairyland, in the Interim; and of Maupertuis's similar Adventure.

Of the King's Flight, or sudden disappearance into Fairyland, during this first Battle, the King himself, who alone could have told us fully, maintained always rigorous silence, and nowhere drops the least hint. So that the small fact has come down to us involved in a great bulk of fabulous cobwebs, mostly of an ill-natured character, set a-going by Voltaire, Valori and others (which fabulous process, in the good-natured form, still continues itself); and, except for Nicolai's good industry (in his Anekdoten-Book), we should have difficulty even in guessing, not to say understanding, as is now partly possible. The few real particulars,—and those do verify themselves, and hang perfectly together, when the big globe of fable is burnt off from them,—are to the following effect.

"Battle lost," said Schwerin: "but what is the loss of a Battle to that of your Majesty's own Person? For Heaven's sake, go; get across the Oder; be you safe, till this decide itself!" That was reasonable counsel. If defeated, Schwerin can hope to retreat upon Ohlau, upon Breslau, and save the Magazines. This side the Oder, all will be movements, a whirlpool of Hussars; but beyond the Oder, all is quiet, open. To Ohlau, to Glogau, nay home to Brandenburg and the Old Dessauer with his Camp at Göttin, the road is free, by the other side of the Oder.—Schwerin and Prince Leopold urging him, the King did ride away; at what hour, with what suite, or with what adventures (not mostly fabulous) is not known:—but it was towards Löwen, fifteen miles off (where he crossed Neisse River, the other day); and thence towards Oppeln, on the Oder, eighteen miles farther; and the pace was swift Leopold, on reflection, ordered off a Squadron of Gens d'Armes to overtake his Majesty, at Löwen or sooner; which they never did. Passing Pampitz, the King threw Fredersdorf a word, who was among the baggage there: "To Oppeln; bring the Purse, the Privy Writings!" Which Fredersdorf, and the Clerks (and another Herr, who became Nicolai's Father-in-law in after years) did; and joined the King at Löwen; but I hope stopped there.

The King's suite was small, names not given; but by the time he got to Löwen, being joined by cavalry fugitives and the like, it had got to be seventy persons: too many for the King. He selected what was his of them; ordered the gates to be shut behind him on all others, and again rode away. The Leopold Squadron of Gens d'Armes did not arrive till after his departure; and having here lost trace of him, called halt, and billeted for the night. The King speeds silently to Oppeln on his excellent bay horse, the worse-mounted gradually giving in. At Oppeln is a Bridge over the Oder, a free Country beyond: Regiment La Motte lay, and as the King thinks, still lies in Oppeln;—but in that he is mistaken. Regiment La Motte is with the baggage at Pampitz, all this day; and a wandering Hussar Party, some sixty Austrians, have taken possession of Oppeln. The King, and the few who had not yet broken down, arrive at the Gate of Oppeln, late, under cloud of night: "Who goes?" cried the sentry from within. "Prussians! A Prussian Courier!" answer they;—and are fired upon through the gratings; and immediately draw back, and vanish unhurt into Night again. "Had those Hussars only let him in!" said Austria afterwards: but they had not such luck. It was at this point, according to Valori, that the King burst forth into audible ejaculations of a lamentable nature. There is no getting over, then, even to Brandenburg, and in an insolvent condition. Not open insolvency and bankrupt disgrace; no, ruin, and an Austrian jail, is the one outlook. "Oh mon Dieu, O God, it is too much (c'en est trop)!" with other the like snatches of lamentation;[15] which are not inconceivable in a young man, sleepless for the third night, in these circumstances; but which Valori knows nothing of, except by malicious rumour from the valet class,—who have misinformed Valori about several other points.

The King riding diligently, with or without ejaculations, back towards Löwen, comes at an early hour to the Mill of Hilbersdorf, within a mile-and-half of that place. He alights at the Mill; sends one of his attendants, almost the only one now left, to inquire what is in Löwen. The answer, we know, is: "A squadron of Gens d'Armes there; furthermore, a Prussian Adjutant come to say, Victory at Mollwitz!" Upon which the King mounts again;—issues into daylight, and concludes these mythical adventures. That 'in Löwen, in the shop at the 'corner of the Marketplace, Widow Panzern, subsequently 'Wife Something-else, made his Majesty a cup of coffee, and 'served a roast fowl along with it,' cannot but be welcome news, if true; and that 'his Majesty got to Mollwitz again be-'fore dark that same day,'[16] is liable to no controversy.

[15] Valori, i. 104.

10th April 1741.

In this way was Friedrich snatched by Morgante into Fairyland, carried by Diana to the top of Pindus (or even by Proserpine to Tartarus, through a bad sixteen hours), till the Battle-whirlwind subsided. Friendly imaginative spirits would, in the antique time, have so construed it: but these moderns were malicious-valetish, not friendly; and wrapped the matter in mere stupid worlds of cobweb, which require burning. Friedrich himself was stone-silent on this matter, all his life after; but is understood never quite to have pardoned Schwerin for the ill-luck of giving him such advice.[17]

Friedrich's adventure is not the only one of that kind at Mollwitz; there is another equally indubitable,—which will remain obscure, half-mythical to the end of the world. The truth is, that Right Wing of the Prussian Army was fallen chaotic, ruined; and no man, not even one who had seen it, can give account of what went on there. The sage Maupertuis, for example, had climbed some tree or place of impregnability ('tree' Voltaire calls it, though that is hardly probable), hoping to see the Battle there. And he did see it, much too clearly at last! In such a tide of charging and chasing, on that Right Wing and round all the Field in the Prussian rear; in such wide bickering and boiling of Horse-currents,—which fling out, round all the Prussian rear quarters, such a spray of Austrian Hussars for one element,—Maupertuis, I have no doubt, wishes much he were at home, doing his sines and tangents. An Austrian Hussar-party gets sight of him, on his tree or other standpoint

[16] Fuchs, p. 11.

[17] Nicolai, ii. 180-195 (the one true account); Laveaux, i. 194; Valori, i. 104; &c. &c. (the myth in various stages). Most distractedly mythical of all, with the truth clear before it, is the latest version, just come out, in Was sich die Schlesier vom alten Fritz erzählen (Brieg, 1860), pp. 113-125.

(Voltaire says elsewhere he was mounted on an ass, the malicious spirit!)—too certain, the Austrian Hussars got sight of him: his purse, gold watch, all he has of movable is given frankly; all will not do. There are frills about the man, fine laces, cloth; a goodish yellow wig on him, for one thing:—their Slavonic dialect, too fatally intelligible by the pantomime accompanying it, forces sage Maupertuis from his tree or standpoint; the big red face flurried into scarlet, I can fancy; or scarlet and ashy-white mixed; and—Let us draw a veil over it! He is next seen shirtless, the once very haughty, blustery, and now much-humiliated man; still conscious of supreme acumen, insight and pure science; and, though an Austrian prisoner and a monster of rags, struggling to believe that he is a genius and the Trismegistus of mankind. What a pickle! The sage Maupertuis, as was natural, keeps passionately asking, of gods and men, for an Officer with some tincture of philosophy, or even who could speak French. Such Officer is at last found; humanely advances him money, a shirt and suit of clothes; but can in no wise dispense with his going to Vienna as prisoner. Thither he went accordingly; still in a mythical condition. Of Voltaire's laughing, there is no end; and he changes the myth from time to time, on new rumours coming; and there is no truth to be had from him.[18]

Thus much is certain: at Vienna, Maupertuis, prisoner on parole, glided about for some time in deep eclipse, till the Newspapers began babbling of him. He confessed then that he was Maupertuis, Flattener of the Earth; but for the rest, 'told rather a blind story about himself,' says Robinson; spoke as if he had been of the King's suite, 'riding with the King,' when that Hussar accident befell;—rather a blind story, true story being too sad. The Vienna Sovereignties, in the turn things had taken, were extremely kind; Grand-Duke Franz handsomely pulled out his own watch, hearing what road the Maupertuis one had gone; dismissed the Maupertuis, with that and other gifts, home:—to Brittany (not to Prussia), till times calmed for engrafting the Sciences.[19]

On Wednesday, Friedrich writes this Note to his Sister;

[18] Voltaire, Œuvres (Vie Privée), ii. 33-4; and see his Letters for some weeks after the event.

[19] Helden-Geschichte, i. 902; Robinson's Despatch (Vienna, 22d April 1741, N.S.); Voltaire, ubi suprà.

12th April 1741.

the first utterance we have from him since those wild roamings about Oppeln and Hilbersdorf Mill:

King to Wilhelmina (at Baireuth; two days after Mollwitz).

'Ohlau, 12th April 1741.

'My dearest Sister,—I have the satisfaction to inform you that we 'have yesterday' (day before yesterday; but some of us have only had one sleep!) 'totally beaten the Austrians. They have lost more than '5,000 men, killed, wounded and prisoners. We have lost Prince 'Friedrich, Brother of Margraf Karl; General Schulenburg, Wartens-'leben of the Carabineers, and many other Officers. Our troops did 'miracles; and the result shows as much. It was one of the rudest 'Battles fought within memory of man.

'I am sure you will take part in this happiness; and that you will 'not doubt of the tenderness with which I am, my dearest Sister,'—Yours wholly,—FÉDÉRIC.[20]

And on the same day there comes, from Breslau, Jordan's Answer to the late anxious little Note from Pogarell; anxieties now gone, and smoky misery changed into splendour of flame:

Jordan to the King (finds him at Ohlau).

'Breslau, 11th April 1741.

'Sire,—Yesterday I was in terrible alarms. The sound of the can-'non heard, the smoke of powder visible from the steeple-tops here; 'all led us to suspect that there was a Battle going on. Glorious con-'firmation of it this morning! Nothing but rejoicing among all the 'Protestant inhabitants; who had begun to be in apprehension, from 'the rumours which the other party took pleasure in spreading. Per-'sons who were in the Battle cannot enough celebrate the coolness and 'bravery of your Majesty. For myself, I am at the overflowing point. 'I have run about all day, announcing this glorious news to the Ber-'liners who are here. In my life I have never felt a more perfect 'satisfaction.

'M. de Camas is here, very ill for the last two days; attack of 'fever: the Doctor hopes to bring him through,'—which proved beyond the Doctor: the good Camas died here three days hence (age sixty-three); an excellent German Frenchman, of much sense, dignity and honesty; familiar to Friedrich from infancy onwards, and no doubt regretted by him as deserved. The Widow Camas, a fine old Lady, German by birth, will again come in view. Jordan continues:

'One finds, at the corner of every street, an orator of the Plebs 'celebrating the warlike feats of your Majesty's troops. I have often,

[20] Œuvres, xxvii. 1. 121

'in my idleness, assisted at these discourses: not artistic eloquence, it 'must be owned, but spurting rude from the heart.' * *

Jordan adds in his next Note: 'This morning (14th) I quitted M. 'de Camas; who, it is thought, cannot last the day. I have hardly 'left him during his illness:'[21]—and so let that scene close.

Neipperg, meanwhile, had fallen back on Neisse; taken up a strong encampment in that neighbourhood; he lies thereabouts all summer; stretched out, as it were, in a kind of vigilant dog-sleep on the threshold, keeping watch over Neisse, and tries fighting no more at this time, or indeed ever after, to speak of. And always, I think, with disadvantage, when he does try a little. He had been Grand-Duke Franz's Tutor in War-matters; had got into trouble at Belgrad once before, and was almost hanged by the Turks. George II. had occasionally the benefit of him, in coming years. Be not too severe on the poor man, as the Vienna public was; he had some faculty, though not enough. "Governor of Luxemburg," before long: there, for most part, let him peacefully drill, and spend the remainder of his poor life. Friedrich says, neither Neipperg nor himself, at this time, knew the least of War; and that it would be hard to settle which of them made the more blunders in their Silesian tussle.

Friedrich, in about three weeks hence, was fully ready for opening trenches upon Brieg; did open trenches, accordingly, by moonlight, in a grand nocturnal manner (as readers shall see anon); and, by vigorous cannonading,—Maréchal de Belleisle having come, by this time, to enjoy the fine spectacle,—soon got possession of Brieg, and held it thenceforth. Neisse now alone remained, with Neipperg vigilantly stretched upon the threshold of it. But the Maréchal de Belleisle, we say, had come; that was the weighty circumstance. And before Neisse can be thought of, there is a whole Europe bickering aloft into conflict; embattling itself from end to end, in sequel of Mollwitz Battle; and such a preliminary sea of negotiating, diplomatic finessing, pulse-feeling, projecting and palavering, with Friedrich for centre all summer, as—as I wish readers could imagine without my speaking of it farther! But they cannot.

[21] Œuvres de Frédéric, xvii. 99.

CHAPTER XI.

THE BURSTING-FORTH OF BEDLAMS: BELLEISLE AND THE BREAKERS OF PRAGMATIC SANCTION.

THE Battle of Mollwitz went off like a signal-shot among the Nations; intimating that they were, one and all, to go battling. Which they did, with a witness; making a terrible thing of it, over all the world, for above seven years to come. Foolish Nations; doomed to settle their jarring accounts in that terrible manner! Nay, the fewest of them had any accounts, except imaginary ones, to settle there at all; and they went into the adventure gratis, spurred-on by spectralities of the sick brain, by phantasms of hope, phantasms of terror; and had, strictly speaking, no actual business in it whatever.

Not that Mollwitz kindled Europe; Europe was already kindled for some two years past; — especially since the late Kaiser died, and his Pragmatic Sanction was superadded to the other troubles afoot. But ever since that Image of Jenkins's Ear had at last blazed-up in the slow English brain, like a fiery constellation or Sign in the Heavens, symbolic of such injustices and unendurabilities, and had lighted the Spanish-English War, Europe was slowly but pretty surely taking fire. France "could not see Spain humbled," she said: England (in its own dim feeling, and also in the fact of things) could not do at all without considerably humbling Spain. France, endlessly interested in that Spanish-English matter, was already sending out fleets, firing shots,—almost, or altogether, putting forth her hand in it. "In which case, will not, must not, Austria help us?" thought England,—and was asking, daily, at Vienna (with intense earnestness, but without the least result), through Excellency Robinson there, when the late Kaiser died. Died, poor gentleman; — and left his big Austrian Heritages lying, as it were, in the open market-place; elaborately tied by diplomatic packthread and Pragmatic Sanction; but not otherwise protected against the assembled cupidities of mankind! Independently of Mollwitz, or of Silesia altogether, it was next to impossible that Europe could long avoid blazing out; especially unless the Spanish-English quarrel got quenched, of which there was no likelihood.

But if not as cause, then as signal, or as signal and cause together (which it properly was), the Battle of Mollwitz gave the finishing stroke, and set all in motion. This was 'the little stone broken loose from the mountain;' this, rather than the late Kaiser's Death, which Friedrich defined in that manner. Or at least, this was the first leap it took; hitting other stones big and little, which again hit others with their leaping and rolling,—till the whole mountain-side is in motion under law of gravity, and you behold one wide stone-torrent thundering towards the valleys; shivering woods, farms, habitations clean away with it: fatal to any Image of composite Clay and Brass which it may meet!

There is, accordingly, from this point, a change in Friedrich's Silesian Adventure; which becomes infinitely more complicated for him, — and for those that write of him, no less! Friedrich's business henceforth is not to be done by direct fighting, but rather by waiting to see how, and on what side, others will fight: nor can we describe or understand Friedrich's business, except as in connexion with the immense, obsolete, and indeed delirious Phenomenon called Austrian-Succession War, upon which it is difficult to say any human word. If History, driven upon Dismal Swamp with its horrors and perils, can get across unsunk, she will be lucky!

For, directly on the back of Mollwitz, there ensued, first, an explosion of Diplomatic activity such as was never seen before; Excellencies from the four winds taking wing towards Friedrich; and talking and insinuating, and fencing and fugling, after their sort, in that Silesian Camp of his, the centre being there. A universal rookery of Diplomatists;—whose loud cackle and cawing is now as if gone mad to us; their work wholly fallen putrescent and avoidable, dead to all creatures. And secondly, in the train of that, there ensued a universal European War, the French and the English being chief parties in it; which abounds in battles and feats of arms, spirited but delirious, and cannot be got stilled for seven or eight years to come; and in which Friedrich and his War swim only as an intermittent Episode henceforth. What to do with such a War; how extricate the Episode, and leave the War lying? The War was at first a good deal mad; and is now, to men's imagination, fallen wholly so; who indeed have managed mostly to forget it; only the Episode (reduced thereby to an *un*intelligible state) retaining still some claims on them.

It is singular into what oblivion the huge Phenomenon called Austrian-Succession War has fallen; which, within a hundred years ago or little more, filled all mortal hearts! The English were principals on one side; did themselves fight in it, with their customary fire, and their customary guidance ("courageous Wooden Pole with Cocked Hat," as our friend called it); and paid all the expenses, which were extremely considerable, and are felt in men's pockets to this day: but the English have more completely forgotten it than any other People. "Battle of Dettingen, Battle of Fontenoy,—what, in the Devil's name, were we ever doing there?" the impatient Englishman asks; and can give no answer, except the general one: "Fit of insanity; Delirium Tremens, perhaps Furens;—don't think of it!" Of Philippi and Arbela educated Englishmen can render account; and I am told young gentlemen entering the Army are pointedly required to say who commanded at Aigos-Potamos and wrecked the Peloponnesian War: but of Dettingen and Fontenoy, where is the living Englishman that has the least notion, or seeks for any? The Austrian-Succession War did veritably rage for eight years, at a terrific rate, deforming the face of Earth and Heaven; the English paying the piper always, and founding their National Debt thereby:—but not even that could prove mnemonic to them; and they have dropped the Austrian-Succession War, with one accord, into the general dust-bin, and are content it should lie there. They have not, in their language, the least approach to an intelligible account of it: How it went on, whitherward, whence; why it was there at all,—are points dark to the English, and on which they do not wish to be informed. They have quitted the matter, as an unintelligible huge English-and-Foreign Delirium (which in good part it was); Delirium unintelligible to them; tedious, not to say in parts, as those of the Austrian Subsidies, hideous and disgusting to them;—happily now fallen extinct; and capable of being skipped, in one's inquiries into the wonders of this England and this World. Which, in fact, is a practical conclusion not so unwise as it looks.

'Wars are not memorable,' says Sauerteig, 'however big they may 'have been, whatever rages and miseries they may have occasioned, or 'however many hundreds of thousands they may have been the death 'of,—except when they have something of World-History in them

'withal. If they are found to have been the travail-throes of great or 'considerable changes, which continue permanent in the world, men of 'some curiosity cannot but inquire into them, keep memory of them. 'But if they were travail-throes that had no birth, who of mortals would 'remember them? Unless perhaps the feats of prowess, virtue, valour 'and endurance, they might accidentally give rise to, were very great 'indeed. Much greater than the most were, which came out in that 'Austrian-Succession case! Wars otherwise are mere futile transitory 'dust-whirlwinds stilled in blood; extensive fits of human insanity, such 'as we know are too apt to break out;—such as it rather beseems a 'faithful Son of the House of Adam not to speak about again; as in 'houses where the grandfather was hanged, the topic of ropes is fitly 'avoided.

'Never again will that War, with its deliriums, mad outlays of 'blood, treasure, and of hope and terror, and far-spread human de-'struction, rise into visual life in any imagination of living man. In 'vain shall Dryasdust strive: things mad, chaotic and without ascer-'tainable purpose or result, cannot be fixed into human memories. 'Fix them there by never so many Documentary Histories, elaborate 'long-eared Pedantries, and cunning threads, the poor human memory 'has an alchemy against such ill usage;—it forgets them again; grows 'to know them as a mere torpor, a stupidity and horror, and instinc-'tively flies from Dryasdust and them.'

Alive to any considerable degree, in the poor human imagination, this Editor does not expect or even wish the Austrian-Succession War to be. Enough for him if it could be understood sufficiently to render his poor History of Friedrich intelligible. For it enwraps Friedrich like a world-vortex henceforth; modifies every step of his existence henceforth; and apart from it, there is no understanding of his business or him. "So much as sticks to Friedrich:" that was our original bargain! Assist loyally, O reader, and we will try to make the indispensable a minimum for you.

Who was to blame for the Austrian-Succession War?

The first point to be noted is, Where did it originate? To which the answer mainly is, With that lean Gentleman whom we saw with Papers in the Œil-de-Bœuf on Newyear's day last. With Monseigneur the Maréchal de Belleisle principally; with the ambitious cupidities and baseless vanities of the French Court and Nation, as represented by Belleisle. George II.'s Spanish War, if you will examine, had a real necessity in it. Jenkins's Ear was the ridiculous outside figure this matter had:

Jenkins's Ear was one final item of it; but the poor English People, in their wrath and bellowings about that small item, were intrinsically meaning: "Settle the account; let us have that account cleared-up and liquidated; it has lain too long!" And seldom were a People more in the right, as readers shall yet see.

The English-Spanish War had a basis to stand on in this Universe. The like had the Prussian-Austrian one; so all men now admit. If Friedrich had not business there, what man ever had in an enterprise he ventured on? Friedrich, after such trial and proof as has seldom been, got his claims on Schlesien allowed by the Destinies. His claims on Schlesien; —and on infinitely higher things; which were found to be his and his Nation's, though he had not been consciously thinking of them in making that adventure. For, as my poor Friend insists, there are Laws valid in Earth and in Heaven; and the great soul of the world is just. Friedrich had business in this War; and Maria Theresa versus Friedrich had likewise cause to appear in court, and do her utmost pleading against him.

But if we ask, What Belleisle or France and Louis XV. had to do there? the answer is rigorously, Nothing. Their own windy vanities, ambitions, sanctioned not by fact and the Almighty Powers, but by phantasm and the babble of Versailles; transcendent self-conceit, intrinsically insane; pretensions over their fellow-creatures which were without basis anywhere in Nature, except in the French brain alone: it was this that brought Belleisle and France into a German War. And Belleisle and France having gone into an Anti-Pragmatic War, the unlucky George and his England were dragged into a Pragmatic one,—quitting their own business, on the Spanish Main, and hurrying to Germany,—in terror as at Doomsday, and zeal to save the Keystone of Nature there. That is the notable point in regard to this War: That France is to be called the author of it, who, alone of all the parties, had no business there whatever. And the wages due to France for such a piece of industry,—the reader will yet see what wages France and the other parties got, at the tail of the affair. For that too is apparent in our day.

We have often said, the Spanish-English War was itself likely to have kindled Europe; and again Friedrich's Silesian War was itself likely,—France being nearly sure to interfere.

But if both these Wars were necessary ones, and if France interfered in either of them on the wrong side, the blame will be to France, not to the necessary Wars. France could, in no way, have interfered in a more barefacedly unjust and gratuitous manner than she now did; nor, on any terms, have so palpably made herself the author of the conflagration of deliriums that ensued for above Seven years henceforth. Nay for above Twenty years,—the settlement of this Silesian Pragmatic-Antipragmatic matter (and of Jenkins's Ear, incidentally, along with this!) not having fairly completed itself till 1763.

How Belleisle made Visit to Teutschland; and there was no fit Henry the Fowler to welcome him.

It is very wrong to keep Enchanted Wiggeries sitting in this world, as if they were things still alive! By a species of "conservatism," which gets praised in our Time, but which is only a slothful cowardice, base indifference to truth, and hatred to trouble in comparison with lies that sit quiet, men now extensively practise this method of procedure;—little dreaming how bad and fatal it at all times is. When the brains are out, things really ought to die;—no matter what lovely things they were, and still affect to be, the brains being out, they actually ought in all cases to die, and with their best speed get buried. Men had noses, at one time; and smelt the horror of a deceased reality fallen putrid, of a once dear verity become mendacious, phantasmal; but they have, to an immense degree, lost that organ since, and are now living comfortably cheek-by-jowl with lies. Lies of that sad "conservative" kind,—and indeed of all kinds whatsoever: for that kind is a general mother; and breeds, with a fecundity that is appalling, did you heed it much!—

It was pity that the "Holy Romish Reich, Teutsch by Nation," had not got itself buried some ages before. Once it had brains and life, but now they were out. Under the sway of Barbarossa, under our old anti-chaotic friend Henry the Fowler, how different had it been! No field for a Belleisle to come and sow tares in; no rotten thatch for a French Sungod to go sailing about in the middle of, and set fire to! Henry, when the Hungarian Pan-Slavonic Savagery came upon him, had got ready in the interim; and a mangy dog was the "tribute" he gave them; followed by the due extent of broken crowns, since they would not be content with that. That was the due of Belleisle too,—had there been a Henry to meet him with it, on his crossing the marches, in Trier Country, in Spring 1741: "There, you anarchic Upholstery-Belus, fancying yourself God of the Sun; there is what Teutschland owes you. Go home with that; and mind your own business, which I am told is plentiful, if you had eye for it!"

But the sad truth is, for above Four Centuries now,—and especially for Three, since little Kaiser Karl IV. 'gave away all the moneys of it,' in his pressing occasions, this Holy Romish Reich, Teutsch by Nation, has been more and ever more becoming an imaginary quantity; the Kaisership of it not capable of being worn by anybody, except a Hapsburger who had resources otherwise his own. The fact is palpable. And Austria, an Anti-Reformation Entity, "conservative" in that bad sense, of slothfully abhorring trouble in comparison with lies, had not found the poison more malodorous in this particular than in many others. And had cherished its "Holy Romish Reich" grown *un*holy, phantasmal, like so much else in Austrian things; and had held firm grip of it, these Three Hundred years; and found it a furthersome and suitable thing, though sensible it was more and more becoming an Enchanted Wiggery pure and simple. Nor have the consequences failed; they never do. Belleisle, Louis XIV., Henri II., François I.; it is long since the French have known this state of matters; and been in the habit of breaking-in upon it, fomenting internal discontents, getting-up unjust Wars,—with or without advantage to France, but with endless disadvantage to Germany. Schmalkaldic War; Thirty-Years War; Louis XIV.'s Wars, which brought Alsace and the other fine cuttings; late Polish-Election War, and its Lorraine; Austrian-Succession War: many are the wars kindled on poor Teutschland by neighbour France; and large is the sum of woes to Europe and to it, chargeable to that score. Which appears even yet not to be completed?—Perhaps not, even yet. For it is the penalty of being loyal to Enchanted Wiggeries; of living cheek-by-jowl with lies of a peaceable quality, and stuffing your nostrils, and searing your soul, against the accursed odour they all have!—For I can assure you the curse of Heaven does dwell in one and all of them; and the son of Adam cannot too soon get quit of their bad partnership, cost him what it may.

Belleisle's Journey as Sungod began in March,—'end of March 1741,' no date of a day to be had for that memorable thing:—and he went gyrating about through the German Courts, for almost a year afterwards; his course rather erratic, but always in a splendour as of Belus, with those Hundred-and-thirty French Lords and Valets, and the glory of Most Christian King irradiating him. Very diligent for the first six months, till September or October next, which we may call his seed-time; and by no means resting after nine or twelve months, while the harrowing and hoeing went on. In January 1742, he had the great satisfaction to see a Bavarian Kaiser got, instead of an Austrian; and everywhere the fruit of his diligent husbandry begin to beard fairly above ground, into a crop of facts (like armed men from dragon's teeth), and "the pleasure of the"—whom was it the pleasure of?—"prosper in his hands." Belleisle was a pretty man; but I doubt it was not "the Lord" he was doing the pleasure of, on this occasion, but a very Different Personage, disguised to resemble him in poor Belleisle's eyes!—

Austria was not dangerous to France in late times, and now least of all; how far from it,—humbled by the loss of Lorraine; and now as it were bankrupt, itself in danger from all the world. And France, so far as express Treaties could bind a Nation, was bound to maintain Austria in its present possessions. The bitter loss of Lorraine had been sweetened to the late Kaiser by that solitary drop of consolation;—as his Failure of a Life had been, poor man: "Failure the most of me has been; but I have got Pragmatic Sanction, thanks to Heaven, and even France has signed it!" Loss of Lorraine, loss of Elsass, loss of the Three Bishopricks; since Karl V.'s times, not to speak of earlier, there has been mere loss on loss:—and now is the time to consummate it, think Belleisle and France, in spite of Treaties.

Towards humbling or extinguishing Austria, Belleisle has two preliminary things to do: First, Break the Pragmatic Sanction, and get everybody to break it; second, Guide the Kaiserwahl (Election of a Kaiser), so that it issue, not in Grand-Duke Franz, Maria Theresa's Husband, as all expect it will, but in another party friendly to France:—say in Karl Albert of Bavaria, whose Family have long been good clients of ours, dependent on us for a living in the Political World. Belleisle, there is little doubt, had from the first cast his eye on this unlucky Karl Albert for Kaiser; but is uncertain as to carrying him. Belleisle will take another if he must; Kur-Sachsen, for example;—any other, and all others, only not the Grand-Duke: that is a point already fixed with Belleisle, though he keeps it well in the background, and is careful not to hint it till the time come.

In regard to Pragmatic Sanction, Belleisle and France found no difficulty,—or the difficulty only (which we hope must have been considerable) of eating their own Covenant in behalf of Pragmatic Sanction; and declaring, which they did without visible blush, That it was a Covenant including, if not expressly, then tacitly, as all human covenants do, this clause, "Salvo jure tertii (Saving the rights of Third Parties),"—that is, of Electors of Bavaria, and others who may object against it! O soul of honour, O first Nation of the Universe, was there ever such a subterfuge? Here is a field of flowering corn, the biggest in the world, begirt with elaborate ring-fence, many miles of firm oak-paling pitched and buttressed;—the poor gentleman now dead gave you his Lorraine, and almost his life, for swearing to keep-up said paling. And you do keep it up,—all except six yards; through which the biggest team on the highway can drive freely, and the paltriest cadger's ass can step in for a bellyful!

It appears, the first Nation of the Universe had, at an early period of their consultations, hit upon this of Salvo jure tertii, as the method of eating their Covenant, before an enlightened public.[1] And they persisted in it, there being no other for them. An enlightened public grinned sardonically, and was not taken in; but, as so many others were eating their Covenants, under equally poor subterfuges, the enlightened public could not grin long on any individual,—could only gape mutely, with astonishment, on all. A glorious example of veracity and human nobleness, set by the gods of this lower world to their gazing populations, who could read in the Gazettes! What is truth, falsity, human Kingship, human Swindlership? Are the Ten Commandments only a figure of speech, then? And it was some beggarly Attorney-Devil that built this sublunary world and us? Questions might rise; had long been rising;—but now there was about enough, and the response to them was falling due; and Belleisle himself, what is very notable, had been appointed to get ready the response. Belleisle (little as Belleisle dreamt of it, in these high Enterprises) was ushering in, by way of response, a Ragnarök, or Twilight of the Gods, which, as "French Revolution, or Apotheosis of Sansculottism," is now well known;—and that is something to consider of!

[1] 20th January 1741, in their Note of Ceremony, recognising Maria Theresa as Queen of Hungary, Note which had been due so very long (Adelung, ii. 206), there is ominous silence on Pragmatic Sanction; 'beginning of March,' there is virtual avowal of Salvo jure (ib. 279);—open avowal on Belleisle's advent (ib. 305).

Downbreak of Pragmatic Sanction; Manner of the chief Artists in handling their Covenants.

The operation once accomplished on its own Pragmatic Covenant, France found no difficulty with the others. Everybody was disposed to eat his Covenant, who could see advantage in so doing, after that admirable example. The difficulty of France and Belleisle rather was, to keep the hungry parties back: "Don't eat your Covenant till the proper time; patience, we say!" A most sad Miscellany of Royalties, coming all to the point, "Will you eat your Covenant, Will you keep it?"—and eating, nearly all; in fact, wholly all that needed to eat.

On the first Invasion of Silesia, Maria Theresa had indignantly complained in every Court; and pointing to Pragmatic Sanction, had demanded that such Law of Nature be complied with, according to covenant. What Maria Theresa got by this circuit of the Courts, everybody still knows. Except England, which was willing, and Holland, which was unwilling, all Courts had answered, more or less uneasily: "Law of Nature, —humph: yes!"—and, far from doing anything, not one of them would with certainty promise to do anything. From England alone and her little King (to whom Pragmatic Sanction is the Palladium of Human Freedoms and the Keystone of Nature) could she get the least help. The rest hung back; would not open heart or pocket; waited till they saw. They do now see; now that Belleisle has done his feat of Covenant-eating!—

Eleven great Powers, some count Thirteen, some Twelve,[2] —but no two agree, and hardly one agrees with himself;— enough, the Powers of Europe, from Naples and Madrid to Russia and Sweden, have all signed it, let us say a Dozen or a Baker's-Dozen of them. And except our little English Paladin alone, whose interest and indeed salvation seemed to him to lie that way, and who needed no Pragmatic Covenant to guide him, nobody whatever distinguished himself by keeping it. Between December 1740, when Maria Theresa set-up her cries in all Courts, on to April 1741, England, painfully dragging Holland with her, had alone of the Baker's-Dozen spoken word of disapproval; much less done act of hindrance. Two especially (France and Bavaria, not to mention Spain) had done the reverse, and disowned, and declared against, Pragmatic Sanction. And after the Battle of Mollwitz, when the 'little stone' took its first leap, and set all thundering, then came, like the inrush of a fashion, throughout that high Miscellany or Baker's-Dozen, the general eating of Covenants (which was again quickened in August, for a reason we shall see): and before November of that Year, there was no Covenant left to eat. Of the Baker's-Dozen nobody remained but little George the Paladin, dragging Holland painfully along with him;— and Pragmatic Sanction had gone to water, like ice in a June day, and its beautiful crystalline qualities and prismatic colours were forever vanished from the world. Will the reader note a point or two, a personage or two, in this sordid process,—not for the process's sake, which is very sordid and smells badly, but for his own sake, to elucidate his own course a little in the intricacies now coming or come upon him and me?

1°. Elector of Bavaria.—Karl Albert of Baiern is by some counted as a Signer of the Pragmatic Sanction, and by others not; which occasions that discrepancy of sum-total in the Books. And he did once, in a sense, sign it, he and his Brother of Köln; but, before the late Kaiser's death, he had openly drawn back from it again; and counted himself a Non-signer. Signer or not, he, for his part, lost no moment (but rather the contrary) in openly protesting against it, and signifying that he never would acknowledge it. Of this the reader saw something, at the time of her Hungarian Majesty's Accession. Date and circumstances of it, which deserve remembering, are more precisely these: October 20th, 1740, Karl Albert's Ambassador, Perusa by name, wrote to Karl from Vienna, announcing that the Kaiser was just dead. From München, on the 21st, Karl Albert, anticipating such an event, but not yet knowing it, orders Perusa, in case of the Kaiser's decease, which was considered probable at München, to demand instant audience of the proper party (Kanzler Sinzendorf), and there openly lodge his Protest. Which Perusa did, punctually in all points, —no moment lost, but rather the contrary, as we said! Let poor Karl Albert have what benefit there is in that fact. He was, of all the Anti-Pragmatic Covenant-Breakers (if he ever fairly were such), the only one that proceeded honourably, openly and at once, in the matter; and he was, of them all, by far the most unfortunate.

[2] Schöll, ii. 286; Adelung, list, i°. 127.

This is the poor gentleman whom Belleisle had settled on for being Kaiser. And Kaiser he became; to his frightful sorrow, as it proved: his crown like a crown of burning iron, or little better! There is little of him in the Books, nor does one desire much: a tall aquiline type of man; much the gentleman in aspect; and in reality, of decorous serious deportment, and the wish to be high and dignified. He had a kind of right, too, in the Anti-Pragmatic sense; and was come of Imperial kindred,—Kaiser Ludwig the Bavarian, and Kaiser Rupert of the Pfalz, called Rupert Klemm, or Rupert Smith's-vice, if any reader now remember him, were both of his ancestors. He might fairly pretend to Kaisership and to Austrian ownership,—had he otherwise been equal to such enterprises. But, in all ambitions and attempts, howsoever grounded otherwise, there is this strict question on the threshold: "Are you of weight for the adventure; are not you far too light for it?" Ambitious persons often slur this question; and get squelched to pieces, by bringing the Twelve Labours of Hercules on Unherculean backs! Not every one is so lucky as our Friedrich in that particular,—whose back, though with difficulty, held out. Which poor Karl Albert's never had much likelihood to do. Few mortals in any age have offered such an example of the tragedies which Ambition has in store for her votaries; and what a matter Hope Fulfilled may be to the unreflecting Son of Adam.

We said, he had a kind of right to Austria, withal. He descended by the female line from Kaiser Ferdinand I. (as did Kur-Sachsen, though by a younger Daughter than Karl Albert's Ancestress); and he appealed to Kaiser Ferdinand's Settlement of the Succession, as a higher than any subsequent Pragmatic could be. Upon which there hangs an incident; still famous to German readers. Karl Albert, getting into Public Argument in this way, naturally instructed Perusa to demand sight of Kaiser Ferdinand's Last Will, the tenor of which was known by authentic Copy in München, if not elsewhere among the kindred. After some delay, Perusa (4th November 1740), summoning the other Excellencies to witness, got sight of the Will: to his horror, there stood, in the cardinal passage, instead of "männliche" (male descendants), "eheliche" (lawfully-begotten descendants),—fatal to Karl Albert's claim! Nor could he prove that the Parchment had been scraped or altered, though he kept trying and examining for some days. He withdrew thereupon, by order, straightway from Vienna; testifying in dumb-show what he thought. "It is your Copy that is false," cried the Vienna people: "it has been foisted on you, with this wrong word in it; done by somebody (your friend, the Excellency Herr von Hartmann, shall we guess?), wishing to curry favour with ambitious foolish persons!" Such was the Austrian story. Perhaps in München itself their Copyist was not known;—for aught I learn, the Copy was made long since, and the Copyist dead. Hartmann, named as Copyist by the Vienna people, made emphatic public answer: "Never did I copy it, or see it!" And there rose great argument, which is not yet quite ended, as to the question, "Original falsified, or Copy falsified?"—and the modern vote, I believe, rather clearly is, That the Austrian Officials had done it — in a case of necessity.[3] Possible? "But you will lose your soul!" said the Parson once to a poor old Gentlewoman, English by Nation, who refused, in dying, to contradict some domestic fiction, to give-up some domestic secret: "But you will lose your soul, Madam!"—"Tush, what signifies my poor silly soul compared with the honour of the family?"—

2°. King Friedrich.—King Friedrich may be taken as the

[3] Adelung, ii. 150-154 (14th-20th November 1740), gives the public facts, without commentary. Hormayr (Anemonen aus dem Tagebuch eines alten Pilgersmannes, Jena, 1845, i. 162-169,—our old Hormayr of the Austrian Plutarch, but now Anonymous, and in Opposition humour) considers the case nearly proved against Austria, and that Bartenstein and one Bessel, a pillar of the Church, were concerned in it.

Anti-Pragmatic next in order of time. He too lost not a moment, and proceeded openly; no quirking to be charged upon him. His account of himself in this matter always was: "By the Treaty of Wusterhausen, 1726, unquestionably Prussia undertook to guarantee Pragmatic Sanction; the late Kaiser undertaking in return, by the same Treaty, to secure Berg and Jülich to Prussia, and to have some progress made in it within six months from signing. And unquestionably also, the late Kaiser did thereupon, or even had already done, precisely the reverse; namely, secured, so far as in him was possible, Berg and Jülich to Kur-Pfalz. Such Treaty, having in this way done suicide, is dead and become zero: and I am free, in respect of Pragmatic Sanction, to do whatever shall seem good to me. My wish was, and would still be, To maintain Pragmatic Sanction, and even to support it by 100,000 men, and secure the Election of the Grand-Duke to the Kaisership,—were my claims on Silesia once liquidated. But these have no concern with Pragmatic Sanction, for or against: these are good against whoever may fall Heir to the House of Austria, or to Silesia: and my intention is, that the strong hand, so long clenched upon my rights, shall open itself by this favourable opportunity, and give them out." That is Friedrich's case. And in truth the jury everywhere has to find,—so soon as instructed, which is a long process in some sections of it (in England, for example),—That Pragmatic Sanction has not, except helpless lamentations, "Alas that you should be here to insist upon your rights, and to open fists long closed!"—the least word to say to Friedrich.

3°. Termagant of Spain.—Perhaps the most distracted of the Anti-Pragmatic subterfuges was that used by Spain, when the She-dragon or Termagant saw good to eat her Covenant; which was at a very early stage. The Termagant's poor Husband is a Bourbon, not a Hapsburg at all: "But has not he fallen heir to the Spanish Hapsburgs; become all one as they, an alter-ego of the Spanish Hapsburgs?" asks she. "And the Austrian Hapsburgs being out, do not the Spanish Hapsburgs come in? He, I say, this Bourbon-Hapsburg, he is the real Hapsburg, now that the Austrian Branch is gone; President he of the Golden Fleece" (which a certain "Archduchess," Maria Theresa, had been meddling with); "Proprietor, he, of Austrian Italy, and of all or most things Austrian!"

—and produces Documentary Covenants of Philip II. with his Austrian Cousins; "to which Philip," said the Termagant, "we Bourbons surely, if you consider it, are Heir and Alter-Ego!" Is not this a curious case of testamentary right; human greed obliterating personal identity itself?

Belleisle had a great deal of difficulty, keeping the Termagant back till things were ripe. Her hope practically was, Baby Carlos being prosperous King of Naples this long while, to get the Milanese for another Baby she has,—Baby Philip, whom she once thought of making Pope;—and she is eager beyond measure to have a stroke at the Milanese. "Wait!" hoarsely whispers Belleisle to her; and she can scarcely wait. Maria Theresa's Note of Announcement, "New Queen of Hungary, may it please you!" the French, as we saw, were very long in answering. The Termagant did not answer it at all; complained on the contrary, "What is this, Madam! Golden Fleece, you?"—and, early in March, informed mankind that she was Spanish Hapsburg, the genuine article; and sent off Excellency Montijos, a little man of great expense, to assist at the Election of a proper Kaiser, and be useful to Belleisle in the great things now ahead.[4]

4°. King of Poland.—The most ticklish card in Belleisle's game, and probably the greatest fool of these Anti-Pragmatic Dozen, was Kur-Sachsen, King of Poland. He, like Karl Albert Kur-Baiern, derives from Kaiser Ferdinand, though by a younger Daughter, and has a like claim on the Austrian Succession; claim nullified, however, by that small circumstance itself, but which he would fain mend by one makeshift or another; and thinks always it must surely be good for something. This is August III., this King of Poland, as readers know; son of August the Strong: Papa made him change to the Catholic religion so-called,—for the sake of getting Poland, which proves a very poor possession to him. Who knows what damage the poor creature may have got by that sad operation;—which all Saxony sighed to the heart on hearing of; for it was always hoped he had some real religion, and would deliver them from that Babylonish Captivity again! He married Kaiser Joseph I.'s Daughter,—Maria Theresa's

[4] Spain's Golden-Fleece pretensions, 17th January 1741 (Adelung, ii. 233, 234); 'Publishes at Paris,' in March (ib. 293); and on the 23d March accredits Montijos (ib. 293): Italian War, held back by Belleisle and the English Fleets, cannot get begun till October following.

Cousin, and by an Elder Brother;—this, too, ought surely to be something in the Anti-Pragmatic line? It is true, Kur-Baiern has to Wife another Daughter of Kaiser Joseph's; but she is the younger: "I am senior there, at least!" thinks the foolish man.

Too true, he had finally, in past years, to sign Pragmatic Sanction; no help for it, no hope without it, in that Polish-Election time. He will have to eat his Covenant, therefore, as the first step in Anti-Pragmatism; and he is extremely in doubt as to the How, sometimes as to the Whether. And shifts and whirls, accordingly, at a great rate, in these months and years; now on Maria Theresa's side, deluded by shadows from Vienna, and getting into Russian Partition-Treaties; anon tickled by Belleisle into the reverse posture; then again reversing. An idle, easy-tempered, yet greedy creature, who, what with religious apostasy in early manhood, what with flaccid ambitions since, and idle gapings after shadows, has lost helm in this world; and will make a very bad voyage for self and country.

His Palinurus and chief Counsellor, at present and afterwards, is a Count von Brühl, once page to August the Strong; now risen to such height: Brühl of the Three-hundred and Sixty-five suits of clothes; whom it has grown wearisome even to laugh at. A cunning little wretch, they say, and of deft tongue; but surely among the unwisest of all the Sons of Adam in that day, and such a Palinurus as seldom steered before. Kur-Sachsen, being Reichs-Vicar in the Northern Parts,—(Kur-Baiern and Kur-Pfalz, as friends and good Wittelsbacher Cousins surely ought, in a crisis like this, have agreed to be Joint-Vicars in the Southern Parts, and no longer quarrel upon it), —Kur-Sachsen has a good deal to do in the Election preludings, formalities and prearrangements; and is capable, as Kur-Pfalz and Cousin always are, of serving as chisel to Belleisle's mallet, in such points, which will plentifully turn up.

5°. King of Sardinia.—Reichs-Vicar in the Italian parts is Charles Amadeus King of Sardinia (tough old Victor's Son, whom we have heard of): an office mostly honorary; suitable to the important individual who keeps the Door of the Alps. Charles Amadeus had signed the Pragmatic Sanction; but eats his Covenant, like the others, on example of France; —having, as he now bethinks himself, claims on the Milanese,

There are two claimants on the Milanese, then; the Spanish Termagant, and he? Yes; and they will have their difficulties, their extensive tusslings in Italian War and otherwise, to make an adjustment of it; and will give Belleisle (at least the Door-keeper will) an immensity of trouble, in years coming.

In this way do the Pragmatic people eat their own Covenant, one after the other, and are not ashamed;—till all have eaten, or as good as eaten; and, almost within year and day, Pragmatic Sanction is a vanished quantity; and poor Kaiser Karl's life-labour is not worth the sheep-skin and stationery it cost him. History reports in sum, That 'nobody kept the 'Pragmatic Sanction; that the few' (strictly speaking, the one) 'who acted by it, would have done precisely the same, though 'there had never been such a Document in existence.' To George II., it is, was and will be, the Keystone of Nature, the true Anti-French palladium of mankind; and he, dragging the unwilling Dutch after him, will do great things for it: but nobody else does anything at all. Might we hope to bid adieu to it, in this manner, and never to mention it again!—

Document more futile there had not been in Nature, nor will be. Friedrich had not yet fought at Mollwitz in assertion of his Silesian claim, when the poor Pope,—poor soul, who had no Covenant to eat, but took pattern by others,—claimed, in solemn Allocution, Parma and Piacenza for the Holy See.[5] All the world is claiming. Of the Court of Würtemberg and its Protestings, and 'extensive Deduction' about nothing at all, we do not speak;[6] nor of Montmorency claiming Luxemburg, of which he is Titular "Duke;" nor of Monsignore di Guastalla claiming Mantua; nor of—In brief, the fences are now down; a broad French gap in those miles of elaborate paling, which are good only as firewood henceforth, and any ass may rush in and claim a bellyful. Great are the works of Belleisle!—

Concerning the Imperial Election (Kaiserwahl) that is to be; Candidates for Kaisership.

At equal step with the ruining of Pragmatic Sanction goes on that spoiling of Grand-Duke Franz's Election to the Kaisership: these two operations run parallel; or rather, under different forms, they are one and the same operation. "To assist, as a Most Christian neighbour ought, in picking out the fit Kaiser," was Belleisle's ostensible mission; and indeed this does include virtually his whole errand. Till three months after Belleisle's appearance in the business, Grand-Duke Franz never doubted but he should be Kaiser; Friedrich's offers to help him in it he had scorned, as the offer of a fifth wheel to his chariot, already rushing on with four. "Here is Kur-Böhmen, Austria's own vote," counts the Grand-Duke; "Kur-Sachsen, doing Prussian-Partition Treaties for us; Kur-Trier, our fat little Schönborn, Austrian to the bone; Kur-Mainz, important chairman, regulator of the Conclave; here are Four Electors for us: then also Kur-Pfalz, he surely, in return for the Berg-Jülich service; finally, and liable to no question, Kur-Hanover, little George of England with his endless guineas and resources, a little Jack-the-Giantkiller, greater than all Giants, Paladin of the Pragmatic and us: here are Six Electors of the Nine. Let Brandenburg and the Bavarian Couple, Kur-Baiern and Kur-Köln, do their pleasure!" This was Grand-Duke Franz's calculation.

[5] Adelung, ii. 376 (5th April 1741). [6] Ib. ii. 195, 403.

By the time Belleisle had been three months in Germany, the Grand-Duke's notion had changed; and he began 'applying to the Sea-Powers,' 'to Russia,' and all round. In Belleisle's sixth month, the Grand-Duke, after such demolition of Pragmatic, and such disasters and contradictions as had been, saw his case to be desperate; though he still stuck to it, Austrian-like,—or rather, Austria for him stuck to it, the Grand-Duke being careless of such things;—and indeed, privately, never did give in, even after the Election, as we shall have to note.

The Reich itself being mainly a Phantasm or Enchanted Wiggery, its "Kaiser-Choosing" (Kaiserwahl),—now getting under way at Frankfurt, with preliminary outskirts at Regensburg, and in the Chancery of Mainz,—is very phantasmal, not to say ghastly; and forbidding, not inviting, to the human eye. Nine Kurfürsts, Choosers of Teutschland's real Captain, in none of whom is there much thought for Teutschland or its interests,—and indeed in hardly more than One of whom (Prussian Friedrich, if readers will know it) is there the least thought that way; but, in general, much indifference to things divine or diabolic, and thought for one's own paltry profits and losses only! So it has long been; and so it now is, more than usual. —Consider again, are Enchanted Wiggeries a beautiful thing, in this extremely earnest world?—

The Kaiserwahl is an affair depending much on processions, proclamations, on delusions optical, acoustic; on palaverings, manœuvrings, holdings back, then hasty pushings forward; and indeed is mainly, in more senses than one, under guidance of the Prince of the Power of the Air. Unbeautiful, like a World-Parliament of Nightmares (if the reader could conceive such a thing); huge formless, tongueless monsters of that species, doing their "three readings,"—under Presidency or chief-pipership as above! Belleisle, for his part, is consummately skilful, and manages as only himself could. Keeps his game well hidden, not a hint or whisper of it except in studied proportions; spreads out his lines, his birdlime; tickles, entices, astonishes; goes his rounds, like a subtle Fowler, taking captive the minds of men; a Phœbus-Apollo, god of melody and of the sun, filling his net with birds.

I believe, old Kur-Pfalz, for the sake of French neighbourhood, and Berg-and-Jülich, were there nothing more, was very helpful to him;—in March past, when the Election was to have been, when it would have gone at once in favour of the Grand-Duke, Kur-Pfalz got the Election "postponed a little." Postponing, procrastinating; then again pushing violently on, when things are ripe: Belleisle has only to give signal to a fit Kur-Pfalz. In all Kurfürst Courts, the French Ambassadors sing diligently to the tune Belleisle sets them; and Courts give ear, or will do, when the charmer himself arrives.

Kur-Sachsen, as above hinted, was his most delicate operation, in the charming or trout-tickling way. And Kur-Sachsen, —and poor Saxony, ever since, —knows if he did not do it well! "Deduct this Kur-Sachsen from the Austrian side," calculates Belleisle; "add him to ours, it is almost an equality of votes. Kur-Baiern, our own Imperial Candidate; Kur-Köln, his Brother; Kur-Pfalz, by genealogy his Cousin (not to mention Berg-Jülich matters): here are three Wittelsbachers, knit together; three sure votes; King Friedrich, Kur-Brandenburg, there is a fourth; and if Kur-Sachsen would join?" But who knows if Kur-Sachsen will! The poor soul has himself thoughts of being Kaiser; then no thoughts, and again some: thoughts which Belleisle knows how to handle. "Yes, Kaiser you, your Majesty; excellent!" And sets to consider the methods: "Hm, ha, hm! Think, your Majesty: ought not that Bohemian Vote to be excluded, for one thing? Kur-Böhmen is fallen into the distaff, Maria Theresa herself cannot vote. Surely question will rise, Whether distaff can, validly, hand it over to distaff's husband, as they are about doing? Whether, in fact, Kur-Böhmen is not in abeyance for this time?" "So!" answered Kur-Sachsen, Reichs-Vicarius. And thereupon meetings were summoned; Nightmare Committees sat on this matter under the Reichs-Vicar, slowly hatching it; and at length brought out, "Kur-Böhmen not transferable by the distaff; Kur-Böhmen in abeyance for this time." Greatly to the joy of Belleisle; infinitely to the chagrin of her Hungarian Majesty,—who declared it a crying injustice (though I believe legally done in every point); and by and by, even made it a plea of Nullity, destructive to the Election altogether, when her Hungarian Majesty's affairs looked up again, and the world would listen to Austrian sophistries and obstinacies. This was an essential service from Kur-Sachsen.[7]

After which Kur-Sachsen's own poor Kaisership died away into "Hm, ha, hm!" again, with a grateful Belleisle. Who nevertheless dextrously retained Kur-Sachsen as ally; tickling the poor wretch with other baits. Of the Kaiser he had really meant all along, there was dead silence, except between the parties; no whisper heard, for six months after it had been agreed upon; none, for two or near three months after formal settlement, and signing and sealing. Karl Albert's Treaty with Belleisle was 18th May 1741; and he did not declare himself a Candidate till 1st-4th July following.[8] Belleisle understands the Nightmare Parliaments, the electioneering art, and how to deal with Enchanted Wiggeries. More perfect master, in that sad art, has not turned up on record to one's afflicted mind. Such a Sungod, and doing such a Scavengerism! Belleisle, in the sixth month (end of August 1741) feels sure of a majority. How Belleisle managed, after that, to checkmate George of England, and make even George vote for him, and the Kaiserwahl to be unanimous against Grand-Duke Franz, will be seen. Great are Belleisle's doings in this world, if they were useful either to God or man, or to Belleisle himself first of all!—

[7] Began, indistinctly, 'in March' (1741); languid 'for some months' (Adelung, ii. 292); 'November 4th,' was settled in the negative, 'Kur-Böhmen not to have a vote' (Maria Theresiens Leben, p. 47 n.).

[8] Adelung, ii. 357, 421.

Teutschland to be carved into something of Symmetry, should the Belleisle Enterprises succeed.

Belleisle's schemes, in the rear of all this labour, are grandiose to a degree. Men wonder at the First Napoleon's mad notions in that kind. But no Napoleon, in the fire of the revolutionary element; no Sham-Napoleon, in the ashes of it; hardly a Parisian Journalist of imaginative turn, speculating on the First Nation of the Universe and what its place is,—could go higher than did this grandiose Belleisle; a man with clear thoughts in his head, under a torpid Louis XV. Let me see, thinks Belleisle. Germany with our Bavarian for Kaiser; Germany to be cut into, say, Four little Kingdoms: 1°. Bavaria with the lean Kaiserhood; 2°. Saxony, fattened by its share of Austria; 3°. Prussia the like; 4°. Austria itself, shorn down as above, and shoved out to the remote Hungarian parts: voilà. These, not reckoning Hanover, which perhaps we cannot get just yet, are Four pretty Sovereignties. Three, or Two, of these hireable by gold, it is to be hoped. And will not France have a glorious time of it; playing master of the revels there, egging one against the other! Yes, Germany is then, what Nature designed it, a Province of France: little George of Hanover himself, and who knows but England after him, may one day find their fate inevitable, like the others. O Louis, O my King, is not this an outlook? Louis le Grand was great; but you are likely to be Louis the Grandest; and here is a World shaped, at last, after the real pattern!

Such are, in sad truth, Belleisle's schemes; not yet entirely hatched into daylight or articulation; but becoming articulate, to himself and others, more and more. Reader, keep them well in mind: I had rather not speak of them again. They are essential to our Story; but they are afflictively vain, contrary to the Laws of Fact; and can, now or henceforth, in nowise be. My friend, it was not Beelzebub, nor Mephistopheles, nor Autolycus-Apollo that built this world and us; it was Another. And you will get your crown well rapped, M. le Maréchal, for so forgetting that fact! France is an extremely pretty creature; but this of making France the supreme Governor and God's-Vicegerent of Nations, is, was, and remains, one of the maddest notions. France at its ideal best, and with a demigod for King over it, were by no means fit for such function; nay of many Nations is eminently the unfittest for it. And France at its worst or nearly so, with a Louis XV. over it by way of demigod—O Belleisle, what kind of France is this; shining in your grandiose imagination, in such contrast to the stingy fact: like a creature consisting of two enormous wings, five hundred yards in potential extent, and no body bigger than that of a common Cock, weighing three pounds avoirdupois. Cock with his own gizzard much out of sorts, too!

It was 'early in March'[9] when Belleisle, the Artificial Sun-god, quitted Paris on this errand. He came by the Moselle road; called on the Rhine Kurfürsts, Köln, Trier, Mainz; dazzling them, so far as possible, with his splendour for the mind and for the eye. He proceeded next to Dresden, which is a main card: and where there is immense manipulation needed, and the most delicate trout-tickling; this being a skittish fish, and an important, though a foolish. Belleisle was at Dresden when the Battle of Mollwitz fell out: what a windfall into Belleisle's game! He ran across to Friedrich at Mollwitz, to congratulate, to consult,—as we shall see anon.

Belleisle, I am informed, in this preliminary Tour of his, speaks only, or hints only (except in the proper quarters), of Election Business; of the need there perhaps is, on the part of an Age growing in liberal ideas, to exclude the Austrian Grand-Duke; to curb that ponderous, harsh, ungenerous House of Austria, too long lording it over generous Germany; and to set-up some better House,—Bavaria, for example; Saxony, for example? Of his plans in the rear of this he is silent; speaks only by hints, by innuendos, to the proper parties. But ripening or ripe, plans do lie to rear; far-stretching, high-soaring; in part, dark even at Versailles; darkly fermenting, not yet developed, in Belleisle's own head; only the Future Kaiser a luminous fixed point, shooting beams across the grandiose Creation-Process going on there.

By the end of August 1741, Belleisle had become certain of his game; 24th January 1742, he saw himself as if winner. Before August 1741, he had got his Electors manipulated, tickled to his purpose, by the witchery of a Phœbus-Autolycus or Diplomatic Sungod; majority secured for a Bavarian

[9] Adelung, ii. 305.

26th April 1741.

Kaiser, and against an Austrian one. And in the course of that Month,—what was still more considerable!—he was getting, under mild pretexts, about a Hundred Thousand armed Frenchmen gently wafted over upon the soil of Germany. Two complete French Armies, 40,000 each (plus their Reserves), one over the Upper Rhine, one over the Lower; about which we shall hear a great deal in time coming! Under mild pretexts: "Peaceable as lambs, don't you observe? Merely to protect Freedom of Election, in this fine neighbour country; and as allies to our Friend of Bavaria, should he chance to be new Kaiser, and to persist in his modest claims otherwise." This was his crowning stroke. Which finished straightway the remnants of Pragmatic Sanction and of every obstacle; and in a shining manner swept the roads clear. And so, on January 24th following, the Election, long held back by Belleisle's manœuvrings, actually takes effect,—in favour of Karl Albert, our invaluable Bavarian Friend. Austria is left solitary in the Reich; Pragmatic Sanction, Keystone of Nature, which Belleisle and France had sworn to keep in, is openly torn-out by Belleisle and by France and the majority of mankind; and Belleisle sees himself, to all appearance, winner.

This was the harvest reaped by Belleisle, within year and day; after endless manœuvring, such as only a Belleisle in the character of Diplomatic Sungod could do. Beyond question, the distracted ambitions of several German Princes have been kindled by Belleisle; what we called the rotten thatch of Germany is well on fire. This diligent sowing in the Reich,—to judge by the 100,000 armed men here, and the counter hundreds of thousands arming,—has been a pretty stroke of dragon's-teeth husbandry on Belleisle's part.

Belleisle on Visit to Friedrich; sees Friedrich besiege Brieg, with Effect.

It was April 26th when Maréchal de Belleisle, with his Brother the Chevalier, with Valori and other bright accompaniment, arrived in Friedrich's Camp. 'Camp of Mollwitz' so named; between Mollwitz and Brieg; where Friedrich is still resting, in a vigilant expectant condition; and, except it be the taking of Brieg, has nothing military on hand. Wednesday 26th April, the distinguished Excellency,—escorted for the last three miles by 120 Horse, and the other customary ceremonies,—makes his appearance: no doubt an interesting one to Friedrich, for this and the days next following. Their talk is not reported anywhere: nor is it said with exactitude how far, whether wholly now, or only in part now, Belleisle expounded his sublime ideas to Friedrich; or what precise reception they got. Friedrich himself writes long afterwards of the event; but, as usual, without precision, except in general effect. Now, or some time after, Friedrich says he found Belleisle, one morning, with brow clouded, knit into intense meditation: "Have you had bad news, M. le Maréchal?" asks Friedrich. "No, oh no! I am considering what we shall make of that Moravia?"—"Moravia; Hm!" Friedrich suppresses the glance that is rising to his eyes: "Can't you give it to Saxony, then? Buy Saxony into the Plan with it!" "Excellent," answers Belleisle, and unpuckers his stern brow again.

Friedrich thinks highly, and about this time often says so, of the man Belleisle: but as to the man's effulgencies, and wide-winged Plans, none is less seduced by them than Friedrich: "Your chickens are not hatched, M. le Maréchal; some of us hope they never will be,—though the incubation-process may have uses for some of us!" Friedrich knows that the Kaisership given to any other than Grand-Duke Franz will be mostly an imaginary quantity. "A grand Symbolic Cloak in the eyes of the vulgar; but empty of all things, empty even of cash, for the last Two Hundred Years: Austria can wear it to advantage; no other mortal. Hang it on Austria, which is a solid human figure,—so." And Friedrich wishes, and hopes always, Maria Theresa will agree with him, and get it for her Husband. "But to hang it on Bavaria, which is a lean bare pole? Oh, M. le Maréchal!—And those Four Kingdoms of yours: what a brood of poultry, those! Chickens happily yet un-hatched;—eggs addle, I should venture to hope:—only do go on incubating, M. le Maréchal!" That is Friedrich's notion of the thing. Belleisle stayed with Friedrich 'a few days,' say the Books. After which, Friedrich, finding Belleisle too winged a creature, corresponded, in preference, with Fleury and the Head Sources;—who are always intensely enough concerned about those 'aces' falling to him, and how the same are to be 'shared.'[10]

[10] Details in Helden-Geschichte, i. 912, 962, 916; in Œuvres de Frédéric, ii. 79, 80, &c.

Instead of parade or review in honour of Belleisle, there happened to be a far grander military show, of the practical kind. The Siege of Brieg, the Opening of the Trenches before Brieg, chanced to be just ready, on Belleisle's arrival;—and would have taken effect, we find, that very night, April 26th, had not a sudden wintry outburst, or 'tempest of extraordinary violence,' prevented. Next night, night of the 27th-28th, under shine of the full Moon, in the open champaign country, on both sides of the River, it did take effect. An uncommonly fine thing of its sort; as one can still see by reading Friedrich's strict Program for it,—a most minute, precise and all-anticipating Program, which still interests military men, as Friedrich's first Piece in that kind,—and comparing therewith the Narratives of the performance which ensued.[11]

Kalkstein, Friedrich's old Tutor, is Captain of the Siege; under him Jeetz, long used to blockading about Brieg. The silvery Oder has its due bridges for communication; all is in readiness, and waiting manifold as in the slip,—and there is Engineer Walrave, our Glogau Dutch friend, who shall, at the right instant, 'with his straw-rope (Strohseil) mark out the first parallel,' and be swift about it! There are 2,000 diggers, with the due implements, fascines, equipments; duly divided, into Twelve equal Parties, and 'always two spademen to one pickman' (which indicates soft sandy ground): these, with the escorting or covering battalions, Twelve Parties they also, on both sides of the River, are to be in their several stations at the fixed moments; man, musket, mattock, strictly exact. They are to advance at Midnight; the covering battalions so many yards ahead: no speaking is permissible, nor the least tobacco-smoking; no drum to be allowed for fear of accident; no firing, unless you are fired on. The covering battalions are all to 'lie flat, so soon as they get to their ground, all but the Officers and sentries.' To rear of these stand Walrave and assistants, silent, with their straw-rope;—silent, then anon swift, and in whisper or almost by dumb-show, "Now, then!" After whom the diggers, fascine-men, workers, each in his kind, shall fall-to, silently, and dig and work as for life.

All which is done; exact as clockwork: beautiful to see, or half-see, and speak of to your Belleisle, in the serene moonlight! Half an hour's marching, half an hour's swift digging: the Town-clock of Brieg was hardly striking One, when 'they had dug themselves in.' And, before daybreak, they had, in two batteries, fifty cannon in position, with a proper set of mortars (other side the River),—ready to astonish Piccolomini and his Austrians; who had not had the least whisper of them, all night, though it was full moon. Graf von Piccolomini, an active gallant person, had refused terms, some time before; and was hopefully intent on doing his best. And now, suddenly, there rose round Piccolomini such a tornado of cannonading and bombardment, day after day, always 'three guns of ours playing against one of theirs,' that his guns got ruined; that 'his hay-magazines took fire,'—and the Schloss itself, which was adjacent to them, took fire (a sad thing to Friedrich, who commanded pause, that they might try quenching, but in vain);—and that, in short, Piccolomini could not stand it; but on the 4th of May, precisely after one week's experience, hung out the white flag, and 'beat chamade at 3 of the afternoon.' He was allowed to march out next morning, with escort to Neisse; parole pledged, Not to serve against us for two years coming.

[11] Ordre und Dispositiones (sic), wornach sich der General-Lieutenant von Kalckstein bei Eroffnung der Trancheen &c. (Œuvres de Frédéric, xxx. 39-44): the Program. Helden-Geschichte, i. 916-28: the Narrative.

Friedrich in person (I rather guess, Belleisle not now at his side) saw the Garrison march out;—kept Piccolomini to dinner; a gallant Piccolomini, who had hoped to do better, but could not. This was a pretty enough piece of Siege-practice. Torstenson, with his Swedes, had furiously besieged Brieg in 1642, a hundred years ago; and could do nothing to it. Nothing, but withdraw again, futile; leaving 1,400 of his people dead. Friedrich, the Austrian Garrison once out, set instantly about repairing the works, and improving them into impregnability,—our ugly friend Walrave presiding over that operation too.

Belleisle, we may believe, so long as he continued, was full of polite wonder over these things; perhaps had critical advices here and there, which would be politely received. It is certain he came out extremely brilliant, gifted and agreeable, in the eyes of Friedrich; who often afterwards, not in the very strictest language, calls him a great man, great soldier, and by far the considerablest person you French have. It is no less certain, Belleisle displayed, so far as displayable, his magnificent Diplomatic Ware to the best advantage. To which, we perceive, the young King answered, "Magnificent, indeed!" but would not bite all at once; and rather preferred corresponding with Fleury, on business points, keeping the matter dextrously hanging, in an illuminated element of hope and contingency, for the present.

Belleisle, after we know not how many days, returned to Dresden; perfected his work at Dresden, or shoved it well forward, with 'that Moravia' as bait. "Yes, King of Moravia, you, your Polish Majesty, shall be!"—and it is said the simple creature did so style himself, by and by, in certain rare Manifestoes, which still exist in the cabinets of the curious. Belleisle next, after only a few days, went to München; to operate on Karl Albert Kur-Baiern, a willing subject. And, in short, Belleisle whirled along incessantly, torch in hand; making his 'circuit of the German Courts,'—details of said circuit not to be followed by us farther. One small thing only I have found rememberable; probably true, though vague. At München, still more out at Nymphenburg, the fine Country-Palace not far off, there was of course long conferencing, long consulting, secret and intense, between Belleisle with his people and Karl Albert with his. Karl Albert, as we know, was himself willing. But a certain Baron von Unertl,—heavy-built Bavarian of the old type, an old stager in the Bavarian Ministries,—was of far other disposition. One day, out at Nymphenburg, Unertl got to the Council-room, while Belleisle and Company were there: Unertl found the apartment locked, absolutely no admittance; and heard voices, the Kurfürst's and French voices, eagerly at work inside. "Admit me, Gracious Herr; um Gottes Willen, me!" No admission. Unertl, in despair, rushed round to the garden side of the Apartment; desperately snatched a ladder, set it up to the window, and conjured the Gracious Highness: "For the love of Heaven, my Allergnädigster, don't! Have no trade with those French! Remember your illustrious Father, Kurfürst Max, in the Eugene-Marlborough time, what a job he made of it, building actual architecture on their big promises, which proved mere acres of gilt balloon!"[12] Words terribly prophetic; but they were without effect on Karl Albert.

[12] Hormayr, Anemonen (cited above), ii. 152.

The rest of Belleisle's inflammatory circuitings and extensive travellings, for he had many first and last in this matter, shall be left to the fancy of the reader. May 18th, he made formal Treaty with Karl Albert: Treaty of Nymphenburg, "Karl Albert to be Kaiser; Bavaria, with Austria Proper added to it, a Kingdom; French armies, French moneys, and other fine items."[13] Treaty to be kept dead secret; King Friedrich, for the present, would not accede.[14] June 25th, after some preliminary survey of the place, Belleisle made his Entry into Frankfurt: magnificent in the extreme. And still did not rest there; but had to rush about, back to Versailles, to Dresden, hither, thither: it was not till the last day of July that he fairly took up his abode in Frankfurt; and,—the Election eggs, so to speak, being now all laid,—set himself to hatch the same. A process which lasted him six months longer, with curious phenomena to mankind. Not till the middle of August did he bring those 80,000 Armed Frenchmen across the Rhine, "to secure peace in those parts, and freedom of voting." Not till November 4th had Kur-Sachsen, with the Nightmares, finished that important problem of the Bohemian Vote, "Bohemian Vote excluded for this time;"—after which all was ready, though still not in the least hurry. November 20th, came the first actual "Election-Conference (Wahl-Conferenz)" in the Römer at Frankfurt; to which succeeded Two Months more of conferrings (upon almost nothing at all): and finally, 24th January 1742, came the Election itself, Karl Albert the man; poor wretch, who never saw another good day in this world.

Belleisle during those six months was rather high and airy, extremely magnificent; but did not want discretion: 'more like 'a Kurfürst than an Ambassador;' capable of 'visiting Kur-'Mainz, with servants purposely in old liveries,'—where the case needed old, where Kur-Mainz needed snubbing; not otherwise.[15] 'The Maréchal de Belleisle,' says an Eyewitness, of some fame in those days, 'comes out in a variety of parts, 'among us here; plays now the General, now the Philosopher, 'now the Minister of State, now the French Marquis;—and 'does them all to perfection. Surely a master in his art. His 'Brother the Chevalier is one of the sensiblest and best-trained 'persons you can see. He has a penetrating intellect; is al-

[13] Given in Adelung, ii. 359.
[14] Ibid. 421.
[15] Buchholz, ii. 57 n.

'ways occupied, and full of great schemes; and has nevertheless a staid kind of manner. He is one of the most important Personages here; and in all things his Brother's right hand.'[16] In Frankfurt, both Belleisle and his Brother were much respected, the Brother especially, as men of dignified behaviour and shining qualities; but as to their Hundred-and-thirty French Lords and other Valetry, these by their extravagances and excesses (Ausschweifungen) made themselves extremely detestable, it would appear.[17]

CHAPTER XII.

SORROWS OF HIS BRITANNIC MAJESTY.

GEORGE II. did not hear of Mollwitz for above a fortnight after it fell out; but he had no need of Mollwitz to kindle his wrath or his activity in that matter.[1] George II. had seen, all along, with natural manifold aversion and indignation, these high attempts of his Nephew. "Who is this new little King, that will not let himself be snubbed, and laughed at, and led by the nose, as his Father did; but seems to be taking a road of his own, and tacitly defying us all? A very high conduct indeed, for a Sovereign of that magnitude. Aspires seemingly to be the leader among German Princes; to reduce Hanover and us,—us, with the gold of England in our breeches-pocket,—to the second place? A reverend old Bishop of Liége, twitched by the rochet, and shaken hither and thither, like a reverend old clothes-screen, till he agree to stand still and conform. And now a Silesia seized upon; a Pragmatic Sanction kicked to the winds: the whole world to be turned topsyturvy, and Hanover and us, with our breeches-pocket, reduced to ——?"

The emotions, the prognosticatings, and distracted procedures of his Britannic Majesty, of which we have ourselves seen somewhat, in this fermentation of the elements, are copiously set down for us by the English Dryasdust (mostly in unintelligible form): but, except for sane purposes, one must be careful not to dwell on them, to the sorrow of readers. Seldom was there such a feat of Somnambulism, as that by the English and their [16] Von Loen, Kleine Schriften (cited in Adelung, ii. 400).

[17] Buchholz, ii. 54; in Adelung, ii. 398 n., a French brocard on the subject, of sufficient emphasis.

[1] Mollwitz first heard of in London April 25th (14th); Subsidy of 300,000*l.* voted same day. London Gazette (April 11th-14th, 1741); Commons Journals, xxiii. 705.

King in the next Twenty Years. To extract the particle of sanity from it, and see how the poor English did get their own errand done withal, and Jenkins's Ear avenged,—that is the one interesting point; Dryasdust and the Nightmares shall, to all time, be welcome to the others. Here are some Excerpts, a select few; which will perhaps be our readiest expedient. These do, under certain main aspects, shadow forth the intricate posture of King George and his Nation, when Belleisle, as Protagonistes or Chief Bully, stept down into the ring, in that manner; asking, "Is there an Antagonistes, then, or Chief Defender?" I will label them, number them; and, with the minimum of needful commentary, leave them to imaginative readers.

No. 1. Snatch of Parliamentary Eloquence by Mr. Viner (19th April 1741).

The fuliginous explosions, more or less volcanic, which went on in Parliament and in English society, against Friedrich's Silesian Enterprise, for long years from this date, are now all dead and avoidable,—though they have left their effects among us to this day. Perhaps readers would like to see the one reasonable word I have fallen in with, of opposite tendency; Mr. Viner's word, at the first starting of that question: plainly sensible word, which, had it been attended to (as it was not), might have saved us so much nonsense, not of idle talk only, but of extremely serious deed which ensued thereupon!

'London, 19th April 1741. This day' (Mollwitz not yet known, Camp of Göttin too well known!), 'King George, in his own high 'person, comes down to the House of Lords,—which, like the Other 'House, is sunk painfully in Walpole Controversies, Spanish-War 'Controversies, of a merely domestic nature;—and informs both Hon-'ourable Houses, with extreme caution, naming nobody, That he much 'wishes they would think of helping him in these alarming circumstances 'of the Celestial Balance, ready apparently to go heels uppermost. To 'which the general answer is, "Yes, surely!"—with a vote of 300,000*l.* 'for her Hungarian Majesty, a few days hence. From those continents 'of Parliamentary tufa, now fallen so waste and mournful, here is one 'little piece which ought to be extricated into daylight:

'Mr Viner (on his legs): * * "If I mistake not the true intention 'of the Address proposed," in answer to his Majesty's most gracious 'Speech from the Throne, "we are invited to declare that we will 'oppose the King of Prussia in his attempts upon Silesia: a declara-'tion in which I see not how any man can concur who knows not the 'nature of his Prussian Majesty's Claim, and the Laws of the German 'Empire" (nor do I, Mr. V.)! "It ought therefore, Sir, to have been 'the first endeavour of those by whom this Address has been so zeal-

'ously supported, to show that his Prussian Majesty's Claim, so publicly 'explained" (by Kanzler Ludwig, of Halle, who, it seems, has staggered 'or convinced Mr. Viner), "so firmly urged and so strongly supported, 'is without foundation and reason, and is only one of those imaginary 'titles which Ambition may always find to the dominions of another." '(Hear, Mr. Viner!)'[2] * *

A most indispensable thing, surely. Which was never done, nor can ever be done; but was assumed as either unnecessary or else done of its own accord, by that Collective Wisdom of England (with a sage George II. at the head of it); who plunged into Dettingen, Fontenoy, Austrian Subsidies, Aix-la-Chapelle, and foundation of the English National Debt, among other strange things, in consequence!—

Upon that of Kanzler Ludwig, and the "so public Explanation" (which we slightly heard of long since), here is another Note,—unless readers prefer to skip it:

'That the Diplomatic and Political world is universally in travail 'at this time, no reader need be told; Europe everywhere in dim anxiety, 'heavy-laden expectation (which to us has fallen so vacant); looking 'towards inevitable changes and the huge inane. All in travail;—and 'already uttering printed Manifestoes, Patents, Deductions, and other 'public travail-shrieks of that kind. Printed; not to speak of the un-'printed, of the oral which vanished on the spot; or even of the written 'which were shot forth by breathless estafettes, and unhappily did not 'vanish, but lie in archives, still humming upon us, "Won't you read 'me, then?"—Alas, except on compulsion, No! Life being precious '(and time, which is the stuff of life), No!—

'At Reinsberg as elsewhere, at Reinsberg first of all, it had been 'felt, in October last, that there would be Manifestoes needed; learned 'Proof, the more irrefragable the better, of our Right to Silesia. It 'was settled there, Let Ludwig, Kanzler of the University of Halle, do 'it.' (Herr Kanzler Ludwig, monster of Antiquarian, Legal and other Learning there: wealthy, too, and close-fisted; whom we have seen obliged to open his closed fist, and to do building in the Friedrich Strasse, before now; Nüssler, his son-in-law, having no money:—as careless readers have perhaps forgotten?) 'Ludwig set about his new 'task with a proud joy. Ludwig knows that story, if he know anything. 'Long years ago he put forth a Chapter upon it; weighty Chapter; in 'a Book of weight, said Judges;—Book weighing, in pounds avoirdu-'pois and otherwise, none of us now knows what:[3]—but, in after years,

[2] Tindal, xx. 491, gives the Royal Speech (date in a very slobbery condition); see also Coxe, House of Austria, iii. 365. Viner's Fragment of a Speech is in Thackeray, Life of Chatham, i. 87.

[3] Title of this weighty Performance (see Preuss, Thronbesteigung, p. 432) is, or was (size not given), Germania Princeps (Halæ, 1702). Preuss says farther, 'That 'Book ii. c. 3 handles the Prussian claims: Jägerndorf being § 13; Liegnitz, § 14; Ol-'peln and Ratibor, § 16;—and that Ludwig had sent a Copy of this Argument' (weighty Performance altogether? Or Book ii. c. 3 of it, which would have had a better chance?) 'to King Friedrich, on the death of Kaiser Karl VI.'

'it used to be said by flatterers of the Kanzler, "Herr Kanzler, see 'the effect of Learning. It was you, it was your weighty Book, that 'caused all this World-tumult, and flung the Nations into one another's 'hair!" Upon which the old Kanzler would blush: "You do me too 'much honour!"

'Ludwig, directly on order given, gathered out his documents again, 'in the King's name this time; and promised something weighty by 'New-year's day at latest.' Doubtless to the joy of Nüssler, who has still no regular appointment, though well deserving one. 'And sure 'enough, on January 7th, at Berlin, "in three languages," Ludwig's 'Deduction had come out; an eager Public waiting for it:[4]—and at 'Berlin it was generally thought to be conclusive. I have looked into 'Ludwig's Deduction, stern duty urging, in this instance for one: such 'portions as I read are nothing like so stupid as was expected; and, in 'fact, are not to be called stupid at all, but fit for their purpose, and 'moderately intelligible to those who need them,'—which happily we do not in this place.

Judicious Mr. Viner availed nothing against the Proposed Address; any more than he would against the Atlantic Tide, coming-in unanimous, under influence of the Moon itself,—as indeed this Address, and the triumphant Subsidy which was voted in the rear of it, may be said to have done.[5] Subsidy of 300,000*l.* to her Hungarian Majesty; which, with the 200,000*l.* already gone that road, makes a handsome Half-million for the present Year. The first gush of the Britannic Fountain,—which flowed like an Amalthea's Horn for seven years to come; refreshing Austria, and all thirsty Pragmatic Nations, to defend the Keystone of this Universe. Unluckily every guinea of it went, at the same time, to encourage Austria in scorning King Friedrich's offers to it; which perhaps are just offers, thinks Mr. Viner; which once listened to, Pragmatic Sanction would be safe.[6]

This Parliament is strong for Pragmatic Sanction, and has high resentments against Walpole; in both which points the New Parliament, just getting elected, will rival and surpass it,

[4] Title is, Rechtsgegründetes Eigenthum (in the Latin copies, Patrimonium, and Propriété fondée en Droit in the French copies) des &c.,—that is to say, Legal Right of Property in the Royal-Electoral House of Brandenburg to the Duchies and Principalities of Jägerndorf, Liegnitz, Brieg, Wohlau (Berlin, 7th January 1741).

[5] Coxe, iii. 265.

[6] Mr. Viner was of Pupham, or Pupholm, in Lincolnshire, for which County he sat then, and for many years before and after,—from about 1713 till 1761, when he died. A solid, instructed man, say his contemporaries. "He was a friend of Bolingbroke's, and had a house near Bolingbroke's Battersea one." He is Great great-grandfather to the present Mr. Viner, and to the Countess de Grey and Ripon; which is an interesting little fact.

April-May 1741.

— especially in the latter point, that of uprooting Walpole, which the Nation is bent on, with a singular fury. Pragmatic Sanction like to be ruined; and Walpole furiously thrown out: what a pair of sorrows for poor George! During his late Caroline's time, all went peaceably, and that of "governing" was a mere pleasure; Walpole and Caroline cunningly doing that for him, and making him believe he was doing it. But now has come the crisis, the collapse; and his poor Majesty left alone to deal with it!—

No. 2. Constitutional Historian on the Phenomenon of Walpole in England.

'For above Ten Years, Walpole himself,' says my Constitutional Historian (unpublished), 'for almost Twenty Years, Walpole virtually 'and through others, has what they call "governed" England; that is 'to say, has adjusted the conflicting Parliamentary Chaos into counter-'poise, by what methods he had; and allowed England, with Walpole 'atop, to jumble whither it would and could. Of crooked things made 'straight by Walpole, of heroic performance or intention, legislative 'or administrative, by Walpole, nobody ever heard; never of the least 'handbreadth gained from the Night-Realm in England, on Walpole's 'part: enough if he could manage to keep the Parish Constable walk-'ing, and himself float atop. Which task (though intrinsically zero for 'the Community, but all-important to the Walpole, of Constitutional 'Countries) is a task almost beyond the faculty of man, if the careless 'reader knew it!

'This task Walpole did,—in a sturdy, deep-bellied, long-headed, 'John-Bull fashion, not unworthy of recognition. A man of very for-'cible natural eyesight, strong natural heart,—courage in him to all 'lengths; a very block of oak, or of oak-root, for natural strength. He 'was always very quiet with it, too; given to digest his victuals, and 'be peaceable with everybody. He had one rule, that stood in place 'of many: To keep out of every business which it was possible for 'human wisdom to stave aside. "What good will you get of going 'into that? Parliamentary criticism, argument and botheration? Leave 'well alone. And even leave ill alone:—are you the tradesman to 'tinker leaky vessels in England? You will not want for work. Mind 'your pudding, and say little!" At home and abroad, that was the 'safe secret. For, in Foreign Politics, his rule was analogous: "Mind 'your own affairs. You are an Island, you can do without Foreign 'Politics; Peace, keep Peace with everybody: what, in the Devil's 'name, have you to do with those dog-worryings over Seas? Once 'more, mind your pudding!" Not so bad a rule; indeed it is the better 'part of an extremely good one;—and you might reckon it the real 'rule for a pious Britannic Island (reverent of God, and contemptuous 'of the Devil) in times of general Downbreak and Spiritual Bankruptcy, 'when quarrellings of Sovereigns are apt to be mere dog-worryings and 'Devil's work, not good to interfere in.

'In this manner, Walpole, by solid John-Bull faculty (and methods 'of his own), had balanced the Parliamentary swaggings and clashings, 'for a great while; and England had jumbled whither it could, always 'in a stupid, but also in a peaceable way. As to those same "methods 'of his own," they were—in fact they were Bribery. Actual purchase 'of votes by money slipt into the hand. Go straight to the point. '"The direct real method this," thinks Walpole: "is there in reality 'any other?" A terrible question to Constitutional Countries; which, 'I hear, has never been resolved in the negative, by the modern im-'provements of science. Changes of form have introduced themselves; 'the outward process, I hear, is now quite different. According as the 'fashions and conditions alter,—according as you have a Fourth Estate 'developed, or a Fourth Estate still in the grub stage and only develop-'ing,—much variation of outward process is conceivable.

'But Votes, under pain of Death Official, are necessary to your poor 'Walpole: and votes, I hear, are still bidden for, and bought. You 'may buy them by money down (which is felony, and theft simple, 'against the poor Nation); or by preferments and appointments of the 'unmeritorious man,—which is felony double-distilled (far deadlier, 'though more refined), and theft most compound; theft, not of the 'poor Nation's money, but of its soul and body so far, and of all its 'moneys and temporal and spiritual interests whatsoever; theft, you 'may say, of collops cut from its side, and poison put into its heart, 'poor Nation! Or again, you may buy, not of the Third Estate in 'such ways, but of the Fourth, or of the Fourth and Third together, 'in other still more felonious and deadly, though refined ways. By 'doing claptraps, namely; letting-off Parliamentary blue-lights, to 'awaken the Sleeping Swineries, and charm them into diapason for 'you,—what a music! Or, without claptrap or previous felony of your 'own, you may feloniously, in the pinch of things, make truce with 'the evident Demagogos, and Son of Nox and of Perdition, who has 'got "within those walls" of yours, and is grown important to you by 'the Awakened Swineries, risen into alt, that follow him. Him you 'may, in your dire hunger of votes, consent to comply with; his 'Anarchies you will pass for him into "Laws," as you are pleased to 'term them;—instead of pointing to the whipping-post, and to his 'wicked long ears, which are so fit to be nailed there, and of sternly 'recommending silence, which were the salutary thing.—Buying may 'be done in a great variety of ways. The question, How you buy? is 'not, on the moral side, an important one. Nay, as there is a beauty 'in going straight to the point, and by that course there is likely to be 'the minimum of mendacity for you, perhaps the direct money-method 'is a shade less damnable than any of the others since discovered;—

'while, in regard to practical damage resulting, it is of childlike harmlessness in comparison!

'That was Walpole's method; with this to aid his great natural faculty, long-headed, deep-bellied, suitable to the English Parliament and Nation, he went along with perfect success for ten or twenty years. And it might have been for longer,—had not the English Nation accidentally come to wish, that it should cease jumbling *no*whither; and try to jumble *some*whither, at least for a little while, on important business that had risen for England in a certain quarter. Had it not been for Jenkins's Ear blazing out in the dark English brain, Walpole might have lasted still a long while. But his fate lay there:—the first Business vital to England which might turn up; and this chanced to be the Spanish War. How vital, readers shall see anon. Walpole, knowing well enough in what state his War-apparatus was, and that of all his Apparatuses there was none in a working state, but the Parliamentary one,—resisted the Spanish War; stood in the door against it, with a rhinoceros determination, nay almost something of a mastiff's; resolute not to admit it, to admit death as soon. Doubtless he had a feeling it would be death, the sagacious man;—and such it is now proving; the Walpole Ministry dying by inches from it; dying hard, but irremediably.

'The English Nation was immensely astonished, which Walpole was not, any more than at the other Laws of Nature, to find Walpole's War-apparatus in such a condition. All his Apparatuses, Walpole guesses, are in no better, if it be not the Parliamentary one. The English Nation is immensely astonished, which Walpole again is not, to find that his Parliamentary Apparatus has been kept in gear and smooth-going by the use of oil: "Miraculous Scandal of Scandals!" thinks the English Nation. "Miracle? Law of Nature, you fools!" thinks Walpole. And in fact there is such a storm roaring in England, in those and in the late and the coming months, as threatens to be dangerous to high roofs,—dangerous to Walpole's head at one time. Storm such as had not been witnessed in men's memory; all manner of Counties and Constituencies, with solemn indignation, charging their representatives to search into that miraculous Scandal of Scandals, Law of Nature, or whatever it may be; and abate the same, at their peril.

'To the now reader there is something almost pathetic in these solemn indignations, and high resolves to have Purity of Parliament and thorough Administrative Reform, in spite of Nature and the Constitutional Stars;—and nothing I have met with, not even the Prussian Dryasdust, is so unsufferably wearisome, or can pretend to equal in depth of dull inanity, to ingenuous living readers, our poor English Dryasdust's interminable, often-repeated Narratives, volume after volume, of the debatings and colleaguings, the tossings and tumults, fruitless and endless, in Nation and National Palaver, which ensued

'thereupon. Walpole (in about a year hence),[7] though he stuck to 'the ground like a rhinoceros, was got rolled out. And a Successor, 'and series of Successors, in the bright brand-new state, was got rolled 'in; with immense shouting from mankind:—but up to this date we 'have no reason to believe that the Laws of Nature were got abrogated 'on that occasion, or that the constitutional stars have much altered 'their courses since.'

That Walpole will probably be lost, goes much home to the Royal bosom, in these troublous Spring months of 1741, as it has done and will do. And here, emerging from the Spanish Main just now, is a second sorrow, which might quite transfix the Royal bosom, and drive Majesty itself to despair; awakening such insoluble questions,—furnishing such proof, that Walpole and a good few other persons (persons, and also things, and ideas and practices, deep-rooted in the Country) stand much in need of being lost, if England is to go a good road!

The Spanish War being of moment to us here, we will let our Constitutional Historian explain, in his own dialect, How it was so vital to England; and shall even subjoin what he gives as History of it, such being so admirably succinct, for one quality.

No. 3. Of the Spanish War, or the Jenkins's-Ear Question.

'There was real cause for a War with Spain. It is one of the few 'cases, this, of a war from necessity. Spain, by Decree of the Pope, '—some Pope long ago, whose name we will not remember, in solemn 'Conclave, drawing accurately "his Meridian Line," on I know no 'what Telluric or Uranic principles, no doubt with great accuracy, '"between Portugal and Spain,"—was proprietor of all those Seas 'and Continents. And now England, in the interim, by Decree of the 'Eternal Destinies, had clearly come to have property there, too; and 'to be practically much concerned in that theoretic question of the 'Pope's Meridian. There was no reconciling of theory with fact. "Ours 'indisputably," said Spain, with loud articulate voice; "Holiness 'the Pope made it ours!"—while fact and the English, by Decree of 'the Eternal Destinies, had been grumbling inarticulately the other way, 'for almost Two Hundred years past, and no result had.

'In Oliver Cromwell's time, it used to be said, "With Spain, in 'Europe, there may be peace or war; but between the Tropics it is al-'ways war." A state of things well recognised by Oliver, and acted on, [7] February 13th (2d), 1742, quitting the House after bad usage there, said he would never enter it again: nor did: February 22d, resigned in favour of Pulteney and Company (Tindal, xx. 530; Thackeray, i. 45).

'according to his opportunities. No settlement was had in Oliver's 'brief time; nor could any be got since, when it was becoming yearly 'more pressing. Bucaniers, desperate naval gentlemen living on boucan, 'or hung beef; who are also called Flibustiers (Flibûtiers, "Free-'booters," in French pronunciation, which is since grown strangely into 'Filibusters, Fillibustiers, and other mad forms, in the Yankee News-'papers now current): readers have heard of those dumb methods of 'protest. Dumb and furious; which could bring no settlement; but 'which did astonish the Pope's Decree, slashing it with cutlasses and 'sea-cannon, in that manner, and circuitously forwarded a settle-'ment. Settlement was becoming yearly more needful: and, ever since 'the Treaty of Utrecht especially, there had been an incessant haggle 'going on, to produce one; without the least effect hitherto. What 'embassyings, bargainings, bargain-breakings; what galloping of esta-'fettes; acres of diplomatic paper, now fallen to the spiders, who always 'privately were the real owners! Not in the Treaty of Utrecht, not 'in the Congresses of Cambray, of Soissons, Convention of Pardo, by 'Ripperda, Horace Walpole, or the wagging of wigs, could this mat-'ter be settled at all. Near two hundred years of chronic misery;— 'and had there been, under any of those wigs, a Head capable of read-'ing the Heavenly Mandates, with heart capable of following them, 'the misery might have been briefly ended, by a direct method. With 'what immense saving in all kinds, compared with the oblique method 'gone upon! In quantity of bloodshed needed, of money, of idle talk 'and estafettes, not to speak of higher considerations, the saving had 'been incalculable. For it was England's one Cause of War during 'the Century we are now upon; and poor England's course, when at 'last driven into it, went ambiguously circling round the whole Uni-'verse, instead of straight to the mark. Had Oliver Cromwell lived 'ten years longer;—but Oliver Cromwell did not live; and, instead of 'Heroic Heads, there came in Constitutional Wigs, which makes a great 'difference.

'The pretensions of Spain to keep Half the World locked-up in 'embargo were entirely chimerical; plainly contradictory to the Laws 'of Nature; and no amount of Pope's Donation Acts, or Ceremonial 'in Rota or Propaganda, could redeem them from untenability, in the 'modern days. To lie like a dog in the manger over South America, 'and say snarling, "None of you shall trade here, though I cannot!" '—what Pope or body of Popes can sanction such a procedure? Had 'England had a Head, instead of Wigs, amid its diplomatists, England, 'as the chief party interested, would have long since intimated gently 'to such dog in the manger: "Dog, will you be so obliging as rise! 'I am grieved to say, we shall have to do unpleasant things otherwise. 'Dogs have doors for their hutches: but to pretend barring the Tropic 'of Cancer,—that is too big a door for any dog. Can nobody but you 'have business here, then, which is not displeasing to the gods? We 'bid you rise!" And in this mode there is no doubt the dog, bark and 'bite as he might, would have ended by rising; not only England, but 'all the Universe being against him. And furthermore, I compute 'with certainty, the quantity of fighting needed to obtain such result 'would, by this mode, have been a minimum. The clear right being 'there, and now also the clear might, why take refuge in diplomatic 'wiggeries, in Assiento Treaties, and Arrangements which are not ana- 'logous to the facts; which are but wigged mendacities, therefore; and 'will but aggravate in quantity and in quality the fighting yet needed? 'Fighting is but (as has been well said) a battering-out of the menda- 'cities, pretences, and imaginary elements: well battered-out, these, 'like dust and chaff, fly torrentwise along the winds, and darken all 'the sky; but these once gone, there remain the facts and their visible 'relation to one another, and peace is sure.

'The Assiento Treaty being fixed upon, the English ought to have 'kept it. But the English did not, in any measure; nor could pretend 'to have done. They were entitled to supply Negroes, in such and 'such number, annually to the Spanish Plantations; and besides this 'delightful branch of trade, to have the privilege of selling certain quan- 'tities of their manufactured articles on those coasts; quantities regu- 'lated briefly by this stipulation, That their Assiento Ship was to be 'of 600 tons burden, so many and no more. The Assiento ship was 'duly of 600 tons accordingly, promise kept faithfully to the eye; but 'the Assiento Ship was attended and escorted by provision-sloops, 'small craft said to be of the most indispensable nature to it. Which 'provision-sloops, and indispensable small craft, not only carried mer- 'chandise as well, but went and came to Jamaica and back, under 'various pretexts, with ever new supplies of merchandise; converting 'the Assiento Ship into a Floating Shop, the Tons burden and Tons 'sale of which set arithmetic at defiance. This was the fact, perfectly 'well known in England, veiled over by mere smuggler pretences, and 'obstinately persisted in, so profitable was it. Perfectly well known 'in Spain also, and to the Spanish Guarda-Costas and Sea-Captains in 'those parts; who were naturally kept in a perennial state of rage by 'it,—and disposed to fly out into flame upon it, when a bad case 'turned up! Such a case that of Jenkins had seemed to them; and their 'mode of treating it, by tearing-off Mr. Jenkins's Ear, proved to be,— 'bad shall we say, or good?—intolerable to England's thick skin; and 'brought matters to a crisis, in the ways we saw.' * * *

The Jenkins's-Ear Question, which then looked so mad to everybody, how sane has it now grown to my Constitutional Friend! In abstruse ludicrous form there lay immense questions involved in it; which were serious enough, certain enough, though invisible to everybody. Half the World lay hidden in embryo under it. Colonial-Empire, whose is it to be? Shall Half the World be England's, for industrial purposes; which is innocent, laudable, conformable to the Multiplication-table at least, and other plain Laws? Or shall it be Spain's for arrogant-torpid sham-devotional purposes, contradictory to every Law? The incalculable Yankee Nation itself, biggest Phenomenon (once thought beautifulest) of these Ages,—this too, little as careless readers on either side of the sea now know it, lay involved. Shall there be a Yankee Nation, shall there not be; shall the New World be of Spanish type, shall it be of English? Issues which we may call immense. Among the then extant Sons of Adam, where was he who could in the faintest degree surmise what issues lay in the Jenkins's-Ear Question? And it is curious to consider now, with what fierce deep-breathed doggedness the poor English Nation, drawn by their instincts, held fast upon it, and would take no denial, as if they had surmised and seen. For the instincts of simple guileless persons (liable to be counted stupid, by the unwary) are sometimes of prophetic nature, and spring from the deep places of this Universe!——My Constitutional Friend entitles his next Section Carthagena; but might more fitly have headed it (for such in reality it is, Carthagena proving the evanescent point of that sad business), Succinct History of the Spanish War, which began in 1739; and ended—When did it end?

1°. War, and Porto-Bello (November 1739—March 1740).—'November 4th, 1739, War was at length (after above four-months obscure 'quasi-declaring of it, in the shape of Orders in Council, Letters of 'Marque, and so on) got openly declared; "Heralds at Arms at the 'usual places" blowing trumpets upon it, and reading the royal Manifesto, date of which is five days earlier, "Kensington, October 30th '(19th)." The principal Events that ensue, arrange themselves under 'Three Heads, this of Porto-Bello being the first; and (by intense 'smelting) are dateable as follows:[8]

'Tuesday Evening, 1st December 1739, Admiral Vernon, our chosen 'Anti-Spaniard, finding, a while ago, that he had missed the Azogue 'Ships on the Coast of Spain, and must try America and the Spanish 'Main, in that view arrives at Porto-Bello. Next day, December 2d, 'Vernon attacks Porto-Bello; attacks certain Castles so-called, with 'furious broadsiding, followed by scalading; gets surrender (on the 3d); '—seamen have allowance instead of plunder;—blows-up what Castles 'there are; and returns to Port Royal in Jamaica.

[8] Gentleman's Magazine, ix. 551, x. 124, 142, 144, 350; Tindal, xx. 430-3, 442; &c.

'Never-imagined joy in England, and fame to Vernon, when the 'news came: "Took it with Six Ships," cry they; "the scurvy Mi- 'nistry, who had heard him, in the fire of Parliamentary debate, say 'Six, would grant him no more: invincible Vernon!" Nay, next Year, 'I see, "London was illuminated on the Anniversary of Porto-Bello:" '—day settled in permanence as one of the High-tides of the Calendar, 'it would appear. And "Vernon's Birthday" withal,—how touching 'is stupidity when loyal!—was celebrated amazingly in all the chief 'Towns, like a kind of Christmas, when it came round; Nature having 'deigned to produce such a man, for a poor Nation in difficulties. In- 'vincible Vernon, it is thought by Gazetteers, "will look-in at Cartha- 'gena shortly;" much more important Place, where a certain Governor 'Don Blas has been insolent withal, and written Vernon letters.

'2°. Preliminaries to Carthagena (March—November 1740).—Mon- 'day 14th March 1740, Vernon did, accordingly, look-in on Cartha- 'gena;[9] cast anchor in the shallow waste of surfs there, that Monday; 'and tried some bombarding, with bomb-ketches and the like, from 'Thursday till Saturday following. Vernon hopes he did hit the Jesuits' 'College, South Bastion, Custom-house and other principal edifices; 'but found that there was no getting near enough on that seaward side. 'Found that you must force the Interior Harbour,—a big Inland Gulf 'or Lake, which gushes-in by what they call Little-Mouth (Boca-Chica), 'and has its Booms, Castles and Defences, which are numerous and 'strongish;—and that, for this end, you must have Seven or Eight 'Thousand Land Forces, as well as an addition of Ships. On Satur- 'day Evening, therefore, Vernon calls-in his bomb-ketches; sails past, 'examining these things; and goes forth on other small adventures. 'For example,—

'Sunday 3d April 1740, "about 10 at night," opens cannonade 'on Chagres (place often enough taken, by cutlass and pistol, in the 'Bucanier times); and, on Tuesday 5th, gets surrender of Chagres: '"Custom-house crammed with goods, which we set fire to." On news 'of which, there is again, in England, joy over the day of small things. 'The poor English People are set on this business of avenging Jenkins's 'Ear, and of having the Ocean Highway unbarred; and hope always 'it can be done by the Walpole Apparatuses, which ought to be in 'working order, and are not! "Support this hero, you Walpole and 'Company, in his Carthagena views: it will be better for you!"

'Walpole and Company, aware of that fact, do take some trouble 'about it; and now, may not we say, Paullo majora canamus? All 'through that Summer 1740'—while King Friedrich went rushing about, to Strasburg, to Wesel; doing his Herstals and Practicalities, with a light high hand, in almost an entertaining manner; and intent, still more, on his Voltaires and a Life to the Muses,—'there was, 'in England, serious heavy tumult of activity, secret and public. In [9] Gentleman's Magazine, x. 350.

April-May 1741.

'the Dockyards, on the Drill-grounds, what a stir: Camp in the Isle 'of Wight, not to mention Portsmouth and the Sea-industries; 6,000 'Marines are to be embarked, as well as Land Regiments,—can any- 'body guess whither? America itself is to furnish "one Regiment, 'with Scotch Officers to discipline it," if they can.

'Here is real haste and effort; but by no means such speed as 'could be wished; multiplex confusions and contradictions occurring, 'as is usual, when your machinery runs foul. Nor are the Gazetteers 'without their guesses, though they study to be discreet. "Here is 'something considerable in the wind; a grand idea, for certain;"—and 'to men of discernment it points surely towards Carthagena and heroic 'Vernon out yonder? Government is dumb altogether; and lays oc- 'casional embargo; trying hard (without success), in the delays that 'occurred, to keep it secret from Don Blas and others. The outcome of 'all which was,

'3°. Cathagena itself (November 1740—April 1741).—On Novem- 'ber 6th,—by no means "July 3d," as your first fond program bore; 'which delay was itself likely to be fatal, unless the Almanac, and 'course of the Tropical Seasons would delay along with you!—we say, 'On Sunday 6th November 1740' (Kaiser Karl's Funeral just over, and great thoughts going on at Reinsberg), 'Rear-Admiral Sir Cha- 'loner Ogle,—so many weeks and months after the set time,—does 'sail from St. Helen's (guessed, for Carthagena); all people sending 'blessings with him. Twenty-five big Ships of the Line, with three 'Half-Regiments on board; fireships, bomb-ketches, in abundance; 'and eighty Transports, with 6,000 drilled Marines: a Sea-and-Land 'Force fit to strengthen Hero Vernon with a witness, and realise his 'Carthagena views. A very great day at Portsmouth and St. Helen's 'for these Sunday folk.[10]

'Most obscure among the other items in that Armada of Sir Cha- 'loner's, just taking leave of England; most obscure of the items then, 'but now most noticeable, or almost alone noticeable, is a young Sur- 'geon's-Mate,—one Tobias Smollett; looking over the waters there 'and the fading coasts, not without thoughts. A proud, soft-hearted, 'though somewhat stern-visaged, caustic and indignant young gentle- 'man. Apt to be caustic in speech, having sorrows of his own under 'lock and key, on this and subsequent occasions. Excellent Tobias; 'he has, little as he hopes it, something considerable by way of mis- 'sion in this Expedition, and in this Universe generally. Mission to 'take Portraiture of English Seamanhood, with the due grimness, due 'fidelity; and convey the same to remote generations, before it vanish. 'Courage, my brave young Tobias; through endless sorrows, contra- 'dictions, toils and confusions, you will do your errand in some mea- 'sure; and that will be something!—

[10] Tindal, xx. 463 (Lists &c. there; date wrong, '31st October,' instead of 26th (O. S.),—many things wrong, and all things left loose and flabby, and not right! As is poor Tindal's way).

'Five weeks before (29th September 1740, which was also several 'months beyond time set), there had sailed, strictly hidden by em- 'bargoes which were little effectual, another Expedition, all Naval; 'intended to be subsidiary to this one: Commodore Anson's, of Three 'inconsiderable Ships; who is to go round Cape Horn, if he can; to 'bombard Spanish America from the other side; and stretch out a hand 'to Vernon in his grand Carthagena or ulterior views. Together they 'may do some execution, if we judge by the old Bucanier and Queen- 'Elizabeth experiences? Anson's Expedition has become famous in 'the world, though Vernon got no good of it.'

Well! Here truly was a business; not so ill-contrived. Somebody of head must have been at the centre of this: and it might, in result, have astonished the Spaniard, and tumbled him much topsyturvy in those latitudes,—had the machinery for executing it been well in gear. Under Friedrich Wilhelm's captaincy and management, every person, every item, correct to its time, to its place, to its function, what a thing! But with mere Walpole Machinery: alas, it was far too wide a Plan for Machinery of that kind, habitually out of order, and only used to be as correct as—as it could. Those delays themselves, first to Anson, then to Ogle, since the Tropical Almanac would not delay along with them, had thrown both Enterprises into weather such as all-but meant impossibility in those latitudes! This was irremediable;—had not been remediable, by efforts and pushings here and there. The best of management, as under Anson, could not get the better of this; worst of management, as in the other case, was likely to make a fine thing of it! Let us hasten on:

'January 20th, 1741, We arrive, through much rough weather and 'other confused hardships, at Port Royal in Jamaica; find Vernon 'waiting on the slip; the American Regiment, tolerably drilled by the 'Scotch Lieutenants, in full readiness and equipment; a body of Ne- 'groes superadded, by way of pioneer labourers fit for those hot cli- 'mates. One sad loss there had been on the voyage hither: Land 'forces had lost their Commander, and did not find another. General 'Cathcart had died of sickness on the voyage; a Charles Lord Cath- 'cart, who was understood to possess some knowledge of his business; 'and his Successor, one Wentworth, did not happen to have any. 'Which was reckoned unlucky, by the more observant. Vernon, though 'in haste for Carthagena, is in some anxiety about a powerful French 'Fleet which has been manœuvring in those waters for some time; 'intent on no good that Vernon can imagine. The first thing now is, 'See into that French Fleet. French Fleet, on our going to look in 'the proper Island, is found to be all off for home; men "mostly 'starved or otherwise dead," we hear; so that now, after this last short 'delay,—To Carthagena with all sail.

'Wednesday Evening 15th March 1741, We anchor in the Playa 'Grande, the waste surfy Shallow which washes Carthagena seaward; '124 sail of us, big and little. We find Don Blas in a very prepared 'posture. Don Blas has been doing his best, this twelvemonth past; 'plugging-up that Boca-Chica (Little-Mouth) Ingate, with batteries, 'booms, great ships; and has castles not a few thereabouts and in the 'Interior Lake or Harbour; all which he has put in tolerable defence, 'so far as can be judged: not an inactive, if an insolent Don. We 'spend the next five days in considering and surveying these Perform-'ances of his: What is to be done with them; how, in the first place, 'we may force Boca-Chica; and get in upon his Interior Castles and 'him. After consideration, and plan fixed:

'Monday 20th March, Sir Chaloner, with broadsides, swee ps away 'some small defences which lie to left of Boca-Chica' (to our left, to Boca-Chica's right, if anybody cares to be particular). 'Whereupon 'the Troops land, some of them that same evening; and, within the 'next two days, are all ashore, implements, Negroes and the rest; 'building batteries, felling wood; intent to capture Boca-Chica Castle, 'and demolish the War-Ships, Booms, and fry of Fascine and other 'Batteries; and thereby to get in upon Don Blas, and have a stroke at 'his Interior Castles and Carthagena itself. Till April 5th, here are 'sixteen days of furious intricate work; not ill done:—the physical 'labour itself, the building of batteries, with Boca-Chica firing on you 'over the woods, is scarcely doable by Europeans in that season; and 'the Negroes, who are able for it, "fling down their burdens, and 'scamper, whenever a gun goes off." Furious fighting, too, there was, 'by seamen and landsmen; not ill done, considering circumstances.

'On the sixteenth day, April 5th' (King Friedrich hurrying from the Mountains that same day, towards Steinau, which took fire with him at night), 'Boca-Chica Castle and the intricate War-Ships, Booms, 'and Castles thereabouts (Don Blas running off when the push became 'intense), are at last got. So that now, through Boca-Chica, we enter 'the Interior Harbour or Harbours. "Harbours" which are of wide 'extent, and deep enough; being in fact a Lake, or rather Pair of 'Lakes, with Castles (Castillo Grande, "Castle Grand," the chief of 'them), with War-Ships sunk or afloat, and miscellaneous obstructions: 'beyond all which, at the farther shore, some five miles off, Carthagena 'itself does at last lie potentially accessible; and we hope to get in 'upon Don Blas and it. There ensue five days of intricate sea-work; 'not much of broadsiding, mainly tugging-out of sunk War-Ships, 'and the like, to get alongside of Castle Grand, which is the chief 'obstruction.

'April 10th, Castle Grand itself is got; nobody found in it when 'we storm. Don Blas and the Spaniards seem much in terror; burn-'ing any Ships they still have, near Carthagena; as if there were no 'chance now left.' This is the very day of Mollwitz Battle; near about the hour when Schwerin broke into field-music, and advanced with thunderous glitter against the evening sun! 'Carthagena Expedition is, 'at length, fairly in contact with its Problem,—the question rising, "Do you understand it, then?"

'Up to this point, mistakes of management had been made good 'by obstinate energy of execution; clear victory had gone on so far, 'the Capture of Carthagena now seemingly at hand. One thing was 'unfortunate: "the able Mr. Moor" (meritorious Captain of Foot, who, 'by accident, had spent some study on his business), "the one real 'Engineer we had," got killed in that Boca-Chica struggle: an end to 'poor Moor! So that the Siege of Carthagena will have to go on 'without Engineer science henceforth. May be important, that,—who 'knows? Another thing was still more palpably important: Sea-General Vernon had an undisguised contempt for Land-General Went-'worth. "A mere blockhead, whose Brother has a Borough," thinks 'Vernon (himself an Opposition Member, of high-sniffing, angry, not 'too magnanimous turn);—and withdraws now to his Ships; intimat-'ing: "Do your Problem, then; I have set you down beside it, which 'was my part of the affair!"—Let us give the attack of Fort Lazar, 'and end this sad business.

'Sunday 16th April, Wentworth, once master of the Uppermost 'Lake or Harbour (what the Natives call the Surgidero, or Anchorage 'Proper), had disembarked, high up to the right, a good way south of 'Carthagena; meaning to attack therefrom a certain Fort Lazar, which 'stands on a Hill between Carthagena and him: this Hill and Fort once 'his, he has Carthagena under his cannon; Carthagena in his pocket, 'as it were. "Fort not to be had without batteries," thinks Went-'worth; though the sickly rainy season has set in. "Batteries? Scal-'ing-ladders, you mean!" answers Vernon, with undisguised contempt. 'For the two are, by this time, almost in open quarrel. Wentworth 'starts building batteries, in spite of the rain-deluges; then stops build-'ing;—decides to do it by scalade, after all. And, at two in the morn-'ing of this Sunday April 16th, sets forth, in certain columns,—by 'roads ill-known, with arrangements that do not fit like clockwork,—'to storm said Hill and Fort. The English are an obstinate people; 'and strenuous execution will sometimes amend defects of plan,—some-'times not.

'The obstinate English, nothing in them but sullen fire of valour, 'which has to burn *un*luminous, did, after mistake on mistake, climb 'the rocks or heights of Lazar Hill, in spite of the world and Don 'Blas's cannonading; but found, when atop, That Fort Lazar, raining 'cannon-shot, was still divided from them by chasms; that the scaling-'ladders had not come (never did come, owing to indiscipline some-'where),—and that, without wings as of eagles, they could not reach 'Fort Lazar at all! For about four hours, they struggled with a des-'perate doggedness, to overcome the chasms, to wrench aside the Laws 'of Nature, and do something useful for themselves; patiently, though 'sulkily; regardless of the storm of shot which killed 600 of them, the 'while. At length, finding the Laws of Nature too strong for them, 'they descended gloomily; "in gloomy silence" marched home to their 'tents again,—in a humour too deep for words.

'Yes; and we find they fell sick in multitudes, that night; and, "in 'two days more, were reduced from 6,645 to 3,200 effective;" Vernon, 'from the sea, looking disdainfully on:—and it became evident that 'the big Project had gone to water; and that nothing would remain 'but to return straightway to Jamaica, in bankrupt condition. Which 'accordingly was set about. And ten days hence (April 26th), the final 'party of them did get on board,—punctual to take "three tents," their 'last rag of Siege-furniture, along with them; "lest Don Blas have 'trophies," thinks poor Wentworth. And sailed away, with their sad 'Siege finished in such fashion. Strenuous Siege; which, had the War-'Sciences been foolishness, and the Laws of Nature and the rigours of 'Arithmetic and Geometry been stretchable entities, might have suc-'ceeded better!"[11]—

"Evening of April 26th:"—I perceive it was in the very hours while Belleisle arrived in Friedrich's Camp at Mollwitz; eve of that Siege of Brieg, which we saw performing itself with punctual regard to said Laws and rigours, and issuing in so different a manner! Nothing that my Constitutional Historian has said equals in pungent enormity the matter-of-fact Picture, left by Tobias Smollett, of the sick and wounded, in the interim which followed that attempt on Fort Lazar and the Laws of Nature:

"As for the sick and wounded," says Tobias, "they were, next "day, sent on board of the transports and vessels called hospital-ships; "where they languished in want of every necessary comfort and accom-"modation. They were destitute of surgeons, nurses, cooks and pro-"per provision; they were pent-up between decks in small vessels, where "they had not room to sit upright; they wallowed in filth; myriads of "maggots were hatched in the putrefaction of their sores, which had "no other dressing than that of being washed by themselves with their "own allowance of brandy; and nothing was heard but groans, lament-"ations and the language of despair, invoking death to deliver them "from their miseries. What served to encourage this despondence, "was the prospect of those poor wretches who had strength and oppor-"tunity to look around them; for there they beheld the naked bodies "of their fellow-soldiers and comrades floating up and down the har-"bour, affording prey to the carrion-crows and sharks, which tore them "in pieces without interruption, and contributing by their stench to "the mortality that prevailed.

"This picture cannot fail to be shocking to the humane reader, "especially when he is informed, that while those miserable objects "cried in vain for assistance, and actually perished for want of proper "attendance, every ship of war in the fleet could have spared a couple [11] Smollett's Account, Miscellaneous Works (Edinburgh, 1806), iv. 445-469, is that of a highly intelligent Eyewitness, credible and intelligible in every particular.

" of surgeons for their relief; and many young gentlemen of that profession " solicited their captains in vain for leave to go and administer help to " the sick and wounded. The necessities of the poor people were well " known; the remedy was easy and apparent; but the discord between " the chiefs was inflamed to such a degree of diabolical rancour, that " the one chose rather to see his men perish than ask help of the other, " who disdained to offer his assistance unasked, though it might have " saved the lives of his fellow-subjects."[12]

In such an amazing condition is the English Fighting Apparatus under Walpole, being important for England's self only; while the Talking Apparatus, important for Walpole, is in such excellent gearing, so well kept in repair and oil! By Wentworth's blame, who had no knowledge of war; by Vernon's, who sat famous on the Opposition side, yet wanted loyalty of mind; by one's blame and another's, whose it is idle arguing, here is how your Fighting Apparatus performs in the hour when needed. Unfortunate General, or General's Cocked-Hat (a brave heart too, they say, though of brain too vacant, too opaque); unfortunate Admiral (much blown away by vanity, ill-nature and Parliamentary wind); — doubly unfortunate Nation, that employs such to lead its armaments! How the English Nation took it? The English Nation has had much of this kind to take, first and last; and apparently will yet have. 'Gloomy silence,' like that of the poor men going home to their tents, is our only dialect towards it.

This is a dreadful business, this of the wrecked Carthagena Expedition; such a force of war-munitions in every kind,— including the rare kind, human Courage and force of heart, only not human Captaincy, the rarest kind, — as could have swallowed South America at discretion, had there been Captains over it. Has gone blundering down into Orcus and the shark's belly, in that unutterable manner. Might have been didactic to England, more than it was; England's skin being very thick against lessons of that nature. Might have broken the heart of a little Sovereign Gentleman, Curator of England, had he gone hypochondriacally into it; which he was far from doing, brisk little Gentleman; looking out elsewhither, with those eyes à fleur de tête, and nothing of insoluble admitted into the brain that dwelt inside.

[12] Smollett, ibid. (Anderson's Edition), iv. 466.

What became subsequently of the Spanish War, we in vain inquire of History-Books. The War did not die for many years to come, but neither did it publicly live; it disappears at this point: a River Niger, seen once flowing broad enough; but issuing—Does it issue nowhere, then? Where does it issue? Except for my Constitutional Historian, still unpublished, I should never have known where.—By the time these disastrous Carthagena tidings reached England, his Britannic Majesty was in Hanover; involved, he, and all his State-doctors, English and Hanoverian, in awful contemplation on Pragmatic Sanction, Kaiser-Wahl, Celestial Balance, and the saving of Nature's Keystone, should this still prove possible to human effort and contrivance. In which Imminency of Doomsday itself, the small English-Spanish matter, which the Official people, and his Majesty as much as any, had bitterly disliked, was quite let go, and dropped out of view. Forgotten by Official people; left to the dumb English Nation, whose concern it was, to administer as it could.

Anson,—with his three ships gone to two, gone ultimately to one,—is henceforth what Spanish War there officially is. Anson could not meet those Vernon-Wentworth gentlemen 'from the other side of the Isthmus of Darien,' the gentlemen, with their Enterprise, being already bankrupt and away. Anson, with three inconsiderable ships, which rotted gradually into one, could not himself settle the Spanish War: but he did, on his own score, a series of things, ending in beautiful finis of the Acapulco Ship, which were of considerable detriment, and of highly considerable disgrace, to Spain;—and were, and are long likely to be, memorable among the Sea-heroisms of the world. Giving proof that real Captains, taciturn Sons of Anak, are still born in England; and Sea-kings, equal to any that were. Luckily, too, he had some chaplain or ship's-surgeon on board, who saw good to write account of that memorable Voyage of his; and did it, in brief, perspicuous terms, wise and credible: a real Poem in its kind, or Romance all Fact; one of the pleasantest little Books in the World's Library at this date. Anson sheds some tincture of heroic beauty over that otherwise altogether hideous puddle of mismanagement, platitude, disaster; and vindicates, in a pathetically potential way, the honour of his poor Nation a little.

Apart from Official Anson, the Spanish War fell mainly, we may say, into the hands of—of Mr. Jenkins himself, and such Friends of his, at Wapping, Bristol and the Seaports, as might be disposed to go privateering. In which course, after some crosses at first, and great complaints of losses to Spanish Privateers, Wapping and Bristol did at length eminently get the upper hand; and thus carried on this Spanish War (or Spanish-French, Spain and France having got into one boat), for long years coming, in an entirely inarticulate, but by no means quite ineffectual manner,—indeed, to the ultimate clearance of the Seas from both French and Spaniard, within the next twenty years. Readers shall take this little Excerpt, dated Three Years hence, and set it twinkling in the night of their imaginations:

Bristol, Monday 21*st* (10*th*) September 1744. * * 'Nothing is to 'be seen here but rejoicings for the number of French prizes brought 'into this port. Our Sailors are in high spirits, and full of money; 'and while on shore, spend their whole time in carousing, visiting their 'mistresses, going to plays, serenading, &c., dressed-out with laced 'hats, tossels (sic), swords with sword-knots, and every other way of 'spending their money.'[13]

Carthagena, Walpole, Viners: here are Sorrows for a Britannic Majesty;—and these are nothing like all. But poor readers should have some respite; brief breathing-time, were it only to use their pocket-handkerchiefs, and summon new courage!

CHAPTER XIII.

SMALL-WAR: FIRST EMERGENCE OF ZIETHEN THE HUSSAR GENERAL INTO NOTICE.

After Brieg, Friedrich undertook nothing military, except strict vigilance of Neipperg, for a couple of months or more. Military, especially offensive operations, are not the methods just now. Rest on your oars; see how this seething Ocean of European Politics, and Peace or War, will settle itself into currents, into set winds; by which of them a man may steer, who happens to have a fixed port in view. Neipperg, too, is glad to be quiescent; "my Infantry hopelessly inferior," he writes to headquarters: "Could not one hire 10,000 Saxons, think you,"—or do several other chimerical things, for help? Except with his Pandour people, working what mischief they can, Neipperg does nothing. But this Hungarian rabble is extensively industrious, scouring the country far and wide; and gives a great deal of trouble both to Friedrich and the peaceable inhabitants. So that there is plenty of Small War always going on:—not mentionable here, any passage of it, except perhaps one, at a place called Rothschloss; which concerns a remarkable Prussian Hussar Major, their famed Ziethen, and is still remembered by the Prussian public.

[13] Extract of a Letter from Bristol, in Gentleman's Magazine, xiv. 504.

17th May 1741.

We have heard of Captain, now Major Ziethen, how Friedrich Wilhelm sent him to the Rhine Campaign, six years ago, to learn the Hussar Art from the Austrians there. One Baronay (Baroniay, or even Baranyai, as others write him), an excellent hand, taught him the Art;—and how well he has learned, Baronay now sadly experiences. The Affair of Rothschloss (in abridged form) befell as follows:

'In these Small-War businesses, Baronay, Austrian Major-General 'of Hussars, had been exceedingly mischievous hitherto. It was but 'the other day, a Prussian regular party had to go out upon him, just 'in time; and to re-wrench "sixty cartloads of meal," wrenched by 'him from suffering individuals; with which he was making-off to 'Neisse, when the Prussians' (from their Camp of Mollwitz, where they still are) 'came in sight.

'And now again (May 16th) news is, That Baronay, and 1,400 Hus- 'sars with him, has another considerable set of meal-carts,—in the 'Village of Rothschloss, about twenty miles southward, Frankenstein 'way; and means to march with them Neisse-ward tomorrow. Two 'marches or so will bring him home; if Prussian diligence prevent not. '"Go instantly," orders Friedrich,—appointing Winterfeld to do it: 'Winterfeld with 300 dragoons, with Ziethen and Hussars to the amount 'of 600; which is more than one to two of Austrians.

'Winterfeld and Ziethen march that same day; are in the neigh- 'bourhood of Rothschloss by nightfall; and take their measures,— 'block the road to Neisse, and do other necessary things. And go in 'upon Baronay next morning, at the due rate, fiery men both of them; 'sweep poor Baronay away, minus the meal; who finds even his 'road blocked (bridge bursting into cannon-shot upon him, at one 'point), instead of bridge a stream, or slow current of quagmire for 'him,—and is in imminent hazard. Ziethen's behaviour was superla- 'tive (details of it unintelligible off the ground); and Baronay fled 'totally in wreck;—his own horse shot, and at the moment no other 'to be had; swam the quagmire, or swashed through it, "by help of 'a tree;" and had a near miss of capture. Recovering himself on the 'other side, Baronay, we can fancy, gave a grin of various expression,

'as he got into saddle again: "The arrow so near killing was feathered 'from one's own wing, too!"—And indeed, a day or two after, he 'wrote Ziethen a handsome Letter to that effect.'[1]

Ziethen, for minor good feats, had been made Lieutenant-Colonel, the very day he marched; his Commission dates May 16th, 1741; and on the morrow he handsels it in this pretty manner. He is now forty-two; much held down hitherto; being a man of inarticulate turn, hot and abrupt in his ways, —liable always to multifarious obstruction, and unjust contradiction from his fellow-creatures. But Winterfeld's report on this occasion was emphatic; and Ziethen shoots rapidly up henceforth; Colonel within the year, General in 1744; and more and more esteemed by Friedrich during their subsequent long life together.

Though perhaps the two most opposite men in Nature, and standing so far apart, they fully recognised one another in their several spheres. For Ziethen too had good eyesight, though in abstruse sort:—rugged simple son of the moorlands; nourished, body and soul, on orthodox frugal oatmeal (so to speak), with a large sprinkling of fire and iron thrown in! A man born poor: son of some poor Squirelet in the Ruppin Country; —'used to walk five miles into Ruppin on Saturday nights,' in early life, 'and have his hair done into club, which had to 'last him till the week following.'[2] A big-headed, thick-lipped, decidedly ugly little man. And yet so beautiful in his ugliness: wise, resolute, true, with a dash of high uncomplaining sorrow in him;—not the 'bleached nigger' at all, as Print-Collectors sometimes call him! No; but (on those oatmeal terms) the Socrates-Odysseus, the valiant pious Stoic, and much-enduring man. One of the best Hussar Captains ever built. By degrees King Friedrich and he grew to be, — with considerable tiffs now and then, and intervals of gloom and eclipse,—what we might call sworn friends. On which and on general grounds, Ziethen has become, like Friedrich himself, a kind of mythical person with the soldiery and common people; more of a demi-god than any other of Friedrich's Captains.

Friedrich is always eagerly in quest of men like Ziethen;

[1] Helden-Geschichte, i. 927; Orlich, i. 120. The Life of General de Zieten (English Translation, very ill printed, Berlin, 1803), by Frau von Blumenthal (a vaguish eloquent Lady, but with access to information, being a connexion of Z.'s), p. 84.
[2] Militair-Lexikon, iv. 310.

17th May 1741.

specially so at this time. He has meditated much on the bad figure his Cavalry made at Mollwitz; and is already drilling them anew in multiplex ways, during those leisure days he now has,—with evident success on the next trial, this very Summer. And, as his wont is, will not rest satisfied there. But strives incessantly, for a series of summers and years to come, till he bring them to perfection; or to the likeness of his own thought, which probably was not far from that. Till at length it can be said his success became world-famous; and he had such Seidlitzes and Ziethens as were not seen before or since.

END OF VOL. IV.

Richard Clay & Sons, Limited,
London & Bungay.

12
18 20
52
50 Kutno
Konin
Kollo
Lenczye
Turek
Unejow
Chocz
Jaroczyn
Stanisyn
Kosmink
Ludomierz
R. Warta
Kalisz
Zduny
Ostrowa
Sieroslz
Lask Petrikau
Dessau
Köthen
Schildberg
Zlaczew
Löbejun
Wittenwalde
Poln Wartenburg
Wieruszow
Osiakow
Halle
Radomsk
Schmögrau
Reichthal
Dzialoszyn
Merseburg
Namslau
Landsberg
Klobucko
Briesen
Gross Naundorf
Rosenberg
Gutentag
Lublinitz
Michelau
Oppeln
R. Malapane
R. Neisse
Friedland
Krappitz
Tarnowitz
Greitz
Tost
Bendzin
Neisse
Steinau
Neustadt
Gleiwitz
Kosel
Nicolai
Hotzenplotz
Olbersdorf
Rativor
Sorau
Wiechsel
Oswiecim
Jägerndorf
Katscher
Freudenthal
Schwarzwasser